BENGAL LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL DEBATES

First Session, 1944—No. 1.

THE COUNCIL met in the Legislative Chamber of the Legislative Building, Calcutta, on Monday, the 7th February, 1944, at 2-15 p.m., being the first day of the First Session of 1944, pursuant to section 62(2)(a) of the Government of India Act, 1935.

Mr. President (the Hon'ble Sir BIJOY PRASAD SINGH ROY, K.C.I.E.) was in the Chair.

Obituary References.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order, order. Honourable Members of Council, it is with the deepest sorrow that the Chair has to perform the melancholy duty of conveying the news of the passing away of Sir John Herbert, G.C.I.E., lately Governor of Bengal, on the 11th of December last.

Sir John Herbert was appointed Governor shortly after the outbreak of the war and assumed the reins of his high office in November, 1939. Apart from the administrative problems of this great province, he was faced with an extremely difficult and complicated situation brought about by the war. Almost from the commencement of his term of office as Governor, Sir John Herbert devoted himself with energy to the question of civil defence. These problems assumed greater proportions and became more complex on Japan's coming into the war at the end of 1941. Through extensive tours all over the province, he tried to encourage the people engaged in the work of civil defence and to maintain personal contact with the organisations set up for the purpose. He also succeeded to a large extent in bringing about co-ordination between the civil and military authorities in defence activities. The problem of evacuees from Burma in the beginning of 1942 and later on those of famine due to the Midnapore cyclone and scarcity of food in Bengal, which became the base of operations for the Eastern theatre of war, evidently proved too great a strain on the health of Sir John Herbert, who never spared himself. He was suddenly taken ill in August, 1943, and this led to the relinquishment of his office in September last. The ailment ultimately proved fatal and he expired at the Government House, Calcutta, on the 11th of December, 1943.

A gentleman of unfailing courtesy and attractive personality, Sir John Herbert had to discharge the responsibilities of his office under very difficult and unprecedented circumstances. He tried to serve the province to the best of his ability. We all deeply mourn his loss.

In honour of his memory, I would request the honourable members to rise in their places.

(Honourable members rose in their places.)

Thank you.

I believe it is the unanimous wish of the House that I should convey our heartfelt sympathy to the Lady Mary Herbert in her great bereavement.

Honourable Members: Yes.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The Chair has to refer with regret to the death of Mr. Kiran Chandra De, C.I.E., I.C.S., which melancholy event took place at his Calcutta residence on the 2nd October last. He was a member of the Bengal Legislative Council under the previous constitution.

Born in January, 1871, the late Mr. De joined the Indian Civil Service in 1893, after a brilliant academic career in the Presidency College, Calcutta, and in the St. John's College, Cambridge. He held several important administrative appointments including the Registrarship of the Co-operative Societies, the Secretaryship of the Bengal General Department, Divisional Commissionerships and Membership of the Board of Revenue from which position he retired in 1928. Besides, he was a member of the District Administration Committee and Chairman of the Bengal Banking Enquiry Committee in 1913 and 1929 respectively. The late Mr. De was a great authority on the land tenure system of Bengal of which he had made a special study. He had a charming personality and occupied a prominent position in the social life of Calcutta. We deeply mourn his loss.

I believe it is the unanimous desire of the House that a message of sympathy should be sent on our behalf to Mrs. De in her great loss.

(Voices: Yes.)

In honour of his memory, I would request the honourable members to rise in their places.

(Honourable members rose in their places.)

Thank you.

The Chair has yet to refer to one more death. Mr. Ramananda Chatterjee, one of the greatest journalists and litterateurs and a foremost figure in the public life of Bengal, passed away on the 30th September last after a protracted illness. Born of a family distinguished for Sanskrit learning, the late Mr. Chatterjee had a brilliant academic career and he started his life as a teacher. Throughout his long life he tried to maintain the high traditions of culture and erudition of his family. He was a social reformer, a philosopher and a teacher. As Editor of the Prabasi and Modern Review he influenced the thought and character of modern Bengal and by his personal example set a very high moral standard in the social and public life of this province. Fearless in his criticism of social evils, his writings made a great impression on the cultured society of this country.

In the sphere of politics also, he often put forward his views without expecting any favour from the Government, and regardless of popular applause. Sober, staid and dignified in his bearing, his writings always reflected his personal character and deep thinking. Passionately devoted to the cause of India's freedom throughout his life, the late Mr. Chatterjee worked to help its advancement both as a political thinker and as a social reformer. In his death Bengal has lost an attractive personality, a man of great culture and erudition, whom it would be difficult to replace.

I believe it is the unanimous desire of the House to convey our sympathy to the members of the bereaved family.

(Voices: Yes.)

In honour of his memory, I would request the honourable members to rise in their places.

(Honourable members rose in their places.)

Thank you.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Saiyed MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSSAIN: Sir, with your permission I wish to move a resolution on behalf of the Council in respect of the death of our esteemed colleague and friend, Khan Sahib Maulvi Abul Quasem. The resolution runs as follows:—

“That the Bengal Legislative Council places on record its deep sense of sorrow and loss at the sad demise of Khan Sahib Maulvi Abul Quasem who was a prominent member of the Council and desires to convey its heartfelt condolence to the members of the bereaved family.”

It is with the deepest sorrow that we heard of the most untimely death of one of our most prominent colleagues, Khan Sahib Maulvi Abul Quasem, which melancholy event took place on Saturday, the 29th January last, after a short illness of 2 or 3 weeks. He was 52 at the time of his death, but he looked much younger and was in the best of health until recently and we scarcely think that his end was so near. I first came in touch with him as a member of the Bengal Land Revenue Commission and I found in him a stout supporter of the cause of the weak. He never hesitated to speak in strong words what he actually felt. In his early life, he was a lecturer of a Government college which post he resigned and joined the High Court Bar. At about the same time he entered the Legislature. He was an old parliamentarian besides being an erudite scholar and a sound lawyer. He was a member of the Senate and a member of the Bengal Wakf Board. He had established his reputation as a parliamentarian even in the pre-Reformed Council, and in consequence had an easy walk into the reformed Council when he was elected as a member of the Upper House. The country expected much from him in future. He was a forceful speaker. As a matter of fact, once the Leader of the European Group described him as the “Roaring Lion”. But alas! his voice will no longer be heard in this mortal world. The Council is definitely the poorer today by his death. He was an intimate friend of mine and I know from my personal experience that he was a religiously-minded man and a man of piety and devotion. May his soul rest in peace!

With these words, I commend the resolution to the unanimous acceptance of the House.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Mr. President, Sir—

Khan Bahadur ABDUL HAMID CHOWDHURY: On a point of order, Sir. Is it not necessary that the resolution should be read from the Chair before any speech is made?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Yes; resolution moved: that the Bengal Legislative Council places on record its deep sense of sorrows and loss at the sad demise of Khan Sahib Abul Quasem, who was a prominent member of the Council and desires to convey its heartfelt condolence to the members of the bereaved family.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Mr. President, Sir, on behalf of myself and on behalf of the party which I have the honour to represent in this House, I associate myself whole-heartedly with the resolution which has just now been moved by my friend, the Hon'ble the Leader of the House. I heard with deepest regret the news of the death of Khan Sahib Maulvi Abul Quasem when I arrived here last week. Bubbling with health, I was surprised how he could pass away so soon. That reminds us that death, a necessary end, comes when it comes and nobody can stay its hand. He was a man of strong conviction. Whatever he thought right and proper he used to speak out most emphatically and sincerely. That was a trait in him worthy of emulation by others. Undoubtedly he was a prominent member of the Government party and his loss we all mourn today.

With these words, I second the resolution.

Khan Bahadur ABDUL HAMID CHOWDHURY: Mr. President, Sir, it is with a heavy heart that I rise to associate myself with the sentiments and feelings so fully expressed in the resolution just moved by the Hon'ble the Leader of the House. Late Maulvi Abul Quasem was a gentleman in the real sense of the term. He was a man of courage of conviction, integrity of character and sincerity of purpose. A man of strong determination, he was all along straightforward, both in words and in action. Thought of favour or frown could never deviate him from the path of duties. Today I mourn along with others the loss of a noble friend, a great patriot, an ardent fighter and an over-zealous upholder of truth and justice. By his sudden death, which calamity has cast a gloom over the country, a void has been created and nobody can say when it will be filled, if filled up at all. In his private life he was as simple and unostentatious as a child; but in his public life he was as strong as stone. He has been suddenly snatched away from our midst by the cruel hands of Death in the prime of life which was chequered in its career. He was a brilliant scholar, an eminent professor and a shrewd lawyer. Having completed his education, he accepted the professorship of a Government college, but he was not a man to rot for long in bondage of service. During a comparatively short space of public life he was connected with many important functions, such as, membership of the Bengal Legislative Council, Bengal Wakfs Board, Calcutta University, Land Revenue Commission and so on and so forth. In every sphere of his public activities he had uniformly proved himself worthy of his choice and selection. His memory will be cherished by the posterity with respect and reverence. May his soul rest in peace!

With these words, Sir, I lend my whole-hearted support to the resolution under discussion. Before I resume my seat, Sir, I venture to suggest that in following the usual practice of this Hon'ble House it may be adjourned as a mark of respect to the memory of the illustrious deceased immediately after disposal of this resolution without transacting any other business.

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: Mr. President, Sir, on behalf of the Congress Party which I have the honour to represent I beg to associate myself with what has fallen from the lips of the previous speakers. It was really a shock to me when I heard that our honourable friend Khan Sahib Maulvi Abul Quasem was no more. Perhaps it is the only certainty which happens in this world and which will come to each of us sooner or later. The time during which I came in touch with our late honourable friend I had really great admiration for him. He was bold and frank in his convictions. He was always bold in expressing what he thought. That is one of the sterling qualities which he had and which is conspicuous in most of us by its absence. With these words, Sir, I support the resolution moved by the Leader of the House.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, on behalf of the Nationalist Party I whole-heartedly support the resolution moved by my friend, the Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Saiyed Muazzamuddin Hossain. The late Mr. Abul Quasem was really a great fighter in the field of politics. He was a straightforward politician and a man of strong convictions. This Council has lost in him a really good and brilliant speaker. I might have differences with him on many political issues but all differences are now hushed for ever, and now that the light on the side of existence has been extinguished, let the light of heaven shine his path and may his soul rest in peace. This is my prayer. With these words, I commend the resolution to the acceptance of the whole House. Allah-ho-Akbar.

Mr. W. B. G. LAIDLAW: Mr. President, Sir, I wish to associate myself with the remarks of the Honourable the Leader of the House and to pay a tribute to the memory of the late Khan Sahib Maulvi Abul Quasem whose passing away is keenly felt by each of the members of this party.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Sir, I beg to associate myself with the resolution moved by the Hon'ble the Leader of the House. Khan Sahib Maulvi Abul Quasem was one of the most prominent members of this House. What we valued most in him was the utter frankness with which he always expressed himself. We had sometimes our differences with him. In life it often happens that there are differences among the best of friends; but what remains is the memory of personal relationship. The late Khan Sahib Abul Quasem was a man of such sincere and cordial feelings, a man of such a warm heart that even those who differed most violently with him could not help admiring him and having a soft corner in their heart for him. When we heard of his death, it came as a great shock. It was hard to believe that a man who was so quick, a person who had so much vitality in him and who was so much alive, should have been cut away in his prime before the promise which his life held could be fulfilled. I am sure everybody in this House will agree that Bengal is the poorer by his death today. May his soul rest in peace!

Khan Bahadur MUHAMMAD ABDUL MOMIN: Sir, it is a most melancholy duty on my part to associate myself and my party with the resolution of condolence which has been moved by the Hon'ble the Leader of the House. Sir, it breaks my heart when I find myself speaking today on the death of one whom I held very dear indeed. I had known Khan Sahib Maulvi Abul Quasem for a very long time, and you, too, Sir, have known him for nearly as many years as I have known him. You will therefore be able to realise and appreciate when I say that the qualities which Abul Quasem had—and which were so patent and obvious in him—it is very difficult to find another man like him easily in this world. We have heard members paying a tribute to his ability, to his intelligence and to his forcible speeches, debating power, and so forth. These gifts, of course, he had; but there are others also who can have such gifts. They are not very rare in this world. But what he had and what is very rare in this world is sterling honesty, reliability and character, which in the present political atmosphere of this country, I regret to say, is very rare to come across indeed. Mr. Quasem's party allegiance can be considered as ideal but he never allowed his party allegiance to interfere with the welfare of the country as a whole. He was a person who always felt very deeply for the poorer classes of this country and in every action and speech of his he showed how deeply he felt for them. The Council's loss at his death has indeed been irreparable, but that is not the only thing. I think Bengal has lost what it will be many years before she can regain. With these words, I join the prayer of the Hon'ble the Leader of the House that his soul may rest in peace.

Alhadj Khan Bahadur Shaikh MUHAMMAD JAN: Mr. President, Sir, I whole-heartedly support the resolution moved by the Hon'ble the Leader of the House condoling the sad death of Khan Sahib Maulvi Abul Quasem and associate myself fully with the noble sentiments expressed by different speakers of this House in eulogy of the departed soul. Unfortunately, when he died in Calcutta I was not present here and I did not know of this calamity until I saw the report about the condolence resolution passed in the other House. I was mortified to find that a man of his health, and so young, should have died so suddenly. But death does not know where or when to come. Although late Khan Sahib Abul Quasem and myself did not see eye to eye as regards political issues, we used to admire each other for the sincerity of purpose which we both possessed. Khan Sahib Abul Quasem often roared in this House like a lion and most bitterly criticized his political opponents including myself; but I remember that he often came to me after the speech and apologised for the remarks which he might have made against me personally. I also used to apologise to him for hard words which I might have used against him. That shows how sincere we were to each other though we differed in the political field. As other speakers would like to speak, I do not want to take the precious time of the House any more. I pray to the Almighty that his soul may rest in peace. With these words, I associate myself fully with the resolution.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The Chair associates itself whole-heartedly with the sentiments expressed by the honourable members representing all sections of the Council in supporting the condolence resolution moved by the Hon'ble the Leader of the House about the death of Khan Sahib Maulvi Abul Quasem, one of our valued colleagues.

The Khan Sahib's distinguished academic career gave a promise of his future eminence in the public life of this province. After taking the M.A. degree in English, he accepted appointment as a Lecturer in the Intermediate College, Dacca. But he soon joined the Alipore Bar where he succeeded in establishing a lucrative practice. Thereafter, he became an advocate of the High Court and continued to practise there till his death.

He became a member of the old Bengal Legislative Council from the Khulna Rural Muslim Constituency. In 1940 he was returned to this House through indirect election. Besides this, he was actively associated with several official and non-official public institutions of this province. He rendered commendable services as a member of the Wakf Board and of the Bengal Land Revenue Commission. As a member of the Bengal Legislative Council and of the Khulna District Board, the Khan Sahib vigorously championed the cause of the rural population and was instrumental in securing relief for them in many ways. He was nominated a Fellow of the Calcutta University where he attracted attention by his keen advocacy of the spread of Islamic culture.

As a legislator, the Khan Sahib often made valuable contributions to the proceedings of this House. His speeches always reflected his courage of conviction and were marked with clarity of expression.

I believe it is the unanimous desire of the House that a message of sympathy should be sent on our behalf to his family in this great loss.

(Voices: Yes.)

In honour of his memory, I would request the honourable members to rise in their places.

(Honourable members rose in their places.)

Thank you.

Out of respect to the memory of Sir John Herbert and Khan Sahib Abul Quasem the House stands adjourned till 2 p.m. tomorrow.

Adjournment.

The Council then adjourned till 2 p.m. on Tuesday, the 8th February, 1944.

Members absent.

BENGAL LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL DEBATES

First Session, 1944—No. 2.

THE COUNCIL met in the Legislative Chamber of the Legislative Building, Calcutta, on Tuesday, the 8th February, 1944, at 2 p.m., being the second day of the First Session of 1944, pursuant to section 62 (2) (a) of the Government of India Act, 1935.

Mr. President (the Hon'ble Sir BIJOY PRASAD SINGH ROY, K.C.I.E.) was in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Distribution of Government grants to aided schools.

1. Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Education Department be pleased to state why the Government grants to aided schools have not yet been distributed to the schools other than those classed as "Central Schools"?

(b) What is the total number of students attending the "Central Schools" and what grants have they received?

(c) Why are the Government anxious to close all schools and colleges in Calcutta as per their communiqués of the 25th June, 1942, and of the 12th September, 1942? Will the Hon'ble Minister kindly explain what he meant by his statement in this Council on the 12th September, 1942, that he served the interest of education by closing the institutions? Are the Government aware that the authorities of many institutions for their financial loss due to their closing from December, 1941, till June, 1942, were prepared to keep their institutions open on their own responsibility as there were no disturbances?

(d) Are the Government now ready with their scheme of residential institutions in the "safe areas"? Do they adhere to it and are they ready to publish it?

(e) Have the Government helped any private institution to evacuate to the "safe areas" and followed any uniform principle of giving grants to such institutions? How many such institutions have applied for Government assistance to start such residential branches, but have not yet got it?

MINISTER in charge of the EDUCATION DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Mr. Tamizuddin Khan): (a) Government do not encourage girls to remain in danger zones like Calcutta; but as it was realised that some girls would have to remain in Calcutta because their parents could not leave the city or arrange for sending the girls away, certain schools were selected in central places to serve the educational requirements of the girls living in the neighbourhood. All other schools were advised to close down temporarily. To these "Central" Schools, regular and enhanced grants-in-aid are being paid. Certain other schools, situated in outlying parts of the city from which girls could not conveniently attend the Central Schools were also allowed to work as "approved" schools. All other girls' schools were asked to close down and schools which insisted on keeping open against the advice of the Department, were not paid any grant-in-aid. Almost all the girls' schools in the city co-operated with the scheme.

(b) A statement is laid on the Table.

(c) Government advised the closing of all schools (but not Men's Colleges) as a temporary measure, because it was considered desirable to remove children and women away from vulnerable areas. In September, 1942, schools and colleges in Calcutta were asked to close down temporarily in view of the disturbed political condition in the City. Had the institutions been kept open in the then state of excitement and disturbance, no serious work would have been possible while school children and college students might have been involved in the disturbances with unfortunate consequences. It was, therefore, in the interest of their education that the institutions were closed. Particular institutions might have been unaffected, it is true; but their pupils might have been victims on their way to and from school.

(d) The scheme was to build unit hostels of approved pattern in 14 centres in non-vulnerable and suitable areas and to attach these hostels to approved schools or to establish temporarily new schools, which would work by arrangement in existing school buildings in these areas. As only a small number of school children appeared to be ready to join the proposed residential units, as an experimental measure only 3 unit hostels were proposed to be put up at Murshidabad. (Out of a total school population of roughly 252,000, only 528 appeared to be willing to go to the proposed residential units.) The idea was that if after these units were established and found to work well, more children were ready to go, more units would be put up in other areas. In view, however, of the prevailing altered circumstances and the heavy rise in the price of building materials, the scheme for the construction of 3 unit hostels had to be held in abeyance.

(e) Roughly about 50 Indian schools evacuated to safe areas; some of these schools moved out because their buildings were requisitioned for Civil Defence or military purposes. In such cases, ample and adequate compensation has been paid. Financial assistance has been given to St. Scholastica's Convent, Chittagong, St. Placid's School and the Welland Goldsmith School, Calcutta. The case of each institution was dealt with on its own merits and no rigid "uniform" rules were laid down. The cases of two other girls' schools are under examination.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: What are the names of the two other girls' schools?

The Hon'ble Mr. TAMIZUDDIN KHAN: I want notice.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state what provisions the Government made for the school teachers when the schools were forced to go out of Calcutta?

The Hon'ble Mr. TAMIZUDDIN KHAN: All that I know, Sir, is that some special grants were made for school teachers who were affected by the crisis.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Is the Hon'ble Minister aware that suitable or rather ample provisions had been made in London which was the target of German air-raid for school teachers who were forced to go out of the city?

The Hon'ble Mr. TAMIZUDDIN KHAN: I am not aware of that.

All-India Spinners' Association and Khadi Pratisthan, etc.

2. Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Home Department be pleased to state whether it is a fact that the All-India Spinners' Association, the Khadi Pratisthan and the Khadi Mondal have been declared illegal by the Government of Bengal?

(b) Is it a fact that the stocks of khadi and the moneys of those institutions have been seized by the Government?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to state—

(i) the places where such seizures have been made, showing against the name of institution or institutions whose stocks or money have been seized;

(ii) the value of the stock so seized; and

(iii) the amount of cash money seized?

(d) Will the Government be pleased to state how they have dealt with the stocks or moneys thus seized and what portion, if any, of such stocks has been used by the Government?

(e) Have not such seizures and stopping of those institutions resulted in the increase of acuteness about the shortage of cloth supplies? If so, will Government consider the desirability of removing the ban on those institutions?

MINISTER in charge of the HOME DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Khwaja Sir Nazimuddin): (a) A statement is laid on the Table showing the associations that have been declared illegal.

(b) Yes.

(c) Statements are laid on the Table so far as can be compiled.

(d) Stocks and money seized are in the custody of Government except for such articles of clothing, etc., as were requisitioned and used for the relief of distress in the areas affected by the cyclone and tidal wave of 16th October, 1942.

(e) I do not think so. No.

[Note.—Item No. (26) has since been released.]

Statement referred to in reply to question No. 2 (c)(ii) and (iii).

Value of stock seized—Rs.99,201-7-3.

Amount of cash money seized—Rs.4,994-14-1½ (including bank deposit of Rs.1,918-7-6).

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Arising out of (d), will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state whether the moneys seized and kept in the custody of Government will be refunded to the organisations from whom they have been seized when the ban on such organisations will be removed.

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: I cannot tell you what will be done. I do not know when the properties seized will be given back. I think it will depend on the time.

Mr. NAGENDRA NATH MOHALANABIS: Sir, may I know under what authority and under what rule or law these things were confiscated and whether they will be returned when the ban is removed?

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: These things were not confiscated. They were seized. I cannot give the honourable member an assurance whether Government will return the things even when the ban will be removed.

Mr. NAGENDRA NATH MOHALANABIS: If they are not confiscated, may I know whether Government is entitled to retain them indefinitely?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Mohalanabis, you cannot argue with the Hon'ble Minister. If you have got any other questions to put for eliciting further information you can do so.

Mr. NAGENDRA NATH MOHALANABIS: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state whether Government are entitled to retain things indefinitely without confiscating them?

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: I would refer the honourable member to the section under which they have been seized.

Mr. NARESH NATH MUKHERJEE: Is the Hon'ble Minister aware that the Khadi Pratisthan runs a very large chain of grocers' shops in the city and that this confiscation has resulted in the closing down of their whole organisation much to the inconvenience of the people of Calcutta? I would like to know whether the Hon'ble Minister proposes at least to allow these shops to be reopened, because even when it was impossible to get good rice and also ghee from Government shops and the markets, this organisation met the needs of the people very well?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Mukherjee, please put your question in question form.

Mr. NARESH NATH MUKHERJEE: All right, Sir. Will the Hon'ble Minister consider the reopening of that section of the Khadi Pratisthan organisation which does not deal with khaddar?

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: No, Sir, not till the ban is removed.

Mr. NARESH NATH MUKHERJEE: Has the ban been imposed even on the grocers' section of the Khadi Pratisthan?

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: Yes, any organisation run by the Khadi Pratisthan is still under the ban.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Will the Hon'ble Minister please state whether the amount obtained from the sale of the stock of the Khadi Pratisthan requisitioned for the relief of distress will be credited to the account of the Pratisthan—

Mr. PRESIDENT: I could not follow your question; please make it clear.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: A certain quantity of khaddar and other clothings have been requisitioned from the Khadi Pratisthan and other organisations for the relief, ostensibly, of distress in certain villages. My question is whether the amounts that will be realised or may be realised from the sale of those goods will be credited to the account of the Khadi Pratisthan when the ban will be removed. I want to know how this accounting will be made up.

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: The accounting or valuation of the stuff used for the relief of the distressed will take place afterwards.

Family allowance of Srijut Prafulla Kumar Ghose.

3. Mr. RANAJIT PAL CHOWDHURY: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Home Department be pleased to state—

- (a) whether Srijut Prafulla Kumar Ghose, Pleader, Bongaon, Jessore, is a security prisoner, confined in the Jessore Jail;
- (b) if so, since when he has been so confined;
- (c) what is the amount that has been sanctioned as allowances for the maintenance of his family;
- (d) whether he has sent a petition praying for reconsideration of the allowances sanctioned for his family; and
- (e) if so, what has been the result?

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: The security prisoner was released on 29th April, 1943. He has been granted a family allowance of Rs.40 per mensem for the period of his detention as a security prisoner.

Detention of Dr. Bhupal Bose.

4. Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Home Department be pleased to state—

- (a) whether Dr. Bhupal Bose was released in June, 1938, on medical grounds and whether he has again been made a security prisoner from April, 1940, and is now confined in the Rajshahi Jail.
- (b) whether it is not a fact that he has a large number of dependants to support and that all properties were confiscated by the Government at the time of his first arrest in 1930;
- (c) whether Government received representation, and if so, how many, from him from time to time for suitable maintenance allowance to his family; what has become of those petitions; and

- (d) if the Government propose to consider his case and grant his family due maintenance allowance without further delay; if not, what are the grounds for such refusal; whether in the alternative the Government propose to release him to enable him to earn his livelihood and maintain his family?

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: (a) Yes. He is now detained in the Buxa Special Reserve Jail.

(b) One of his brothers with his family (consisting of wife and four minor children) was practically dependent on him.

His properties were not confiscated by the Government at the time of his arrest in 1930.

(c) and (d) Some representations from the prisoner for family allowance were received by the Government and on careful consideration a monthly allowance of Rs.40 was sanctioned to the security prisoner's brother Babu Subodh Chandra Bose with effect from the 1st August, 1942. This amount has been enhanced to Rs.80 with effect from the 1st April, 1943, under the liberal policy of the present Ministry.

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: Does the Hon'ble Minister think that Rs. 80 is quite adequate for the needs of the family he has just now mentioned?

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: It is a hundred per cent. increase.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: When the present Ministry raised it to Rs. 80, may I enquire what was the price of rice per maund? Was it Rs. 40 per maund?

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: I ask for notice: I think the honourable member knows better.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to explain why he emphasised the words "liberal policy" when he cannot answer this question?

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: I think, Sir, no answer is required to this question.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state if an allowance of Rs. 80 to the family is commensurate with the valuable property confiscated?

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: Will the honourable member kindly read the answer before putting the question?

Inundation in the Kandi subdivision.

5. RANAJIT PAL CHOWDHURY: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Communications and Works Department be pleased to state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that during the rainy season the whole neighbouring tract of country near Purandarpur village on the west of Radharghat Road in the Kandi subdivision, in the Murshidabad district, becomes heavily inundated by the embankment at Banka endangering life and property and damaging crops and cultivation;

- (b) whether this fact has been duly brought to the notice of the District authorities by the local residents;
- (c) whether in April, 1942, the affected area was in consequence inspected by the then District Magistrate, Mr. Hiran Lal Mukherjee, along with Prince Kasim Ali Mirza and Mr. Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal, M.L.A.;
- (d) whether as a result of that local investigation, the Executive Engineer, Nadia-Murshidabad, was charged with further investigation into the matter and to send up a report; and
- (e) the result that has ensued so far as an outcome of that enquiry and investigation?

MINISTER in charge of the COMMUNICATIONS and WORKS DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Mr. Barada Prasanna Pain): (a) Yes. The area known as Hijal area is subject to inundation in years of heavy rainfall.

(b) and (c) Yes.

(d) and (e) The area is a natural depression and is flooded in years of heavy rainfall by the simultaneous discharge of the hill torrents—More, Brahmani and Dwarka. A number of embankments erected by private parties interfere with the drainage. The question of relief is under consideration.

Crimes against women.

6. Mr. NUR AHMED: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Home Department be pleased to state if it is a fact that the crimes against women have increased in Bengal during the last ten years?

(b) Is the Hon'ble Minister aware that the traffic in women for immoral purposes has not been checked by the working of the Eastern Bengal and Assam Disorderly House Act and the Bengal Suppression of Immoral Traffic Act?

(c) Do the Government propose to form a small committee of officials and non-officials to review the working of these two Acts and to suggest proper amendments to them? If not, why not?

(d) Is it a fact that the number of brothels in all important towns of Bengal has increased during the last ten years?

(e) If so, what measures have been adopted and are intended to be taken to check the growth of brothels in Bengal towns?

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: (a) Yes, on the whole.

(b) These Acts have undoubtedly contributed towards suppressing the evil.

(c) No.*

(d) I have no information about districts. The number of brothels in Calcutta considerably decreased during the period. Four hundred and eighty-one brothels have been closed down in the five years 1938-42; the number has, however, been increasing from the year 1942.

(e) Usual action under the Bengal Suppression of Immoral Traffic Act is taken.

Mr. Suresh Chandra Gupta.

7. Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Home Department be pleased to state—

- (a) if he is aware that Mr. Suresh Chandra Gupta of Barisal is a security prisoner and his wife Mrs. Hemlata Gupta is also a home internee;
- (b) if he is aware that she is burdened with two unmarried daughters and is entirely dependent on her husband; and
- (c) if the answer to the parts (a) and (b) be in the affirmative, whether the Government propose to relieve her distress by granting a suitable monthly allowance without further delay?

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: (a) and (b) Yes.

(c) An allowance of Rs.60 per month has already been granted to the wife with effect from the date of the security prisoner's arrest.

Maintenance of the family of persons detained under rules 26 and 129 of the Defence of India Rules.

8. Mr. NAGENDRA NATH MOHALANABIS: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Home Department be pleased to state whether Government have granted any allowance for the maintenance of the family and education of the children of all or any of the persons detained under rules 26 and 129 of the Defence of India Rules? If not, will the Government be pleased to grant such allowances to minimise the hardships to the family and children of such persons?

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: In deserving cases Government have granted maintenance allowance to the families of security prisoners detained under rule 26 of the Defence of India Rules.

Prisoners arrested under rule 129 of the Defence of India Rules cannot be detained for more than two months. Every effort is made to examine their cases as expeditiously as possible with the result that they are either detained further under rule 26 or released. Family allowances granted to prisoners detained under rule 26 are ordinarily given effect to from the date of arrest, thus covering the period spent as prisoners under rule 129.

*The number of offences against women in 1942 is less than that for the four preceding years. The honourable member has introduced two Bills for the amendment of the Eastern Bengal and Assam Disorderly House Act and the Bengal Suppression of Immoral Traffic Act, which are under consideration at present.

Mr. NAGENDRA NATH MOHALANABIS: May I enquire whether there are a set of rules declaring who are deserving and who are not deserving, or it depends on the discretion of the Hon'ble Minister in individual cases?

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: Government decide who are deserving and who are not deserving. Government follow a particular principle on which each case is decided.

Mr. NAGENDRA NATH MOHALANABIS: May I know the principle on which it is decided?

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: I would refer the honourable member to the various communiques issued on this question from time to time.

Employment of unemployed poor teachers.

9. Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Education Department be pleased to state whether the attention of the Government has been drawn to the fact that the poor teachers employed in the various educational institutions of the Province are suffering heavily for the dislocation of their work and the abnormal rise in the price of the foodstuffs and cloth?

(b) Do Government propose to take necessary steps to absorb them in some work connected with the civil defence of the country or otherwise without further loss of time? If not, why not?

The Hon'ble Mr. TAMIZUDDIN KHAN: (a) Yes.

(b) The applications of such teachers receive due consideration in the departments concerned.

Abnormally high prices of foodstuffs.

10. Mr. NUR AHMED: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Revenue Department be pleased to state if he is aware that the agriculturists in Bengal are undergoing great hardships on account of abnormally high prices of foodstuffs and other necessities of life?

(b) If so, what measures have been taken by the Government of Bengal to give relief to the agriculturists of Bengal by way of remission of rent, grant of agricultural and other loans on a larger scale and otherwise?

(c) Is it a fact that widespread distress prevails among the agriculturists in the district of Chittagong, and many are actually starving there?

(d) If so, do the Government propose to open test relief centres at suitable places at Chittagong for the relief of the agriculturists and landless labourers of Chittagong? If not, why not?

(e) What is the total amount of money that has been advanced (i) by way of agricultural loan, (ii) by way of crop loan, and (iii) by way of gratuitous relief in Bengal in the years 1938-39, 1939-40, 1940-41, 1941-42, 1942-43 and up to 30th June, 1943, and how much in each district of Bengal?

MINISTER in charge of the REVENUE DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Mr. Tarak Nath Mukerjee): (a) In areas where there has been a failure of crops due to natural calamities or other causes, the small agriculturists are undergoing hardships on account of abnormally high prices of foodstuffs and other necessities of life. Big agriculturists, however, grow sufficient foodgrains for consumption and sale and are not badly off.

(b) The high prices of staple food crops have benefited the agriculturists to some extent. Remission of rent is, however, granted in deserving cases. A total sum of Rs.1,74,19,350 has so far been sanctioned as agricultural loan during the current financial year.

(c) Vide reply to (a). The agriculturists are not the worst sufferers.

(d) Government have already opened test relief centres at suitable places in the district of Chittagong for landless labourers and other distressed persons.

(e) A statement is laid in the Library.

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: With reference to (b), will the Hon'ble Minister please let us know the amount of remission of rent granted?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: In the whole province or in one district?

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: In the whole province.

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: I want notice.

Mr. NUR AHMED: Arising out of (b), what is the amount of remission in Chittagong?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: I cannot mention the amount offhand.

Deaths due to starvation in Chittagong.

11. Mr. NUR AHMED: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Revenue Department be pleased to state if it is a fact that many deaths due to starvation have occurred in Chittagong town and rural areas and their number is daily on the increase?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: It is a matter of regret that many deaths have occurred from starvation and allied causes. The number of such deaths is, however, now decreasing.

Declaration of Chittagong as a famine area.

12. Mr. NUR AHMED: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Revenue Department be pleased to state if the Government propose to declare Chittagong a famine area and to take prompt measures for the relief of the suffering of the people in Chittagong on the lines of those taken in Midnapore after the recent cyclone and flood? If not, why not?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: The desirability of declaring famine in the most distressed areas of the Province is under the consideration of Government. Meanwhile, steps have been taken in Chittagong along with other distressed areas to administer relief on a famine basis.

Strikes in jute mills.

13. Mr. K. C. ROY CHOWDHURY: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Commerce, Labour and Industries Department be pleased to state the number of strikes and trade disputes with number of workers affected by the same in the jute mills of Bengal from September, 1939, to June, 1943, year by year, and what are the causes of the same and what steps the Government have taken to meet the grievances of the jute mill workers?

(b) Will the Hon'ble Minister also please state how many times during the present war the Jute Mills Association resorted to sealing of looms and shortening of hours and give all relevant facts and figures showing the number of workers affected by the same on each occasion with reference to their loss of employment and decrease in earnings? How many workers were dismissed in all jute mills owing to the last sealing of looms by 10 per cent.?

(c) Will the Hon'ble Minister please state what preventive steps the Government have taken to stabilise the situation and protect the jute workers against frequent dismissals and loss of earnings? If no preventive steps have been taken, what is the reason therefor?

MINISTER in charge of the COMMERCE, LABOUR and INDUSTRIES DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja Shahabuddin):

(a) There were 117 disputes in different jute mills in Bengal from September, 1939, to June, 1943, i.e., 26 in 1939, 16 in 1940, 14 in 1941, 38 in 1942, and 23 in 1943 (up to June). It is difficult to compile figures, year by year, of number of workers affected and will take time. The causes that led to the strikes in most cases included demands for increase in wages, dearness allowance, etc.; and in recent cases of strikes demand for the increased quota of foodgrains at cheap rates and supply of ration have been the main causes.

Government and the Labour Commissioner have advised employees from time to time as deemed necessary and various concessions have been granted between September, 1939, and June, 1943.

(b) A statement showing the alterations made by the Indian Jute Mills Association in the working hours of jute mills and in the number of looms working since the outbreak of the war is placed on the Table.

I am informed that it is not possible for the Association to furnish the number of workers financially affected on each occasion but that in many cases the workers were absorbed into work of a temporary nature and with the existence of a heavy leave roster, they were also absorbed into normal mill occupations.

10,509 workers were out of employment consequent upon the sealing of looms.

(c) Individual cases of dismissal were taken up with the employers and workers reinstated whenever possible.

Statement referred to in reply to question No. 13(b).

Indian Jute Mills Association.

Working Time Agreement: Working hours in Jute Mills.

From 13th September, 1939—45 hours per week.

From 25th September, 1939—54 hours per week.

From 3rd November, 1939—60 hours per week.

From 8th April, 1940—54 hours per week.

From 19th August, 1940—45 hours per week.

From September, 1940—Mills should close one week in September, October and November and again in January and March, 1941, and thereafter 45 hours per week without closing any weeks.

From 1st September, 1941—50 hours per week.

From 13th October, 1941—54 hours per week.

From 6th November, 1941—60 hours per week.

From 18th May, 1942—54 hours per week with 10 per cent. looms sealed.

From 15th March, 1943—60 hours per week without sealing any loom.

From 17th May, 1943—54 hours per week with 10 per cent. of looms sealed.

From 14th June, 1943—54 hours per week without sealing any loom.

Mr. K. C. ROY CHOWDHURY: Is the Hon'ble Minister aware of the fact that several jute mills have been taken over by the military in Barrackpore subdivision and several hundreds of men have lost their jobs in consequence, and that many thousands have to work complicated multiple shifts?

The Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja SHAHABUDDIN: May I submit, Sir, that this question does not arise?

Mr. PRESIDENT: I was also going to say that the question does not arise.

Mr. K. C. ROY CHOWDHURY: My question (c) refers to loss of jobs due to sealing of looms but my present question refers to loss of jobs due to military occupation. So my supplementary question is more or less an allied question.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I am afraid, not.

Price of Jute.

14. Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Commerce, Labour and Industries Department be pleased to state if he is aware that the Jute Mills Association have fixed the maximum purchasing price of raw jute at Rs. 10 or thereabout per maund by what is known as a Gentleman's Agreement amongst the members of the mills?

(b) Is he also aware of the fact that in order to force down the price of raw jute to this level the railways and steamers are refusing to take jute from mofussil centres except for the members of the Jute Mills Association? Do the Government propose to take up this question with the Central Government and the Jute Mills Association with a view to removing the grievances of the growers?

The Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja SHAHABUDDIN: (a) Yes, but the prices fixed by the Association are for all Jat Jute.

Tops, Rs.19; Middles, Rs.17; Bottoms, Rs.14.

(b) No.

Muslim Female Medical Practitioners in Bengal.

15. Mr. NUR AHMED: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Public Health and Local Self-Government Department be pleased to state what at present is the total number of lady doctors or female medical practitioners in Bengal?

(b) What is the ratio of lady doctors to per thousand women population in Bengal?

(c) (i) How many medical schools and colleges have been established exclusively for lady students, and (ii) in how many medical schools and medical colleges special facilities are given to girl students?

(d) What is the total number of girl students in—

(i) medical schools; and

(ii) medical colleges in Bengal;

and out of this number, how many are Muslims and how many are non-Muslims?

(e) What arrangements and facilities exist at present for the training of pardanashin Muslim girls in medical schools and colleges of Bengal?

(f) Do the Government propose to provide special facilities for the training of pardanashin Muslim girls in medical schools and colleges? If not, why not?

(g) Is the Hon'ble Minister aware that there is a great demand for lady doctors, especially Muslim lady doctors, in Bengal?

(h) If so, do the Government propose to provide suitable conditions and facilities to Muslim girls to attract them to the medical profession? If not, why not?

MINISTER in charge of the PUBLIC HEALTH and LOCAL SELF-GOVERNMENT DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi Jalaluddin Ahmad): (a) There are about 172 registered female medical practitioners in this Province.

(b) One per two hundred thousand women.

(c) (i) None.

(ii) Special facilities are given to girl students in the Medical College, Calcutta, as well as in seven out of the nine recognised medical schools in the Province.

(d) (i) Eighty-five, of which 5 are Muslims and 80 non-Muslims.

(ii) Fifty (in the Medical College, Calcutta), up to the end of the Session 1942-43, of which one was a Muslim and the rest non-Muslims. Thirteen girl students have been selected for admission into the Medical College, Calcutta, during the current session, out of which 2 are Muslims. There are no girl students in the Carmichael Medical College, Belgachia.

(e) and (f) There are no special arrangements for the training of pardanashin Muslim girls in the medical colleges and schools. It is not possible to make separate arrangements for the attendance of pardanashin girl students at lectures, practical classes and hospital wards.

(g) and (h) I am aware of the urgent need for lady doctors generally, including Muslim lady doctors, in this Province. Steps will be taken with the return of normal times to increase their number as far as practicable.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state the reason why medical schools or colleges exclusively for women have not been opened in Bengal?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Mazumdar, will you kindly repeat your question?

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state the reason why medical schools or colleges exclusively for women have not been opened in Bengal?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi JALALUDDIN AHMAD: There has been no serious demand up to this time.

Babu Kishori Kishore Sarkar.

16. Mr. AMULYADHON ROY: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Public Health and Local Self-Government Department be pleased to state—

(a) whether Babu Kishori Mohan Sarkar, a lunatic, son of Babu Haradhan Sarkar, of Bongong town, district Jessore, was arrested by the Police in the year 1936;

(b) whether the said lunatic was transferred to the Jessore District Jail; and

(c) what is his condition and the place where he is detained now?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi JALALUDDIN AHMAD: (a) The correct name of the person referred to is Kishori Kishore Sarkar. He was arrested in 1938.

(b) Yes.

(c) His general physical condition is good. His mental condition is improving. The delusions from which he used to suffer are progressively fading and appearing less frequently. He is now detained in the Dum Dum Central Jail.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state the reason why a lunatic is kept in jail instead of being sent to lunatic asylums of Ranchi or Mankundo?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi JALALUDDIN AHMAD: On account of particular symptoms of this patient he was put in the Dum Dum Central Jail. He was not showing signs for which lunatics are required to be kept in lunatic asylums.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: What are the special reasons, in the opinion of the Hon'ble Minister, that led this particular patient to be declared a lunatic and kept in a jail?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi JALALUDDIN AHMAD: I want notice.

Mr. RANAJIT PAL CHOWDHURY: Will the Hon'ble Minister kindly say whether this man was examined by a mental doctor?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi JALALUDDIN AHMAD: I have no materials at present from which I can answer it.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Will the Hon'ble Minister please state whether Government will consider the advisability of keeping the lunatics not in jail but in the lunatic asylum?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi JALALUDDIN AHMAD: There are many types of lunatics. First of all, the criminal lunatic. They first come to jail having committed a crime and are then sent to a lunatic asylum. With regard to this particular lunatic, I have at present got no material to answer the question.

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: Does the Hon'ble Minister know that detention of a lunatic in jail requires that he must be convicted first? Otherwise his detention has to be in hospital and not in jail.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi JALALUDDIN AHMAD: As I have said, I have got no material to answer this question.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Will the Hon'ble Minister please state if he is aware that there is accommodation in Ranchi and other places for lunatics who have got criminal tendencies?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi JALALUDDIN AHMAD: Yes, there are, and I am aware of it. First of all, if a lunatic commits any crime, he is convicted and then sent to a lunatic asylum.

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: But can a lunatic be convicted at all?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi JALALUDDIN AHMAD: If the lunatic is not a criminal lunatic, then he may remain in hospital; but if he is declared a criminal lunatic he will be sent to the asylum; his guardians also may send him there if necessary.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The Hon'ble Minister should take his seat when he has finished his reply.

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: My question was: whether a lunatic can ever be tried and sentenced.

Employment in Chittagong Municipality.

17. Khan Sahib ABDUL AZIZ: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Public Health and Local Self-Government Department be pleased to state how many Muslims and how many non-Muslims have been dismissed and discharged from various services of the Chittagong Municipality since the date the Chittagong Municipality was superseded by Defence of India Rules?

(b) How many persons with how much monthly salaries have been appointed by the Special Officer in charge of the Chittagong Municipality during 1942-43 and from 1st April to 30th June, 1943, and out of them, how many are Muslims and how many are non-Muslims?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi JALALUDDIN AHMAD: (a) and (b) A statement is laid in the Library.

Detention of security prisoners.

18. Mr. BIRENDRA KISHORE ROY CHOWDHURY: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Home Department be pleased to state—

- (a) how long Mr. Nabajyoti Burman has been detained as a security prisoner;
- (b) if he was engaged in legitimate Trade Union activities before his arrest;
- (c) if the charges against him will be examined by the Home Minister;
- (d) if the Government are aware that since his detention in jail, his wife and the other members of his family are practically starving;
- (e) if so, whether the Government propose to release him conditionally or unconditionally; and
- (f) if not, whether the Government will arrange for suitable allowance for his wife?

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: (a) Since 13th November, 1942.

(b) Yes.

(c) I have examined them.

(d) and (e) No.

(f) A monthly allowance of Rs.50 has been granted to the wife of the prisoner with effect from the date of arrest.

Opening of free kitchens by the Government in North Bengal.

19. Mr. NACENDRA NATH MOHALANABIS: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Civil Supplies Department be pleased to state—

(a) whether any free kitchen has been opened by the Government in the districts of Jalpaiguri, Dinajpur and Darjeeling or any other district in North Bengal for feeding the poor and the destitutes as proposed by him in his statement before the Council in the last July Session;

(b) if the answer to part (a) be in the affirmative, on what date or dates they have been opened in each district; and

(c) if the answer to part (a) be in the negative, whether the Government contemplate opening such free kitchens immediately in those districts of North Bengal where they have not yet been opened?

MINISTER in charge of the CIVIL SUPPLIES DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Mr. H. S. Suhrawardy): (a) Yes.

(b) These kitchens have been opened on various dates. These dates are not ascertainable.

(c) Does not arise.

Taxation Bills passed into law.

20. Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Finance Department be pleased to state—

(a) the number, year and title of the Taxation Bills passed into law by the Bengal Legislature from the inauguration of the Provincial Autonomy to June, 1943;

(b) the amount of taxes collected under the provisions of those Acts; and

(c) the sums of money actually disbursed for the nation-building departments of the Government, namely, Irrigation, Education, Sanitation, Agriculture and Industries?

MINISTER in charge of the FINANCE DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Mr. Tulsī Chandra Goswami): Two statements are laid on the Table.

statements referred to in reply to question NO. 20.

The maintenance of the Wakf Board.

21. Mr. NUR AHMED: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Education Department be pleased to state what sum accrued from the fees levied under the Bengal Wakf Act, 1934, on Wakf Estates in Bengal during the years 1937-38, 1938-39, 1939-40, 1940-41, 1941-42 and 1942-43, respectively, and how much out of it was spent for the maintenance of the Wakf Board, and the Wakf Commissioner and his staff and how much was spent for the protection and improvement of the Wakf Estates in Bengal during these years?

(b) Is he aware of the fact that there is a great demand from the Moslem community of Bengal for the payment of the annual cost of the maintenance of the Wakf Board out of the Provincial revenues?

(c) Do the Government propose to defray the entire expenditure of the Wakf Board from Provincial revenues in future? If not, why not?

The Hon'ble Mr. TAMIZUDDIN KHAN: (a) Two statements are laid on the Table.

(b) Yes.

(c) No. In 1934 when the Wakf Bill was under consideration in the Bengal Legislative Council, it was clearly stated on behalf of Government by the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Bill that no part of the expenditure of the Wakf Board would be defrayed from Provincial revenues.

Adult education.

22. Mr. NUR AHMED: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Education Department be pleased to state if any scheme has already been or is going to be formulated for evolving a new form of adult education in Bengal as an item in the post-war programme with a view to spreading literacy in Bengal?

(b) Is it a fact that 13 per cent. of Bengal's population, recorded in the census as literate, soon relapses into illiteracy due to the neglect of study?

(c) Is he aware that the adult literacy campaign initiated by the Congress Ministry in the United Provinces is still in existence and has proved a success there?

(d) Is he also aware that about 2,000 adult schools, 4,000 circulating libraries, 36,000 free reading rooms are still functioning in the United Provinces under the said adult education scheme?

(e) Do the Government propose to inaugurate a similar adult education scheme in Bengal? If not, why not?

The Hon'ble Mr. TAMIZUDDIN KHAN: (a) and (e) Government in the Education Department appointed a committee to advise on adult education. Owing to the war the committee has not yet been able to submit its report. A scheme prepared by the Department of Rural Reconstruction has been held in abeyance for the duration of the war. Activities in connection with the spread of adult education are almost exclusively being carried on on a voluntary basis with the assistance of the staff of the Jute Regulation Department.

(b) Yes.

(c) and (d) I have no information.

Dearness allowance to school teachers.

23. Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Education Department be pleased to state if the Government have come to a final decision regarding grants by way of dearness allowance to the poor teachers of the high English and middle English schools of the Province, including the private ones?

(b) If the reply be in the affirmative, will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to inform the House the scheme and recommendations of the Government in this connection and also the time when the same would be given effect to?

The Hon'ble Mr. TAMIZUDDIN KHAN: (a) Government have reluctantly decided to abandon the idea of granting dearness allowance to the teachers of high English and middle English schools on financial grounds.

(b) Does not arise.

Realisation of the Education Cess.

24. Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Education Department be pleased to state if the realisation of the Education Cess in the different districts of Bengal, particularly in the district of 24-Parganas, during this period of emergency has been suspended?

(b) If not, will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to take immediate steps to suspend the realisation of the same, till the primary education in those places is made free and compulsory?

The Hon'ble Mr. TAMIZUDDIN KHAN: (a) No.

(b) No. Primary education is already free in cess areas.

Damodar Bund.

25. Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Communications and Works Department be pleased to state how many times the Damodar Bund gave way in course of the last half a century?

(b) Is it a fact that the breaches in the embankment have been more frequent in recent years? How many times did it give way during the last 20 years and in which years?

(c) What permanent steps have the Government taken or intend to take to prevent such recurrences?

(d) Is it a fact that an Engineer expert from the Punjab or Sind came to suggest measures to the Government of Bengal in the matter of the Damodar Embankment and the prevention of flood? If so, what was his suggestions or plans and what would be the estimated costs of such plans, if any?

(e) Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state what explanation the Engineers of this Government gave of such frequent breaches of the Damodar Embankment during recent years?

The Hon'ble Mr. BARADA PRASANNA PAI: (a) As far as can be gathered from the records, the Damodar Left Embankment gave way 9 times in the last 50 years.

(b) Yes. The embankment gave way 6 times in the last 20 years, once in 1928, once in 1935, once in 1939 and once in each of the years 1941 to 1943.

(c) It has been decided, as an immediate measure, to strengthen the Damodar Left Embankment by modifying its present section and the work is now in progress. Adequate flood precautionary measures will be taken and arrangements will be made for adequate patrolling staff on the embankment throughout 24 hours during the flood season. A committee has been appointed, and is sitting, to advise on permanent long term measures to control floods in the river.

(d) At the request of this Government, the Government of Sind lent one of their officers to advise whether certain methods employed in Sind to close the Indus breaches could be usefully applied. Some of his suggestions were utilised. No estimates of cost were prepared.

(e) Deterioration of the river in the lower reaches, the raising of the spill area of the right bank and rapid deforestation of the catchment areas are probably the chief causes.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: May I enquire whether the work of strengthening the Damodar Left Embankment by modifying its present section has been entrusted to the same set of engineers who worked for this purpose from 1941 to 1943?

The Hon'ble Mr. BARADA PRASANNA PAIN: In 1943 there was some work; but the work of the Damodar Left Embankment has been taken up this year only and the engineers engaged before for closing the breach have been entrusted to do the work.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Arising out of (c) where the Hon'ble Minister has said "deterioration of the river in the lower reaches, the raising of the spill area of the right bank and rapid deforestation of the catchment areas are probably the chief causes", will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state whether these causes were known to the engineers who were engaged in 1939 and after?

The Hon'ble Mr. BARADA PRASANNA PAIN: Yes, I believe so.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Are these engineers engaged to do the work of strengthening the Damodar Left Embankment?

The Hon'ble Mr. BARADA PRASANNA PAIN: Sir, the position ought to be understood. These engineers are not responsible for the deforestation of the catchment areas. The Government of Bihar is responsible for it. How can the Government of Bengal be held responsible?

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: You do not understand the trend of my question. All that I am driving at is this: although these causes were known to the engineers in 1939, they failed to tackle the breach. So are they the proper persons to be entrusted to do the work of strengthening the Damodar embankment which gave way several times within 1939 and again three times between 1941 to 1943—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Das, put your question in question form. Please do not enter into argument with the Hon'ble Minister.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: All right, Sir. Does the Hon'ble Minister know whether the causes of the repeated breaches of the Damodar Embankment in the years 1939, 1940 to 1943 are known to the present engineers and also whether the same set of engineers have been entrusted with the work of repairing or strengthening the embankment as were engaged in those years?

The Hon'ble Mr. BARADA PRASANNA PAIN: Yes, Sir, the causes are known to the engineers. The honourable member seems to think that the engineers themselves were responsible for the breaches.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: With reference to (c), will the Hon'ble Minister please state if the committee referred to herein has been appointed by the Government of Bengal?

Th Hon'ble Mr. BARADA PRASANNA PAIN: Yes, Sir.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Is the Hon'ble Minister aware that another committee has been appointed by the Government of India?

The Hon'ble Mr. BARADA PRASANNA PAIN: I am aware of that.

The development of Agriculture in this Province.

26. Mr. BIRENDRA KISHORE ROY CHOWDHURY: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Agriculture Department be pleased to state—

- (a) if it is a fact that the Government of India offered a grant of Rs.95,00,000 for the development of agriculture in this Province; and
- (b) if it is a fact that because of inability to formulate a scheme for the proper disbursement of this sum, the Government of Bengal have not been able to avail of the grant?

MINISTER in charge of the AGRICULTURE DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Saiyed Muazzamuddin Hosain): (a) No.

(b) Does not arise.

"Grow More Food" in the Province.

27. Mr. BIRENDRA KISHORE ROY CHOWDHURY: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Agriculture Department be pleased to state—

- (a) if any definite plan for growing more food in this Province has been formulated by the Government;
- (b) if so, if he will make a statement in this House enunciating the principles underlying the plan; and
- (c) what steps have already been taken to work it out?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN:

(a) Yes.

(b) The policy of Government with a view to intensifying the growing of more food within the Province is to make arrangements for the adequate supply of seeds and manures to the cultivators and to provide facilities for irrigation; and to secure the reclamation as far as possible of waste land.

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: Regarding the programme of 1943-44, is the Hon'ble Minister aware whether any success has been achieved in regard to the distribution of the quantities that he has laid down in his scheme?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: I do not know what the honourable member means by "success achieved"; but the statement gives out the amount of distribution.

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: Has the Hon'ble Minister verified the statement? For example, does he know whether 50,000 maunds of wheat seeds have been distributed as given in item (4) of the 1943-44 programme?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: As regards wheat seeds, I do not think the entire amount has been distributed.

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: As regards gram?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: I cannot say without looking into the papers.

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: Will it be correct if I say that only 12,000 maunds have been distributed?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: I cannot say that.

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: As regards potato seeds?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: I know potato scheme has failed partially because the scheme was started very late.

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: Will it be correct if I say that 75 per cent. failed?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: I could not say that yet without looking into the figures.

Shortage in the supply of non-judicial stamps.

28. Mr. RANAJIT PAL CHOWDHURY: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Revenue Department be pleased to state—

- (a) whether it has come to his knowledge that there is, at some places total and at others partial, shortage in the supply of non-judicial stamps and some most essential forms of process in some outlying districts;
- (b) whether reports have reached him that the litigant public have been experiencing considerable hardships in not duly getting process forms for sale proclamation under the Bengal Tenancy Act and summons on defendants and non-judicial stamps for sale certificates and security funds;
- (c) if the answer to part (a) be in the affirmative, what steps have already been adopted to remove the shortage;
- (d) if the answer to part (b) be in the affirmative, what steps are being taken to remedy this state of things; and

- (e) what are the reasons for such shortage in such essential matters relating to the administration?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Non-Judicial stamps.—There was partial shortage in the supply of non-judicial stamps of certain denominations for some days in the districts of Noakhali, Bakarganj, Birbhūm, Bogra, Midnapore and Jalpaiguri. This was due to the sudden abnormal rise in the demand of such stamps on account of large number of transfers of immovable property. The Collectors concerned took immediate measures to obtain a sufficient quantity of such stamps. At present, there is no shortage.

Forms.—There was no shortage of the essential forms of processes in any district. There was a shortage of sale proclamation forms in Noakhali and Bakarganj but the Collectors had the forms printed locally without delay in order to remove the shortage. There is no shortage at present.

Mr. NACENDRA NATH MOHALANABIS: Is the Hon'ble Minister aware that stamps, non-judicial and judicial, also have gone to black markets and people have to purchase them at higher prices in different places?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: No.

Mr. NACENDRA NATH MOHALANABIS: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to instruct the officers concerned to accept money in cash when they cannot supply stamps in courts?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: That question does not arise, since there is no shortage.

Deaths due to starvation on the platform of Parbatipur Railway Station.

29. Mr. KADER BAKSH: (a) Is the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Revenue Department aware that recently there have been several deaths due to starvation on the platform of the Parbatipur Railway Station and in other areas in Dinajpur district?

(b) If the answer be in the affirmative, will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state the number of such deaths during the months of July and August, 1943?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: (a) No. There has been no report of any cases of death due to starvation at Parbatipur Railway Station. But there were 4 deaths among unknown beggars in the month of August and those were all due to serious disease.

(b) Does not arise.

Deaths due to starvation in Bengal.

30. Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Revenue Department be pleased to state the number of persons who died during the months of May, June, July and August, 1943, of the effect of starvation, in the different districts of Bengal, showing separately the figures for each such month?

(b) Is it a fact that several persons in the district of Chittagong committed suicide being unable to bear the pangs of hunger?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: The information is not readily available and it would take a good deal of time, energy, and cost to collect the information. Government are not aware of any deaths from starvation in May and June, 1943. There were a few in July, 1943, and the number increased in August and September, 1943.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state why he does not care to answer question No. (b)?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: I have already said that the answer is "No".

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: You have not said that. My question is, "Is it a fact that several persons in the district of Chittagong committed suicide being unable to bear the pangs of hunger?"

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Government have no such information.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Will the Hon'ble Minister care to bring the information from the locality, or will he care to get the information from Mr. Nur Ahmad who is a Government Party man, or will he care to get the information from the Ministers sitting on his left?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: I want notice.

Mr. NARESH NATH MUKHERJEE: Sir, are we to take it that the Government of Bengal are not in possession of important statistics with regard to the deaths due to starvation in the Province? It is a great shame, if they are not.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Have not Government got statistics?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: They are under compilation. I will answer later on.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order, order. The Hon'ble Minister has just stated that the figures about death from starvation are under compilation at present. So it is not for him to say whether he is prepared to answer the question later on when the figures are compiled.

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: Sir, I may point out that the answer has been given that Government have no information at present as to the number of people who have committed suicide.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Will the Hon'ble Minister please state what he means by his reply in (a) that "the information is not readily available and it would take a good deal of time, energy, and cost to collect the information"? Sir, I asked for the statistics of the figures of death during the months of May, June, July and August, 1943. So many months have passed since then, still they could not collect the information.

MR. PRESIDENT: You cannot enter into argument with the Hon'ble Minister.

MR. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: I am not entering into any argument but am putting a question, Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT: When the Hon'ble Minister says that the information would take a good deal of time and labour to collect and that Government are not prepared to reply to the question, you have to accept the explanation.

MR. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: Will the Hon'ble Minister please state if the information asked for will be available later on?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: If fresh notice is given, then only an answer is possible after the figures are compiled.

MR. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: I have been told that the Government are collecting the figures for this purpose: May I know whether the figures are being actually collected and whether after collection they will be placed before the House?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: The figures are under compilation, as I have already stated.

MR. HUMAYUN KABIR: Will the Hon'ble Minister publish the figures when they are compiled?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: It is a matter for the Public Health Department and I have got to ascertain it from that department, and I think——

MR. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: When is it likely that you may be able to publish the figures?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: I cannot say when it will be ready.

MR. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: But when is it likely to be ready? The Hon'ble Minister may be in a complacent mood, but that won't do——

MR. PRESIDENT: Order, order. Mr. Das, you must put your question in the proper form and not introduce irrelevant matters. I have told you more than once today that you cannot enter into an argument.

MR. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: I am not arguing, Sir, but am putting a question. But because the Minister is in a complacent mood and is not replying to my questions properly, therefore I have had to introduce other matters. I have asked him by what time he expects that the figures would be published.

Mr. PRESIDENT: But the Hon'ble Minister has already made it perfectly clear that the matter relates not to his own department but to the Public Health Department and therefore it is very difficult for him to say when those figures will be published.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: But I want an answer to my question from the Government. My question is: within what time Government think that these figures are likely to be published.

Mr. PRESIDENT: As I have already told you, the Hon'ble Revenue Minister has replied that the matter does not lie with his department; and so he cannot take upon himself the responsibility of replying to the question put by you.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: If the Minister says that then it is evading a part of his duty, and that is an evidence of bad administration.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Well, there are other remedies open to you.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Sir, you have ruled that when a question has got to be put, it should be put to the particular department concerned. If a question relating to the department of a particular Minister is not addressed to the proper Minister, then it is handed over to the proper department. But in view of the importance of the question as to whether the Hon'ble Minister would be prepared to lay the figures before the House after they were compiled, you will be good enough to ask the department concerned to lay those figures before the House when they are ready.

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: I am afraid the honourable members have not followed the matter, and if they would be good enough to do so, a lot of trouble could be saved. So far as the Revenue Department is concerned, they say that it is a question to answer which would take a lot of time, and therefore they have expressed their inability to do so. It is the Public Health Department that is concerned with this matter, and it is no question of referring from one department to another. That is a separate matter. The Revenue Department have no statistics for the purpose nor have they got the proper machinery for the purpose.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question of Mr. Humayun Kabir is "if the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Revenue Department is prepared to refer the matter to his colleague—the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Department of Public Health".

The Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja SHAHABUDDIN: Does this question arise, Sir? The honourable member asks the Hon'ble Minister to refer a part of the question to another department and in doing so is it open to the honourable member to ask him to ascertain when the information could be supplied?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Shahabuddin, generally speaking, it does not arise. But in view of the importance of the matter the Government should have said that they would pass over the question to the Minister in charge of the department concerned.

The House Rent Control Order of 1943.

31. Mr. K. C. ROY CHOWDHURY: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Revenue Department be pleased to state if it is a fact that the House Rent Control Order, 1943, is meant to relieve the tenants?

(b) Is he aware that the costs involved in the procedure are prohibitive and that the procedure is so unsuitable that it discourages tenants from taking advantage of the order?

(c) If the answer to (a) be in the affirmative, will the Hon'ble Minister please state what steps are going to be taken in the matter by the Government?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: (a) Yes.

(b) No. The honourable member is referred to the executive instructions issued by Government under the Calcutta House Rent Control Order, 1943, published under notification No. 8747-L.R., dated the 25th June, 1943, in the Calcutta Gazette Extraordinary, dated the 26th June, 1943. A copy of the executive instructions has been placed in the Library.

(c) Does not arise.

Mr. NARESH NATH MUKHERJI: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state whether the Rent Controller is bound by the provisions of the Rent Control Order, or has he power to go beyond the provisions of the Rent Control Order?

Mr. PRESIDENT: I do not think that question arises.

Mr. NARESH NATH MUKHERJI: Is the Hon'ble Minister aware that in many cases the Rent Controller has gone beyond the provisions of the Rent Control Order?

Mr. PRESIDENT: I think that question is much too vague. You cannot put vague questions. Questions must be specific.

Mr. NARESH NATH MUKHERJI: Sir, I have tried to make it as specific as possible—Is the Hon'ble Minister aware that in several instances the Rent Controller has gone beyond the scope of the Rent Control Order?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Mukherji, I am afraid, it is a very vague question. "Several instances" is rather a vague expression. You will have to put a question which must be specific: otherwise I cannot allow the question.

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: Is it a fact that no court fee has to be paid for approaching the Rent Controller?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: No.

Deaths due to starvation.

32. Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVARTY: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Revenue Department be pleased to state how many deaths have already occurred in Calcutta and the mufussil up-to-date due to starvation? What steps, if any, have been taken to prevent the same? Will he please give figures, district by district?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: The information is not readily available and it would cost an amount of time, labour and money to collect the information which would not be justifiable in war time.

(After the printed answer was read by the Hon'ble Minister.)

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Since this reply was prepared, Government have taken steps to collect information which is expected very shortly.

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to tell us whether Government are not in possession of sufficient records mentioning death of persons throughout the province due to starvation?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: I have already answered that question.

Dispensation of civil justice by executive officers.

33. Mr. NAGENDRA NATH MOHALANABIS: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Judicial Department be pleased to state whether the Government are aware that the dispensation of civil justice by executive officers in the subdivisions of Kurseong, Kalimpong and Siliguri in the district of Darjeeling and Alipur Duar in the district of Jalpaiguri is not only causing serious strain on the executive officers themselves, but also causing dissatisfaction amongst the people and the litigants?

(b) If so, do the Government propose to secure the services of munsiffs for trying civil cases in these subdivisions as has been done for Darjeeling proper?

MINISTER in charge of the JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Nawab Musharruff Hossain, Khan Bahadur): (a) No.

(b) Does not arise.

Mr. NAGENDRA NATH MOHALANABIS: May I enquire of the Hon'ble Minister why it is not thought advisable to employ munsiffs in those places mentioned in the question? I am asking for reasons.

The Hon'ble Nawab MUSHARRUFF HOSSAIN, Khan Bahadur: Government is not aware of any dissatisfaction, that is all.

Mr. PRESIDENT; Now, Khan Bahadur Jalaluddin Ahmed will make his statement.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, may I mention that I have got an adjournment motion?

Mr. PRESIDENT: You should have got up in time, but you did not do that.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, am I too late? Will you permit me to move the adjournment motion?

Mr. PRESIDENT: I am sorry, Mr. Das; your turn comes after the Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Jalaluddin Ahmad makes his statement. Because that statement relates to part of a question.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi JALALUDDIN AHMAD: Sir, I beg to lay before the House the statement showing the result of enquiry promised in the reply to clause (f) of question No. 34, of the 26th February, 1943. A further enquiry has been made and it has been ascertained that the dead bodies were removed by the 30th October, 1942.

Adjournment motion.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, I beg to move that this Council do adjourn its business to discuss a definite matter of urgent public importance, namely, the failure of the Government of Bengal to meet, by the adoption of proper, timely and adequate remedial measures, the very serious situation which, arising out of the outbreak of preventible diseases following the famine, has taken and is taking a huge toll of human lives from all the districts of the province.

Sir, I think the Government will have no objection to my moving this adjournment motion.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The honourable member has my consent; now it is for the House to give him permission or not. Has he got leave of the House?

Mr. MESBAHUDDIN AHMAD: No, Sir, I have objection.

Mr. PRESIDENT: As there is objection, will the honourable members who are in favour of this adjournment motion being moved rise in their places?

(Thirteen honourable members rose in their seats.)

As the requisite number of members have risen in their places the mover has the leave of the House to move his adjournment motion.

I fix tomorrow 1 o'clock for the discussion of the adjournment motion.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Mr. President, Sir, there is another adjournment motion standing in my name—

Mr. PRESIDENT: You cannot mention it today.

Panel of Chairmen.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Under rule 6 of the Bengal Legislative Council Procedure Rules, I nominate the following gentlemen on the Panel of Chairmen for the current session:—

Mr. Kamini Kumar Dutta,
Mr. W. B. G. Laidlaw,
Khan Bahadur M. A. Momin, C.I.E., and
Mr. Haridas Mazumdar.

House Committee.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Under rule 122 of the Bengal Legislative Council Procedure Rules, I nominate—

The Deputy President (Chairman, ex-officio),
Mrs. K. D'Rozario,
Mr. R. W. N. Ferguson,
Khan Bahadur Mukhlesur Rahman,
Mr. Amulyadhane Roy,
Mr. Yakub H. A. Sattar,
Mr. Bankim Chandra Dutta, on the House Committee for the current session.

Governor's Assent to Bill.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I have to inform the House that the Bengal Vagrancy Bill, 1943, which was passed by both Chambers of the Bengal Legislature, has been assented to by His Excellency the Governor under the provisions of section 75 of the Government of India Act, 1935.

The Bengal Motor Vehicles Rules.

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: I beg to place before the House the amendments to the Bengal Motor Vehicles Rules, 1940, in accordance with the provisions of section 133(3) of the Indian Motor Vehicles Act, 1939.

The Bengal Destitute Persons (Repatriation and Relief) Ordinance, 1943.

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Sir, may I have your permission to lay before the Council the Bengal Destitute Persons (Repatriation and Relief) Ordinance, 1943, under section 88(1) of the Government of India Act, 1935?

The Bengal Alienation of Agricultural Land (Temporary Provisions) Ordinance, 1943.

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Sir, may I have your permission to lay before the Council the Bengal Alienation of Agricultural Land (Temporary Provisions) Ordinance, 1943, as promulgated under section 88(1) of the Government of India Act, 1935?

Amendment of Bengal Legislative Council Procedure Rules.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order, order. A notice of a motion for leave to amend rules 56, 57 and 58 of the Bengal Legislative Council Procedure Rules has been received from the Hon'ble Khan Mahadur Saiyed Muazzam-uddin Hosain.

As required under sub-rule (2) of rule 110 of the said Rules, I now read the draft amendments proposed by the Hon'ble Minister, namely:—

(1) Amendment of rule 56.—In rule 56,—

(a) clause (i) of sub-rule (3) shall be renumbered as sub-rule (3) and in clause (i) of sub-rule (3) as so renumbered which has now become sub-rule (3) the words "if he is a member of the Council" shall be omitted;

(b) clause (ii) shall be omitted.

(2) Amendment of rule 57.—To rule 57 of the Bengal Legislative Council Procedure Rules the following proviso shall be added, namely:—

"Provided that if a Minister who is not a member of the Council is the Chairman of a Select Committee, then in the case of an equality of votes, he shall not have a casting vote but shall decide the question before the committee by the drawing of lots in such manner as he may determine."

(3) Amendment of rule 58.—To rule 58 of the Bengal Legislative Council Procedure Rules the following proviso shall be added, namely:—

"Provided that the provisions of this rule shall not preclude the presence of departmental Secretaries or experts or the Parliamentary Secretary attached to the Minister in charge of the Department to which a Bill relates at the deliberations of a Select Committee for the purpose of rendering to such Minister or to the committee generally any assistance that may be necessary."

Mr. PRESIDENT: Those who are in favour of the motion——

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: May I interrupt for a few moments, Sir? Are you putting them all together? For, some of them may be unobjectionable, while others may be subject to controversy.

Mr. PRESIDENT: It is only a question of granting leave; I am not taking up the matter today.

Those who are in favour of leave to move the motion being granted, will please rise in their places.

As more than 13 members have stood in support of the motion, leave has been granted.

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: Shall we not be entitled to give notice of amendments?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Yes, certainly. Now that leave has been granted, it is for Government to fix a date for consideration of the matter.

The Bengal Non-Agricultural Tenancy (Temporary Provisions) Extending Bill, 1944.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN:
I beg leave to introduce—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Khan Bahadur Sahib, as the Bill has been already published, you need not ask for leave of the House; you may simply say that you introduce the Bill.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN:
All right, Sir, I beg to introduce the Bengal Non-Agricultural Tenancy (Temporary Provisions) Extending Bill, 1944.

The Secretary then read the short title of the Bill.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The Bill is introduced.

The Coroners and Criminal Procedure (Bengal Amendment) Bill, 1943.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN:
I beg to introduce the Coroners and Criminal Procedure (Bengal Amendment) Bill, 1943.

The Secretary then read the short title of the Bill.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The Bill is introduced.

The Bengal Alienation of Agricultural Land (Temporary Provisions) Bill, 1944.

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: I beg to introduce the Bengal Alienation of Agricultural Land (Temporary Provisions) Bill, 1944.

The Secretary then read the short title of the Bill.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The Bill is introduced.

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: I also give notice that the Bengal Alienation of Agricultural Land (Temporary Provisions) Bill, 1944, be taken into consideration and passed, as settled in the Council.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: On a point of order, Sir. Can both the motions be moved together?

Mr. PRESIDENT: The Hon'ble Minister is only giving notice and not actually moving the motions; so your objection is premature.

The Bengal Destitute Persons (Repatriation and Relief) Bill, 1944.

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: I beg to introduce the Bengal Destitute Persons (Repatriation and Relief) Bengal, 1944.

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Secretary then read the short title of the Bill.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The Bill is introduced.

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: I also give short notice that the Bengal Destitute Persons (Repatriation and Relief) Bill, 1944, be taken into consideration and passed, as settled in the Council.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I understand that these two Bills which have just now been moved by the Hon'ble Revenue Minister will have to be passed within a certain date, because they arise out of the Ordinances and they have to be passed within this month. So I accept short-notice and the date I suggest for giving amendments to the motion that the Bill be taken into consideration, is Thursday, the 10th February, 11 a.m.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Won't it be too early, Sir?

Mr. PRESIDENT: I do not think so.

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: It is a very short Bill.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Yes, and the time given is only for tabling amendments to the motion that the Bill be taken into consideration.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: All right, Sir.

Mr. PRESIDENT: For consideration of amendments to clauses of the Bill I fix Tuesday, the 15th February. Amendments to the clauses should reach office by 11 a.m. on Saturday, the 12th February.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: That will be too early, Sir. Can't it be Monday?

Mr. PRESIDENT: I am afraid not.

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: The time is short, Sir. We should have proper time for considering the amendments sitting together and coming to a certain decision.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I cannot defer the date as the office will have to receive amendments, tabulate them and then circulate them. It would be very difficult to do so if you want more time.

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: There is no sitting on Saturday but we will have to come here only for giving the amendments.

Mr. PRESIDENT: You need not come yourself for this purpose.

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: But we will have to come to a decision before submission of amendments.

Mr. PRESIDENT: But the Bill will have to be passed by the 17th. If there is any change in the Bill, it will have to go back to the other place. You must provide for that contingency.

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: Sir, may I request you to change the time from Saturday, 11 a.m. to Saturday, 2 p.m.?

Mr. PRESIDENT: I am prepared to make it 1 p.m. on Saturday, the 12th February 1944.

The Hindu Women's Rights to Property (Bengal Agricultural Land) Bill, 1944.

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Sir, I beg to introduce the Hindu Women's Rights to Property (Bengal Agricultural Land) Bill, 1944.

The Secretary then read the short title of the Bill.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The Bill is introduced.

The Bengal Diseases of Animals Bill, 1944.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Sir, I beg to introduce the Bengal Diseases of Animals Bill, 1944.

The Secretary then read the short title of the Bill.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The Bill is introduced.

The House stands adjourned till 1 p.m. tomorrow.

Adjournment.

The Council then adjourned till 1 p.m. on Wednesday, the 9th February, 1944.

Members Absent.

The following members were absent from the meeting held on the 8th February, 1944:—

- (1) Khan Bahadur Nazimuddin Ahmad.
- (2) Mr. Kader Baksh.
- (3) Mr. Humayun Reza Chowdhury.
- (4) Mr. Narendra Chandra Datta.

BENGAL LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL DEBATES

First Session, 1944—No. 3.

THE COUNCIL met in the Legislative Chamber of the Legislative Building, Calcutta, on Wednesday, the 9th February, 1944; at 2 p.m., being the third day of the First Session of 1944, pursuant to section 62(2)(a) of the Government of India Act, 1935.

Mr. President (the Hon'ble Sir BIJOY PRASAD SINGH ROY, K.C.I.E.) was in the Chair.

Adjournment Motion.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Mr. President, Sir, I beg to move the Adjournment Motion which stands in my name and which runs as follows:—

That this Council do adjourn its business to discuss a definite matter of urgent public importance, namely, the failure of the Government of Bengal to meet, by the adoption of proper, timely and adequate remedial measures, the very serious situation which, arising out of the outbreak of preventible diseases following the famine, has taken and is taking a huge toll of human lives from all the districts of the province.

Sir, responsible persons have variously estimated the figures of mortality from famine and pestilence in Bengal. Mr. Leopold Amery, the Secretary of State for India, has given out his own figures. He said that there are no reliable figures but the Government of India on the basis of their present information consider that the total abnormal mortality due to famine and disease in the last five months of 1943 has not exceeded a million.

This figure, however, Sir, was challenged by Mr. Krishna Menon, the Secretary of the India League in England. We know, of course, that it is an under-estimate. Sir, in India also, this figure was challenged by Pandit Hridaynath Kunzru. According to him, 50,000 deaths from starvation alone took place every week in Bengal. Malnutrition so debilitated the constitution of the people that they fell easy victims to attacks of preventible diseases. Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee's idea of the total mortality figure was 2 million and 5 lakhs from starvation and one million from diseases. Here is an opportunity. Let Government state its own figures of mortality from starvation and diseases. Sir, malaria is 4 to 5 times of what it was in normal times. Malaria, cholera, small-pox and other preventible diseases have broken out in the most epidemic form and are taking a heavy toll of human lives in almost all the districts of Bengal, particularly since the last quarter of the year that is gone. Their constitution was so undermined by famine with no winter clothing to protect them that these people have fallen easy prey to attacks of preventible diseases. I have seen personally human dead bodies floating in the rivers as well as khals. Sir, while passing through the district board road from Kuti to Kamalasagar in the interior of my district, which is Tippera, I have seen in November and January graves and Smashans on the side of the road for miles together as I never saw before.

I enquired and came to know that they were mostly cases of death from cholera and malaria and that not much help was received either from the Government or the district board in the form of sufficient supplies of quinine and anti-cholera vaccine to fight these epidemics. In my own village Purbadhair, I could not find a single member of any house who was free from attack of malaria. In Daudkandi, Homna, and Bancharampur police-stations, in the district of Tippera, about 75 per cent. of the fishermen, Namasudras and Rishis died of diseases following from starvation, and 25 per cent. were hovering between life and death. In Homna police-station, in the month of November last, reported cases of death from malaria were 2,520 as against 1,004, 255 and 257 in October, September and August last, respectively. In Bancharampur police-station, about 500 people died of malaria in the months of September, October and November out of a population of 2,000 people. In that area 90 per cent. were affected by malaria, and it was only towards the end of December, 1943, that in after some months, that Government began free distribution of quinine in small quantities through the existing dispensaries in the union and the union relief committee; but the supply was utterly inadequate to meet the needs of the situation. Government have also started an emergency relief hospital of 20 beds attached to the existing dispensaries though the patients who can be and should be admitted—

Mr. PRESIDENT: I may tell you Mr. Das that you can speak only for 20 minutes.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: All right, Sir.should be admitted numbered more than 2,000 in each union. During the nine months from January to September, 1943, 22,809 deaths occurred in the Chandpur subdivision whereas the number of deaths in 1942 during the same period was 12,646 and in 1941, 11,203. The birth-rate in the Chandpur subdivision had fallen by 48·7 per cent. in 1943 compared with 1941 and the death-rate increased abnormally by 103·59 per cent. over that of 1941 during the same period. The total number of deaths in Brahmanbaria subdivision from January to September, 1943, was 15,391 and in Sadar subdivision (north) it was 18,789 and in Sadar subdivision (south) 11,759 during the same period. Small-pox had broken out in a virulent form in most of the villages in the Chandpur subdivision. From a United Press telegram, dated Chandpur, the 30th December, we gather that more than one lakh of people were lying sick in the countryside being victims of malaria, cholera, small-pox and dysentery and other like diseases. Some dispensaries and temporary hospitals with a limited number of beds had been established by the Government after much mischief was done. But this has not touched even the fringe of the problem. Extensive medical relief is urgently called for. Sir, Tippera is typical of the whole of Bengal. What is true of Tippera is also true of the other districts of Bengal.

For instance, Mr. R. Ahmed, an Alderman of the Calcutta Corporation, after touring the Dacca district, said on 29th December, 1943: "Of all districts in Bengal, Dacca is one of the most hard hit: with famine, death-roll mounted high and cholera, malaria and small-pox are taking the mortality figures higher still. In Nawabganj thana, where communications are very difficult at this time of the year, no relief worth the name has yet been given. I found villages where 50 per cent. of the people have died. Nawabganj thana had a population of 1·30 lakhs and a conservative estimate of mortality in this area alone would be 20,000. The neighbouring thana of Dohor is equally affected and out of about 80,000 people, fully 10,000 have vanished from the world. Quinine is not available." Sir, to proceed further, I can say, Sir Nazimuddin was at Dacca on 30th January last. He met some of the leaders in a conference. There, he heard some ugly facts. There he was told to his very face that Dacca was his own city and yet there was no sufficient quantity of small-pox lymph for vaccination although small-pox was raging furiously in that city. Sir Nazimuddin promised that lymph would be supplied within a week. Up to now no supply has reached Dacca. This is discreditable in the extreme. It shows how inefficient the Government is. And then, Sir, you will notice from a gazette notification in the last week of January, 1944, that ten districts in Bengal, namely, Chittagong, Noakhali, Tippera, Khulna, 24 Parganas, Faridpur, Bakarganj, Birbhum, Burdwan and Howrah, are threatened with an outbreak of cholera. But all the Government of Bengal have done so far is that they have prescribed some temporary regulations for a period of three months for medical inspection, isolation, observation and surveillance of persons suffering from or suspected of being infected with cholera. What about prevention? There is a grave shortage of qualified men in the epidemic staff required for inoculation and vaccination. Government have utterly failed so far to meet the situation. We understand that many were recruited so carelessly that only a few reported for duty. For this inefficient bungling, many people have lost their lives. There is discernible, however, a silver lining in this dark cloud. In giving medical relief to the needy, the army is doing really fine work. But army help must necessarily be of a limited nature and has touched only a fringe of the problem. Sir, the Government stands convicted out of its own mouth. In a Press Note issued last month by the Director of Public Information, Bengal, we read the following:—

"The chronic delay in furnishing vital statistics to the Director of Public Health has been accentuated by the absence of any up-to-date figures of a rising mortality rate throughout the summer and autumn months of 1943 which might have given the public health and medical authorities more timely warning of the necessity of emergency measures on a very wide scale".

This inefficiency on the part of the Government has resulted in the loss of innumerable lives in Bengal.

A million deaths from preventible diseases—that is a horrible fact. It ought to challenge the honour and statesmanship of the present Ministry. Have they that sense? Do they feel it so?

Hospital beds in existing hospitals should be increased cent. per cent. Emergency hospitals should be increased very largely. Medical and non-medical equipment should be purchased in sufficient quantities commensurate with the needs of the situation. Preventive staff should be multiplied fifty times its present strength, mobile medical units should be created and run, satellite treatment centres attached to every dispensary in the province should be established. In all these, Government failed grievously resulting in untold suffering for the people and numberless deaths. I do not wish to increase further the catalogue of my grievances in connection with this motion.

With these words, Sir, I commend my motion to the acceptance of the House.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Motion moved: that this Council do adjourn its business to discuss a definite matter of urgent public importance, namely, the failure of the Government of Bengal to meet, by the adoption of proper, timely and adequate remedial measures, the very serious situation which, arising out of the outbreak of preventable diseases following the famine, has taken and is taking a huge toll of human lives from all the districts of the province.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Mr. President, Sir, I rise to support the adjournment motion so ably moved by my honourable friend Mr. Lalit Chandra Das. He has given a catalogue of details which need not be repeated. I want to speak in general terms. Sir, the chief defence of the present Ministry with regard to the famine has been that they came in when the situation was already very serious. Sir Nazimuddin said at Delhi on the 15th October: "At the time we took office the cupboard was literally bare". I may point out in passing that this statement runs counter to that of Mr. Suhrawardy who said on the 8th May last as follows: "There was a sufficiency of food grains for the people of Bengal". Mr. M. A. Jinnah, President of the Muslim League, said on the 14th November: "When they (these Ministers) got in, the conflagration had already started.....the Nazimuddin Ministry were there as a fire-brigade and were doing their utmost to put out the fire." Even a man with a face of brass will not have the hardihood to say that at least in regard to epidemics the Nazimuddin-Suhrawardy Ministry had not had ample time to foresee and prevent appalling human mortality. My humble self on return from a visit to Barisal, one of the worst affected areas, made in the first week of May a statement to the Press which was published in several Calcutta newspapers and which contained the following: "Owing to the widespread malnutrition and the taking of ill-adjusted poor diet the country is sure to face epidemics the like of which it has never met in the past." On the 15th July in a meeting of the Bengal Legislative Council and in the presence of the Ministers I repeated my warning and said (as published on page 122 of the Official Report of Bengal Legislative Council Debates—Second Session, 1943, No. 4) "Owing to the widespread malnutrition and the taking of ill-adjusted poor diet the country is sure to face epidemics the like of which it has never witnessed in the past." The Amrita Bazar Patrika, the oldest nationalist daily in India and the most influential newspaper in Calcutta published the following in its issue of the 25th October: "Pirojpur, October 2—Sj. Haridas Majumdar, M.L.C., who is touring Barisal and rural areas in a Press statement says: 'Quinine and cholera vaccine must be made available before the epidemics break out virulently. Special doctors should be appointed for the purpose'."

Epidemics did not break out until months later and if the Ministry then undertook on a preventive scale even that small and inadequate measure of medical relief which it arranged later on, tens of thousands of lives would have been saved. We believe that Mr. Jinnah will admit that at least in the case of diseases which have proved a more deadly enemy than hunger, fire had not broken out and the work of the fire-brigade would never have been needed if ordinary circumspection were exercised. Who does not know that epidemics are the horrible aftermath of famine? Bankim Chandra in his book "Ananda Math" gives a graphic description of the famine of 1770 and writes—

"Those who left died of starvation in strange places; those who did not do so died of disease as the result of taking unwholesome food * * * Pestilence broke out,—fever, cholera and small-pox began to roam rampant."

There are few literate Bengalees who have not read the "Ananda Math" which has been a perennial source of inspiration to patriotic young men. The Ministry should have profited by the facts vividly narrated in such a widely read work of literature. Besides, Bankim Chandra's description of famine is a mere paraphrase of the official record. Sir William Hunter also wrote in the same strain. Engaged in grappling with a severe famine which, as I forecast in my speech at Pannalal Seal Vidyamandir published in the Hindusthan Standard of the 16th March, was an impending "calamity comparable to the famine of 1770" could not the Ministry commission one of its 13 members to go carefully into the official record of the 1770 famine in the cool breeze of an electric fan in the Writers' Buildings to the exclusion of all other work? We know that during the last war the Mesopotamia muddle which caused the death of a few hundred British soldiers for want of proper medical aid cost the late Sir Austen Chamberlain his seat in the British Cabinet. Here the Ministers guilty of grave dereliction of an obvious duty pointed out as clearly and emphatically as human speech or writing can indicate, have been responsible for the death of tens of thousands of God's creatures and are still flourishing like green bay trees. Can Britain, responsible for the governance of this country, exculpate herself before the bar of world opinion of the wrong in installing under peculiar circumstances and keeping up this Ministry with the aid of some European votes in the Legislature which bear no relation to the numerical strength of the European British subjects in the province?

With these words, Sir, I commend the motion to the acceptance of the House.

Mr. R. W. N. FERGUSON: Mr. President, Sir, while we are not prepared to support the motion of my friend Mr. Das, we welcome the opportunity of discussing the very serious situation as regards the spread of malaria.

This is not, as the resolution suggests, entirely a result of the after-effect of the famine. Nor is the Government entirely to blame. The Calcutta Corporation are not replacing any vacancies on their mosquito-control staff. Their organisation is decreasing at a time when it should be increased. The southern part of the city was invaded by the ludlow mosquitoes in November of last year for the first time on record.

Malaria is definitely on the increase in Calcutta and we consider measures must be taken for its control.

In the Calcutta area the malaria mosquito and the dengu mosquito breed in cisterns and water storage places and what is primarily required is an organisation capable of mosquito proofing all cisterns and water storage places.

There is also the salt lakes area where a different type of mosquito breeds and we should like to know what Government intend to do about this mosquito-breeding area.

The reorganization and strengthening of the Calcutta anti-mosquito organisation is, we consider, a matter of extreme importance and urgency. The present Corporation mosquito-control organisation is not on a scale adequate for a city of the size of Calcutta.

MR. PRESIDENT: Mr. Ferguson, I am afraid you are criticising the Corporation of Calcutta but this motion refers to the public health measures of the Government of Bengal. The Corporation of Calcutta being an autonomous body, I do not think the Government of Bengal have direct responsibility for the health of the city of Calcutta. You should bear this point in mind. Of course, you can refer to the Calcutta Corporation generally but the Government of Bengal are not primarily responsible for the health of Calcutta.

Mr. R. W. N. FERGUSON: All right, Sir. The anti-mosquito organisation in Calcutta compares unfavourably with the organisation in Bombay and Government, we consider, should impress upon the Calcutta Corporation the necessity of increasing their mosquito-control organisation.

The position which has arisen as a result of famine has also very clearly demonstrated that the medical and public health services are not capable of dealing with such an emergency. Had it not been for the medical help given by the military it is quite clear that the situation would have got out of control. We cannot see how Government can expect efficiency from medical services which are controlled by district boards or local authorities and we would like to know if Government have investigated the desirability of provincialising the medical and public health services as a first step towards putting them on an efficient basis.

Military aid on the present scale will not be with us always and we must know what Government intend to do to set up efficient medical and public health services.

Khan Bahadur M. SHAMSUZZOHA: Sir, in opposing the motion moved by Mr. Lalit Chandra Das I would only cite some facts to show that it was almost impossible on the part of the present Ministry to tackle the food problem that was created by the Ministry before them. After the present Ministry took over the reins of Government in April last, they found themselves face to face with a problem which was unprecedented in character to such an extent that the people of the province of Bengal had to go almost without food for a considerable length of time. This was the result not of the present Ministry's assumption of office for a month or so, but the result of maladministration for years together. Just after the onset of the war there has been maladministration throughout and it was also caused by shortage in the supply of food on account of the occupation of Burma by Japan. And there was absolutely no attempt on the part of the previous Governments to see that a proper supply of food is brought to the doors of the hungry millions of Bengal. Now, Sir, after the present Ministry took over the charge of Government, they tried to solve the problem and the House is well aware how from May up to September they were so very busy with the food problem that it was impossible on their part to give adequate attention to other problems that would follow from the consequences of an inadequate supply of the necessities of life. Now, Sir, in this province, so far as my own knowledge goes, there has not been any proper attempt on the part of the authorities previously to make proper arrangements for the collection of vital statistics. So far as the statistics are concerned, in all branches of life there has been absolutely no arrangement whatsoever. So far as my own district is concerned, still now we have not been able to collect the vital statistics of the district in a proper manner. The sanitary officers who are in the employ of Government as well as of the district board are very few in number—the machinery in our control is hopelessly inadequate and we could not expect with such inadequate staff to get proper vital statistics. So far as medicines are concerned, especially quinine, it is a well-known fact that the supply of quinine is inadequate. Even before the war in my own district when the supply was adequate we could not cope with the situation. Then, after the war there were epidemics of malaria and with our limited resources we could not cope with the situation. This year because of starvation due to the famine, there has been a heavy mortality: but we cannot accuse the present Government of their indifference to the gravity of the situation. I have seen from correspondence that was carried on between the district board, District Magistrate and the Government that they became alive to the situation at least from September last and measures were taken by the Government to bring to the notice of the district authorities the gravity of the situation and also the need for giving the people such medical relief as was possible under the circumstances. But now arrangements have been made with the help of the military authorities to give relief to the suffering people. Attempts have been made where cholera broke out to see that it is brought under control by proper medical help. So it cannot be said that this Government is solely responsible for this heavy mortality in this province. The real fault lies with the previous Government. They could have taken stock of the peculiar situation which arose as a result of the loss of Burma as well as other abnormal developments incidental to the war. It cannot be said that this Government have been apathetic to the people or that they did nothing to ease the situation or they neglected their duty. So I humbly request my friends opposite to realise that this is not an occasion to press a censure motion like this. There has been no maladministration really speaking. According to Malthusian theory, when there is famine there is mortality: no one can prevent this mortality: these are the natural consequences for which no human agency can be held responsible.

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: Mr. President, Sir. My friend has sought to attack the Government by way of this adjournment motion. After having heard all he had to say, I must admit that he has miserably failed to make out even the shadow of a case against the Ministry. It is true that the state of affairs in the province is extremely bad. The outbreak of malaria is very widespread. At one time, in the month of December last, it would not have been an exaggeration to say that more than 50 per cent. of the population were lying in their beds attacked with malaria and to make things worse this year—I do not know what the doctors would say—due to malnutrition men have been reduced to such a state of physical exhaustion that all power of resistance has been lost and are reported to be dying after suffering for 3 or 4 days from malaria. There were many places in East Bengal where malaria was not so widely known. But this year there have been cases in those places in which families with as many as 30 to 40 members have entirely disappeared. We have got a report from the district of Dacca that in a family consisting of 72 members not one has survived the malaria epidemic. This is the position also in Noakhali where in the same house you would find cases of malaria, cholera and small-pox, all together. This is the condition to which the province has been reduced. But, Sir, who is responsible for this state of things? Certainly, it is the primary duty of every civilised Government not only to take all possible measures but be responsible for the health of the people, for the preservation of every man in healthy condition. But you cannot expect that by a movement of the magic wand the present Ministry would be able to bring about everything, that they would be able to protect every man in this province from diseases and malnutrition. Had Bengal ever been visited with such pestilence before? Did such military forces come into this country on any occasion before which demanded the withdrawal of all medical men? More than half the medical men who were in private practice and who were available for the civil population have since joined the Army on unheard-of pay. We all know what inducements are being offered to these medical men. If the inducements offered are not considered sufficient, next day higher pay and other emoluments are offered in the newspapers. The military have succeeded in taking away more than 70 per cent. of our doctors; and they are now broadcasting how generously they have sent to us 50 to 100 doctors for short duration. We recognise the military necessities, but they in turn should recognise the civilian needs. We find from the reports of the Hon'ble Ministers and the statements made by them that even the senior students of medical colleges and schools are being requisitioned for the purpose of medical duties in the districts. Government have done everything that has been possible for them to do in the course of the four or five months that they are in office. They have laid down elaborate and ambitious plans which would have taken years and years for any Government to implement. Fourteen hundred to two thousand dispensaries are going to be opened throughout the province. They will have to be furnished at a time when furniture are a rarity. They will require not only furniture but also medical instruments for the use of the doctors, which are also very expensive and unavailable at the moment. These dispensaries will have to be provided with doctors and nurses. And doctors and nurses are notoriously unavailable. They have to be provided with medicine when medicine has become as scarce as anything.

So far as people's co-operation is concerned, there is very little of it. Opposition members were raising false cries and creating false impression leading to more panic and more distrust in the minds of people. A businessman tries to create an atmosphere in which he can thrive and make more black markets and profit. Ordinary citizen will not volunteer their services in the matter of suppressing black markets. The real remedy for these lies in every citizen coming forward to help the machinery set up by Government to check the black markets by informing the police so that the culprits may be punished. There is utter lack of co-operation from every side. In this atmosphere Government is asked to do miracles. Government have their duties in this matter and they must discharge their responsibilities. There is no doubt about that. But, at the same time, Government is entitled to demand from you, from us or from anybody that amount of co-operation which alone can make any scheme successful.

As regards the picture drawn by Mr. Das and Mr. Mazumdar, the Government cannot say that it is in the least exaggerated. The picture is there. It is even more horrible than words can describe. Malaria which was confined only to a few districts is now running rampant in every district of Bengal. But the Government wants your help and instead of that you create all sorts of obstruction, you create all sorts of antipathy in the minds of the people. Whenever there is an attempt made by Government to create confidence in the minds of the people so that they may co-operate with Government scheme, you try your best to see that such confidence is not created. You are trying to make political capital out of the miseries of the people. You have used the poor and the sufferers as arguments in support of your political game. Therefore, Sir, I say that Mr. Lalit Chandra Das after hearing the Minister as to what they have done should realise his own short-comings and withdraw his motion and remain content with what Government do.

Dr. KUMUD SANKAR RAY: Sir, I am sorry that I have not heard the previous speakers but from what I have heard from the last speaker it seems to me very difficult to take part in any debate in this House or to offer criticisms on any matter under discussion without being charged with a political motive or bias regarding it. I hope, however, that this is not the attitude of the other members of this House. I take it that there are many members in this House who are entitled to express their views without any bias. I hope that whatever remark I may make will be taken in that spirit and not be characterised, as the previous speaker has done, as emanating from any political motive. With these few preliminary remarks, I would like to put a few questions to my honourable friend on the other side. He says that there are no doctors available when we want a large number of doctors and nurses. Sir, why are there no doctors? And I should like to know what steps have been taken by Government to increase the facilities for medical education. What steps have been taken by them for the training of nurses? In my last budget speech, I pointed out that the need for the training of nurses was acute and I also suggested that some medical schools in the mofussil could well be converted into special training institutions for nurses. The then Finance Minister promised to look into the matter, but I do not know what has happened to that suggestion of mine. Government should have anticipated such a situation developing owing to the war and should accordingly have made arrangements for the training of a large number of nurses and doctors. There is also the question of finance. A large number of private medical institutions are on the verge of closing their doors for financial difficulty and applications made for financial aid find no response from Government.

Then again, I had drawn the attention of the public and warnings were given also through articles in the Press urging compulsory vaccination against small-pox and cholera. I do not know whether any notice was taken of these warnings. It may be that it was construed as a political propaganda. Far from it. But I am sorry that no response was given to it. I have never heard of any conference being called to consider whether it was feasible to have compulsory vaccination and pre-vaccination every five years as is done in every civilized country in the world. I do submit, however, that I do not blame this particular Ministry or the previous Ministry for having neglected the medical and public health problems of this province. There was no policy worth the name, no far-sighted policy regarding the reorganisation of the province from the medical and public health point of view. I challenge the Government to lay before the public any far-sighted scheme regarding the supply of medical men in rural areas and the prevention of epidemic diseases, not to speak of diseases like tuberculosis and other diseases of that nature. There is also the problem of nutrition which has become acute in the wake of famine, beri-beri and other diseases. Is there any committee sitting to devise ways and means for preventing them? Sir, I do not want to waste the time of the House further. Neither am I in a position to answer the points raised by the speakers who have spoken before me. With these remarks, I resume my seat.

Mr. W. B. C. LAIDLAW: I would like to make our attitude perfectly clear in regard to the spread of diseases in this city. Government cannot evade responsibility when the Calcutta Corporation's arrangements are palpably inadequate. Mr. Ferguson has told the House that the invasion by ludlowi of southern Calcutta in November last was the first of its kind that is on record and this should demonstrate to Government how very serious the situation in this city has become.

Khan Sahib NURUL AMIN: Sir, I do not stand up to minimise the magnitude of the situation which has been created by various epidemic diseases in consequence of the famine. But the question which is for discussed here is whether the present Ministry is responsible in any way for creating the situation or for the failure in arresting the progress of the epidemics. Everybody will agree with me that malaria was raging high when the food problem of this province reached its zenith. Government at that time was mainly concerned with the supply of food and along with that they tried their best to secure quinine and supply it to the malaria-affected districts. But Government had had limitation there also. We all know that supply of quinine has been curtailed to a great extent and that rationing system has been introduced on account of the loss of Java from our possession—Java, from where large quantity of quinine used to be imported. Bengal is the only place where quinine is produced in India: this quinine has to be distributed all over India. Therefore, the allotment has had to be cut down to a certain extent. But it cannot be denied that at present through the help of the military, quinine has been made available all over the mofussil districts in abundance—wherever there is scarcity of quinine it is being supplied with the help of military and we find quinine everywhere in abundance where there was shortage. Quinine is now sold at controlled rate in almost every union: it is now distributed to district boards and union boards free of cost with the result that that problem has almost been solved. Then comes the question of cholera. There are not sufficient laboratories for manufacturing cholera vaccines: the existing laboratories are not quite enough to meet the demands of the abnormal situation. These laboratories work day and night and produce vaccine up to their maximum capacity; but in spite of that, they are not able to cope with the situation. It is difficult also to set up new laboratories all at once and we realise the difficulty of the Government. Then, Sir, with regard to the question of small-pox: here also the same question arises, the question of sufficient number of laboratories to produce vaccines: that also depends on the capacity of individual laboratory to produce lymphs. The maximum quantity of vaccines are being produced by the laboratories and maximum number of vaccinations are being given in the districts. I do not say that this is sufficient. But I say that Government cannot improve on the situation under the present circumstances. Thanks to Lord Wavell, who came to our help and mobilised the otherwise immovable military in this respect. There was difficulty of transport and district boards and other local bodies did not get the medicines and other supplies indented by them for want of proper transport facilities. But this situation has been eased by the help of military: these articles are now being transported with the military aid. Then, Sir, we have got to consider the limit of financial responsibility.

As soon as the military people came—I do not know wherefrom they got money—they engaged petty officers of health assistants' type in the district boards getting Rs. 40 on Rs. 95. Perhaps the Government of India are giving money. But we find that they are being engaged. It has been suggested by some honourable member that as public health administration is not properly being managed by the self-governing bodies like the Calcutta Corporation and the district boards, Government should take charge of this department. Sir, I seriously object to that suggestion. Neither the Government nor the honourable member has been able to point out any dereliction of duty on the part of the district boards. They are running the organisation efficiently but they have not got unlimited finances. Their financial position being inelastic, they could not spend more even if they had wished. Representations after representations were made to Government for monetary help, for medical men; but nothing came from the Government. So, the district boards and other local bodies cannot be blamed for that. The sanitary staff which is working under the district boards is working day and night. The staff is very ill-paid. The district boards wanted to increase their salaries but could not, owing to the reduced cess collections. The landlords have very good collections but they are loathe to pay cesses which will go to the district boards. Regard being had to all these facts, I would submit that the suggestion of the honourable member is not justified.

With these words, Sir, I oppose the motion.

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: Mr. President, Sir, on behalf of my group, I support the motion moved by my honourable friend Mr. Lalit Chandra Das. His figures are more eloquent than his speech and I think those figures will amply prove the responsibility and neglect of the Government who were in charge at the time when this calamity took place. This famine took place about a year ago in this province. The Government tried to evade their responsibility at first by saying that there was no famine. There were bitter controversies between different parties here and we sometimes intervened in those debates. When the whole world said that there was famine, even then Government practically did not show by any record that there was famine and they did not apply the Famine Code to the affected areas. Anyway, it is now admitted that famine has been raging in Bengal, and we all know that in the wake of famine comes pestilence in the shape of epidemic diseases.

With the development of science, if it is not possible to prevent entirely the diseases it is at least possible to mitigate the evil to a great extent. We have also heard one honourable member of this House who is a doctor of some eminence in this city, and I think, you cannot lightly dismiss his remarks. It is quite apparent that Government did not, from the beginning, take all necessary steps to prevent the recurrence of diseases. The honourable members of the Ministerial Group tried to advocate the cause of Government by saying what they have done. Certainly, they have done something. We do not say that they have not done anything but what are the facts? The facts are there that every day people are dying in great numbers and the most unfortunate part of the situation is that we do not even know the total mortality figure. Government have not published what is the number of deaths, what is the percentage of deaths in Bengal due to starvation, disease, etc. One of the Hon'ble Ministers gave us in reply to our enquiry that it would not justify the expenses in war time to give the number of deaths. It is only possible for Ministers in a country like ours to say that. Had it been in any other country, the Minister would have been lynched. But here Government goes on merrily while people are dying. It is just like Nero fiddling when Rome was burning. I am really sorry, that Ministers are still in a gay and joyful mood despite grave dereliction of their duty. They realise that as long as some votes are at their beck and call, they can stick to their posts. Does the gentleman who is laughing on the other side know what vote he has at his disposal? Probably he has his own vote only. Anyway, I think that Government cannot get out of the fact that the pestilence and epidemics broke out during this Ministry. I do not say that the past Ministry was very good or that they were above blame. The pestilence and epidemic diseases nevertheless have happened during this Ministry. But what they have done? They could not prevent the diseases which it is possible to prevent. They have failed to discharge their duties. One honourable member complained against the Calcutta Corporation, and the Hon'ble President pointed out that it is not the proper place for reference to the Calcutta Corporation. But everybody knows that the Corporation is also suffering from financial difficulties. The Government should assist the Calcutta Corporation with sufficient funds to carry on the work of mosquito control. The Government is also responsible for the short comings and incapacity of the Corporation and the district boards which cannot carry on their work efficiently for want of funds. In the circumstances, Sir, I think that Government should take all possible steps to relieve the situation. Another of our honourable friends, Mr. Hamidul Huq Choudhury, said that people do not co-operate but I do not know when and at what stage our co-operation was sought. So far as the food problem was concerned, a Conference was no doubt called. We attended but no co-operation was asked from us save that the Hon'ble Food Minister spoke something and we had nothing to do except to hear it only.

Mr. PRESIDENT: That is beside the point; we are now discussing about public health.

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: I am sorry I had to digress. But I have done so because we were charged with not having co-operated with Government, and that is why I was saying that we were never even asked to co-operate with Government. And when we went to a Conference in response to an invitation from the Minister of Food—I beg to say that the food problem is almost an allied problem with disease and famine—, we found to our utter surprise that the whole scheme had already been prepared and sent out to the different District Officers and we were simply to hear what the Hon'ble Minister had done, as if it was a sort of Press Conference and the whole object of the invitation was that we should go there and advertise the activities of Government. Was our co-operation ever called for especially in this matter of preventible diseases? I say "no". In that view of the case, it is the Government who are to blame and not the public or the leaders of the public. With these words, I resume my seat.

Mr. NAGENDRA NATH MAHALANABIS: Mr. President, Sir, the motion before the House seeks to draw attention to the burning question of the day, namely, the death-roll that is being taken by malaria, small-pox and other preventible diseases. After having heard so many honourable members on the motion, I have got no doubt in my mind that the main fact involved in the motion, namely, the question of the prevalence of these preventible diseases in this province is admitted on all hands. It is also admitted that these diseases could be easily prevented if timely action had been taken. Now, Sir, in discussing this matter of great importance some of the honourable members have tried to bring in unpleasant remarks by saying that we are trying to make political capital out of this situation. Dr. Kumud Sankar Ray has very pertinently replied to this sort of criticism and I do not like to add to that except to say that this sort of criticism has become a stock criticism for certain members. If what the Opposition say is sought to be hushed and silenced by the Government Party by saying that they are trying to make a political propaganda, then I submit that instead of hearing the views of Opposition members they should chuck out the Opposition altogether, and no opportunity need be given to the Opposition to express their views whatsoever. Now, Sir, we find that it is not really a case where the Government should be so helpless. Whatever might have been the position with regard to the question of food problem in early June, July, August and September, it was foreseen by everybody that in the wake of famine, pestilence in the form of these diseases was coming.

Now, Sir, what have the Government done? It has been said that Government could not do anything by magic. What were the things necessary to prevent spread of these diseases? In regard to malaria, all that was necessary was adequate supply of quinine. What attempts have been made by Government to obtain quinine we do not know and we have not heard anything about it up till now. But it is confessed that the supply of quinine is inadequate. Why? What attempts have been made to secure quinine? If Indian supply is not sufficient to meet the want of Bengal, why did you not try to get the supply from elsewhere when malaria has appeared in a serious form? I submit no reply has been given to this point, and the Government must confess their guilt. Then, Sir, with regard to cholera and small-pox—what is necessary is vaccine. Is it at all difficult to procure vaccine to cope with the menace? I submit, Sir, Government have not taken up this matter in all seriousness. If they had done so, they could have actually helped in this matter. Government have not tried to appoint adequate staff for vaccination and have not encouraged the small societies—there are small societies and small chemical manufacturing companies started by some doctors for the production of vaccine lymph in sufficient quantities,—but Government never cared to help them, never cared to take advantage of these organisations; and they did not utilise these small societies with a view to effect adequate supply of vaccine lymphs. Then, Sir, apart from the question of inadequacy of supply of medicines, there is another question for which I hold Government responsible, namely, the adulterated food that the Supply Department is supplying to the people. The mixing of joar and bazra with wheat is really causing much more mischief than want of food. Then, Sir, the adulterated mustard oil that is being sold to the people is being freely allowed without any check whatsoever. There is no check, as before, under the Food Adulteration Act. The Act has been laid aside. The oil which is being consumed by the people is doing more harm than if the people did not take mustard oil at all. Government do not care to see whether it is pure mustard oil or not. I should say people should go without the mustard oil which is to be retailed now-a-days instead of taking this oil. This sort of oil is responsible for killing hundreds and thousands of our people. The next question for consideration is the question of nutrition which was emphasised by Dr. K. S. Ray. You are taking away the cattle from our country. We do not get any supply of milk. For malaria the medicine is quinine and the food is milk—a malarial patient must have a sufficient quantity of milk. But instead of supplying milk you are taking away all the cattle. There are epidemic diseases of cattle in the countryside and thousands and thousands of cattle are dying along with men. But is the Government doing anything to prevent this mortality? I have not seen anything being done. I think Government will say that they are still compiling vital statistics. It is ridiculous that we do not know up till now what is the number of deaths in the province because the figures are still being compiled. We know, Sir, that in every village, every town and every city deaths are recorded from day to day by the local authorities and local bodies.

The Public Health Department receive daily and weekly reports of deaths and in those reports they get the causes of deaths as well and it does not require any amount of labour or expense to compile statistics and to present those statistics before the House. The excuses that are being given in this House, are, I submit, if that is parliamentary, lame-excuses not worthy of the Government. I therefore submit that the Government has failed to perform its duty and I think every one present here would agree to that and this is all that this resolution stands for.

Mr. MUNCTURAM JAIPURIA addressed the House in Hindi.

Mr. NUR AHMED: Mr. President, Sir, I had no desire to take part in today's discussion but the remarks of the last speaker has induced me to speak something on this very vital question. Sir, this question might have been brought in this House in any other form except as an adjournment motion. I know Mr. Lalit Chandra Das always comes with a motion like this. With all respect to Dr. K. S. Ray, I must say that this motion has been moved with only one motive and that is a political motive, to censure the Ministry rightly or wrongly. That is the only intention which lies behind this motion. Of course, I must say that the subject-matter of this motion is very vital to the people of Bengal. Sir, it has been admitted by the Hon'ble the Chief Minister that the prevalence of the diseases is very widespread in Bengal. Bengal is confronted with many serious problems, but it would not be correct to say that the present Ministry is sleeping or that they have failed to do their part. This Ministry all on a sudden found themselves confronted with the task of grappling with a very grave problem, namely, the prevention of the diseases which have broken out all on a sudden throughout the length and breadth of the country affecting 6 crores of people. Dr. Bentley, the great friend of Bengal, said when there was an outbreak of cholera—and at that time there was no popular Government but the bureaucratic Government—that there was no money. There was some delay in his getting the money and in the meantime thousands died of cholera.

*An authorised English translation of this Hindi Speech will be printed as an appendix to the debates of this session.

Sir, I must congratulate the Ministry on the bold step they have taken. Though Bengal is facing a huge deficit, the Government are spending a lot of money on prevention of diseases. What was the expenditure under head "Public Health" before? It never exceeded Rs. 50 lakhs, but this year Government have spent more than a crore on Public Health Department alone and they have taken all possible steps to prevent diseases. Of course, I cannot deny that malaria, cholera, dysentery and other diseases are widespread in Bengal. Speaking from my own personal experience and also from the recorded figures of Chittagong, I can say that in Chittagong the mortality from all diseases has increased more than double. Generally, the death-roll of Chittagong is about 50,000 but it has exceeded a lakh in 1943. Sir, the incidence of cholera and malaria has increased more than double. Despite all the attempts that have been made by the Ministry, there is want of medical treatment in some quarters in Chittagong. Sir, the Ministry have to grapple with the very grave situation with limited resources.

As regards quinine, the big source of quinine has dried up with the fall of Java. From the figure it appears that in 1938-39 Bengal consumed only 1 lakh and 41,000 lbs. of quinine out of the total requirements of 2 lakhs lbs. In 1940-41, it dwindled into one lakh and 11,000 lbs. Sir, in 1943, it has dwindled into 75,000 lbs. but this Ministry has increased it to one lakh and 23,000 lbs. Sir, the Ministry have organised the whole province on a basis so that medical relief may reach every village. They are going to set up 250 travelling dispensaries or moving units and 5,000 other dispensaries. There is activity on all sides. Therefore, I do not think that this motion is in order at this time when there are great activities going on throughout the province to organise medical relief for Bengal. Sir, with these words, I oppose the motion.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The Hon'ble Minister will now reply to the debate. But before he begins, I may inform him that he can speak for twenty minutes only. After his speech the mover of the motion has a right of reply. The Hon'ble Minister can also reply again to any new points in the speech of the mover. After that the discussion will come to an end.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Is it your ruling, Sir, that after I make my reply the Hon'ble Minister also will have a right of speaking again?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Yes.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Under what rule, Sir?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Under the very rule that gives the mover of an adjournment motion the right to reply to the Minister's reply.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Very well, Sir. Mr. Kabir also wants to speak.

Mr. PRESIDENT: He is too late, I am afraid.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi JALALUDDIN AHMAD: Mr. President, Sir, the adjournment motion of my esteemed friend Mr. Lalit Chandra Das is, I am afraid—

Mr. PRESIDENT: One moment, Khan Bahadur. Mr. Das, I would refer you to sub-rule (3) of rule 42 of our Rules of Procedure. You may now go on, Khan Bahadur Sahib.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi JALALUDDIN AHMAD: Sir, the adjournment motion of my honourable friend, as I have already said, is based on a misconception and absolute ignorance of the contents of the different communiqués issued by the Bengal Government from time to time and also of my broadcast speech made on the 8th January, 1944, regarding the remedial measures that were taken for the reception of sick destitutes so far back as August last, and the establishment of famine relief emergency hospitals and the increased supply of quinine throughout the province, not to speak of increased indent of cholera and small-pox vaccines and the recruitment of a large number of preventive sanitary assistants and doctors.

I would like to mention also that according to the fortnightly reports from the Surgeon-General and the Director of Public Health to the Government of Bengal malaria is definitely on the decrease in the majority of the districts, though it is a little high in Mymensingh. Malaria has decreased in 14 districts. Four districts are absolutely free from cholera, and in 7 districts it is stationary. And only in two districts they are increasing a little. Small-pox is definitely on the decrease in four districts; in 6 districts only it is stationary and one district is absolutely free. In the rest of the 15 districts, it is increasing a little, but vaccinations have been pushed on energetically.

On the basis of figures so far received from 18 districts, it is expected that the total excess in the number of deaths during 1943 over the average of normal years will come to between 6 and 7 lakhs. The figure being an average of 1,184,000 and the actual for the whole year of 1943 is estimated at 1,784,000, so that the excess will be 6 lakhs or about 7 lakhs. In this connection, I may tell the House that the figure of deaths on account of famine is being contested. We have recently seen in the statement issued by the Secretary of State that the figure of mortality is given as one million. People in our province and also of India as a whole are contesting this figure and claiming that it should be 2 millions. If that be so, then no blame can be laid at the door of the medical relief operations of the Bengal Government. You cannot censure the Government twice—once for lack of medical education which has brought about these deaths and again for want of food, and famine. These deaths are really attributable to the recurrence of—but I am not saying that there are no deaths from these diseases—malaria, cholera and small-pox. The figure of 7 lakhs includes deaths from all causes, cholera, malaria, small-pox as well as starvation. It is true that practically all excess cholera deaths are the result of famine conditions and starvation and want of people's vitality and power to resist malaria. It must be remembered, of course, that cholera and small-pox recur periodically in normal times and they reach their peak between November and January. We have taken early measures to fight against these diseases. Then, malaria has increased on account of famine conditions although malaria and small-pox also occur independently of any famine. Honourable members know that Bengal is notorious for malaria and the high incidence of malaria this year is due to loss of vitality on account of famine conditions. It would, therefore, be incorrect to deduce from this that the excess mortality figures of 1943 is due to lack of timely measures being adopted by Government—that Government failed to take timely action against these preventable diseases. With these observations I would now dwell on the measures which we have taken beforehand. We took office towards the close of April last and we found in August that the situation was serious. And as far back as September, 1943, the District Magistrates were authorised to open hospitals for the reception of sick destitutes all over Bengal. They were authorised to incur expenditure under Treasury Rule 27 up to any amount to bring medical relief to the poor and suffering people. Then in October, 1943, the Government of Bengal, through the Minister in charge of the Public Health and Local Self-Government Department, moved the Government of India for 40 doctors and 10 assistants for combating preventable diseases in Bengal in view of the shortage of doctors in the province. This will give the House an idea of what Government have done. Government as a matter of fact were alert about the seriousness of the situation and tried their best to give relief to the people. With regard to the complaint of my esteemed friend Dr. K. S. Ray, I may say that in the whole of Bengal there are 4,000 doctors; out of this 4,000, 3,000 work in Calcutta and the rest, namely, 1,000, is distributed throughout the mofussil area of Bengal consisting of 60 million people. So I would ask the members to consider whether it is possible even for a super-man, to cater to the needs of such a vast population in the mofussil with only one thousand doctors giving perhaps one doctor for every 15,000 or 20,000 people.

The present Ministry is not at all responsible for this state of affair. It is due to the callousness of the people of Bengal. The people of Bengal have been callous in respect of medical relief and medical service in Bengal. They agitated for political achievements and for other things, but they did not care for medical relief; they did not press the Government—India Government for providing adequate medical relief. On the other hand, even, between 1937 and 1942, I have never seen any serious agitation on the part of any member of the Upper Chamber or of the Assembly to move for more money for the Public Health Department. Things have drifted not today, not during the last 5 years but in the course of the last 20 to 30 years. So, if anybody is responsible for this, the people of Bengal,—and I should say the leaders of the Assembly and Council—, are responsible for this state of things. These are due to the accumulated neglect of the people of Bengal. Neither the present Ministry nor myself is responsible for this state of affairs. But it is not possible to effect an over-night improvement. (Mr. RANAJIT PAL CHOWDHURY: Two wrongs do not make a right thing.) We have some post-war reconstruction schemes and other schemes by which we want to revolutionise the whole public health administration. We want to bring medical relief to the door of every man in each union, through our mobile medical units. In October, 1943, the Government of Bengal moved the Government of India for enlarging hospital accommodation and then a definite scheme was made and the Government sanctioned more than 600 new hospitals with beds numbering over 18,000. Of these beds, 2,000 were in Calcutta and the remaining for the 12 worst affected districts of the province. I admit here that there was defective machinery for the collection of vital statistics. The President of the union board was made responsible for the collection of statistics. We have recently altered the machinery. Now the Sanitary Inspector will collect the statistics. Here again, there may be complaint that this Government is acting like a bureaucratic Government inasmuch as it is taking away power from the union boards. The worst affected districts are the 24 Parganas, Murshidabad, Rangpur, Burdwan, Howrah, Midnapore, Dacca, Faridpur, Mymensingh, Chittagong, Noakhali and Tippera. I do not know whether there is any honourable member from Rangpur here. But I may say that cholera and malaria have decreased in Rangpur.

The total cost of this scheme is estimated to be 24 lakhs of rupees non-recurring and 7 lakhs of rupees per month recurring. The Opposition members have said that Government have not done what they were required to do. This is not correct. Even in this extraordinary circumstance they are spending money. They are spending up to any amount that they can spend on medical relief. Under this scheme, 15,000 beds have already been started in the mofussil and the delay in starting the rest is due to paucity of sufficient number of doctors. I appealed in my broadcast speech to the members of the medical profession to offer their services but in spite of very attractive emoluments that we offered, the response that we have got from them is very poor.

Besides the hospitals, 2,800 satellite treatment centres for outdoor cases of all kinds have been sanctioned as annexes to the 1,400 existing dispensaries to fight malaria and other diseases at an expenditure of more than four and half lakhs of rupees. Quinine is liberally distributed through centres already opened—their number is more or less 400—and through other non-Government agencies and the cost on this account is estimated to be 17 lakhs of rupees. Additional sum of 7 lakhs of rupees has been sanctioned for the purchase of quinine. It is reported by the majority of the District Magistrates that malaria is markedly decreasing as a result of this quinine distribution. In addition to this, to bring medical relief to the door of those people who cannot avail themselves of the satellite dispensaries, Government have provided for 250 mobile medical units and the cost sanctioned on this account is more than two and half lakhs of rupees per month. These units, together with 41 other units maintained by the military, I am confident, will greatly alleviate the sufferings of the sick people. Here I can tell the House through you, Sir, that I acknowledge with gratitude the assistance that has been given by the military. But there is a general impression that the assistance given by the military is much more than what the Government in the Civil Department have done. This is not correct. The military have only supplemented the resources of the emergency hospitals that we have set up. It is true that they have got more equipped doctors who have been of great assistance to us. Suffice it to say, in the hospitals and the mobile treatment centres opened by the military no less than 1 lakh 85 thousand patients were treated.

Sir, there are so many things in connection with this motion and I am expected to answer every point but I am afraid I have got no time. I can, however, assure the members that there is no lack of attention or anxiety on the part of the Government to deal with medical relief to the people. I can assure the House that everything that is humanly possible is being done by the Government and that mere statement of remedial measures will not help the situation.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, if the Hon'ble Minister wants to meet our points, he may be given more time to do so.

Mr. PRESIDENT: How can we allow him more time? The time allotted is 20 minutes under the rules.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi JALALUDDIN AHMAD: I have got nothing further to say. If my honourable friend Mr. Das would be good enough to come and see me in my office, I shall be able to convince him and show what steps have been taken in this behalf from the month of September and what we are doing. I intend to announce by a press communique—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Khan Bahadur, your time is up; you cannot go on further.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi JALALUDDIN AHMAD: All right, Sir. I would conclude by requesting the mover of the motion to be good enough to withdraw his motion, in view of the remedial measures that Government have taken. I may also say that we have provided quinine for 10 millions* out of 60 million people of this province. I would not like to take the time of the House further—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Khan Bahadur, I am afraid you are exceeding your time-limit. Mr. Das, do you want to exercise your right of reply?

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Yes, Sir.

Mr. PRESIDENT: After you have finished the Hon'ble Minister has a second right of reply; so he must be given some time. Therefore, I can give you only 5 or 6 minutes.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, so many members have spoken and I have got to reply to their remarks also. Please let me have some more time.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Well, I am helpless in the matter. The debate must under the rules come to an end after two hours and we must finish by 3 p.m. punctually. If you exercise your right of reply, the Hon'ble Minister has a second right of reply: either you speak or you don't.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Mr. President, Sir, I would like first of all to reply to one particular point which has been raised by some members on the Government side, particularly by Mr. Nur Ahmed and Mr. Hamidul Huq Chowdhury. They found that their position was very difficult, that what the motion stood for was all true, that the people of Bengal were dying like cats and dogs and that proper remedies were not forthcoming from Government and that timely relief did not reach them. So the best course, they thought, would be not to meet my points by actual facts and figures. Instead, they took recourse to vilification. That is what, Sir, they have attempted to do. Both Messrs. Nur Ahmed and Hamidul Huq Chowdhury have charged me with having behind this motion a political motive. I say that he is a political, I am a political, every one in this House is a political. Therefore, it is easy for any one to charge another with having a political motive but if a person does not act according to his convictions, he is shirking his responsibility. The honourable members on the other side want to drown a very important motion brought by one of their adversaries by branding it as a political issue. Sir, it is a very important motion brought before the House for drawing pointed attention of Government to the serious situation in Bengal and they are to say whether the facts are true or not. Once they admit that they are true, they ought to hand down their heads in shame for it, unless they can point out facts which justify their existence here. While they charge us with political motive we can equally charge them with a political motive. There is no case behind them and therefore they meet our points only by vilification ascribing political motive which is untrue.

Next, I would like to point out another important fact, namely, that a large part of the speech of Mr. Nur Ahmed was in entire support of the motion I have moved. He pointed out that the death-roll in Chittagong was running very high and medical help was not quite sufficient. That is, Sir, what we are saying—we are saying that medical help is not sufficient and death-roll is running very high. It is the duty of Government to see that the life and property of the people are secure. If they cannot do so, they have no right to be on the Treasury Benches. If they want to remain on the Treasury Benches, they have got to discharge their duty and save the lives of the people from these preventible diseases. The Hon'ble Minister tried to wriggle out of the awkward situation by saying that out of the 4,000 doctors in the whole of Bengal, 3,000 are working in Calcutta and the rest are in the mofussil: as such how could this small number cater to the needs of so many people suffering from diseases in the mofussil? Well, I say, why did you not import doctors from outside? According to the statement of the Hon'ble Minister, he got timely warning of the coming catasrophe and he took timely steps. What steps the Government of Bengal have taken in trying to meet the present serious situation? Why did the Government not import a large number of doctors from outside the province and also a larger number of trained persons required for the purpose of vaccination and inoculation? Some of these points have been replied to by Dr. K. S. Ray. He distinctly charged the Government with dereliction of duty. Dr. Ray pointed out that whenever he approached Government with suggestions for medical relief, for contribution to medical needs of the province, for medical institutions, his suggestions were not taken notice of and sometimes even refused. Then, Sir, Government ought to have taken care to encourage people to take to medical profession: they ought to have taken care to properly educate the people. Then and then only you can get sufficient doctors. Sir, there is another very important point to look to. Is it a fact that the Hon'ble Minister in charge called the students to come out to help in the matter of giving medical relief to the people of Bengal? Did they report for duty? If not, what was the reason for not doing so? You charge us first of all by saying that the whole people of Bengal are callous; but did you move the Government either as a member or as a Minister for sufficient money for giving medical help to the people? Sir, remaining where he is, as a Minister of Government representing the people, it was his clear duty to move the Government, to persuade the Government to make sufficient allotments for medical and public hygiene purposes. It was clearly his business to move the Government for money to cope with the situation. But instead of that he makes it his business to charge the whole people of Bengal with callousness. Again I say, it was his clear duty to move Government to allot sufficient funds for proper medical education as well for proper medical treatment.

Then, Sir, is it a fact that when the Hon'ble Minister called the students to render medical help and come to the rescue of the suffering people, sufficient number was not forthcoming? Our report is that the Hon'ble Minister's selection of people was wrong and many did not turn up with the result that sufficient help was not available which proved disastrous to the people, and several lakhs of people died in consequence. These are the points which the Hon'ble Minister did not care to reply to. He said that a large number of hospitals has been started—large number of beds has been provided for. I know, Government started some emergency hospitals. I know also that they have added some beds to the existing hospitals.

Mr. BIREN ROY: May I rise on a point of order, Sir?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order, order. Yes, Mr. Roy.

Mr. BIREN ROY: Sir, my point of order is that Mr. Lalit Chandra Das is addressing the Hon'ble Minister direct and not through you. Is he in order?

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: I have been addressing the Hon'ble Minister through you, Sir. However, Sir, I know all these things. But what I want to say is that we should have more hospitals and more beds and all of them in right good time. As for example, in Homna police-station only 20 beds have been given, where 2,000 beds are necessary. Where 50 emergency hospitals are needed, only one is there. We get all these hospitals and beds on paper all right but in actual practice there is very little sign of these things being in operation. The Government have failed to discharge their duties properly, fairly and adequately.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Das, I hope you will now resume your seat.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, may I speak a few words with regard to quinine?

Mr. PRESIDENT: But the Hon'ble Minister will have to reply to you.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: But, Sir, has the Hon'ble Minister any mind to reply to my points? They are unanswerable.

Malaria has increased 4 to 5 times than what it was before. I want to know what arrangements the Government made to cope with that situation. Sir, one honourable member belonging to the Government party was saying or rather deploring the loss of his possession of Java. I was wondering when Java was in his possession?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Das, have you finished your quinine?

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: May I speak only for a couple of minutes more? Give me two minutes, Sir, for quinine.

Mr. PRESIDENT: But you have already spoken for 10 minutes more.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: All right, Sir.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi JALALUDDIN AHMAD: Sir, we have tried our best to get doctors from other provinces. In fact, we have got 26 doctors from Burma. (Mr. RANAJIT PAL CHOWDHURY: Burma refugees?) No, no, we have got them from the Burma Government on loan. Now, from the Government of India also we have asked for doctors and we will soon get some. I think very shortly we shall get two-thirds of the whole of India's strength of doctors.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Did you offer them proper wages?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi JALALUDDIN AHMAD: Certainly we did, but you are unanswerable.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order, order.

The Council stands adjourned till 1 p.m. tomorrow.

Adjournment.

The Council then adjourned till 1 p.m. on Thursday, the 10th February, 1944.

Members absent.

BENGAL LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL DEBATES

First Session, 1944—No. 4.

THE COUNCIL met in the Legislative Chamber of the Legislative Building, Calcutta, on Thursday, the 10th February, 1944, at 1 p.m., being the fourth day of the First Session of 1944, pursuant to section 62(2)(a) of the Government of India Act, 1935.

Mr. President (the Hon'ble Sir BIJOY PRASAD SINGH ROY, K.C.I.E.) was in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

T. B. Hospital at Dinajpur.

34. Mr. NAGENDRA NATH MAHALANOBIS: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Public Health and Local Self-Government Department be pleased to state whether the Government are aware that there are a large number of tubercular patients amongst the hillmen and other poor people in the Darjeeling district, who cannot have proper treatment in the local hospitals for want of accommodation? If so, do the Government propose to arrange for a properly-equipped T. B. Hospital for the treatment of these poor people?

MINISTER in charge of the PUBLIC HEALTH and LOCAL SELF-GOVERNMENT DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi Jalaluddin Ahmad): As soon as normal conditions return making construction work possible, Government intend to implement the decision announced in 1937 to establish a sanatorium for tuberculosis in this Province as an integral part of their campaign against tuberculosis. The hill people of Darjeeling district will be eligible for admission to that sanatorium.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Will the Hon'ble Minister please state whether Government propose to commence the urgent work in the interest of the hill people from whom a large number of military labour are recruited in rented houses which are always available in the locality?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi JALALUDDIN AHMAD: I may say for the information of the House that there are two hospitals available for T. B. patients.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Is the Hon'ble Minister aware that two hospitals are quite insufficient for the purpose for which this question was asked?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi JALALUDDIN AHMAD: Well, Sir, I am not aware that any patient was ever refused admission in those hospitals for want of accommodation.

Allegations against the Jessore District Board.

35. Mr. K. C. ROY CHOWDHURY: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Public Health and Local Self-Government Department be pleased to state if it is a fact that the ex-President of the Chandibarpur Union Board, police-station Narail, district Jessore, sent a memorial to him, through the Commissioner of the Presidency Division, on the 20th March, 1943, making certain allegations against the Jessore District Board? If so, will he please enlighten the House as to the contents of the said memorial?

(b) If the answer to part (a) be in the affirmative, will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state what action has been taken by the Government or is intended to be taken in the matter?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur JALALUDDIN AHMAD: (a) The answer is in the negative.

(b) Does not arise.

Opening Fire-lanes in Bustee areas of Calcutta.

36. Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Public Health and Local Self-Government Department be pleased to state—

(a) if he is aware of a scheme for opening fire-lanes in bustee areas of Calcutta in order to provide easy access for fire engines;

(b) if any fire-lanes have been opened in these areas;

(c) if so, where and when; and

(d) if not, what are the reasons therefor?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi JALALUDDIN AHMAD: (a) Yes.

(b) Yes, four.

(c) (1) Gun Foundry Road, Cossipore,

(2) Belgatchia,

(3) Motijheel, Tangra, and

(4) Bhukailash Road, Kidderpore, all within the last eight months.

(d) Does not arise.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Will the Hon'ble Minister please inform the House how many bustees are there in Calcutta?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi JALALUDDIN AHMAD: I want notice.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Are not the fire-lanes—four or five—mentioned in the reply quite insufficient in comparison with the total number of bustees that are to be dealt with by opening fire-lanes?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi JALALUDDIN AHMAD: On the basis of the present figure, I am advised that the number given is for the present sufficient for the access of fire engines.

Starvation cases in Calcutta.

37. Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Public Health and Local Self-Government Department be pleased to state—

- (a) if he is aware that destitutes on the point of death due to starvation are being removed from the streets of Calcutta to various hospitals of the city and the suburbs with infant children in their charge;
- (b) whether a record as to the caste and creed of the infant children is kept at the time of their removal to the hospitals; and
- (c) what arrangements are being made for the custody and protection of the infant children in the case of the death of their parents?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi JALALUDDIN AHMAD: (a) and (b) Yes.

(c) The orphans at first are given necessary treatment at the hospital, if required. They are then sent over for custody and protection to the (i) Infant Relief Centre at 43, Wellesley Street, Calcutta, (ii) and (iii) to Relief Centres at No. 89, Elliott Road, and 55, Haris Chatterjee Street, Calcutta. Details of each orphan are furnished to the Society for the Protection of Children in India.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Is the Hon'ble Minister aware that this Society for the Protection of Children in India is a private organisation?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi JALALUDDIN AHMAD: I suppose it is a private one.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Has Government got any official institution where these details are kept on record?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi JALALUDDIN AHMAD: Yes, there is a register for keeping these details: records are kept in the office of the Society for the Protection of Children in India.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Does the Government propose to establish a home for the orphans thus collected from streets or places where they roam about?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi JALALUDDIN AHMAD: May I submit, Sir, it is a request for action: I could not follow the question. What is the question?

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question is whether Government propose to establish a Home for the orphans.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi JALALUDDIN AHMAD: My department is not concerned with it. But in this connection, I may say for the information of the House that there is a proposal before the Education Department for the establishment of such an orphanage.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Does the Government propose to send the Hindu orphans to the Hindu orphanage and Muslim orphans to the Muslim orphanage before handing them over to the Society for the Protection of Children in India.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi JALALUDDIN AHMAD: I have not given thought over this matter. I will consider it.

Cholera in the district of Mymensingh.

38. Khan Sahib NURUL AMIN: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Public Health and Local Self-Government Department be pleased to state—

- (a) whether he is aware that there is a serious outbreak of cholera in the district of Mymensingh;
- (b) what quantity of anti-cholera vaccine was sent to the District Health Officer, Mymensingh, from the 1st August to the 15th September, 1943; and
- (c) what was the demand of the District Health Officer, Mymensingh, for anti-cholera vaccine during that period?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi JALALUDDIN AHMAD: (a) Yes.

(b) 50,000 c.c.

(c) 50,000 c.c.

Khan Sahib NURUL AMIN: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state if his attention was drawn to several telegraphic requisitions sent by the District Health Officer of Mymensingh to the Director of Public Health, Bengal, and to the Superintendent of the Bengal Vaccine Laboratory asking for 50,000 c.c. cholera vaccines for inoculation and again for one lakh per week as occasion would demand?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi JALALUDDIN AHMAD: I have not seen the telegraphic requisition specifically. Some were addressed to me personally and I have asked the Public Health Department to take immediate action.

Khan Sahib NURUL AMIN: Does the Hon'ble Minister propose to reply to this question without reference to those telegrams?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi JALALUDDIN AHMAD: Yes, the printed question is "what was the demand and what was the supply". The answer is there.

Khan Sahib NURUL AMIN: What I wanted to clarify is this: whether the District Health Officer of Mymensingh sent telegraphic requisition towards the end of August last to the Director of Public Health for sending 50,000 c.c. cholera vaccines per week and then one lakh per week as occasion arises?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi JALALUDDIN AHMAD: Sir, I could not follow the honourable member.

Khan Sahib NURUL AMIN: The reply to (c) shows that the entire demand of the District Health Officer for the period from 1st August, 1943, to 15th September, 1943, was 50,000 c.c.

(The Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja Shahabuddin and Mr. Mesbahuddin Ahmed were talking.)

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order, order. It is very difficult for the Chair to conduct business if honourable members go on talking amongst themselves.

Khan Sahib NURUL AMIN: Has the attention of the Hon'ble Minister been drawn to the telegraphic requisition sent by the District Health Officer of Mymensingh wherein the officer wanted 100,000 c.c. per week.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi JALALUDDIN AHMAD: My attention was not drawn to that telegram.

Khan Sahib NURUL AMIN: Does the Hon'ble Minister think that the answer has been prepared without any reference to those requisitions and that the answer is incorrect?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi JALALUDDIN AHMAD: I do not think that my printed answer is incomplete. As for the demand for 100,000 c.c. I shall look into the matter.

Khan Sahib NURUL AMIN: Has the answer been prepared without any reference to those documents?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order, order. That cannot be a question. You may ask for information but how the Hon'ble Minister prepares his answer is not your concern. You put your question and it is for the Hon'ble Minister to reply.

Khan Sahib NURUL AMIN: Is the Hon'ble Minister prepared to contradict me when I say that the answer to part (c) is false?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order, order. Khan Sahib, I would ask you to withdraw that expression. Government never gives any false reply.

Khan Sahib NURUL AMIN: I withdraw it.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi JALALUDDIN AHMAD: The answer is quite correct.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, I have heard much about official information. Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state if any non-official agency also has asked for some supply of vaccines?

Mr. PRESIDENT: That question does not arise.

Petrol Ration.

39. Mr. NARESH NATH MOOKERJEE: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Home Department be pleased to state—

(a) if he is aware of the difficulties of car owners who have to travel all the way to Beltala to obtain their petrol ration every month;

- (b) if so, whether the Government intend to remove this office to a more central place; and
- (c) if the Government propose to discontinue basic rations and distribute the petrol thus saved more equitably among those engaged in work of an essential character?

MINISTER in charge of the HOME DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Khwaja Sir Nazimuddin): (a) and (b) It is to the advantage of the public that the Petrol Rationing Office should be located alongside the Motor Vehicles Department. Irregularities regarding tax, registration, permits, etc. can be immediately rectified and ration drawn. If the two departments were separated, a good deal of time would be spent in travelling from one office to another.

- (c) Government do not propose at present to discontinue basic rations.

Loans and advances taken from the Central Government.

40. Mr. NUR AHMED: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Finance Department be pleased to state what is the total amount of loans and advances taken from the Central Government by the Government of Bengal up to the 31st October, 1943? Out of this total amount, how much is taken as loan and for what purposes and how much as advance and for what purposes?

(b) What is the total amount spent on the civil defence works in Bengal up to the 30th September, 1943, from the beginning of this War?

(c) How much of this total expenditure on the civil defence works have been borne by the Central Government and how much has been met from the Provincial revenues?

(d) Have the Government of Bengal approached the Central Government for a subvention of substantial sums to meet the deficit in the Provincial finance due to extraordinary charges incurred by this Government owing to the food distress and war emergencies?

(e) If so, for what amount has the subvention been asked for?

(f) Have the Government of India agreed to grant any subvention to the Government of Bengal or to write off the loans advanced to them?

(g) If so, what is the said amount for which a subvention has been granted or loan written off by the Government of India?

Mr. Biren Roy rose to reply for the Hon'ble Finance Minister without taking Mr. President's permission to do so.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Are you replying to the question of the Hon'ble Finance Minister, Mr. Roy? In that case you should have asked my permission to do so. Because I call out the name of the Hon'ble Finance Minister and you should have the permission of the Chair before you reply for him.

Mr. BIREN ROY, Parliamentary Secretary (on behalf of the Hon'ble Mr. Tulsi Chandra Goswami): (a) The total amount of loans and advances taken from the Central Government up to 31st October, 1943, is shown below:—

Loans and the purpose for which taken	Amount of loan. Rs.
(i) Ways and Means loan to meet the cost of ordinary administration	5,50,00,000
(ii) Loan for the purchase of rice by the Civil Supplies Department	5,50,00,000
(iii) Loan for the purchase of wheat by the Civil Supplies Department	1,50,00,000
(iv) Loan for Grow More Food schemes	62,15,000
(v) Loan to meet the Provincial share of civil defence expenditure up to 31st March, 1943	1,54,06,000
Total	14,66,21,000

Advances and the purpose for which taken—

(vi) Advance to meet the total cost of expenditure on civil defence for the first three quarters of 1943-44 which will be adjusted at the close of the year by final allocation of the actual expenditure between the Centre and the Province	3,00,00,000
---	-------------

Total Loans and Advances .. 17,66,21,000

Out of the loans in (ii) and (v) above, Rs.50,00,000 and Rs.8,81,200, respectively, had been repaid by 31st October, 1943. The total net loan outstanding on 31st October, 1943, was Rs.14,07,39,800.

(b) and (c) The position is shown in the statement below:—

Year.	Central Government's share.	Bengal Government's share.	Total expenditure on Civil Defence.	Amount actually recovered from the Centre.	Amount still to be recovered from the Centre.
	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.
1939-40 to 1942-43 ..	3,36,86,879	1,94,37,988	5,31,24,867	2,98,89,879	37,97,000
1943-44 (up to 30th September).	2,33,43,468
Total expenditure up to 30th September, 1943.	7,64,68,335

Allocation of expenditure between the Centre and the Province is made at the close of the year. It is not possible, therefore, to work out at this stage the Central and Provincial shares of the expenditure incurred up to 30th September this year.

(d) and (e) The Government of Bengal is in correspondence with the Central Government on the subject. It is not considered to be in the public interest to furnish details at this stage.

(f) and (g) No decision has yet been reached.

The Central Primary Education Committee.

41. Mr. NUR AHMED: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Education Department be pleased to state if the Central Primary Education Committee contemplated under the provisions of the Bengal (Rural) Primary Education Act, 1930, has been formed in Bengal? If not, why not?

(b) Has any survey of the whole Province been undertaken by the Government with a view to drawing up a comprehensive scheme for the primary education for the whole Province with special reference to—

- (i) area and population to be served by each school,
- (ii) unschooled areas that are in need of new schools,
- (iii) equitable distribution of new schools,
- (iv) special condition prevailing in each locality,
- (v) equipment and accommodation of primary schools,
- (vi) communications, and
- (vii) introduction of Islamic course in selected primary schools?

(c) If not, do the Government propose to undertake such a survey and to draw up a comprehensive scheme for the primary education for the whole Province? If not, why not?

MINISTER in charge of the EDUCATION DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Mr. Tamizuddin Khan): (a) No school boards have up-to-date been formed in seventeen districts, only three of which are non-cess paying. In the Burdwan Division the majority of the districts are without Boards. In order to have a representative central committee it is necessary that the majority of the districts in each division should have Boards established.

(b)(i) to (vi) Yes.

(vii) Religious education has been made a part of the primary school curriculum.

(c) Does not arise.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Arising out of answer (a), have not the Government any responsibility to see that there are school boards in the districts? In the answer Government have said "No school boards have up-to-date been formed in seventeen districts——"

The Hon'ble Mr. TAMIZUDDIN KHAN: There should be a fullstop after "No".

Defalcation of landlords' fees in the Mymensingh Collectorate.

42. Khan Sahib NURUL AMIN: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Revenue Department be pleased to state—

- (a) whether there was a defalcation of landlords' fees in the Mymensingh Collectorate; and
- (b) if the answer to part (a) be in the affirmative—
 - (i) whether the amount actually defalcated has been ascertained,
 - (ii) if so, what is the amount,
 - (iii) if not, to what extent the amount could be ascertained and the reason for the inability of the Government in ascertaining the exact defalcated amount,
 - (iv) how much of the defalcated amount falls within the category of "lapsed landlord fees", and
 - (v) whether the Government contemplate to reimburse the Mymensingh District Board to the extent of the defalcation of the "lapsed landlord fee"?

MINISTER in charge of the REVENUE DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Mr. Tarak Nath Mukerjee): (a) Yes.

(b)(i) to (iii) The amount of money definitely established to have been withdrawn fraudulently is Rs.8,032. As the records up to 1938 were destroyed under the rules in 1939, it could not be ascertained if any amount deposited before 1939 had been fraudulently withdrawn.

(iv) Rs.3,408.

(v) The question is under consideration.

Extension of the operation of the Bengal Tenancy Act to Western Duars.

43. Mr. NAGENDRA NATH MOHALANABIS: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Revenue Department be pleased to state whether the Government propose to withdraw the restrictions imposed on the extension of the operation of the Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885, to the Western Duars of the Jalpaiguri district? If so, when? If not, why not?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEE: No. The existing restrictions safeguard the interest of the bona fide cultivators of the area who are mostly aboriginal tribes.

Representation of the Legislature on the "After-War Reconstruction Committee".

44. Mr. MUNCTURAM JAIPURIA: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Commerce, Labour and Industries Department be pleased to state whether the Bengal Legislature is represented on the "After-War Reconstruction Committee" appointed by the Government of Bengal? If so, who are the representatives? Were the claims of the non-Muslim members of the Legislature considered?

(b) Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state if it is a fact that no member from the Opposition in the Legislature was appointed on this important Committee? If so, why?

(c) If the answer to the first part of paragraph (b) be in the affirmative, will the Government consider the desirability of appointing from the Legislature on the Committee some capable members of the Opposition who take keen interest on the subject? If not, will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state the grounds for such refusal?

MINISTER in charge of the COMMERCE, LABOUR and INDUSTRIES DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja Shahabuddin): (a) No, not as such. Two members of the Bengal Legislature—Mr. A. R. Siddiqui and Khan Bahadur M. A. Momin—have been appointed on the Committee, but not as members of the Legislature but in their personal capacity.

(b) and (c) Do not arise.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Do Government propose to appoint some members from the Opposition not as members of the Legislature as such?

The Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja SHAHABUDDIN: There is no Opposition if they are not members of the Legislature.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Why did not Government propose to take in non-Muslim members from the Legislature in the same way that the Government considered the position of Mr. A. R. Siddiqui and Khan Bahadur M. A. Momin and took them in not as members of the Legislature. Is the Hon'ble Minister in a position to consider the position of the members in the Opposition not as members of the Legislature but otherwise?

The Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja SHAHABUDDIN: I did not consider when I appointed Mr. Siddiqui and Khan Bahadur M. A. Momin as members of the Legislature.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: All right, Sir, I shall put it in this way.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The Hon'ble Minister has already said that he has nothing more to add.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: We take it from the answer given that Mr. Siddiqui and Khan Bahadur Momin were not considered as members of the Legislature but that they were considered for some other reasons to be fit to be on the Post-war Reconstruction Committee. But may I ask him whether he can similarly consider the position of non-Muslim members of the Opposition not as members of the Legislature but otherwise and take them in on the committee which they consider to be so very important, without giving a communal colour to the committee?

The Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja SHAHABUDDIN: Sir, there are already a number of non-Muslims on the Post-war Reconstruction Committee and I have already stated that I had not the Legislature in view when I made my recommendations: so the question of representation of the members of the Opposition does not arise.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Will the Hon'ble Minister please explain in what way he considered the position of Mr. Siddiqi and Khan Bahadur Momin other than as members of the Legislature?

Mr. PRESIDENT: It is quite clear from the Hon'ble Minister's reply that these two gentlemen were appointed not as members of the Legislature but as members of the public—in their individual capacity. Therefore, I do not think your question arises.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: My question is this: whether from the standpoint of the public the Hon'ble Minister is prepared to consider the position of non-Muslim members of the public who also happen to be members of the Legislature and put in two more non-Muslims from the public as in the case of these two honourable gentlemen, Mr. Siddiqi and Khan Bahadur Momin?

Mr. PRESIDENT: To that question also the Hon'ble Minister has replied. There are several non-Muslims on the committee already who have been appointed on the same criteria.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Kindly let the Hon'ble Minister answer this question himself, Sir.

The Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja SHAHABUDDIN: All right, Sir. Let me answer the question myself. I have already said that there are several non-Muslim members on the committee.

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: Will the Hon'ble Minister please state whether he considered the case of all the Muslim members of the general public when selecting Hindu members on the committee?

The Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja SHAHABUDDIN: I would prefer not to answer the question, Sir. It would not be fair.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Will the Hon'ble Minister please inform the House the basis on which he considered this matter and selected these two members of the committee?

The Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja SHAHABUDDIN: Sir, many factors were taken into consideration in making these nominations. For the information of the House I may mention that Mr. Nalini Ranjan Sarkar, Sir Gyan Ghose, and Sir Biren Mookerjee are on the committee. Various considerations were taken into account before these nominations were made and it is very difficult to define all of them.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Do the Government propose to take in some members who are members of the Chambers of Commerce and are members of the Legislature as well?

The Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja SHAHABUDDIN: Sir, the nominations were made not after considering the claims of persons as representatives of any institution or interest but only keeping in view the work which the Post-war Reconstruction Committee will be called upon to do. The decisions were made on other grounds than those of Commerce or private interests.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Questions over.

Adjournment motion of Mr. Haridas Mazumdar regarding rationing of articles of "bhog."

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, I have given notice of an adjournment motion which runs as follows:—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Are you moving it now?

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: No, Sir, I am asking your permission to move it. The motion runs thus:—"That the Council do adjourn its business to discuss an urgent and definite matter of public importance, namely, the situation that has been created in Calcutta and the adjoining rationed areas by the decision of the Hon'ble Minister in charge of Civil Supplies not to issue food-ration cards to the sebaits, trustees and managers of deities for their daily puja and bhogs as religious offerings and for the feeding of the poor as an essential part of such sacred ritual, in spite of urgent public demand, resulting in the non-performance of a religious duty enjoined by the Hindu shastras and provision of the religious trusts."

Sir, I am moving this motion as it is my religious duty—

Mr. PRESIDENT: You cannot move the motion till you have permission.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: No, Sir, I am asking for permission to move and I hope and trust that there will be no objection to my doing so from any section of the House—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Will you please explain why you propose to move it?

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Yes, Sir. I move it because it is very important that the daily pujas of the deities must be performed by the sebaits and trustees in compliance with the injunctions of the sastras and the provisions of the religious trusts. By the rationing order the sebaits and trustees are not allowed to have ration cards issued in their names on behalf of the religious institutions and also for the private deities. It is essential for a Hindu to perform pujas and offer bhogs before he partakes of his food. After the religious offerings these bhogs become prasads and then they are distributed among the poor. The difficulty is that Hindus, unless they get ration cards cannot get an ounce of foodgrains from the market for performing these ceremonies and unless steps are immediately taken to issue ration cards to the sebaits and trustees of these institutions it is impossible for them to perform these ceremonies as enjoined by the Hindu shastras. There are some other religious ceremonies such as sradh and other occasional religious functions. The Hindus are handicapped, on account of the introduction of the ration card system, to perform these ceremonies, unless separate and special cards are issued for this purpose. With these words, I ask your permission to move the adjournment motion and request the House to accept it. I am, however, prepared to withdraw the motion if the Hon'ble Minister makes a statement to our satisfaction with definite assurance to make arrangements for bhog's, sradh's and other religious ceremonies affecting the Hindus of Bengal.

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: Sir, I cannot accept the motion at it stands. I may, however, say that the honourable member has not been able to explain the religious view-point of the Hindus, so far, as bhog is concerned, very satisfactorily. I have made some researches in the subject and I appear to be acquainted with it. I am prepared to say this that I am most anxious to ensure supply for bhogs and other religious ceremonies to the extent that it is necessary for the performance of these ceremonies, and I am examining the position as to how best we can ensure supply, having regard to the quantum of supplies in our possession. I hope the House will be satisfied with what I have said. In a few days' time I hope to be able to give the public the conclusions that I arrive at on this subject. I hope after this assurance the honourable member will withdraw his motion. But if he does not, I shall have to oppose it.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Is it a promise from the Hon'ble Civil Supplies Minister that he will issue ration cards for the purpose and make a statement on this subject?

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: On the assurance of the Hon'ble Minister I do not like to press my adjournment motion. But this is the tenth day of rationing and I would request the Hon'ble Minister to be a little up and doing in the matter and see that the statement is made at an early date.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Then Mr. Mazumdar, I take it that in that case you do not ask for permission to move the adjournment motion.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: In view of the assurance of the Hon'ble Minister, I do not press the adjournment motion.

The Bengal Alienation of Agricultural Land (Temporary Provisions) Bill, 1944.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The Hon'ble Mr. Tarak Nath Mukerjea will now move the Bengal Alienation of Agricultural Land (Temporary Provisions) Bill, 1944.

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Sir, I beg to move that the Bengal Alienation of Agricultural Land (Temporary Provisions) Bill, 1944, be taken into consideration.

Sir, it was brought to the notice of Government that during the period of scarcity of foodgrains and abnormal increase in their prices during the year 1943 many petty raiyyats and under-raiyyats transferred their agricultural holdings by sale for small amounts in order to maintain themselves and their families and thus reduced themselves to the position of landless labourers. This caused grave anxiety to Government who considered it necessary to undertake legislation immediately in order to enable those raiyyats and under-raiyyats to get back their holdings. As the legislature was not in session then, an Ordinance, viz., the Bengal Alienation of Agricultural Land (Temporary Provisions) Ordinance, 1943, was promulgated by the Governor on 24th December, 1943, under sub-section (1) of section 88 of the Government of India Act. The present Bill is a complementary measure to follow up the said Ordinance, the term of which will expire after six weeks from the commencement of the present session of the Legislature. The main provision of the Bill is that if during the year 1943 a raiyat or under-raiyat has transferred for maintaining himself or his family any agricultural holding by sale for any consideration the amount or value of which does not exceed Rs. 250, he may apply to the Collector for restoration of such holding on paying back the consideration money with interest at the rate of $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. plus the amount of any compensation for improvement effected to the holding after the date of transfer less the amount of the net income derived for such holding by the person in possession of the holding as a result of such alienation. Option has also been given to the raiyat or under-raiyat to apply for conversion of the sale of his holding into a complete usufructuary mortgage for a period not exceeding ten years.

It may be mentioned in this connection that figures have been collected from the Sub-Registry offices situated in the most distressed areas of the province about the extent of sale of raiyati holdings in 1943. The total number of sales of ordinary occupancy holdings in those areas during the period was 513,831 of which 426,683 sales representing about 83 per cent. of the total number of such sales were for amounts not exceeding Rs. 250. There were also 60,436 sales of mokarari raiyati holdings during the year of which 46,758 sales representing about 77 per cent. of the total number of such sales were for amounts not exceeding Rs. 250. These figures make it clear that the limit of Rs. 250 provided for in the Bill will cover the bulk of the cases. So, in view of the above facts and in consideration of the fact that this is a purely temporary measure and as other schemes of rehabilitation are under the consideration of Government, I hope the House will accept my motion.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Motion moved: that the Bengal Alienation of Agricultural Land (Temporary Provisions) Bill, 1944, be taken into consideration.

If any honourable member wants to speak on the consideration motion, he may do it now.

Mr. NUR AHMED: Sir, with your permission I rise to support this motion. Sir, the Bill is a very useful one. Its intention is to render some relief to those unfortunate cultivators who have sold away their holdings under the pressure of overwhelming distress and who have become landless wanderers in this wide world. Sir, this measure is very modest, and it contains very modest provisions for rehabilitating these unfortunate persons. In this Bill, Government is doing some justice to the cultivators, but I think its provisions should have been much wider and its scope should have been further widened in order to include persons who have sold their holdings the valuation of which is Rs. 500, in view of the fact that some of the unscrupulous transferees have falsely entered into the document more than Rs. 250. However, I congratulate the Ministry on their bringing this modest measure and I wholeheartedly support the motion.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, in according my support to this Bill I propose to make certain observations. The price-limit of the property already sold has been put at Rs. 250. I think Government should have enhanced the amount a bit more—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Mazumdar, you are entering into details, I think. You should confine yourself only to the principle of the Bill.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Therefore, Sir, if Government wish to amend and improve the Bill, they can do it at the time of passing. This is my request. As regards the general principle, this sort of rushing a Bill without placing it for the consideration of members of the House, either in the Select Committee of a limited number of members or of the whole House, is not salutary. I think we should have a Select Committee. However, this is a welfare measure to help the poor and the distressed and those who have been compelled to part with their little all for hunger and on account of famine and pestilence, and therefore I associate myself whole-heartedly with this measure.

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: Sir, I support the principle underlying the Bill, but the Bill does not go far enough to give real relief to the cultivators. Its provisions should be substantially amended. The provision that the value has to be repaid within the period of two years by an application for this purpose requires re-examination. Therefore, the Bill provides that the man has to pay double the value of the land in 1944-45 for getting back the land for which he had parted in 1943. Most of these people will be quite unable to pay the price, because possibly the land sold represented all they had or possessed. Therefore, I should suggest that the cumbrous procedure that has been provided in the Bill should be replaced by a simple provision to the effect that the vendor shall get back his land on his applying for the same within two years from the passing of this Act. But he will remain indebted to the purchaser for the money he received from the purchaser and the land shall remain subject to mortgage for this money which might be paid in 10 equal instalments. If these provisions are incorporated, then it will really serve the purpose for which the Bill is being enacted.

Khan Bahadur M. A. MOMIN: Sir, the principle of the Bill, of course, is admirable; but I am afraid I do not feel much enthusiasm for the Bill itself. It seems to me that if this temporary relief that is sought to be given is passed into law, then the people who are sought to be relieved will not be relieved but certain other classes of people will be benefited, whom perhaps the Hon'ble Revenue Minister has no intention of benefiting, namely, the lawyers,—because that will lead to a lot of litigation—, and also the people who have got money and whose income has now increased and also the people who have got covetous eyes over the lands which they so long could not buy but which they can now afford to buy. What will happen in that case? I would like you, Sir, to visualise what will happen. A poor man who had not enough to live upon during these difficult times had to sell his land for Rs. 250 or less. It is very unlikely that he will be able to go to the court and deposit Rs. 250 with an additional ten per cent. What will really happen is that some rich men in the neighbourhood will come to him and make him an offer of Rs. 250 plus the 10 per cent. and plus something more—just as in the case of a benami transaction—and make him apply, get back the land and then transfer it to him. That is what will happen in most cases.

Then, if the poor man himself is able to accumulate this Rs. 250 plus 10 per cent. and wants to get back the land, he will go to court and the man who purchased the land will naturally oppose him and there will be litigation the result of which is not difficult to foresee. So I think these measures will not serve any useful purpose. On the contrary, it will only lead to litigation and to benami transactions. Under the circumstances, although I do not oppose the Bill in so many words, I would like Government to reconsider the position in the light of what I have stated and either improve it in such a way that the return of the land would be automatic or to drop the Bill altogether. It is no use making laws and filling up the library with all these useless Statutes which are not likely to do any good to them.

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Sir, I propose to be very brief. As regards raising the limit, I will only say that if after practical experience it is found that it is necessary to raise the limit, Government will not hesitate to do so. But I may say that out of a little over 5 lakhs of transactions more than 4½ lakhs, that is about 83 per cent. of the transactions, were for amounts below Rs. 250: so we have taken Rs. 250 as the maximum limit.

As regards the observation made by my friend Mr. Hamidul Huq Chowdhury, I may say that as the Bill stands at present the raiyat will get back his land probably on payment of Rs. 150 or less because we have made provision in the Bill that he will get back the land on payment of the amount actually paid by the purchaser. It is well known that the price of rice and other agricultural produce has risen and the net profit from that particular land when calculated will show that it will give good deal of relief to the raiyat, and in framing our Bill we have tried our best to make it as simple and as specific as possible—

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: Will it require any stamps?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: We have not yet come to any decision about it. But if stamp is provided, it will be very nominal—just as in the case of Debt Settlement Board cases. I may say also that the procedure contemplated will be simple and quick and I can assure the honourable members of the House that Government will do all that is necessary and all that is possible to give as much relief as possible to these unfortunate people——

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Will any pleader be necessary?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Probably not——

Mr. PRESIDENT: You need not answer these interruptions.

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: In view of these facts, I hope the House will accept the motion.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that the Bengal Alienation of Agricultural Land (Temporary Provisions) Bill, 1944, be taken into consideration.

(The motion was agreed to.)

The Bengal Destitute Persons (Repatriation and Relief) Bill, 1944.

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Sir, I beg to move that the Bengal Destitute Persons (Repatriation and Relief) Bill, 1944, be taken into consideration.

Sir, in this case also I propose to be very brief. I would only submit that owing to acute distress prevailing in the rural areas of the Province on account of scarcity and unprecedented rise in the price of foodstuffs there was a heavy rush of destitutes to Calcutta and other urban areas. Government were faced with the problem of accommodating and feeding these destitute people, and of repatriating them to their homes with the improvement of the situation in the rural areas. Apart from Government's responsibility to save people from starvation, there was also the question of health and sanitation of these urban areas which was greatly endangered by the influx of such a large number of rural people seeking food and shelter. Camps were opened in Calcutta and in other areas for the reception of such destitutes. Arrangements for accommodation, food and medical treatment in the camps were also made. But the destitutes were found reluctant to take advantage of these facilities. Government, therefore, needed some powers to apprehend them and to remove them to such camps with a view to feed and accommodate them as long as necessary and ultimately to repatriate them to their villages. As the matter was considered very urgent and as the Legislature was not in session, the Bengal Destitute Persons (Repatriation and Relief) Ordinance, 1943, was promulgated in October, 1943.

The working of the Ordinance during the last 3 months has produced satisfactory results. From October, 1943, up to the end of January, 1944, 43,524 destitutes were collected from the streets of Calcutta and admitted in the different reception centres within Calcutta where they were fed and accommodated and given medical treatment. Of this number, 33,418 destitutes have been repatriated so far. No one who is either sick or too weak to move is repatriated and no one is repatriated so long as there is risk of his starving in his native village. About 20,000 destitutes were similarly dealt with in areas other than Calcutta.

With the harvesting of the last aman crop, the food situation has considerably improved. But it is not safe to assume that normal situation will be restored soon, and that there will be no recurrence of the unfortunate events which occurred during the last few months. In the circumstances, it is considered necessary that the provisions of the Ordinance should be extended by a temporary Act of the Legislature. The Bengal Destitute Persons (Repatriation and Relief) Bill, 1944, contains the same provisions as in the Ordinance and will remain in force till the end of January, 1946.

I hope this will be acceptable to the House.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Motion moved: that the Bengal Destitute Persons (Repatriation and Relief) Bill, 1944, be taken into consideration.

The question before the House is: that the Bengal Destitute Persons (Repatriation and Relief) Bill, 1944, be taken into consideration.

(The motion was agreed to.)

Mr. BIREN ROY: Sir, may I bring to your notice that the Hon'ble Mr. Tarak Nath Mukerjea who introduced the Hindu Women's Rights to Property (Bengal Agricultural Land) Bill, 1944, the other day in the Council will move its consideration motion next day?

Mr. PRESIDENT: But the Hon'ble Minister himself is present here.

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Sir, I propose to move the consideration motion next time.

Mr. HARIDAS MAJUMDAR: Sir, may I mention an urgent matter which is in regard to a steamer accident on the 7th instant? I want to ask one short notice questions?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order, order. You should have mentioned it immediately after the questions were over.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: This is a very urgent matter, Sir. I hope you will kindly allow me to make a brief statement.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Please do it tomorrow.

Point of privilege.

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOUDHURY: Sir, may I rise on a point of privilege? We have been experiencing considerable difficulty as regards the facilities that are provided in the Library. The books which we require most urgently cannot be had because the Library is directly under the control of the Assembly Department. Sir, may I suggest to you that you should take the matter up with the Government so that we may also have some control over the Library? Because, we need the Library for our own use in this House.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Thank you very much for raising this point of privilege. May I have the suggestions of the honourable members so that I can place the proposal before Government?

Mr. SACHINDRA NARAYAN SANYAL: Sir, we did it several times before, but it was fruitless.

Mr. PRESIDENT: It was never raised in my time.

Order, order. The Council stands adjourned till 2 p.m. tomorrow.

Adjournment.

The Council then adjourned till 2-15 p.m. on Friday, the 11th February, 1944.

Members Absent.

BENGAL LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL DEBATES

First Session, 1944—No. 5.

THE COUNCIL met in the Legislative Chamber of the Legislative Building, Calcutta, on Friday, the 11th February, 1944, at 2-15 p.m., being the fifth day of the First Session of 1944, pursuant to section 62(2)(a) of the Government of India Act, 1935.

Mr. President (the Hon'ble Sir BIJOY PRASAD SINGH ROY, K.C.I.E.) was in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Contractors in the Communications and Works Department.

45. Khan Sahib NURUL AMIN: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Communications and Works Department be pleased to state—

- (a) the total number of contractors enlisted in different branches of the Communications and Works Department since April, 1943;
- (b) the number of Muslim contractors enlisted since that time;
- (c) the aggregate or approximate value of works distributed by—
 - (i) the Executive Engineer, A.R.P. Shelters Construction Department, Calcutta,
 - (ii) the A.R.P. Officer, Howrah and Hooghly, and
 - (iii) the A.R.P. Officer, 24-Parganas,to the Muslim and non-Muslim contractors, respectively;
- (d) whether any unregistered contractor was engaged by any of the officers mentioned in parts (c) (i), (ii) and (iii) above;
- (e) if so, how many of them were Muslims and how many non-Muslims, and what is the total value of work distributed amongst unregistered Muslim and non-Muslim contractors (to be shown separately);
- (f) whether open tender was called for the works distributed by the officers named in parts (c) (i), (ii) and (iii) above; if not, why not;
- (g) whether any contractor was given works of the value more than the maximum value of the class to which he belonged; and
- (h) if so, in how many cases, and why?

MINISTER in charge of the COMMUNICATIONS and WORKS DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Mr. Barada Prasanna Pain): (a) Seventy-one in Communications and Buildings Branch; 231 in Irrigation Branch.

(b) Twenty-five in Communications and Buildings Branch; 93 in Irrigation Branch.

(c) (i) Rs.2,42,310 to Muslim contractors; Rs.5,98,693 to non-Muslim contractors.

(ii) Rs.65,530 to Muslim contractors; Rs.1,04,695 to non-Muslim contractors.

(iii) Rs.44,633 to Muslim contractors; Rs.2,75,829 to non-Muslim contractors.

(d) Yes.

(e) Muslim 10; non-Muslim 31.

Total value of work distributed amongst unregistered Muslim contractors, Rs.1,01,595.

Total value of work distributed amongst unregistered non-Muslim contractors, Rs.2,57,785.

(f) No. The works being of emergent nature were distributed at the rates approved by the Chief Engineer under the rules approved by Government in this behalf.

(g) Yes.

(h) In 37 cases. When the digging of slit trenches was first taken up in the early part of 1942, very few registered contractors were forthcoming and the work being of extreme urgency had to be given to any one who would carry it out. Contractors who carried out work in these early days of panic were given further works.

[N.B.—The answers to questions (c) to (h) cover the period commencing from 1st April, 1943.]

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state the name of the Chief Engineer who distributed the work and fixed the rates?

Mr. PRESIDENT: I think the mention of any name should be avoided, as far as possible.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Arising from (g) and (h), will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state if these cases where the contractors were given works of the value more than the class to which they belonged, were confined only to Calcutta or extended to outsiders also?

The Hon'ble Mr. BARADA PRASANNA PAIN: I want notice.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: In answer (h), it is said that there were 37 cases in which contractors were given works of value more than the maximum value of the class to which they belonged: Will the Hon'ble Minister please state if all these 37 cases related to Calcutta?

The Hon'ble Mr. BARADA PRASANNA PAIN: Yes.

Grievances of the tramcar passengers.

46. Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Communications and Works Department be pleased to state if he is aware of the grievances of the tramcar passengers regarding—

(i) non-issue of transfer tickets,

(ii) over-crowding and want of sitting accommodation in tramcars,

- (iii) insufficiency of the number of ladies' seats,
- (iv) increase of monthly fare, and
- (v) incivility and rashness on the part of the ticket collectors and conductors, particularly in connection with the stopping and starting of the car?

(b) If so, do the Government propose to take immediate and urgent steps to remedy these grievances of the tramcar passengers? If not, why not?

The Hon'ble Mr. BARADA PRASANNA PAIN: The matter is being investigated.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Will the Hon'ble Minister please state how long it will take to finish the investigation?

The Hon'ble Mr. BARADA PRASANNA PAIN: I shall be in a position to give a full reply within 15 days.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: With your permission, Sir, I may mention that a few days ago I gave notice of a short-notice question on a very urgent matter. I do not know whether the Hon'ble Minister is aware of it or not. It runs as follows:—

“Whether the Hon'ble Minister is aware that recently a hail-storm passed over a portion of the Bakarganj district and that Bagerhat ferry steamer met with a serious accident near Bhandaria during the squall; if so, what is the reason for not publishing this news in the Press: what is the number of sufferers in connection with the said accident?”

I gave this notice probably in the early part of this week—I think on the 5th or 7th of this month. I read from yesterday's paper that the accident really took place and I would request the Hon'ble Minister to furnish this House with a statement giving details of this accident, e.g., whether sufficient provisions were made for life-saving appliances, life-boats in the steamer which met with the accident and also the reasons for suppressing so long the news of the accident which took place on the 29th of the last month.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The short-notice question has been admitted and it is for the Government to say when they will reply to it.

Mr. BIREN ROY: The answer to the short-notice question will be given on Monday next.

The Bengal Non-Agricultural Tenancy (Temporary Provisions) Extending Bill, 1944.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Saiyed MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Sir, with your permission, I beg to ask for short notice regarding the motion that the Bengal Non-Agricultural Tenancy (Temporary Provisions) Extending Bill, 1944, be taken into consideration and passed.

Mr. PRESIDENT: As you request for short notice, I suggest 11 a.m. on the 14th February as the last date and time for sending amendments to the motion for consideration, and 11 a.m. on the 15th February for sending amendments to the clauses of the Bill. The Bill will be taken over on the 17th.

Presentation of Select Committee Report on Advocates' Robes Bill.

Khan Sahib NURUL AMIN: I beg to present the report of the Select Committee on the Advocates' Robes Bill, 1941.

NON-OFFICIAL RESOLUTIONS.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Amulyadhane Roy, you were in possession of the House on the last non-official day.

Mr. AMULYADHANE ROY: Yes, Sir. Before dealing with the resolution I should like to make a passing remark. Whatever I shall submit in this connection is my personal opinion as a member of the Scheduled Castes whose sentiment I am giving expression to, and not as a member of the party to which I have the honour to belong. With these remarks, I will now speak on the main resolution. During the last session of the Council, I was submitting before this august assembly the reasons why a demand was put forward to Mahatma Gandhi by the Congress Scheduled Caste members of the Madras Legislative Assembly for provision in the constitution for fixing seats from the Panchayat Board to the State Council on the basis of population. Honourable members will also perhaps remember, as I then pointed out, that they asked Gandhiji if the Congress M.L.A's. belonging to this particular community were free from party discipline in dealing with the communal problems to which the greatest leader of the Indian National Congress replied that they were absolutely free to do anything in the interest of their community.

Now, Sir, what are the reasons behind this move on the part of the M.L.A's. of the province in which untouchability prevails in the extreme. On an enquiry it would be found that the Gentlemen's Agreement arrived at Poona following the fast of Mahatma Gandhi relating to election to local bodies and appointments to various services have been treated no better than a scrap of waste paper. The understanding arrived at at the Round Table Conference with Dr. Ambedkar about the formation of the Provincial Council of Ministers has been broken. Sir, the terms of the Poona Agreement regarding the representation of the Scheduled Castes in the Central Legislature have not been respected for want of a statutory provision. To summarise, this breach of trust only shows that statutory obligations appear to be better to the Hindu leaders than to give us a share in the administration out of good-will and affection. Sir, the unfortunate position existing in the local self-governing institutions, —which, I hope, is not the symbol of things to come in the future national Government—, is quite on a par with what obtains in the Legislature. Honourable members will pardon me if I point out some incidents for their reference by a narration of the events that occurred in this country after the Mont-Ford Reforms and the coming into force of the present Constitution. During the last 22 years, members of the Scheduled Castes other than on special grounds had not been returned on their own strength to the Legislature or to the local bodies. No political organisation represented by the best and first-rate politicians of India did care to adopt them as candidates. On the other hand, Sir, the Legislature was sought to be humiliated by the election of those, either domestic servants or men of the street whose return to this body would wound the feelings and affect their sentiments. Sir, the position has not improved even after the Yerveda Pact, as Mahatma Gandhi calls it. During the 1936 election, the adoption, nomination and election of candidates for seats allocated in the general constituencies of the various legislative assemblies in India were such as if they had been reserved by the separate electorate in the constitution for a section of the Hindus alone. What is true with regard to the Legislature is also true in a greater degree about the University, Corporation, municipalities and other self-governing institutions. Sir, for more than half a century these statutory bodies are being constituted more or less on the basis of joint electorate and are functioning at the cost of those people who belong to a society perpetually living in a social and economic bondage with obligations to the members of that society without any corresponding benefit. But their door is closed now as before.

Now, Sir, I have got to make two appeals. My first appeal would be to the Hindu members and the other to the European Group and Muslim members of the House. My appeal also goes to the Buddhist, Christian and other communities. My appeal to the Hindu members is this. I prefer goodwill and sincere intention for securing the representation of the Scheduled Castes to legislation. But the Hindu leaders must show by their action that legislation is not necessary. If the Hindu leaders do not realise the gravity of the situation, the Scheduled Castes must in course of time form a distinct and separate element in the political life of India having complete partition of political power without fail.

To the honourable members of this House other than the Hindus my appeal is this. This is a problem which concerns the Scheduled Castes and the remainder of the Hindus and we have no intention to encroach upon other's rights. Therefore, the choice for or against one way or the other, must be left to the Hindu members for their decision at the first instance; but on the other hand, in case of their opposition to this resolution, I must invoke the aid and assistance of the members of other groups and parties of this Council. With these remarks, Sir, and with these humble suggestions I commend my resolution to the acceptance of the House.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order, order.

Resolution moved: that this Council is of opinion that legislative measures be undertaken by the Government with a view to securing representation of the Scheduled Castes on the line of the Communal Award in the services and on the Statutory Boards of the University, Corporation, Municipalities and District and Local Boards of the Province.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Mr. President, Sir, I desire to second the resolution moved by my friend Mr. Amulyadhona Roy. He wants to extend the principle underlying the Communal Award to the University, Corporation, Municipalities and District and Local Boards of the Province. He has my sympathy and also the sympathy of my party.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, I whole-heartedly support this resolution of my honourable friend, Mr. Amulyadhona Roy. The Scheduled Caste Hindus of Bengal are labouring under very many difficulties. I have no love for the Communal Award and I can never recommend the appointment of persons to offices unless there is solid merit to support. These Scheduled Caste Hindus require sympathetic backing, because, Sir, it is an open secret that without backing there is little chance of success for any individual to secure even an ordinary job, not to speak of a key job in the administration or anywhere in the body politic. But these gentlemen hailing from the Scheduled Castes sometimes require not only the help of statute but also the help of persons who have sympathy for the uplift of the backward classes of the province. Hence, the demand from my friend Mr. Roy to enforce the quota fixed for them in all the self-governing institutions, namely, local bodies and others, is understandable. Of course, duly qualified members should be appointed to posts of responsibility, as I have already pointed out. Personally speaking, I never encourage the craze for Government service. The number of appointments is very limited. Besides, Bengal is being attacked from all sides: by industrialists, businessmen of all castes and creeds from outside the province. If the best brains of Bengal be absorbed in Government service, only third class men will go in for business or agriculture. And the result will be that in the course of a few decades the wealth of the province will be in the hands of outsiders. Here I may recall an incident in Bengali life, if I am allowed to quote it. The late Sir K. G. Gupta gave employment to numerous Vaidyas in Bengal and for a time they occupied very important jobs in the province. But I do not know if I am correct in my estimate that they comprise now the poorest middle class community in Bengal. We should, therefore, learn by experience. However, as a matter of policy and subject to what I have said regarding the merit test, the resolution should be accepted by the whole House; and if the Ministry is really sincere in its professions, it should see that it is given effect to at an early date. With these words, I support the motion.

Khan Sahib NURUL AMIN: Mr. President, Sir, I have full sympathy with the sentiments expressed by Mr. Roy in moving his resolution and I am also quite anxious that the Scheduled Castes people should get their proper representation in the services, in the local bodies and in other statutory bodies. But, Sir, one thing is not understandable to me. The resolution contains certain words which require elucidation. It states that representation should be secured by legislation for the Scheduled Castes on the lines of the Communal Award. The expression "on the lines of Communal Award" is not at all understandable, because we find that Mr. MacDonald gave an award which was subsequently modified by a pact between the caste Hindus and Scheduled Castes, called the Poona Pact and which was characterised as Gentlemen's Agreement by Mr. Roy himself. But may I ask which Communal Award he refers to? What is the ratio given by the Communal Award? Is it the ratio given by Mr. MacDonald or the ratio given by the Gentlemen's Agreement. If he was asking for the percentage of the Gentlemen's Agreement, it is a matter between the Caste Hindus and Scheduled Castes themselves. He also said something about breach of faith by the caste Hindu people. Although he has not done so in his speech today, in his previous speech on the subject in September last he felt very much diffident about his community. He quoted the authority of Mr. Gandhi for allowing freedom for giving expression to such communal grievances, because he knows that he belongs to a party which is outwardly national and cannot allow anything which will benefit only a section of the people, however depressed, however backward, they may be and which goes by the name of communal. He has also said that the depressed class leaders had a discussion about this with Mr. Gandhi in 1942, and that certain questions were put to Mr. Gandhi, but the replies given by that leader has not been given by Mr. Roy. We do not understand their leader's attitude in this matter. According to Mr. Roy's speech the questions are these—what should be the position of the Harijans in the future constitution of India? This question was put to Mr. Gandhi by several Scheduled Caste leaders. But what was the answer was not given. Then a demand was made by the Congress Scheduled Caste members to have a provision in the constitution to fix seats of the Harijans from Panchayat Board to the State Council on population basis. But no reply was given to this by Mr. Gandhi. So we have not understood what is the attitude of the caste Hindus or for the matter of that their own leader, Mr. Gandhi, in this matter. Before we know that attitude, we cannot accept this resolution in the form in which it has been moved in this House. We have not also heard from the caste Hindu members present in this House about this matter. Mr. Das who always finds time too short for his speech on any subject, has been very brief in his speech today and in two or three words he supported this motion. We wanted elucidation, explanation and certain suggestions as to in what way it is practicable. It is very nice to express sympathy with every one and to have that at the cost of other people. We have no objection to a motion being supported from this side, but let us understand the implications, what the consequence will be, what should be the exact proportion, what you mean by the expression "on the line of Communal Award". Nothing has been explained here about it: simply the motion is supported. Now, Sir, Government has already fixed a proportion for Scheduled Castes in the services and that is being religiously followed so far as my knowledge goes.

Then, Sir, in making nominations to district boards, local boards, municipalities, union boards, debt settlement boards, jute committees and several other committees that are being set up day to day by Government, Government try to secure Scheduled Caste candidates. So long as Scheduled Caste candidates are not found, nominations are not made by Government. So, Government are really trying to meet their demands. The other day we have seen that in the amended Bengal Primary (Rural) Education Act, provision has been made by Statute for two Scheduled Caste nominations to School Boards, and this was done before Mr. Amulyadhane Roy moved this resolution. Government are really trying to meet their wishes, to give them their dues; but it is natural for one to crave for more and more as he gets it. So, my advice to my honourable friend would be that he should first try to apply this Gentleman's Agreement to all those statutory boards and to local bodies and not to take to legislative measures. If it is not possible, —as Mr. Roy has given a warning to the caste Hindu members that if he cannot achieve these rights amicably, then he will declare war—he should try independently to have it achieved by other means. So, let him try first by other methods. If he finds that he is being treated unfairly, unjustly and the agreement is being broken, then he may declare war.

With these words, I request the honourable member to withdraw the resolution.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Mr. President, Sir, I could not exactly make out whether the honourable member who has just spoken really supported the resolution or opposed it. I take it that he opposed the resolution. I thought that the members occupying the benches opposite would be more generous to the demands of the Scheduled Castes. Sir, on more than one occasion in the past, I supported all legitimate demands of the Scheduled Castes on every available opportunity.

Now, so far as this particular resolution is concerned, I think the Government should come forward to make a definite statement as to whether they are prepared to grant the concessions which have been asked for by Mr. Roy. Sir, the honourable member who preceded me said that if there was any Gentleman's Agreement, Government would not be well-advised to meet the demands of the Scheduled Caste people by legislation or in other ways. I agree that some concessions have been shown to this deserving community in the shape of nominations to different local bodies and also by appointment to the different services and that to a limited extent; but I think that having regard to the principle involved, the Government should have been more generous to meet the legitimate demands of the Scheduled Caste people.

Sir, if I remember aright, some provision was made in the last year's budget or in the budget year before last of an amount of 5 lakhs of rupees for the benefit of the Scheduled Castes. I do not know in what way, if at all, the money has been expended. We have not had any statement from the Hon'ble the Finance Minister or any other Minister occupying the Treasury Benches as to the exact nature of the concessions granted to the Scheduled Castes. I pause for a reply from the Hon'ble Minister in regard to this particular point. Sir, 5 lakhs of rupees is hardly adequate to meet the various demands of the Scheduled Castes people. There is the question of education, appointments to the different services and other matters in which the Government can show their generosity to the depressed classes. Sir, I was not present here when Mr. Amulyadhane Roy moved his resolution but from the nature of the resolution it seems desirable that the Government should be more charitable in the matter of distribution of services and in meeting the other demands of the Scheduled Castes.

Sir, with these words, I support the resolution.

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOUDHURY: Mr. President, Sir, speaking on behalf of the non-official section of this side of the House, I think Mr. Roy does not doubt the sympathy which the Muslim section has got for the Scheduled Castes. Throughout the last 7 or 8 years during which the Muslims have had a predominant voice in the administration of this province the Scheduled Castes were given certain percentage of representation in every measure that was brought before the Legislature. Recently, he is probably fully aware that the Secondary Education Bill which is being discussed now by the Select Committee of the Lower House has also specifically provided for representation of the Scheduled Castes. Therefore, so far as the present Government is concerned, he no doubt will agree with me that all the sympathies that are necessary for protecting the Scheduled Castes have been and are being shown to them. The Mussalmans have a common case in certain institutions with the Scheduled Castes, namely, the Calcutta Corporation, the Calcutta University and such other bodies, and therefore whenever they think about their own case, the Scheduled Castes' just case is not forgotten. A misunderstanding has arisen in the minds of the caste Hindus that undue preference is being given to the Scheduled Castes, and therefore, it has become necessary for the Caste Hindus to speak out their own mind openly on the subject. But the Government of the province have got responsibility both for the protection of the rights of the Scheduled Castes and for the protection of the rights of the Caste Hindus. Therefore, it cannot be a one-sided decision. As regards the appeal which has been made jointly to the Government by the representatives of the caste Hindus and the Scheduled Castes to make a declaration on their behalf regarding this question, let the Caste Hindus make up their mind as to what proportion and what part of the present privileges which they are now in possession of, they want to give up in the interest of the Scheduled Castes. Once they have made up their minds, it becomes all the more easy for the Government of the day to decide, because we will then know what the two parties who are most intimately concerned are prepared for and we can then go forward. Let them declare what is their respective position. We, the Muslims, on this side of the House who are supporters of the present Government are quite sympathetic to the aspirations and legitimate claims of the Scheduled Castes and I hope Mr. Roy will be the first to admit that we have never stood in the way of his community getting the rights to which they are entitled. But if they think that they are entitled to more, let Dr. Roy turn to the members on his right and to his left and put the question to them and ask them to declare their intention. I would, therefore, request the Muslim members of the House after expressing their full sympathy for the resolution to remain neutral. Let the matter be decided solely by the Scheduled Caste members of this House and the caste Hindu members here. We for our part will remain neutral.

Dr. KUMUD SANKAR RAY: Sir, a statement was made by a previous speaker that last year the Council voted a sum of 5 lakhs of rupees for the improvement of educational facilities for the Scheduled Castes members. We would like to know what has happened to that money: has that money or any amount of it been expended?

Mr. PRESIDENT: I do not think the question arises at present. We are now discussing an altogether different resolution.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, the question of sympathy was raised by Mr. Hamidul Huq Chowdhury. But we want to know whether that sympathy is mere paper sympathy or practical sympathy which can be translated into action.

Dr. KUMUD SANKAR RAY: As there is a misunderstanding in the minds of the public on this matter, to prevent the present Government policy in this behalf being misunderstood it would be wiser for them to declare on the floor of the House what has happened to that sum of money.

Mr. PRESIDENT: That point has been referred to in several speeches. I hope that Government realise their duty and will try to reply to that point, but it cannot be an independent point for discussion in connection with the resolution before the House.

Mr. BIREN ROY: Sir, when the resolution was moved last session by Mr. Roy, he introduced certain things which now help me in answering certain points in opposing the motion. Mr. Roy wants to secure representation of the Scheduled Castes by legislative measures, although he appeals practically to all sections of the House that it should be done by a Gentlemen's Agreement—

Mr. SACHINDRA NARAYAN SANYAL: Is the honourable member speaking for himself as a member of this Council or on behalf of Government?

Mr. BIREN ROY: No, Sir, I am speaking in my individual capacity.

Mr. SACHINDRA NARAYAN SANYAL: Then, why does he speak from the Treasury Bench and not from our side of the House?

Mr. BIREN ROY: Mr. Roy stated that when he put the question to the leader of the Congress, Mahatma Gandhi, whether the Congress Government would provide seats for the Scheduled Caste community on a population basis from the Board of Panchayets to the Council of State, he got no answer from him. Here Mr. Roy envisages that legislative measures should be so made that if the population figure fails, legislative measures should come in. Legislative measures cannot be so easily taken, Sir. It has already been pointed out by the honourable member, Mr. Nurul Amin, that once Mr. Roy states that in terms of the Poona Agreement the percentage should be fixed whereas in the main resolution he speaks of the Communal Award. Well, Sir, I do not know anything about the percentage of the population of Scheduled Castes in relation to the caste Hindus as such figures are not yet available to us from the census of 1941. Mr. Roy belongs to a party which was at that time responsible—

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJI: Why not relate to the census of 1931.

Mr. BIREN ROY: I am referring to the latest census. Our Government came into existence after that census—

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJI: On a point of order, Sir. Mr. Roy says that this Government has been brought into being after 1942; but, Sir, it is a matter of common knowledge—

Mr. PRESIDENT: What is your point of order?

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJI: I am coming to it. Has the honourable member any right to refer to anything which is absolutely not based on a correct foundation—which is incorrect and wrong. The new Act was passed in 1935 and this Government was brought into being in 1937. So reference to 1942 is absolutely wrong.

Mr. BIREN ROY: I did not refer either to 1942 or to 1937. I said this Government—the present Government—came into existence long after the latest census, which was completed in 1941.

Mr. PRESIDENT: It is not a point of order but a point of misunderstanding.

Mr. BIREN ROY: Now, Sir, Mr. Amulyadhane Roy belongs to that party which at that time or at the time of compilation of those census figures was carrying on a campaign that Hindus should be shown as Hindus only and not as caste Hindus and no mention of Scheduled Caste Hindus should be made in the census, so that there may not be any communal variety. It may be that the motive for this was to show the percentage between Hindus and Muslims as 45:55 or even 50:50. As a member belonging to the Swarajya Party, I am personally against Communal Award on principle—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order, order, Mr. Roy, what did you say? As a member of the Swarajya Party?

Mr. BIREN ROY: Yes, Sir.

Mr. PRESIDENT: You belong to the Government Party—your name is shown as a member of the Coalition Party. So you cannot say that you are a member of the Swarajya Party.

Khan Sahib Maulvi WAHIDUZZAMAN: On a point of order, Sir. Is there any Swarajya Party in the Council?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order order.

Mr. AMULYADHONE ROY: On a point of information, Sir. May I know if the Parliamentary Secretary is speaking on behalf of Government or as a member—

Mr. PRESIDENT: I have asked Mr. Roy not to refer to himself as a member of the Swarajya Party but as a member of the Coalition Party.

Mr. BIREN ROY: All right, Sir. As I was pointing out, the party to which Mr. Roy belongs was carrying on a campaign with regard to the percentage of Hindus and Scheduled Castes—they advocated that there should only be Hindus without any division as Scheduled Castes or backward community or anything like that. Mr. Roy here wanted communal representation of Scheduled Castes, although in his speech he made it clear that he wants representation not only for the Scheduled Castes but also for the remainder of the Hindus. He has not explained who are the people that want to deprive them. Whenever the question of the backward communities comes up not only before this Government but anywhere else, the caste Hindus give way and generously provide for adequate representation of these communities. Mr. Amulyadhone Roy has asked for seats through statutory provision on the University, Corporation, municipalities and district and local boards of the province and in a sweeping general remark he speaks that on the basis of the percentage of population and on communal lines they should be represented on these boards. In the case of the Council which represents the whole of the province, the percentage figure for the whole province may be taken for communal representation but in the case of the municipalities, district boards, the percentage figure for the province cannot be the percentage figure for each respective local area. For example, in the Howrah Municipality, the percentage figures of the Hindus and the Scheduled Castes will provide something like 2 seats for the Scheduled Castes but he will want that there should be at least 6 seats. Now, that cannot be. In the case of the Corporation, the figure of the Scheduled Castes will be very much less. But this Government, or this Ministry has already made provision for more nominations there. But if he wants this to be done by legislative measures in local bodies as well, it will be very unjust for the caste Hindus. Personally, I object that there should be anything like nominations from particular communities. I am always for getting these seats on the basis of other considerations such as educational attainments and certain other proficiency in some of the technical spheres of life. In the case of services, efficiency in administration will have to be maintained. If you want to take your own men without examining their merit, the efficiency of the department will be impaired. So, you continue to provide your own men who are not efficient and shout at the same time that the departments are being run by inefficient men.

I fully sympathise with Mr. Roy. The Scheduled Castes people should get proper representation but not on the line of the Communal Award. I shall be prepared to help him if he asks for more funds from the Finance Department for the provision of educational facilities and other things. He may give us a definite scheme as to how he proposes to utilize the money that may be made available for the educational facilities of the Scheduled Castes. As a member of the Council and as one belonging to the Government party, we shall try to help Mr. Roy in every possible way.

With these few words, Sir, I would request Mr. Amulyadhane Roy to withdraw his resolution; otherwise we shall have to oppose it.

Mr. NUR AHMED: Sir, with your permission I wish to say a few words on the resolution which is under discussion in this House. I can assure the honourable mover that we the members on this side have every sympathy with the spirit in which he has moved the resolution. We stand for justice and fair play to the Scheduled Castes and to all other communities of Bengal. We stand for a democratic government in which the rights of all communities and all sections of the people should be preserved and every community should get a fair and proper share in the administration and in the services in the State. But, Sir, on going through the resolution I find that the resolution as framed is incapable of being given effect to. First, in the first line of the resolution Mr. Roy has asked Government to undertake Legislative measures to secure representation of the Scheduled Castes. Sir, it is a new thing, and I think nowhere in India such legislation securing percentage of services for certain classes has been undertaken. Some percentage of services for his community has already been fixed and this is being followed very strictly. Mr. Roy has come up before this House with a very novel and very wonderful idea. Sir, there is another thing. He has said that the legislation should be made on the line of the Communal Award. So far as the Scheduled Castes are concerned, the Communal Award has been modified by the Poona Pact. I ask Mr. Roy to think very seriously what will be the implications if a legislation is now made on the line of the Communal Award. Because, by the Poona Pact they get more representation whereas if representation is made strictly on the line of the Communal Award, they will get less than what they are getting now. So, Mr. Roy will do more harm to his community by moving this resolution. As regards the representation of the Scheduled Castes in the services of the University, the Corporation and all other autonomous bodies, there are already statutory provisions for such representations. Therefore, there is no necessity for such a legislation.

Sir, here I must say one thing. Mr. Roy has done one very good thing by bringing such a resolution. There is a saying that good cometh out of evil. Some of our Hindu friends have spoken in support of Mr. Roy's resolution thereby admitting the necessity of the Communal Award. Formerly, whenever the Muslims asked for communal representation, they said it was a taboo, but now they have themselves come forward to ask for a share in this thing.

Sir, as I have said at the very outset, we Muslims have every sympathy for the Scheduled Castes, and we will be very glad to give them their due share in the services in every department of this Government. With these words, I request Mr. Roy to withdraw his resolution.

Khan Bahadur M. SHAMSUZZOHA: Sir, I have every sympathy with the spirit of the resolution moved by Mr. Amulyadhane Roy but the attitude that my friends of the Opposition have taken is contradictory. The history of the Congress, and the events that led up to the Communal Award after the Round Table Conference, will only show that my friends have not been consistent in their policy. Even in Bengal there was a difference amongst the Congressites on this matter of the Communal Award; there was a dissension even amongst the staunchest Congressites. Therefore, it is not understandable why my friends at this time when there is no clear-cut scheme on this subject propose to support this resolution. The resolution has great implications behind it. If you analyse the resolution, you will find that if we accept it, we shall be certainly landing ourselves into a great difficulty. For instance, so far as elections to local bodies, district boards, etc. are concerned, elections are held by means of joint electorate; but so far as the provincial elections, namely, elections to the Legislature are concerned, they are held on quite a different footing. So far as the elections of the Scheduled Castes are concerned, they take place by means of nomination as well as by separate electorate; but so far as elections to district boards and local bodies are concerned, they are entirely on the system of joint electorate; there is no nomination whatsoever. And there is a clear-cut distinction between them. So far as the municipalities are concerned, the same argument holds good. Therefore, there are so many difficulties in the way of the acceptance of the resolution that if we pass it, we shall find that we are in an impossible situation; it will be simply impossible to carry out by legislative measure the implications that are behind this resolution. As far as the Communal Award is concerned, we all know that even amongst the Hindus this matter has created the bitterest of feelings. We, Muslims, have never been communal in or out. We have always expressed our sympathy with the aspirations of all communities. Our leader, the Quaide-Azam Mr. Jinnah, has been preaching this very thing that there should be self-determination among all peoples. We, Moslem Leaguers, always stand for justice and we shall secure to all minorities in India that justice and those rights which they rightly deserve.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Let there be one electorate throughout the province or the country as a whole.

Khan Bahadur M. SHAMSUZZOHA: Yes, that will be done after these controversies are set at rest, when we shall be able to apply our minds to the whole problem in all its bearings in a calm atmosphere; then and not till then. Therefore, it is now only futile to pass a pious resolution like this in this Council. Therefore, before we arrive at a decision as hinted at by my friend, Mr. Hamidul Huq Chowdhury, it is for the Hindus in the Council to decide and give a decision in the matter. It is not for us, so far as the interest of the Hindus are concerned, to give our opinion. Therefore, we ought to remain neutral in this matter. But so far as our opinion and our wishes are concerned, we may give assurance that my friend has our whole-hearted sympathy with the spirit underlying his resolution: that we are alive to the real need and we do not minimise the importance of the resolution. Therefore, after considering all the pros and cons, I think it would be advisable and prudent for my friend to withdraw the resolution.

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: Sir, I would like to congratulate my old friend Mr. Amulyadhane Roy for the manner in which he has placed his case before this House today. It is not in his old style. But his speech was full of moderation of language. It is also gratifying to find that Mr. Lalit Chandra Das has given his full and whole-hearted support to this resolution, though he has not backed it with a speech. Then, Sir, my friend Mr. Haridas Mazumdar has given his qualified support. (Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: I have given my whole-hearted support to the motion). I found it difficult to understand whether he actually supported the motion or opposed it. Another thing about this matter is that Mr. Humayun Kabir, who, whenever he is present, never misses an opportunity of voicing his sentiment on the subject—

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: On a point of information, Sir, May I take it that the Hon'ble Chief Minister has nothing to speak on the subject and is wandering about for materials to speak.

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: Then Sir, as for my friend Dr. K. S. Ray's remarks, after he has heard me he would be sorry that he put that question.

Now, Sir, the difficulty about this resolution is that it is vague and not very clear. As pointed out by Khan Sahib Nurul Amin, the real difficulty is to understand the intention of the mover. What does he mean by "Communal Award"? Does he mean representation by separate electorate for Scheduled Castes, or 30 per cent. according to the Poona Pact? This is the first point. The second point, as far as Government are concerned, is very difficult to accept and I think on principle Government cannot accept the proposition that the percentage should be fixed by legislation about the services of autonomous bodies. To begin with, there is no communal award as regards the services. This is the first point. The second point is that Government can only legislate with regard to communal ratio in the services, but I do not think it is right and proper on principle to legislate fixing the communal ratio in the services for autonomous bodies, such as, district boards, local boards, municipalities, Calcutta Corporation, the Calcutta University and so on. This is a matter which must be taken up and decided by the local bodies themselves. Thirdly, as regards representation of the Scheduled Castes in the local bodies, or in the Calcutta Corporation, as far as I remember there is provision for representation of the Scheduled Castes in the Corporation already. Government have already done that. As regards the representation in other bodies, this again is a matter which Government could seriously consider if they find that there is a certain amount of opinion behind this, particularly if a resolution of this kind or of a clearer nature is passed by the Legislature of the province, then I think it will give sufficient ground to Government to come forward with necessary legislation. I believe, it will be necessary to have a separate legislation for each of the autonomous bodies and I feel that before we could undertake a measure like that it would be necessary to find out how far there is support in the province for a demand like this and particularly how far the views expressed by my honourable friend Mr. Laht Chandra Das have the support of his co-religionists in the province. Therefore, Government as far as this question is concerned, have every sympathy with the aspiration of the Scheduled Castes and their demands. As has been pointed out by previous speakers, this Government and the previous Governments, specially the Government which were in power in 1937-41 took particular care to see that as far as possible the demands of the Scheduled Castes are met. As far as this Government are concerned, in the Cabinet itself they have given representation to the Scheduled Castes which so far no Government in India have done. I make bold to say that in no other province the representation to the Scheduled Castes has even been near to what has been given in the Bengal Government. Therefore, there can be no doubt as regards our sympathy and support for the aspiration of the Scheduled Castes.

Next I come to the query of Dr. Kumud Sankar Ray. Well, to begin with, I do not find any sum like Rs. 5 lakhs in the Budget provided for by the last Government for the education of the Scheduled Castes. This is a matter which can be verified from the Budget itself and as regards the future Budget for which we are going to be responsible, I would only ask Dr. Ray to wait and see.

Mr. AMULYADHONE ROY: Mr. President, Sir, I acknowledge my gratefulness to the honourable members of this House for expressing their deep sympathy with this resolution and specially so to the Hindu members of this House. But may I ask whether their sympathy will be followed by some action? That is my only question. If it is followed up by some action, kindly find out some active measures so that this matter might be agreed to.

Now, Sir, it is unfortunate that the resolution itself has not been understood in some quarters. What I have meant by the words "on the line of the Communal Award" is this. It is a general complaint amongst the Scheduled Castes and a cry has already been raised that the Poona Pact on the basis of joint electorate has thoroughly failed. This is not my complaint. It is the complaint of the Scheduled Castes of the whole of India. So far as the ratio is concerned, we always stick to the population basis. My friend Khan Sahib Nurul Amin has put a question to me and it is whether Mahatma Gandhi gave any reply to the questions put to him by some members of the Madras Legislative Assembly. Mahatma Gandhi's reply was that the Scheduled Castes were quite free to do anything in the interests of their community. Further he said that he would give a detailed reply in the Harijan, but I do not know whether Mahatmajji has been able to give this detailed reply in the Harijan or not. Then, Sir, Rai Bahadur Keshab Chandra Banerjee has said that Government should come forward to grant some concessions to the Scheduled Castes, but may I put to him whether the municipalities or such other self-governing institutions are ruled by our countrymen or by the British people? Are they not autonomous bodies? It is not for the Government to make any provision there. If you do not do it by legislation, do it by your own action. There are 117 municipalities in Bengal and the incidents that happen there has led me to put this resolution, otherwise I would not have come forward with such a resolution as this.

As regards the suggestions made by my honourable friend Mr. Hamidul Huq Choudhury, I must say for his information, as I have already suggested, that this is a domestic matter between the Scheduled Castes and the rest of the Hindu community. Therefore, this matter must be decided by us and not by any other; but if we fail to come to any decision, then and then only we will seek the help of others.

Sir, the Hon'ble the Chief Minister has said that the resolution is vague, but, Sir, I may submit that so far as the details are concerned it is for the Government to work them out. I have only submitted some matters of principle which should be followed. With these words, Sir, and as it has been suggested by some members of this House that the resolution should be withdrawn, I beg leave of the House to withdraw my resolution.

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: The supporters of Government will remain neutral.

Mr. MESBAHUDDIN AHMAD: But the honourable member has expressed a desire to withdraw the resolution.

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: Oh, I am sorry.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Leave has been asked by Mr. Amulyadhane Roy to withdraw his resolution. Is it the pleasure of the House to grant him permission to withdraw it?

The resolution was then, by leave of the House, withdrawn.

Mr. NUR AHMED: Sir, I beg to move that this Council is of opinion that the Government of Bengal be strongly urged upon to make a strong representation to the Government of India to provide for the payment of at least three-fourths of the revenues, accruing to the Central Government from the salt duty levied on and realised from the province of Bengal, by suitable legislation as contemplated in section 140 of the Government of India Act, 1935, or otherwise.

Sir, this is a resolution—

The Hon'ble Mr. TULSI CHANDRA GOSWAMI: Sir, with regard to this resolution that Mr. Nur Ahmed has moved, I would like to point out to him that the whole question of assistance to Bengal from the Government of India is under consideration at the present moment. It is a matter of negotiation between the Central Government and this Government. I will just explain what I mean. Supposing we are to have the whole of Bengal's share of salt duty—the figure for 1942-43 for Bengal was Rs. 1,11,12,000 out of a total of Rs. 10,91,00,800 or something like that, which is the total amount of the salt duty, even if we got the whole of Bengal's contribution to this salt duty, it would be something like one crore and 11 lakhs and odds, whereas the measure of the assistance that is required for Bengal is in the order of two figures in crores. It would, therefore, be of no use at this stage to have a resolution of this kind passed. As regards the allocation of revenues between the Centre and ourselves, the matter is under consideration, and as regards cash or other forms of assistance from the Government of India, that also is a matter of negotiation at the present moment. In this view of the present state of things, the Government would feel greatly obliged if Mr. Nur Ahmed would not press his motion. If I may take the House into confidence in this matter, I may assure my honourable friends that we are doing our best to get as much assistance from the Government of India as possible.

Mr. NUR AHMED: In that case, Sir, I do not move my resolution.

Mr. PRESIDENDT: But you have already moved it.

Mr. NUR AHMED: Then I beg to withdraw it.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Leave has been asked by Mr. Nur Ahmed to withdraw his resolution. Is it the pleasure of the House to grant him permission to withdraw?

The resolution was, by leave of the House, withdrawn.

Mr. AMULYADHONE ROY: I beg to move that this Council is of opinion that a Committee consisting of not more than 5 persons be appointed to enquire into the question of observance or non-observance of the Communal Ratio Rules, relating to the recruitment of the Scheduled Castes.

Sir, it is our common knowledge that the Communal Ratio Rules are not working satisfactorily. On the other hand, when questions were put during the regime of the old as well as the present Government regarding the number of appointments from the Scheduled Castes, they were reluctant to give any reply whatsoever to the questions put by the members of the Council. In every department the Communal Ratio Rules provide that a return should be submitted to the Government periodically, but up till now we have not had the good fortune to know anything about it. Unless and until we know that the Communal Ratio Rules are being strictly followed either by the Public Service Commission or by the Government, we have a strong case for appointing a committee to enquire into this matter. There are departments of Government where the Communal Ratio Rules have been totally ignored. For example, in the Judicial Service recruitments, although there were many fully qualified candidates belonging to the Scheduled Castes, they were not appointed at all. Then, Sir, with regard to A.R.P. and the Civil Supplies Department where many appointments have been made, it has come to our knowledge that the Communal Ratio Rules have not been observed and it has so transpired that many candidates who do not really belong to the Scheduled Castes have been actually appointed as Scheduled Castes. This is a matter to which I specially draw the attention of the Treasury Bench. (Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVARTY: Let us all become Scheduled Castes.) My friend Mr. Chakravarti is willing to become a member of the Scheduled Castes. I may say if he is so willing he is welcome. However, what I ask in the resolution is that a committee consisting of not more than 5 persons be appointed to enquire into the question of observance or non-observance of the Communal Ratio Rules. I have not put any limitation on the power of the Treasury Bench or on that of the Government regarding the number of persons. The choice is left to them and I find no reason whatsoever for not accepting the resolution which I have moved just now. With these words, I commend my resolution to the acceptance of the House.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Resolution moved: That this Council is of opinion that a committee consisting of not more than 5 persons be appointed to enquire into the question of observance or non-observance of the Communal Ratio Rules, relating to the recruitment of the Scheduled Castes.

Khan Bahadur ABDUL HAMID CHOWDHURY: Sir, I do not propose to move my first amendment but I want to move the second one standing in my name.

Sir, I beg to move that the words "relating to the recruitment of the Scheduled Castes" occurring in lines 3 and 4 of the resolution be omitted.

Sir, the amendment which I have just moved indicates that I am in full agreement with the mover of the resolution so far as the spirit and principle underlying the resolution is concerned. I am fully convinced of the reasonableness of the enquiry as suggested in the resolution but I want that the scope of the proposed enquiry should not be confined to the case of the Scheduled Castes only. If a committee is constituted at all, it should be given a free hand to enquire into the cases of all concerned including the Muslims, caste Hindus and the Scheduled Castes.

With these words, I commend my amendment to the acceptance of the House.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Amendment moved: That the words "relating to the recruitment of the Scheduled Castes" occurring in lines 3 and 4 of the resolution be omitted.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, I beg to support the amendment moved by my hon'ble friend Khan Bahadur Abdul Hamid Chowdhury. Because when an examination of any action of the Government is going to be undertaken, I think the whole matter should be seen through and that is why a committee of 5 persons or more should be appointed to look into the observance of the Communal Ratio Rules.

With these few words, I support the amendment.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Sir, Government is aware that the Scheduled Castes have got grievances. They have complained from time to time that they were not getting their due share according to the Communal Ratio Rules in the services and I think this resolution could be accepted by Government as amended now. It is necessary that the whole thing should be enquired into and then we shall find in which cases the Communal Ratio Rules could not be given effect to. We find that in some cases it became difficult to give effect to the Communal Ratio Rules and it is only proper that the communities concerned should know those particular cases. If an enquiry committee is appointed, I think they would be able to place before the House facts which will clearly show that having regard to the efficiency of the services they could not sometimes give effect to the rules. After the deliberation of the committee Government would be in a better position to see why, on what grounds and for what reasons the rules could not be rigidly enforced in all cases. I think the Government will have no objection to accept the resolution in its amended form.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Resolution moved: that this Council is of opinion that a committee consisting of not more than 5 persons be appointed to enquire into the question of observance or non-observance of the Communal Ratio Rules, relating to the recruitment of the Scheduled Castes.

To that an amendment has been moved: that the words "relating to the recruitment of the Scheduled Castes" occurring in lines 3 and 4 of the resolution be omitted.

Mr. AMULYADHON ROY: Sir, I accept the amendment.

Mr. PRESIDENT: There is no question of your accepting the amendment. The House will decide it.

The question is that the amendment be moved.

(The amendment was agreed to.)

Mr. PRESIDENT: The motion as amended runs as follows:—

That this Council is of opinion that a Committee consisting of not more than 5 persons be appointed to enquire into the question of observance or non-observance of the Communal Ratio Rules.

Those who are in favour of the motion as amended will say ayes and those who are against it will say noes.

(The motion was agreed to.)

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, I move the resolution that stands in my name and runs as follows:—

"That this Council is of opinion that a census of the destitutes and unemployed particularly of the rural areas of Bengal should be taken in time to tackle the urgent problem of rehabilitation and future emergency."

Sir, the demand in this resolution is—

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Sir, has the honourable member amended his resolution? I do not find the word "rehabilitation" in the resolution here.

Mr. PRESIDENT: No, no, Mr. Mukherjea, the word is there.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, the demand in this resolution is modest but its import is very great. This is a demand for co-operation and for constructive work. Sir, this is a test case for the Ministry. If they really and genuinely want to save the country from deaths and depopulation, I hope they will readily accept my suggestions embodied in the resolution.

Now that the price of rice is again rising in different parts of Bengal in the midst of a bumper crop, famine seems to have obtained a fresh lease of life. Besides, for reconstructing Bengal a long-term planning is necessary. Sir Purushottomdas Thakurdas and others have presented the country with a 15-year post-war reconstruction plan for India. To repair even partially the injury that Bengal has sustained in this famine a 20-year plan will be necessary and collection of statistics of destitutes and the unemployed should be its first item.

This resolution, Sir, would never have been on the Order Paper of the Legislature of a country which is administered on scientific lines. There would have been no occasion to discuss a resolution of this nature if the Ministry were alert and watchful about their duties. They always wake up when the thief has already made good his escape. They always try to bolt the stable door when the horse has run away. Fire-brigade they try to rush when the house has already been burnt. By way of illustration, I may cite one recent case—they called a conference of the leaders of the parties of the legislature to discuss the procurement scheme of this year's aman crop towards the end of November when harvesting was fast going on. The Ministry came into office towards the end of April, so that they had wasted seven precious months before holding consultation on a subject of major importance. Sir, the control of the paddy crop of a vast province like Bengal requires months' labour and efforts with a definite idea and plan of work. Sir, almost everyday they come out with a press statement and next day with a modification thereof. If you open the pages of the "Calcutta Gazette", you will find numerous cases in which transfers of officers made in one issue of the Gazette are cancelled in the next issue. One is, therefore, tempted to cry out "Indecision! Thy name is Bengal Ministry." A normal man thinks twice before he acts but my honourable friends in the Ministry act thrice before they have any time to think. This is really a deplorable state of affairs and this is the main reason why I have tabled this resolution demanding a compilation of these useful statistics which every civilised country even in normal time possesses. Now, Sir, let me for a moment recall the woeful days of the last year. Those days will remain as dark days for Bengal for all time to come, and let us pray that we may by God's Grace be spared a repetition of the same. Sir, what did happen last year? Thousands of destitutes and hungry peasantry after prolonged starvation for months rushed in despair and desperation to the towns and cities of the province for a morsel of food. They found themselves without accommodation or lodging and without any arrangement for food or for easing themselves, and therefore they brought disease and death with them. We in Bengal are still reaping the fateful harvest of such an exodus. This would never have been the case if in normal times the Government were duly posted with the necessary statistics of the number of the destitute and unemployed in each locality and took precautionary measures to deal with this serious situation through the Subdivisional Officers, thana officers, presidents of union boards, jute regulation officers now in charge of rural reconstruction work. Then they could have easily stemmed the tide of dying men, women and children seeking entrance into strange places by providing them with the necessary help and succour in their own localities near their own hearths and homes. Sir, we were caught napping. The lower middle class, the unemployed and under-employed middle class are the worst sufferers. As a very unsympathetic Government is arbitrating their fate, it is nobody's business to know who they are and what they are and how they carry along. They cannot beg, they cannot steal, they cannot borrow and when their capacity of borrowing—I mean the limited credit—comes to the vanishing point, their only alternative is death. These unfortunate people, these peace-loving people strain every nerve to secure employment but they are helpless. Our ideal Government never thinks of them, and they blame their own luck, their karma or nasib. Otherwise, it would be a very uneasy time for all of us who are capitalists, rich men or Ministers or Government. Let us, therefore, learn something from the experience of the past. Along with the useless food drive of the last year, the statistics of destitutes and unemployed could have been easily compiled. Let the Ministry this time be a bit far-sighted so that if any further emergency arises, immediate action may be feasible and possible. Unless the karta of a family knows how many months are to be fed, it is not possible for him to arrange for meals. The curse of unemployment must be removed from society and social life and to serve this end knowledge of the exact situation is absolutely necessary. As I have already said every civilised Government possesses such knowledge. It is not a very difficult task; it may take some time or it may cost a little expenditure but the game is worth the candle. I do hope, therefore, that good sense will at last dawn upon our Government and whip the majority party to accept this healthy and wholesome resolution without a single dissentient voice.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Resolution moved:

“That this Council is of opinion that a census of the destitutes and unemployed particularly of the rural areas of Bengal should be taken in time to tackle the urgent problem of rehabilitation and future emergency.”

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: Sir, in rising to support the motion which has been moved by my friend Mr. Haridas Mazumdar I would point out a few facts for the information of this House, so that the importance of the question may be considered. Recently I had occasion to go to Mahisadal in the Midnapore district within the subdivision of Tamluk. I had also occasion to go to some parts of the Dacca district and I found that there are many people who have become destitutes, who have no means to purchase whatever the price of rice may be, who have no means to have anything on their bodies to keep themselves from the effects of the winter, who have no means to purchase medicines to cure diseases from which they are suffering. I have seen with my own eyes the sufferings of these destitute people who could not have a morsel of food and who are now suffering from the after-effects of starvation. It is necessary, therefore, that a census of the destitutes should be taken immediately, so that proper provision could be made to meet their want and save the lives of so many people by adopting a suitable policy of rehabilitation. Now, the question is: whether we can afford to lose any time in taking a census of these destitutes and in advocating measures for relieving the distress of the destitutes. I think it is very necessary that a census should be taken promptly and the only machinery we can employ for this purpose is the machinery which should be composed of all sections of the people including the Government. We on this side of the House are willing to give our whole-hearted co-operation in order to make an effective and a very complete census of the destitutes in order that the lives of the people may be saved. The word "destitute" has not been defined. The meaning of "destitute" as ordinarily understood is: those who have been deprived of their houses and have come out to the streets without any shelter and without anything to live upon. But we have to think of another class of unfortunate people who are on the verge being turned into destitute. These people, although they have their homes, have no means to purchase anything to maintain themselves and they will have to sell their hearths and homes—some are doing so already—the only shelter which they have and will thus be turned out on the streets and be complete destitutes thereby increasing the burden of the Government unless they are relieved now. If a census is taken in time and proper steps are taken for the purpose of rehabilitating and relieving all these people, we will be saving many valuable lives. As a matter of fact, I have known many families who would not be able to purchase foodgrains required for their maintenance even if the price of rice is reduced to Rs. 6 or Rs. 4. They have not the means to purchase. With these few words, I commend this resolution for the consideration of the House and I hope this resolution would be accepted without any opposition either from the Government or from any honourable member of this House.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Mr. President, Sir, I rise to support the resolution. Sir, in matters of administration it is very necessary that accurate statistics should be compiled in order to enable the Government properly to carry on the relief work of the sufferers. So far as this resolution is concerned, I think the demand made is a very modest one. Without statistics and figures, it would be very difficult for the Government to help the poor destitutes who have been thrown out of employment, or have lost their houses or are at the point of death due to starvation and disease. They are badly in need of financial assistance. We have seen with our own eyes in the mofussil the situation created by the famine. The position has not improved yet. I think there can be no two opinions with regard to the resolution. If the Government wish well of the people of this province, they should come forward to accept the resolution.

With these few words, I support the resolution.

Mr. NUR AHMED: Sir, I rise to oppose the resolution. The resolution asks the Government to take census of the destitutes and unemployed, but I find that Government have already taken steps to take census of the destitutes and unemployed. They have asked the District Officers to take census of the destitutes and unemployed, of those who are unable to purchase their own foodstuffs. In every district this has been done. Moreover there is a Government Bill under consideration, namely, the Destitute Repatriation and Relief Bill. Government have already taken full responsibility for maintaining and feeding the destitutes and in order to do that they have started taking census of the destitutes. Speaking from personal experience, in Chittagong, the District Magistrate has taken the figures of the poor men in every village in order to provide some sort of ration for those people. Sir, this is the first ground on which I oppose the resolution. Then there is the second ground, namely, what would be the huge expenditure if a census is required to be taken of the destitutes and the unemployed now? This is a very critical time and I would ask the mover of the resolution to think over this matter again and not to press this resolution. Without going in for census it would be wiser for Government if they spend that huge sum on relief work. Moreover, efficient staff would be required and now there is a very great dearth of efficient staff. So efforts should be made for relief and other urgently needed work now.

Sir, from that point of view, I think this resolution is unnecessary and it will entail unnecessary public cost. It is a known fact that Bengal's public finances have a very great deficit in every respect. In reply to my question No. 40 it has been elicited that Government's total net loan outstanding on 31st October, 1943, was Rs. 14,07,39,800. This is indeed a very heavy debt. If this resolution is given effect to, Government will have to take further loan which will cause dislocation of the relief work. In every village there is a Food Committee and there is organisation to look after the destitutes and unemployed. An Act of this Legislature sponsored by no less a person than the Hon'ble Minister Khan Bahadur Saiyed Muazzamuddin Hosain was passed so long ago as 1939. Under section 8 of that Rural Unemployed and Poor Relief Act there is a provision for census of destitute and unemployed persons to be taken by union boards; and if that Act is enforced—and Government can do that now without any additional cost—then the census of these unemployed and destitute persons may be taken. In that view of the case, no additional organisation would be required to be set up. Sir, in this view of the matter also this resolution is unnecessary. On these grounds, I am sorry to oppose the resolution. Though at the very first sight it seems very attractive and necessary, but going deeply into the matter and thinking that it will cost a heavy amount which is badly needed for the relief of the poor unemployed I oppose the resolution.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Mr. President, Sir, I confess that I had no desire to intervene in this debate. I had thought that this resolution is of a nature which would receive the unanimous support of the members from all sections of the House. I may confess, Sir, that the speech of the honourable member who has just sat down has astonished me not a little. I may also add, Sir, that there is neither any logic nor any reason in the statement which he was pleased to make. My honourable friend said that the Government of Bengal have already taken steps to find out what is the number of destitutes in the different areas of the province. If that statement is correct, I fail to understand why he should get up and oppose a resolution which merely reiterates a demand which Government have already accepted. If Government have already made attempts or arrangements for proper census figures, there is no reason why a demand or an additional direction from the Council for such census figures should be opposed by any honourable member of this House. Besides, Sir, my honourable friend said that it is necessary that there should be relief measures, but he forgot to tell us how there can be any relief measures unless we know who are the persons who require relief, unless we know what will be the total number of persons in different areas of Bengal who require relief, unless we know what will be the class of relief which each person or class of persons may require. How is my honourable friend going to render relief to the destitute people in Bengal, the unemployed persons in Bengal, without making any arrangements whatsoever for finding out what is the actual census—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Will you take a long time, Mr. Kabir, to finish?

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Yes, Sir, I will take a few more minutes.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Then I adjourn the Council now. The Council stands adjourned till 1 p.m. on Tuesday, the 15th February, 1944.

Adjournment.

The Council then adjourned till 1 p.m. on Tuesday, the 15th February, 1944.

Members Absent.

The following members were absent from the meeting held on the 11th February, 1944:—

- (1) Khan Bahadur Naziruddin Ahmad.
- (2) Mr. Kader Baksh.
- (3) Mr. Humayun Reza Chowdhury.
- (4) Khan Bahadur Abdul Gofran.
- (5) Mr. Mohamed Hossain.
- (6) Mr. J. McFarlane.
- (7) Mr. N. N. Mohalanabis.
- (8) Mr. Naresh Nath Mookerjee.
- (9) Mr. R. S. Purssell.
- (10) Khan Bahadur Kazi Abdur Rashid.
- (11) Dr. Kasiruddin Talukdar.

BENGAL LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL DEBATES

First Session, 1944—No. 6.

THE COUNCIL met in the Legislative Chamber of the Legislative Building, Calcutta, on Tuesday, the 15th February, 1944, at 1 p.m., being the sixth day of the First Session of 1944, pursuant to section 62(2)(a) of the Government of India Act, 1935.

Mr. President (the Hon'ble Sir BHOY PRASAD SINGH ROY, K.C.I.E.), was in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Bed of river Damodar.

49. Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Communications and Works Department be pleased to state—

- (a) if he is aware that the river Damodar, now a canal connecting the rivers Kaliganga and Baleswar within the Pirojpur Municipality, has practically silted up and communications even by boats during a low tide are not possible;
- (b) if he is aware that Khulna-Bagerhat-Barisal Mail steamers used to ply across this Damodar;
- (c) if he is aware that the silting up of the rivulet has prejudicially told upon the sanitation of the locality and that kala-azar, malaria and cholera very often break out there in epidemic form;
- (d) if he is aware that the dredging on a small scale could not make it as useful as it was before, and that the public, specially those who live on agriculture and small industries, are experiencing great hardship in carrying their goods from one place to another, particularly during the winter season;
- (e) if he is aware that there is no arrangement for bullock-cart conveyance in this locality; and
- (f) whether the Government propose to take immediate steps to see that the canal is cut and dredged properly and the feeder khals (small canals), such as Chalisa-Raiskati Khals, are thoroughly re-excavated at an early date?

MINISTER in charge of the COMMUNICATIONS and WORKS DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Mr. Barada Prosanna Pain): (a) Yes, navigation by boats does become difficult at neap tides in the winter.

(b) Yes, more than 50 years ago.

(c) The relationship between the silting up of the Damodar river and the local incidence of cholera, kala-azar and malaria has not been established by facts.

(d) It is doubtful whether dredging will restore the river to its original condition. It can be kept fairly navigable only to boat traffic by periodical silt clearance which is being done by the District Board, Bakarganj. It was last silt-cleared by them in 1940-41. Due to navigation difficulties in the winter the public experience transport difficulties by boats.

(e) Yes. There is, however, a bus service.

(f) As periodical silt clearance is being done by the District Board, it is not proposed to take up the scheme at present.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to place all the papers before this House with reference to the answer given to my question, part (c), that this silting up of the river has got nothing to do with cholera, kala-azar—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Mazumdar, it is very difficult to follow your question. Will you please put it more clearly?

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: With reference to (c) of the question, the Hon'ble Minister has replied "the relationship between the silting up of the Damodar river and the local incidence of cholera, kala-azar and malaria has not been established by facts". Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to place all the papers before this House from which he came to that conclusion?

The Hon'ble Mr. BARADA PROSANNA PAIN: Sir, unless the papers indicate that position how can I place the papers?

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state whether there has been an increase in the incidence of cholera, kala-azar and malaria in the course of the last 50 years?

The Hon'ble Mr. BARADA PROSANNA PAIN: There may have been increase.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Sir, it is not a matter of opinion: it is a question of fact—

The Hon'ble Mr. BARADA PROSANNA PAIN: I said "may have been"—

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: There cannot be any "may have been" I am asking for answer to the question whether there has been an increase or not—it is a question of fact and there cannot be any "may have been".

The Hon'ble Mr. BARADA PROSANNA PAIN: This is a question relating to the Public Health Department.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Pain, when you have taken upon yourself the responsibility of answering this question, you should give an answer and if you have no facts in your possession you should ask for notice.

The Hon'ble Mr. BARADA PROSANNA PAIN: Sir, I have got no facts in my possession to show that there is relationship between the silting up of the river and incidence of cholera, kala-azar and malaria.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state if it is not based on facts that in the last 50 years there has been an increase in the incidence of cholera, kala-azar and malaria in this area?

The Hon'ble Mr. BARADA PROSANNA PAIN: I ask for notice.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state if this matter, viz., the relationship between silting up of the river and the incidence of malaria, kala-azar diseases, has been investigated into by the Public Health Department of Bengal?

The Hon'ble Mr. BARADA PROSANNA PAIN: I am not in a position to answer a question which relates to the Public Health Department; but so far as my department is concerned, we have not been able to find any relationship between the two.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Do I understand, Sir, that this investigation was made in the Secretariat without reference to any authority on this subject?

Mr. PRESIDENT: I do not think that question arises.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: All right, Sir. Am I to understand that the source of silting up of the river and the incidence of cholera, kala-azar and malaria are not inter-connected according to the judgment of the Hon'ble Minister himself—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Mazumdar, you are repeating the same question over and over again. The Hon'ble Minister has already replied that he finds no connection between the two.

Sale of agricultural holdings by the cultivators.

50. Mr. NUR AHMED: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Revenue Department be pleased to state—

- (a) if it is a fact that the sale of agricultural holdings by the cultivators has increased considerably during the present food distress in Bengal;
- (b) if so, whether any measures have been taken by the Government to prevent such sales;
- (c) if so, what are they; and
- (d) if not, why not?

MINISTER in charge of the REVENUE DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Mr. Tarak Nath Mukerjee): (a) Yes.

(b) and (c) The honourable member is referred to the Bengal Alienation of Agricultural Land (Temporary Provisions) Ordinance, 1943, published in the Calcutta Gazette, Extraordinary, of the 24th December, 1943.

(d) Does not arise.

Mr. NUR AHMED: Arising out of (a), will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state what is the percentage of increase in the sale of holdings?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: I want notice.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state what is the number of such sales from 1st January to 31st December, 1943?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: I want notice.

Adjournment motion.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, I gave notice of an adjournment motion which reads as follows: "That this Council do now adjourn its business to discuss a definite matter of urgent public importance, namely, the serious situation created by the action of the Civil Supplies Department of the Government of Bengal in supplying the civil population of Calcutta and Greater Calcutta through ration shops set up by them with unhygienic and unwholesome foodstuff, particularly, bad and adulterated rice, mixed with saw and jute dust and whole paddy, absolutely unfit for human consumption resulting in the outbreak of beri beri, dysentery, diarrhoea and other diseases in the area and thus encouraging a black-market to continue its nefarious underhand activities."

Mr. PRESIDENT: With regard to this adjournment motion, I find there are also two short-notice questions on the same subject—one by Mr. Mazumdar and the other by Mr. Humayun Kabir. Both the questions have been admitted. Now, I would suggest that Government should consider whether they could reply to these questions on short-notice. If they reply to these questions on short-notice and if the mover is satisfied with the answer, I think there would be no further necessity of moving the adjournment motion. In that case the mover may or may not move it. But if he is not satisfied, then he can give notice of a fresh motion. Of course, its admissibility will have to be decided by me with reference to the rules and facts. So, Mr. Mazumdar, if Government decide to answer this question on short-notice, I would ask you to withdraw this motion today. May I enquire whether the Government are prepared to answer the short-notice question today?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Sir, Government are prepared to answer this short-notice question. But Mr. Suhrawardy is just now away from Calcutta. As soon as he comes back, he would answer these questions. I hope he would come back within the next two or three days.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, it is very deplorable that the Hon'ble Minister for Civil Supplies is not present here today.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: But he is in Dacca.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Then, Sir, I postpone moving my adjournment motion.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Mazumdar, there is no question of postponing the motion. If you want to move the motion, you will have to give a fresh notice and the Chair will have to decide whether the motion would be admissible or not.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Sir, in this connection I would only submit that the point regarding urgency may at that time be waived because the urgency in this matter would always remain.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Yes, the urgency will remain unless the cause is removed, because it is a continuing grievance.

The Hon'ble Mr. TULSI CHANDRA GOSWAMI: Sir, I have the honour to give notice that I propose to move---

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Goswami, would you please wait for a minute or two? A short-notice question is going to be replied to by the Hon'ble Minister for Commerce.

Short-notice question.

The Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja SHAHABUDDIN: Sir, shall I read out the questions also when answering them?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Yes; I think that will be better.

The Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja SHAHABUDDIN:

QUESTIONS:

Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Commerce, Labour and Industries Department be pleased to state---

- (a) whether he is aware that recently a hailstorm passed over a portion of the Bakarganj district;
- (b) if it is a fact that a Bagerhat ferry steamer met with a serious accident near Bhandaria during that squall;
- (c) if so, what is the reason for not publishing this news in the Press; and
- (d) what is the number of sufferers in connection with the said accident?

ANSWERS:

- (a) Yes;
- (b) Yes;
- (c) Sir, according to my information the report was submitted to the Associated Press by the steamer companies on the 3rd February, 1944. The steamer companies gave details of the incident to the Associated Press, but if the Press did not publish it, it was most likely because of certain rules which prohibited the publication of such news which might be of use to the enemy.

(d) The total number of sufferers was 59—

Passengers	... 38
Mail Guard	... 1
Vendor	... 1
Crew	... 16
(including the master and driver).
Steamer clerk	... 1
Steamer clerk's servant	... 1
Sub-agent, Parerhat	... 1
<hr/>

The figure above is subject to alteration as further report of survivors might be coming in.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, the Hon'ble Minister did not answer as to what were the arrangements regarding the life-saving belts and appliances and whether they were sufficient for the purpose?

Mr. PRESIDENT: That did not appear in your original question.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: No, Sir; but day before yesterday I mentioned this in the House and the Government agreed to answer that also.

Mr. PRESIDENT: No, you have got to give written notice. But you may put supplementary questions in that connection.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: All right, Sir. Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state what life-saving arrangements were there in the steamer at the time when it was sunk?

The Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja SHAHABUDDIN: The number of life-boats and the quality of life-saving gears were in accordance with the requirements of the Inland Steam Vessels Act, 1917 (I of 1917), and examined by the Ship Surveyor and certified by the Principal Officer, Mercantile Marine Department, Calcutta District.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: What was the number of passengers in the steamer at the time when it sank?

The Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja SHAHABUDDIN: I want notice.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, the Hon'ble Minister has said that under certain rules the life-boats and other life-saving arrangements were in the steamer. But, may we know how many life-boats and how many life-belts were there under the rules?

The Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja SHAHABUDDIN: Sir, I want notice.

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOUDHURY: Sir, are all these questions likely to come before the Marine Court for inquiry and for report?

The Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja SHAHABUDDIN: Sir, in accordance with the Act, the preliminary enquiry is held by the District Magistrate. Then the report comes up to Government who examine it, and after examination, if Government decide that it is necessary to send the report to the Marine Court, they do so.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Has the report of the District Magistrate been actually received by Government?

The Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja SHAHABUDDIN: The final report has not yet been received, but only the preliminary report.

Mr. RANAJIT PAL CHOWDHURY: Has the steamer been salvaged?

The Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja SHAHABUDDIN: I have no information as yet about this.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Does not the report of the District Magistrate give the actual number of life-belts and life-boats in the steamer?

The Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja SHAHABUDDIN: No, Sir, this has not been mentioned in the preliminary report.

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: Has the Government yet made up its mind as to whether it is going to send this matter up to the Marine Court for enquiry?

The Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja SHAHABUDDIN: How could Government do so without having received the District Magistrate's final report? We have only received his preliminary report so far.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Is the Hon'ble Minister not aware that he is going to prejudice the merits of the question when he is giving these answers as categorical matters of fact?

The Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja SHAHABUDDIN: I am giving out these facts because these are facts which have already been reported by the District Magistrate; I am giving here only those facts; so, there is no question of prejudicing the case either way.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Will the Hon'ble Minister please state when the final report of the District Magistrate in this respect may be expected?

The Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja SHAHABUDDIN: I think the District Magistrate will have to hold a public enquiry; perhaps he will report immediately after that.

Laying of Message from the Bengal Legislative Assembly regarding Bengal Finance (Sales Tax) Amendment Bill, 1944.

The SECRETARY: Sir, the following message has been received from the Bengal Legislative Assembly:—

“The Bengal Finance (Sales Tax) Amendment Bill, 1944, as passed by the Bengal Legislative Assembly at its meeting held on the 7th February, 1944, has been duly signed by me and is annexed herewith. The concurrence of the Bengal Legislative Council to the Bill is requested.

SYED NAUSHER ALI,

Speaker, Bengal Legislative Assembly.”

Sir, I herewith lay on the Table the Bengal Finance (Sales Tax) Amendment Bill, 1944, as passed by the Bengal Legislative Assembly at its meeting held on the 7th February, 1944.

The Hon'ble Mr. TULSI CHANDRA COSWAMI: With your permission, Mr. President, I beg to give notice that I propose to move that the Bengal Finance (Sales Tax) Amendment Bill, 1944, as passed by the Bengal Legislative Assembly, be taken into consideration and passed at this session of the Council.

The Bengal Alienation of Agricultural Land (Temporary Provisions) Bill, 1944.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The House will now take up consideration of the Bengal Alienation of Agricultural Land (Temporary Provisions) Bill, 1944.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Sir, before you take up this matter, may I know whether a date has yet been fixed for the discussion of the Finance (Sales Tax) Bill or whether the Hon'ble Minister is only giving notice that he will move for the consideration of the Bill?

The Hon'ble Mr. TULSI CHANDRA COSWAMI: It is only a matter of giving notice that the Finance Bill will be taken up for consideration during this session and passed.

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Sir, I would like to inform you that a very large number of amendments has been received, some of which are important. Government, therefore, would ask for some time to examine them carefully. So I submit that the Bill may be taken up for consideration at a subsequent date.

Mr. PRESIDENT: In that case, the chief item will be withdrawn from today's agenda.

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: We received the amendments only yesterday and had no time to go into their merits.

Mr. PRESIDENT: But that was the arrangement when you agreed to accept amendments at short-notice.

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: That is so, Sir, but we did not expect that so many amendments would be given notice of. We could not, therefore, come to any decision on the amendments.

Mr. W. B. G. LAIDLAW: Sir, do I understand that the proposal is to defer the consideration of this Bill? If so, I would object to that being done. This Bill is going to take the place of the Ordinance which expires, I think, in about four weeks' time. Government, I should have thought, had had plenty of time to consider the matter and it was actually put down to be dealt with in the agenda of today. I do not know why it should be withdrawn for the time being.

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Sir, the amendments have been received last night and some as late as this morning. So we could not get time to go through them.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Laidlaw, the position is that Government did not expect so many amendments and they were taken by surprise: so they want more time to consider the amendments. Of course, it is for the Government to decide what should be the business today. They can certainly take out any of the items of business on the agenda if they want to do so.

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: I may also point out, Sir, for the information of the honourable members, that there are provisions for giving retrospective effect. So delay of a few days will not affect the actual situation.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Government should always come prepared when they want to move for the consideration of a Bill at short-notice. But in this particular case, in view of the large number of amendments, you ask that the consideration of the clauses of the Bill be postponed. Is that your proposal?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Yes, Sir.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I think Government's difficulties in proceeding with the Bill today should be appreciated by the House, and when the Government suggest postponement of the Bill, I am not inclined to rule out the proposal.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: Will the Hon'ble Minister kindly state when he wants time for consideration of the amendments and place the Bill at a future date, if he will make it convenient to comply with the wishes of the members—

Mr. PRESIDENT: That is a matter you can discuss with the Hon'ble Minister outside this Chamber.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: May I know when you propose to take up the consideration?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Mukerjea, what date do you suggest?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: I am prepared to take it up on the first available date. According to our present programme, it is not possible to take it up before 2nd March. But if any earlier date is available, I shall be glad to take it up on that date.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: In view of the fact that Government feel that many amendments have been tabled which require consideration and they are extending the date by about 15 or 16 days, may I suggest that we may also be given an opportunity of reconsidering our amendments and sending in fresh amendments? Because if the date is fixed for 2nd, Government will have 13 days to consider.

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: I have no objection, provided they are sent in time.

Mr. PRESIDENT: As regards Mr. Humayun Kabir's suggestions, I think they are very legitimate and I hope Government will not object to them.

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Sir, I have already said that I have no objection.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Now, let us decide when the Bill will be taken up. Then we will fix up the last date for receiving amendments.

I have consulted the calendar. In view of the agenda already prepared, I think it cannot be taken up before 6th March. Are Government agreeable to that date? I suggest that 1st of March be fixed as the last date for sending in amendments.

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Sir, we want more days to consider the amendments. It will leave only three days.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I think three days ought to be sufficient. What about the next Bill, Mr. Mukerjea?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Sir, I have no objection to take up the next Bill.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Is there any objection to the next Bill being taken up today? I put this question in view of the fact that everybody expected that the Bengal Alienation of Agricultural Land (Temporary Provisions) Bill, 1944, would be taken up today and the amendments on the Bengal Destitute Persons (Repatriation and Relief) Bill, 1944, reached the honourable members only this morning. So, I want to know whether they had sufficient time to consider the amendments regarding that Bill.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, we did not expect that the next Bill would be taken up today.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Then, we shall take up the Bengal Destitute Persons (Repatriation and Relief) Bill, 1944, tomorrow.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: Moreover, we have not yet seen the amendments regarding the next Bill.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Well, you would be able to read the amendments in course of the day.

I now adjourn the House till 1 p.m. tomorrow.

Adjournment.

The Council then adjourned till 1 p.m. on Wednesday, the 16th February, 1944.

BENGAL LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL DEBATES

First Session, 1944—No. 7.

THE COUNCIL met in the Legislative Chamber of the Legislative Building, Calcutta, on Wednesday, the 16th February, 1944, at 1 p.m., being the seventh day of the First Session of 1944, pursuant to section 62(2)(a) of the Government of India Act, 1935.

Mr. President (the Hon'ble Sir BIJOY PRASAD SINGH ROY, K.C.I.E.) was in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Reservation of seats of Muslim minorities in municipalities.

51. Khan Sahib ABDUL AZIZ: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Public Health and Local Self-Government Department be pleased to state in how many municipalities of Bengal seats have been reserved for Muslim minorities and in how many such reservation has not been made?

(b) Has any Muslim commissioner been returned at the general elections held during the last five years in any of the municipalities wherein seats for Muslim minorities have not been reserved?

(c) If so, what are the names of those municipalities?

(d) Do the Government propose to reserve seats for the Muslim minorities in those municipalities wherefrom no Muslim have been elected at the general election during the last five years? If not, why not?

Mr. BIREN ROY, Parliamentary Secretary (on behalf of the Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi Jalaluddin Ahmad): (a) Seats have been reserved in 83 municipalities and not reserved in 23 municipalities.

(b) Yes.

(c) Bogra, Chandpur, Old Malda, Gaibandha, Narayanganj, Nator and Bajitpur.

(d) No: because seats have been reserved for Muslim minorities in all the municipalities where they are entitled to at least one seat in accordance with the provisions of section 19 of the Bengal Municipal Act.

Deaths from malaria, cholera and other diseases in Chittagong during the years 1936 to 1942.

52. Mr. NUR AHMED: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Public Health and Local Self-Government Department be pleased to state what was the number of deaths from (i) malaria, (ii) cholera, and (iii) other diseases in Chittagong during the years 1936 to 1942, and what was the number of such deaths up to 31st July in 1943?

(b) How much quinine and anti-cholera vaccine was supplied to Chittagong during these years?

(c) Is it a fact that both cholera and malaria have broken out in epidemic form in Chittagong?

(d) Is it a fact that the epidemic has gone out of control?

(e) Have any special preventive and curative measures been adopted by the Government of Bengal to check cholera and malaria epidemics in Chittagong? If so, what are they?

(f) Is it a fact that the incidence of cholera and malaria has been increasing in Chittagong from year to year?

Mr. BIREN ROY, Parliamentary Secretary (on behalf of the Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi Jalaluddin Ahmad): (a) and (f) A statement is laid in the Library.

(b) A statement is laid in the Library.

(c) Yes.

(d) The present epidemic of cholera in the Chittagong district commenced from the month of May, 1943, and reached the highest peak in July, 1943, and thereafter the condition gradually improved. The epidemic appeared to be subsiding since the week ending 1st January, 1944.

The malaria situation cannot be said to be out of control. Recent report from the District Health Officer, Chittagong, shows that malaria is distinctly declining in the district.

(e) Yes: extra doctors and health assistants were posted to Chittagong district from last July, and supplies of bleaching powder have been sent from time to time.

During 1943, 1,455 lbs. of quinine and 333 lbs. of cinchona febrifuge were sent to Chittagong district.

Mr. NUR AHMED: Arising out of (e), will the Parliamentary Secretary please state how many extra doctors and health assistants were posted to the Chittagong district from last July?

Mr. BIREN ROY: Seven doctors and five health assistants.

Mr. NUR AHMED: Will the Parliamentary Secretary kindly state how many persons have died from all diseases up to the 31st July, 1943, in Chittagong?

Mr. BIREN ROY: In January, deaths from cholera were 31, from malaria 1,019 and from other diseases 3,919. In February deaths from cholera were 39, from malaria 823 and from other diseases 3,154. In March deaths from cholera were 6, from malaria 849 and from other diseases 2,759. In April deaths from cholera were 25, from malaria 952 and from other diseases 3,331. In May as I have already said in my printed answer there was an epidemic of cholera and deaths from it numbered 201. In June it was 1,191 and in July which reached the highest peak it was 2,775; deaths from other diseases in May were 4,398; in June 763 and in July 10,951.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Will the Hon'ble Minister please state what percentage of the population of Chittagong was affected by malaria?

Mr. BIREN ROY: I want notice.

Dr. KUMUD SANKAR RAY: Is the Hon'ble Minister aware that there is great scarcity of doctors in Chittagong hospitals? That they have not got even the requisite number of demonstrators for the Medical School there?

Mr. BIREN ROY: As I have already replied, Sir, 7 doctors and 5 health assistants were requisitioned and sent to that area. Moreover, there were 16 military medical officers lent by the Army who were working along with 13 sub-assistant surgeons in that area.

Dr. KUMUD SANKAR RAY: Does the Hon'ble Minister consider this number adequate for the district, or does he think that this number should be supplemented; and if so, when?

Mr. BIREN ROY: The number may not be fully adequate, but Government will try to get as many doctors as possible and give relief to the people stricken with other diseases as also with cholera and malaria.

Dr. KUMUD SANKAR RAY: Has the Hon'ble Minister any information with regard to the Chittagong Hospital?

Mr. BIREN ROY: I want notice.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Was the quinine supplied by Government sufficient for the purpose of Chittagong at the time?

Mr. BIREN ROY: At that time 1,455 lbs. of quinine were supplied and we thought that it was sufficient to tackle the number of persons affected.

Mr. KADER BAKSH: Will the Hon'ble Minister please state whether the quantity of quinine supplied was not only not enough but that the mode of distribution of the quinine was most defective?

Mr. BIREN ROY: Sir, I have already answered the question.

Mr. KADER BAKSH: Whether the mode of distribution was not defective also?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Please put your question more clearly. What is your question?

Mr. KADER BAKSH: The mode of distribution: from personal experience—

Mr. PRESIDENT: That is not the proper form of putting a question.

Mr. KADER BAKSH: Sir, I was going to make my position clear. My question is this: Whether any report has been received by Government that the mode of distribution was defective? That is my question.

Mr. BIREN ROY: Government have not received any such information.

Mr. KADER BAKSH: Is the fall in mortality from malaria due to the use of quinine or due to the change of season?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Kader Baksh, will you please repeat your question? The Parliamentary Secretary seems not to have understood it.

Mr. KADER BAKSH: It is this: Whether any report has been received by Government from the local authorities that the fall in the number of malaria cases is due not only to the distribution of quinine but also to the change in the weather, I mean, the season?

Mr. BIREN ROY: Certainly it may be due to change of the season: for malaria breaks out in some season and subsides in another season.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question is whether Government have received any such information.

Mr. BIREN ROY: No, Sir, except that malaria is definitely on the decline.

Mr. NUR AHMED: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state whether he has received any report from the District Health Officer of Chittagong that malaria is out of control there as there is no quinine in Chittagong for treatment?

Mr. BIREN ROY: Sir, the question has already been answered in answer (c); it is not out of control.

Mr. NUR AHMED: Sir, my question is if the Hon'ble Minister has received any report from the District Health Officer stating that he urgently requires quinine and that there is no quinine in Chittagong?

Mr. PRESIDENT: That question has been replied to. The Parliamentary Secretary has just mentioned it.

Mr. NUR AHMED: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state if it is a fact that 50 grains of quinine is required per patient infected with malaria in order to have effective check on the disease?

Mr. BIREN ROY: It is a fact which Government do not dispute.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: May I know if it is not the information of Government that quinine was not available at that time?

Mr. PRESIDENT: That question does not arise out of this.

The Bengal Destitute Persons (Repatriation and Relief) Bill, 1944.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order, order, we shall now proceed with the consideration of the Bengal Destitute Persons (Repatriation and Relief) Bill, 1944, clause by clause.

Clause 1.

Clause 1 stand part of the Bill.

Mr. NUR AHMED: I beg to move that at the end of sub-clause (3) of clause 1 of the Bill, the following be added, namely:--

“if no notification extending the operation of this Act for such further period as specified in the said notification is issued and published in the official Gazette by the Provincial Government”.

Sir, sub-clause (3) of clause 1 says, “it shall not remain in force after the 31st day of January, 1946”, viz., for two years. To that I want to add my amendment as unless the period of two years is extended by notification it will expire after two years. My purpose for doing so is this: This Bill is a very humane and useful Bill and nobody can say if this emergency will or will not continue after two years, although we do hope that there will be better time and there will be no need for this measure. But nobody is a Prophet and can say that this emergency condition will not remain after two years, so that Government may not have to come before this House for the extension of the time of this Bill. We have seen that for some necessary measures Government have come for extension once, twice or even four times and sometimes more frequently. If this proviso is added, it will save a lot of public money and time of the House. For this purpose I have moved this amendment and I commend it to the acceptance of this House.

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Sir, I accept the principle of my friend Mr. Nur Ahmed's amendment. But it seems that there are some technical defects in the language of the amendment. So with your permission and the permission of the House may I put the amendment in a little amended form, viz., “But the Provincial Government may by notification in the official Gazette direct that it shall so remain in force for such period as may be specified”.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Mukerjea, I think some one else should move the amendment on your behalf.

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: Sir, do you allow at this stage to move the short-notice amendment?

Mr. PRESIDENT: That is exactly the point I was going to mention. Government wanted to move this Bill at short-notice and the Bill has been taken up today clause by clause. Now, if at this stage Government again move certain amendments it will be difficult for the honourable members to study the amendments, because they have not got copies of the amendments which Government propose to move. So, I am afraid, if there is any objection, the amendments cannot be moved and they must stand over at least till tomorrow, to enable the honourable members to study the amendments.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, I object.

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Sir, I have accepted the principle underlying the amendment, only I suggest some verbal changes.

Mr. PRESIDENT: If the Government want to move amendments, they should circulate the amendments to the honourable members today and the amendments may be taken up tomorrow. In the meantime, we may proceed with the other clauses of the Bill on which there are no new amendments.

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Then, Sir, I accept the amendment moved by Mr. Nur Ahmed. We do not propose to move any other amendment.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Amendment moved: that at the end of sub-clause (3) of clause 1 of the Bill, the following be added, namely:—

“if no notification extending the operation of this Act for such further period as specified in the said notification is issued and published in the official Gazette by the Provincial Government”.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, I oppose this amendment. So far as this Bill is concerned, it is a temporary measure. We are according our support to it because we are under the conviction that the economic condition of Bengal necessitates some short relief. There is no gainsaying the fact that this Bill involves an encroachment upon the liberties of the people, but still we are supporting it because circumstances are such that certain steps must be taken both for the good of the destitutes as well as for the general public. Now, I may say how that could be done without encroaching upon the liberties of the people. Copy the method adopted in the case of the Non-Agricultural Temporary Provisions Bill. Government are not taking it up. They are extending the provisions of the Bill by one year. A similar Bill was lying with us. If the economic condition of Bengal does not improve, then the Government would be in a position to bring in a temporary provision extending Bill with respect to this; but so far as the present Bill is concerned, Government knew that it was an encroachment upon the liberties of the people. In our opinion, the Bill should not be extended beyond January, 1946.

Sir, the wordings that were used were “It shall not remain in force after 31st day of January, 1946”. By this time the economic condition of Bengal will improve very much and there will be no necessity for this Bill to continue. The Objects and Reasons of the Bill will show that. There is no doubt whatsoever. It is stated that “it is necessary to continue the arrangements for some time to come, as the economic situation has not yet come to normal. The Bill has been framed with this object in view”. It is further stated that “it is expected that by January, 1946, the economic condition of Bengal will improve and that it will no longer be necessary to continue the Bill. So, I say, Sir, that if the economic condition of Bengal is not improved by that time, the Government will then be in a position to bring in a fresh Bill extending the provisions of this Bill for one year more.

Now, Sir, at the very inception of this Bill, for the Government to ask for power in the hands of the Executive to extend the provisions of the Bill for as many years as they like is no doubt an-encroachment upon the individual liberties of the people. We are going to support the provisions of the Bill, because the time is extraordinary and the economic condition of the country is very bad and that a large number of destitutes have flocked to Calcutta and other urban areas endangering the health of the citizens. The Government have to take extraordinary steps. But the same Government have come to a definite conclusion that by January, 1946, the situation will be such that it will not be necessary to extend the provisions of the Bill beyond that period. I submit, Sir, that this motion of Mr. Nur Ahmed is encroaching upon the liberties of the people by arming the Executive with fresh powers in advance, namely, that they will have the right to extend the provisions of the Bill by a notification. This, Sir, I object to very strongly.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: Sir, in rising to oppose the amendment I would like to speak a few words. The amendment stands thus :—

“if no notification extending the operation of this Act for such further period as specified in the said notification is issued and published in the official Gazette by the Provincial Government”.

Now, Sir, if these words are added there, you will find that it practically means that the Act becomes a permanent measure instead of being a temporary one. But, Sir, the Statement of Objects and Reasons, is as follows “it is necessary to continue the arrangements for some time to come, as the economic situation has not yet come to normal.” I would like to add in this connection that the preamble to the Act stands thus “Whereas it is expedient to make special provision for dealing with persons wandering about in a destitute condition as a result of the prevailing economic distress.” Now, Sir, there are two things admitted in this Bill on behalf of Government, the economic distress that was noticed in 1943 is still prevailing. Government think that the economic situation has not yet come to normal and for that purpose this temporary Bill has been introduced. If this amendment is allowed to be passed, then it will make it a permanent provision which was never the intention of the framer of the Bill, nor the object as stated in the Bill itself. Now, Sir, we are trying to remove this economic distress immediately and for that purpose Government is bound to take proper steps so that this economic distress may not be a permanent feature of the life of Bengal. If we pass this amendment, we should be supporting a measure which would lead Government not to take any step for the purpose of preventing such economic distress and keep the Bill hanging over our heads almost as a permanent measure. I, therefore, submit that the amendment as it stands is highly objectionable and should not be allowed to find a place in the Statute Book so as to give this provision a permanent lease of life.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Yes, Dr. Ray.

Mr. NUR AHMED: In view of the—

Mr. PRESIDENT: I have called upon Dr. Ray already. But what is it that you want to say, Mr. Nur Ahmed?

Mr. NUR AHMED: I want the leave of the House to withdraw my amendment.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Thank you.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Is it the pleasure of the House that leave should be given to Mr. Nur Ahmed to withdraw his amendment?

HONOURABLE MEMBERS: We have no objection, Sir.

(The amendment was then by leave of the House withdrawn.)

Dr. KUMUD SANKAR RAY: May I know when the Preamble will come in for discussion?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Well, the Preamble comes last of all.

Dr. KUMUD SANKAR RAY: Then, why call it a Preamble?

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that clause 1 stand part of the Bill—

Khan Bahadur M. A. MOMIN: Sir, before you put the clause, Sir, may I make a submission? Is it permissible for me to move another amendment to clause 1 in place of the amendment just withdrawn by Mr. Nur Ahmed?

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Have you given any notice of such an amendment?

Khan Bahadur M. A. MOMIN: No, but my amendment will probably be acceptable to both sides.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I would just explain the position, Khan Bahadur. Government wanted the consideration of the Bill, clause by clause, to be taken up at very short notice and a particular period was allotted for putting in amendments. Now, if you move an amendment on the floor of the House, it becomes difficult for the Chair as well as for honourable members to realise what the effect of that amendment would be on the Bill. So, if Government are really insistent on moving amendments to this clause, then they should agree to the clause standing over and not being put to vote today. Therefore, the amendment which you propose to move on behalf of Government, I believe, should be moved tomorrow.

Khan Bahadur M. A. MOMIN: No, Sir, not on behalf of Government.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Then as a member of the Government party, no doubt?

Khan Bahadur M. A. MOMIN: Yes, Sir, as a member of the Government party.

Mr. PRESIDENT: And you have also got Government support, I take it?

Khan Bahadur M. A. MOMIN: That I do not know, Sir.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Now the position is clear!

Khan Bahadur M. A. MOMIN: No, the position is not clear, because Government had made a certain decision at the party meetings but that decision has apparently been changed; in this way our position becomes awkward.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Khan Bahadur Sahib, you should not mention anything about party meetings here. So, you will appreciate my difficulty in allowing you to move your amendment at short notice. As there has been an objection, I cannot allow you to do so under the rules.

The question that clause 1 stand part of the Bill was then put and agreed to.

Clause 2.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Clause 2 stand part of the Bill.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: I beg to move that in sub-clause (1)(a) of clause 2 of the Bill, for the words "any person authorised by the Provincial Government" in lines 1 and 2, the words "the Chief Presidency Magistrate and includes any other Magistrate authorised by the Chief Presidency Magistrate" be substituted.

Sir, in moving my amendment I should like to refer the honourable members to the next sub-clause in the Bill where provision is made with regard to areas other than Calcutta. In other areas, the District Magistrate performs the functions of an authorised officer under this Act. The amendment stands exactly on the same lines: only I have suggested that the authority should be given to the Chief Presidency Magistrate in Calcutta and not left to the Provincial Government. We have bitter experience of how such Government authority was exercised during the time of the last economic distress prevailing in Calcutta. During the last distress the repatriation of the destitutes from Calcutta to outside areas was subject to severe comment from the public at large. I, therefore, submit that it should not be left to the discretion of the Provincial Government. The sub-clause should, therefore, stand as in the next clause, and that the Chief Presidency Magistrate should be the authorised person to function under this Act. The authority which is claimed by the Provincial Government to nominate people for this purpose, so far as Calcutta is concerned, is not safe. We do not know how the selection will be made. We also know that very often nominated persons abuse their position, and so it is safe to leave the authority to the Chief Presidency Magistrate himself or to his subordinate Magistrate, as I propose in the amendment. I submit that if my amendment is accepted, there will be no room for any comment. If we refer to clause 9(2) of the Bill, we find that it is the Chief Presidency Magistrate in Calcutta who is authorised to take cognizance of offences under the Act.

So instead of leaving it vague in the Act, the authority should be specifically allotted to the Chief Presidency Magistrate and he should be empowered to delegate it to his subordinate Magistrate. With these words I commend my amendment to the acceptance of the House.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Amendment moved: that in sub-clause (1)(a) of clause 2 of the Bill, for the words "any person authorised by the Provincial Government" in lines 1 and 2, the words "the Chief Presidency Magistrate and includes any other Magistrate authorised by the Chief Presidency Magistrate" be substituted.

Dr. KUMUD SANKAR RAY: Mr. President, Sir, I would like to support this amendment for the simple reason that it brings the Bill into consonance with the subsequent sections and clauses which have been provided in this Bill. The mover has already pointed out that the object of the Bill is to prevent abuse of powers by persons who might be nominated by Government. Sir, in the districts the District Magistrates nominate persons. So, there is no reason why in Calcutta the Chief Presidency Magistrate should not be the appointing authority. I hope the Hon'ble Minister in charge will accept this amendment.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, I beg to support the amendment of my honourable friend Mr. Bankim Chandra Mukherjee. The demand is a very modest one and is very reasonable too, because in the rural areas the District Magistrates count and in Calcutta the Chief Presidency Magistrate practically rules the city. Therefore, it should be left to the discretion of the Magistrates to appoint persons in connection with the working of this Bill. It is a practical amendment and in the interest of the better administration of the Bill, this should be accepted. Further, this amendment, if accepted, will bring the Bill into line with the district administration too. With these few words, I support the amendment of Mr. Mukherjee.

Mr. SULTANUDDIN AHMED: Sir, I would like to oppose the amendment on the ground that in Calcutta the problem is likely to be very complicated and arrangements will have to be made on a very large scale which might require the whole-time attention either of the Chief Presidency Magistrate or of any other person who might be appointed to discharge this function in Calcutta. So, it will not be possible for the Chief Presidency Magistrate or any Magistrate of Calcutta to cope with the situation, as they are generally over-worked. Government have advisedly made this provision that the Provincial Government should nominate the person who might be able to tackle the problem fully and that he might not be a Magistrate of Calcutta and may not have to do any other work in his official capacity.

The Hon'ble Mr. TAPAK NATH MUKERJEE: Sir, I may point out that the position of the District Magistrate in the district is not identical with the position of the Chief Presidency Magistrate in Calcutta. In the district the District Magistrate is also the executive head but in Calcutta the Chief Presidency Magistrate is not the executive head. From our experience we have seen that in Calcutta the work is of greater magnitude and necessarily a whole-time officer should be entrusted with this work. During the last occasion Government had to appoint an officer of the status of a District Judge to take up this work. In these circumstances, I oppose the amendment.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that in sub-clause (1)(a) of clause 2 of the Bill, for the words "any person authorised by the Provincial Government" in lines 1 and 2, the words "the Chief Presidency Magistrate and includes any other Magistrate authorised by the Chief Presidency Magistrate" be substituted.

(The amendment was negatived.)

Clause 3.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Clause 3 stand part of the Bill.

Mr. BIRENDRA KISHORE ROY CHOWDHURY: Sir, I beg to move that in clause 3 of the Bill, after sub-clause (1), the following new sub-clause be inserted, namely:—

"(1a) An authorised officer in exercising powers under sub-section (1) shall ascertain if the detention of destitute person will in any way disintegrate his family and shall take all possible steps to restore a destitute person to his family in case this detention tends to segregate him from the rest of the members of the family."

Sir, I consider this to be a very important provision of the Bill. Several instances have been brought to light where the actions of the authorised persons in collecting the destitutes and removing them, were unnecessarily rash. Many families came down to Calcutta and settled on pavements and other places. While some member, in most cases the male one, was out to beg, or to bring water, or was temporarily away from the rest of the family, he was suddenly picked up and removed. Force was applied and deaf ears were turned to all his entreaties and appeals. The House will realise how his family felt stranded when the prop of their family never returned to them. It was not possible for such a family to trace the detained person from camps scattered all over a big place like Calcutta. Thus, the Government act of his removal definitely started the disintegration of this family and landed its members in utter helplessness, far from helping them. The purpose of the proposed legislation itself demands that all destitutes should be interrogated, at least in a preliminary way before they are detained and reasonable care should be taken to ensure that his removal does not cripple his family, even for a short while.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Amendment moved that in clause 3 of the Bill after sub-clause (1), the following new sub-clause be inserted, namely:—

"(1a) An authorised officer in exercising powers under sub-section (1) shall ascertain if the detention of destitute person will in any way disintergrate his family and shall take all possible steps to restore a destitute person to his family in case this detention tends to segregate him from the rest of the members of the family."

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTY: Sir, I support this amendment very strongly, and I think Government should accept this amendment, especially in view of the fact that it should be the primary duty of the Government to restore to their own family whoever might be segregated from their family, either Hindus or Muslims. Specially a woman destitute, either Hinddu or Muhammadan, will feel much better off if she is kept among her family members. Therefore, I would request the Government to accept this amendment.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, I support the amendment. Instances have been numerous that when destitutes were removed, wives were separated from their husbands, daughters were separated from their mothers and the streets were ringing with their cries. Instances were certainly known to the Hon'ble Ministers: the local papers were full of this story and leaders were giving their own versions in the papers. In fact, everybody knows that such instances were numerous. So it is a very salutary provision that has been suggested by my friend Mr. Birendra Kishore Roy Chowdhury, and it ought to find a place in the Bill. I hope that the Hon'ble Minister would gracefully accept the amendment and make it a part of the Act.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: Sir, in rising to support the amendment I would just like to draw the attention of the House to some facts which came to my personal knowledge. A boy of five was left in charge of one female destitute and the mother went out for the purpose of begging. In course of destitute removal, the female was taken away along with the small boy. When the mother came back, however, she found that the child was gone and she came weeping to us saying that she could not find her son, and that her son was taken away forcibly. Persons who were kept in charge of this young boy of five cried hoarse that this boy should be returned to his mother. The mother went immediately in search of the boy but to her utter distress she did not find her son. This instance was brought to the notice of the Government officers in charge of Repatriation and for 3 or 4 days the boy could not be found. I can cite another instance. I went to some Government Homes where some destitutes were removed and I found an old mother who said that her child had been removed but nobody knew where he had been taken. Therefore, I submit this amendment is a wholesome proposal. Government if it takes on itself the responsibility of removing the destitutes should also be humane in its dealings with them and see that the parents and children of one family are not separated so that they may find themselves landed in utter distress. With these words, I support the amendment.

Dr. KUMUD SANKAR RAY: I would like to cite another case of a somewhat different nature. In this instance, the mother was taken away and a child of 7 years was left in the streets and cried himself hoarse to find his mother but could not. At 2 o'clock these cries attracted somebody's notice and the child was given shelter. It is to prevent such instances that I suppose my honourable friend has moved this amendment. I hope that at least this amendment will be acceptable to Government.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: I whole-heartedly support the amendment moved by my honourable friend and I hope that Government would be reasonable enough to accept the amendment and make it a part of the Act. I, too, want to cite one instance of a different nature altogether. I was in charge of a Destitute Committee, and in course of our investigations at one of the collecting centres at Lansdowne Road. I was present with an honourable member of the Lower house when a grocer came up, who told us that his mother had been taken away by the police as a destitute woman and he was running about in search of his mother at every collecting centre. After a little enquiry the old woman was found out; she was kept in a room of the collecting centre and she was given over to her son in our presence. She had already been booked to be taken away as a destitute and was going to be sent to a centre outside Calcutta. Unless her son happened to come in that afternoon the old woman would have been taken away elsewhere. Sir, this is an instance how sometimes even those who are not destitutes at all are collected and treated as such. Therefore, we should be very careful about the collection and distribution of destitutes. So in the belief that it is a very reasonable and modest amendment, I hope Government, will not be adamant and should come down a little and in a reasonable frame of mind accept it in the spirit in which this amendment has been moved.

Mr. K. C. ROY CHOWDHURY: Sir, I rise to support the amendment. Some of the officers are devoid of common sense and so powers should not be given to them and it is high time that there should be some check. I too have come across cases like that mentioned by the mover. I came across a case in which a mother was crying saying that his son was taken away in a lorry from her. I think Government should frame strict rules or pass executive orders to prevent such occurrences. If Government gives an assurance on the floor of this House that they will act as I suggested and see that such a thing does not take place, we shall be satisfied and the amendment might then be withdrawn.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Sir, I think the honourable members who have supported this amendment are under some misapprehension. The amendment, as it reads, provides that the destitutes who are apprehended should be returned to their families if by apprehension they are disintegrated from their families. Now, as regards returning of the destitutes, there is provision in clause 7 of the Bill which provides not only for repatriation but also for the proper housing and proper feeding of the apprehended person. Government does not want to detain the apprehended person to be a minute more than is absolutely necessary. As regards disintegration of members of the same family roaming about as destitutes, I think we are going to issue an executive order to our officers to see that members of the same family apprehended as destitutes are put together in the same camp and not disintegrated.

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Sir, I think I should not make any further observation in the matter. To my mind this amendment is not only frivolous but unnecessary. Unfortunately—

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, he says "frivolous". But what is the meaning of "frivolous"—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Mukerjea, I hope you will withdraw that expression.

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: I withdraw it. But I feel that the amendment is unnecessary as it is fully covered by clause 7. Unfortunately, the instances that have been given have no reference whatsoever to the object of this amendment. There are numerous cases where people repatriated have come back again to Calcutta and other towns from their places of repatriation. So simply by repatriation the situation cannot be improved and it is not the intention of Government to keep the people under detention longer than it is absolutely necessary. With this observation, I oppose the amendment.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that in clause 3 of the Bill after sub-clause (1), the following new sub-clause be inserted, namely:—

“(1a) An authorised officer in exercising powers under sub-section (1) shall ascertain if the detention of destitute person will in any way disintegrate his family and shall take all possible steps to restore a destitute person to his family in case this detention tends to segregate him from the rest of the members of the family”.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order, order. The House has divided.

Ayes being 13 and Noes being 23, the amendment is negatived.

Mr. Yakub Sattar, I believe, was not in the Chamber but he has recorded his vote. He should not have done that. His vote is, therefore, cancelled.

Mr. NUR AHMED: Sir, may I have your permission to move a short-notice amendment?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Nur Ahmed, I have decided that no short-notice amendment will be allowed to be moved if there is any objection—

Mr. NUR AHMED: Sir, I have not yet read it—

Mr. PRESIDENT: I have not yet seen the amendment; at least the Chair should be given a copy of it.

Mr. NUR AHMED: Sir, I had already sent notice of it yesterday to the Council office.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Well, let us see what it is.

Mr. NUR AHMED: My amendment is this: that to sub-clause (2) of clause 3 the following proviso be added, namely:—

“Provided that no force shall be used against a woman except by another woman empowered in this behalf by the authorised officer”.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: I object to this short-notice amendment.

Mr. PRESIDENT: In view of this objection, I am afraid, Mr. Nur Ahmed, you cannot move your amendment.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: I object to this amendment, because we on the Opposition side have tabled an almost similar amendment and it is going to be moved. He does not like that the Opposition amendment should be carried. Therefore, he is moving this amendment.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: Sir, I beg to move that sub-clause (3) of clause 3 of the Bill be deleted.

Sir, sub-clause (3) reads thus: “for the avoidance of any doubt it is hereby declared that the power to take steps under sub-section (2) includes the power to enter upon any land or other property whatsoever.” I fail to see what doubt there is, having regard to the provisions of the clause in the Bill and the Preamble. The Preamble stands thus: “whereas it is expedient to make special provision for dealing with persons wandering about in destitute condition as a result of the prevailing economic distress.” I suppose that a person who is resting inside any property is not wandering about in a destitute condition. Then, if we refer to clause 2(3) of the Bill, we find that a destitute person means a person not being of European extraction wandering about or being apparently homeless and having no visible means of subsistence except begging. There is another objection to this clause and that is this: Government are being given the power to enter upon any land or any other property whatsoever. The land or property has not been defined and it is left vague and as wide as possible. With regard to this amendment the authorised officer may enter into the dwelling house of a respectable gentleman and get hold of a person on the plea that he or she is a destitute. I have known of such instances and one instance I may give which took place during the last removal of destitutes from Calcutta. A maid-servant was apprehended in this way who was working in the house. She was forcibly taken away in a lorry as a destitute. Therefore, I submit that such wide power should not be given to a person whatever his status may be. We know what class of persons are employed to go with the lorries and buses for the purpose of removing the destitutes and if a clause like this is provided, it would mean authorising such persons to do anything and everything and it would be giving a very high-handed power to the authorised persons for removing the destitutes. As a matter of fact, the question for consideration is whether the person apprehended is actually a destitute. It cannot be decided until some time passes whether a person is really a destitute, but as the clause stands any and every person can be removed from inside the house on the plea that he or she is a destitute. I submit that this clause is totally unnecessary and inconsistent with the other provisions of the Bill which have been passed showing under what circumstances and what persons should be removed. With these words, I commend my motion to the acceptance of the House.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that sub-clause (3) of clause 3 of the Bill be deleted.

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Sir, I oppose the amendment, because it will give a good deal of trouble in collecting the destitutes. Government is prepared to accept the amendment, if the wording is changed as follows:—

“That to sub-clause (3) of clause 3 of the Bill, the following proviso be added, namely:—

“provided that nothing in this sub-section shall be deemed to confer any power to enter into any dwelling house—

(a) at any time after sunset and before sunrise,——

Mr. PRESIDENT: I think before you move your amendment, the Chair at least should be supplied with a copy of the amendment. (A copy of Hon'ble Minister's amendment was then handed over to the Chair). Now you move your amendment.

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: All right Sir. I beg to move: that to sub-clause (3) of clause 3 of the Bill, the following proviso be added, namely:—

“Provided that nothing in this sub-section shall be deemed to confer any power to enter into any dwelling house—

(a) at any time after sunset and before sunrise,

(b) at any other time without previously giving to the person in actual occupation thereof at least two hours' notice of his intention to do so”.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I would just like to know if any honourable member has any objection to the moving of this amendment.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, there is one difficulty to which I would draw your attention. Sir, the clause as it stands is certainly objectionable. Therefore, my honourable friend Mr. Bankim Chandra Mukherjee wants—

Mr. PRESIDENT: That is an argument. I just want to know, first of all, from you whether you object to the amendment being moved or not.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: The amendment which has been moved by the Hon'ble Mr. Mukherjee is a better one but as I have already stated that many such amendments could not be moved by us for want of time.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Das, it is very difficult to know from your speech as to what attitude you take with regard to this amendment moved by Government. So, I would like to know whether you object to the amendment being moved.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: The amendment moved by Government is a better one.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Then I take it that you have no objection to the amendment being moved.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Sir, cannot the amendment be moved in two parts, namely (1) nobody shall enter a dwelling house after sunset and before sunrise; and (2) that no person shall enter the premises without the owner's or actual occupier's permission? May I request you to put the amendment in two parts?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Are Government prepared to do that?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEE: Sir, in my amendment I have made it quite clear that nobody shall enter a house after sunset and before sunrise. So, the authorised person shall enter only at day time and after two hours' notice is given.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Will that satisfy the Opposition?

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Sir, I would submit to you that this is certainly an improvement on the original amendment. But this idea of two hours' permission is not entirely acceptable to the Opposition. We certainly do not want anybody to enter into any dwelling place at night. We do not—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Kabir, you need not enter into the merits of the amendment at present. The Hon'ble Minister has just moved his amendment and we were upto now following the principle that no short-notice amendment should be moved on the floor of the House and so I would like to ascertain from you whether you have any objection to the amendment being moved.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: We have no objection.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Then may I take it that there is no objection?

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: Sir, you yourself observed a little while ago that no short-notice amendment should be allowed to be moved today. If there are any they would be moved tomorrow.

Mr. PRESIDENT: In that case, the amendments to which there are likely to be short-notice amendments should be moved tomorrow.

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: But, Sir, there are two other Bills tomorrow.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Today we may proceed with other clauses and finish them and then tomorrow we may come back again to clause 3. Government in the meantime may circulate the amendments among the honourable members.

Khan Bahadur M. A. MOMIN: Sir, I rise just to make the position clear. It was your ruling that no short-notice amendments should be accepted if the House has any objection. We had some short-notice amendments which the Opposition did not accept. Therefore, they could not be considered. Other amendments which were acceptable to them they have accepted and these could be moved. So far it is all right. But the difficulty is that this probably will leave the Bill in such a condition that it will be a sort of patch-work here, there and all over and the Bill will be full of lacunæ, and I am afraid the Bill will not be properly workable. There were some very useful amendments but they could not be moved because of short-notice and other side's objection. I do not question that ruling at all, but I only wish to draw your attention to the fact that some amendments were allowed to be moved and some very useful amendments were not allowed to be moved—

Mr. PRESIDENT: The principle which we have followed is quite consistent with the rules that no short-notice amendments will be allowed unless copies thereof have been circulated to the members of the House, because the members are expected to study the amendments before they oppose or support them. That is the point. Here in the case of the last amendment moved by Government there was no objection. That was why I suggested that it should be taken up, but even then it has been postponed for tomorrow. I quite appreciate what you say but as an important member of the Government Party it should have been your duty to advise Government to send the Bill to a Select Committee or to move such amendments in time. The matter stands before the public for nearly six weeks. There was ample time for suggesting amendments to the Bill. I quite appreciate what you say, but I am helpless in the matter.

I will not proceed with clause 3 today, and the amendments to clause 3 should also stand over.

Clause 4.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is that clause 4 stand part of the Bill.

(The motion was agreed to.)

Clause 5.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is that clause 5 stand part of the Bill.

(The motion was agreed to.)

Clause 6.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Clause 6 stand part of the Bill.

Mr. Clarke, do not you propose to move your amendment?

Mr. C. E. CLARKE: No, Sir, I do not move.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is that clause 6 stand part of the Bill.

(The motion was agreed to.)

Clause 7.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Clause 7 stand part of the Bill.

Mr. C. E. CLARKE: Sir, I beg to move that for sub-clause (1) of clause 7 of the Bill, the following be substituted, namely:—

“(1) If the authorised officer is satisfied that adequate arrangements for the subsistence and rehabilitation of a destitute person detained under section 3 exist at the usual place of residence of such person, he may at any time repatriate such person to his usual place of residence as determined by such officer”.

Sir, we suggest that it is most important that before an authorised officer repatriates a destitute person, he should be satisfied that adequate arrangements for the subsistence and rehabilitation of the destitute person exists at his usual place of residence; otherwise repatriation will not be effective and the destitute person may endeavour to return to the urban area seeking means of subsistence. We suggest that re-wording of clause 7(1) on these lines is both desirable and important.

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKHERJEE: It seems to be a useful amendment and I am prepared to accept it.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that for sub-clause (1) of clause 7 of the Bill, the following be substituted, namely:—

“(1) If the authorised officer is satisfied that adequate arrangements for the subsistence and rehabilitation of a destitute person detained under section 3 exist at the usual place of residence of such person, he may at any time repatriate such person to his usual place of residence as determined by such officer”.

(The question was agreed to.)

Mr. G. E. CLARKE: I beg to move that in sub-clause (4) of clause 7 of the Bill, after the words and comma "repatriation of such person" in line 5, the words and comma "or if after repatriation a destitute person again returns to the area in which he was apprehended and detained under section 3 for the purpose of begging" be inserted.

This amendment is really contingent upon the existence of arrangements for the subsistence and repatriation of destitute persons in their village homes. If adequate arrangements do exist, then the return of the destitutes to urban areas should be prevented, or if effected, should be penalised. If we do not make this provision, we may find that attractions of the urban areas may prove too great to the destitute even though arrangements for their permanent rehabilitation in their own localities exist. It is in fact clear that there has been recently something in the nature of steady flow of destitutes to Calcutta and no doubt the ample provision of free clothing and free fooding in the City had been the attraction.

I would urge that this amendment constitutes a necessary safeguard against abuse of the advantages provided in this Bill.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that in sub-clause (4) of clause 7 of the Bill, after the words and comma "repatriation of such person", in line 5, the words and comma "or if after repatriation a destitute person again returns to the area in which he was apprehended and detained under section 3 for the purpose of begging." be inserted.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, it is a most reactionary amendment that one can think of. So far as sub-clause (4) of clause 7 is concerned, it makes provision for punishment of destitutes under certain circumstances. What is this Bill for? This Bill is for the purpose of apprehending the destitutes under certain circumstances and then to send them to places of detention and then to make provision for repatriation to his home. Now, Sir, Government expects that bad economic condition will not prevail in January 1946 and that there will not be any further necessity for this Bill. We are now in 1944 and the economic condition may so deteriorate and destitutes in the mofussil may find their position so bad there that they may have to move to Calcutta or its neighbourhood, and they may have to flock to other urban areas also. What the mover of the amendment means to say is that they must not come to Calcutta or urban areas under any circumstances and remain where they are and they must die there. If the economic condition of Bengal deteriorates, they may have to come to Calcutta and they may have to flock in other urban areas in large numbers: they may be apprehended; but being apprehended they may be given relief also in the detention centres. If they fall sick, they will be given assistance and also they will be repatriated to their respective homes. These are the provisions of the Bill. But now if we accept this amendment, the position will be dangerous. The destitutes on return will be liable to imprisonment at once. So, I strongly oppose the amendment.

Mr. SIREN ROY: The amendment that is now proposed is merely a consequential one. Sub-clause (1) which was in part amended, has been accepted even by the Opposition, i.e., when there has been adequate arrangement for subsistence and rehabilitation of a destitute, only then he will be repatriated and not otherwise. The honourable members opposite think that this person will be in such a condition that he would not get any subsistence. If that is the position, then he is not going to be repatriated. So this amendment is consequential, the intention being that he should not be allowed to leave the place where he has been provided and rehabilitated.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Sir, I regret that I have to oppose this amendment, especially in view of the fact that the earlier amendment which was moved by my friend to my left was generally acceptable to the House. I think my honourable friend who has just now sat down has failed to distinguish between the two types of cases which are likely to arise. It is true that the amendment which has just now been carried provides that a person would not be repatriated unless the officer who repatriates him is satisfied that some arrangements for his subsistence have been made. That is one side of the picture. Even though arrangements for his rehabilitation are made, even though arrangements for his subsistence are made, what guarantee is there that the situation may not deteriorate again? He may find the conditions again deteriorating. It may be that a destitute person comes to Calcutta only for the sake of begging. The mover has suggested that facilities for begging are more in urban areas than in the rural areas. I agree with him. But there is also the fact that a person is forced to come to Calcutta out of dire necessity. Every honourable member of this House will bear me out when I say that last year a very large number of persons came to Calcutta out of dire necessity and because there was no other alternative for them but to come to Calcutta. It is true that the first sub-clause attempts at better rehabilitation; but, Sir, an attempt at rehabilitation is not a guarantee of rehabilitation. In any case, no guarantee is there that the conditions will improve. Mr. Clarke by his amendment proposes to make it criminal to come to Calcutta. He wants to punish the person who comes again to Calcutta. I think honourable members will bear me out when I say that in July and August last year, it was the hunger-marchers of Calcutta who saved thousands of persons from almost certain destruction. By coming to Calcutta, these persons were able to attract the notice of Government. By coming here they were able to attract the attention of foreigners who are here—the European soldiers as well as the Americans and other nationals. It was only because they came to Calcutta that they were able to attract the attention of the people of the whole world. There is no doubt whatsoever that it was due to these destitute persons that the Bengal Famine got world-wide publicity. By dying in the streets of Calcutta, they saved Bengal. If they had not come to Calcutta, relief measures would not have been taken. Nobody would have known of their conditions if they had remained in the villages. By coming to Calcutta, the second city of the British Empire, they were able to attract the attention of all people here and abroad. Many honourable members on the other side would also agree with me that if the hunger-marchers had not come to Calcutta, then condition of Bengal would have been much worse. People would have died by many more thousands. Nobody wants to become a destitute if the circumstances are favourable. Nobody wants to tolerate the repetition of the circumstances of the last year. But Sir, it is one thing to hope and it is quite another thing to face the circumstances as they are. Can anybody deny that so long as war conditions continue, there will be no guarantee that the situation shall materially improve? There would be always during war time the risk of repetition of the dire conditions of last year. There is no doubt whatsoever that the difficulty and stress will continue in Bengal so long as there is war. Its afflictions will be felt by all, either openly or indirectly or in a covert manner. In such circumstances, I think this amendment should not be passed. Mr. Clarke might have brought this amendment in good faith, with a good intention; but actually this amendment may be the cause of a definite injury not only to the persons concerned who might have saved themselves by coming to Calcutta, but to the general public as well. I am at one with Mr. Clarke that begging should not be encouraged. But there are many people who are forced to beg and to do that they might have to come to Calcutta. There is no guarantee during the war whether the situation will sufficiently improve. In view of the present economic distress, I would request Mr. Clarke to withdraw his amendment.

Mr. W. B. G. LAIDLAW: Mr. President, Sir, I carefully listened to the speeches of my honourable friends on my right. I think they are mixing up two things. The object of Mr. Clarke's amendment is to punish the people who return for the purpose of begging, for the specific and explicit purpose of begging. It cannot possibly affect people who are driven from their homes by want and have to return to Calcutta and other urban areas.

Therefore, I support the amendment which my friend Mr. Clarke has moved.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: Sir, I rise to oppose the amendment, and I would like to draw the attention of the House to the exact wordings of the amendment and to show how inconsistent the words are. The wordings of the amendment are "or if after repatriation a destitute person". Now, Sir, what are the implications of the words "after repatriation a destitute person"? Is it that after repatriation he has again turned a destitute? Unless he has turned a destitute again, how can he come to Calcutta or any urban areas? After he is repatriated and is in his home provided with sufficient food he would not be called a destitute. Therefore, the wordings seem to be inconsistent. The moment you admit that after repatriation a person has again turned to destitute condition, you must admit that he has not been provided with the means of subsistence in his home. What is the definition of the words "destitute person". A destitute is a man with no home and no means of subsistence and having nothing to fall back upon. It is only in that condition that a man becomes destitute and comes to the urban areas for the purpose of maintaining himself by begging from the people of the urban areas, because he has lost all chances of being fed by the people of his locality. It is only when the people in the villages are unable to feed the destitute people that these men come from the villages and flock to the urban areas. Therefore, if Mr. Clarke had realised the effect of his amendment, he would not have moved it. So I think it will be better if the amendment is withdrawn, because I think the wordings of the amendment are inconsistent and should not be allowed to have any place on the Statute Book.

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Sir, the people even though they are once repatriated may come back to the urban areas; so I think such an amendment will be helpful. Therefore, I accept the amendment.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that in sub-clause (4) of clause 7 of the Bill, after the words and comma "repatriation of such person," in line 5, the words and comma "or if after repatriation a destitute person again returns to the area in which he was apprehended and detained under section 3 for the purpose of begging," be inserted.

Rai Sahib J. N. Ray.
Mr. B. K. Roy Chowdhury.
Mr. S. N. Sanyal.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order, order. The House has divided. Ayes being 22 and Noes 12, the amendment is carried.

The question before the House is that clause 7, as amended, stand part of the Bill.

(The motion was agreed to.)

Clause 8.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is that clause 8 stand part of the Bill.

(The motion was agreed to.)

Clause 9.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is that clause 9 stand part of the Bill.

(The motion was agreed to.)

Clause 10.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is that clause 10 stand part of the Bill.

(The motion was agreed to.)

Clause 11.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is that clause 11 stand part of the Bill.

(The motion was agreed to.)

Clause 12.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is that clause 12 stand part of the Bill.

(The motion was agreed to.)

Clause 13.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Clause 13 stand part of the Bill.

Mr. C. E. CLARKE: Sir, I beg to move that after clause 13 of the Bill, the following new clause be added, namely:—

“14. The provisions of this Act shall be without prejudice to the provisions of the Bengal Vagrancy Act, 1943, and to the powers conferred by that Act for dealing with vagrants which shall remain in full force and effect.”

Sir, it may be arguable that this Bill when passed into law will, to some extent, supersede the Vagrancy Act as being later in date than that Act. The Vagrancy Act, of course, deals with the permanent professional beggar population and I would suggest that it is important that the powers of the authorities to deal with the professional beggar population should not be prejudiced in any way by this Bill; otherwise we may find ourselves confronted with an increase in the permanent professional beggar population. I, therefore, suggest that an express provision should be made in the Bill along the lines of my amendment.

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Sir, I accept the amendment.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that after clause 13 of the Bill, the following new clause be added, namely:—

“14. The provisions of this Act shall be without prejudice to the provisions of the Bengal Vagrancy Act, 1943, and to the powers conferred by that Act for dealing with vagrants which shall remain in full force and effect.”

(The motion was agreed to.)

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that clause 13, as amended, stand part of the Bill.

(The motion was agreed to.)

Mr. PRESIDENT: The House now stands adjourned till 1 p.m. tomorrow.

Adjournment.

The Council then adjourned till 1 p.m. on Thursday, the 17th February, 1944.

BENGAL LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL DEBATES

First Session, 1944—No. 8.

THE COUNCIL met in the Legislative Chamber of the Legislative Building, Calcutta, on Thursday the 17th February, 1944, at 1 p.m., being the eighth day of the First Session of 1944, pursuant to section 62(2)(a) of the Government of India Act, 1935.

Mr. President (the Hon'ble Sir BIJOY PRASAD SINGH ROY, K.C.I.E.) was in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Detenu Srijut Lalit Bandhu Chakravarty.

53. Mr. KAMINI KUMAR DUTTA: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Home Department be pleased to state—

- (a) if Srijut Lalit Bandhu Chakravarty of Tippera is a detenu; if so, how long he has been under detention;
- (b) if the Government are aware that he has a wife and a widowed mother, without any male member to look after them and without any means of subsistence; and
- (c) if he proposes to consider the question of providing a suitable allowance for his mother and wife and give necessary direction in the matter?

MINISTER in charge of the HOME DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Khwaja Sir Nazimuddin): (a) Yes, since 28th February, 1943.

(b) My information is that his widowed mother and wife are under the care of his cousins and the family has an annual income of Rs. 1,000 from landed properties.

(c) No.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state the source of his information as regards the income of the detenu?

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: I think, the District Magistrate.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Is the annual income of Rs. 1,000, as noted in the reply, his net income or gross income?

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: I assume it must be the net income.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: I want the fact, Sir, and not the imagination or contemplation.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Mazumdar, what is your question? The Hon'ble Minister seems not to have understood your question.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: My question, Sir, is whether Rs. 1,000 is the detenu's net income or his gross income, and I want to know it definitely.

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: Sir, there is no sense in saying definitely what is his net income or gross income.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Is the income of less than Rs. 90 a month sufficient for a family with so many members?

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: May I ask, Sir, what is the income of average middle-class family in Bengal?

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: That is no answer at all. The Hon'ble Chief Minister is replying to my question by another question.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I think that is one way of replying to your point.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Will the Hon'ble Minister please state if the detenu was living in joint family with these people?

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: I cannot add anything to what I have already said. I have got no further information at my disposal now.

Recruitment of Rationing Inspectors and others.

54. Khan Sahib NURUL AMIN: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Civil Supplies Department be pleased to state—

(a) the number of—

(i) Rationing Inspectors,

(ii) Rationing Sub-Inspectors,

(iii) (1) upper division clerks, and (2) lower division clerks, as advertised in September last by the Deputy Controller of Rationing, Headquarters, Deputy Controller of Rationing, Factories and Licensed Shop Section, and the Under-Secretary, Civil Supplies, and recruited up to date;

(b) the number of Caste Hindus, Scheduled Castes and Muslims appointed in each of the services mentioned in (a) (i), (ii), (iii) (1) and (2) above to be shown separately for each class of appointments and for each community; and

(c) whether the Communal Ration Rules were followed and given effect to in making the appointments. If not, why not?

MINISTER in charge of the CIVIL SUPPLIES DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Mr. H. S. Suhrawardy): (a) (i) 138.

(ii) 297.

(iii) (1) 66, and (2) 482.

(b)	Muslims.	Caste Hindus including - other minorities than Scheduled Castes.	Scheduled Castes.
(i)	69	59	10
(ii)	137	131	29
(iii)—
(1)	32	29	5
(2)	209	207	66

(c) Attempts were and are being made to follow the Communal Ratio Rules as far as possible. The Public Service Commission is endeavouring to comply with the Communal Ratio Rules, but urgent appointments have had to be made from the Public Service Commission lists where there were not sufficient qualified candidates of the community concerned.

Notice of motion for consideration of the Bengal Hindu Women's Rights to Property Bill, 1944.

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Sir, may I have your permission to give notice that I intend to move that the Bengal Hindu Women's Rights to Property (Bengal Agricultural Land) Bill, 1944, be taken into consideration and passed, during the current session of the Council?

Point of Information.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: I want to mention one very important matter and that is with reference to my adjournment motion regarding the rationing of bhog and the ration for religious purposes—

Mr. PRESIDENT: I believe the Hon'ble Minister is going to reply to your question tomorrow. He came and mentioned it to me.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: In this connection, may I request that a Press note be issued on this subject at an early date?

Mr. PRESIDENT: You can make your suggestion when the reply is given tomorrow.

Ruling from Chair.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order, order. Before we take up clause 3 of the Bengal Destitute Persons (Repatriation and Relief) Bill, 1944, I would just like to mention one fact to the honourable members. There were suggestions yesterday that amendments should be accepted at very short notice on the floor of the House. I would in this connection refer to rule 64 of the Procedure Rules of this House. The rule runs as follows: "On an oral request made by a member at a meeting of the Council, the President in his discretion, may admit an amendment to a Bill under the consideration of the Council at shorter notice than that prescribed elsewhere in these rules, provided that the question to which such amendment relates shall not be taken into consideration on the day on which the amendment is admitted, unless the President directs otherwise."

The difficulty of allowing amendments to be taken up on oral notice on the floor of this House, as I explained yesterday, is that honourable members do not get sufficient opportunity to study the amendment which a particular member wants to move. Therefore, I would suggest that in case any honourable member wants to give oral notice of an amendment under the rules, he should come prepared with sufficient number of copies of his amendment to be distributed to the honourable members: that is one point. The second point is—the Chair has to use special discretion with reference to the facts as to whether the amendment is in order, whether some of the amendments require previous sanction—previous recommendation—of the Governor. It is not possible, as a matter of fact, to obtain the recommendation or sanction of the Governor at a short notice. The Chair must be satisfied about these points before allowing a short-notice amendment to be moved. I would request the honourable members to bear this in mind. As some of the members may not be familiar with the rules, so I impress these points on them. Important Government Bills are coming up to this House from the other place very soon. I understand there is a proposal to move the Bengal Finance (Sales Tax) Bill on the 13th and 14th of March—I think those are the dates suggested by Government. Up till now honourable members have not given notice of amendments and probably they will come up with amendments at the last moment so that there will not be sufficient time for the department to examine them, tabulate them and then circulate. (Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: Has it been circulated?) Yes, it has been circulated. So I want to remind the honourable members that this is the time for sending in amendments if they want to do so—

Mr. AMULYADHONE ROY: What is the last date for sending in amendments?

Mr. PRESIDENT: There is no question of last date. If the consideration of the Bill is taken up on the 13th and 14th, there are more than 15 days. The rules require 15 days' notice unless the amendments are accepted on short-notice by the order of the Chair—

Mr. BIREN ROY: By what date amendments should reach the office?

Mr. PRESIDENT: I would suggest that at least clear 7 days' time should be given to the office to examine the amendments and to circulate them. So you can send your amendments from now. For the convenience of every one I would suggest that the amendments should be sent by 3rd or 4th of March.

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: Sir, the usual procedure was that we used to get notice of the time by which amendments were to be sent. There are many members who are absent and who might like to have notice. So I think a notice ought to be sent in time.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, may I suggest one thing? I want to suggest that the procedure which has been adopted in regard to the Finance Sales Tax Bill may be adopted in regard to this Bill also. I think this is the introduction stage and when the motion will come up for consideration and passing we shall send in amendments.

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: May I say a few words in this connection? I think your point is this. Obviously Government want that this Bill should be passed before the end of the current financial year and Government would have to come up with short-notice amendments in regard to this Bill. So it is possible that the honourable members may not get sufficient time if they do not know that Government may move amendments at short notice. Therefore, the honourable members would get plenty of time if they are prepared from now. Because if ordinary course is followed in regard to the scheduled time for notice, then it may not be possible to finish the Bill before the end of the financial year. Therefore, I think the Hon'ble President has given warning that the honourable members might be prepared with their amendments from now, so that at that time if Government come forward and ask for acceptance of their amendments at short notice, there may not be any difficulty in accepting them. (Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Are you interpreting the Hon'ble President's wishes?) No question of interpretation. It is a two-clause Bill——

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: On a point of order, Sir. Before the actual notice is given regarding the introduction of a Bill, can the question of sending in amendments arise at all?

Mr. PRESIDENT: But the notice has already been given and you can send in your amendments. In this connection, I may draw your attention to rules 79 and 80 of the Council Procedure Rules. There is ample time yet and 10 days' notice is not required for you. As there would be congestion at the last moment, so the amendments may be sent from now. That is the first point. Then there is another point about oral notice being given at a very short notice on the floor of the House as it happened yesterday.

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: But, Sir, it will be very difficult for a private member to come with 70 copies of an amendment if he wants to move any short-notice amendment.

Mr. PRESIDENT: In that case no short-notice amendments should be allowed. If an honourable member wants the Chair to exercise his special discretion under rule 64 of the Rules, then he must come prepared with 70 copies of his amendments. It is for your convenience that I am making this suggestion. If some honourable member wants permission of the Chair to move an amendment at a very short notice and it is objected to on the ground that the members have got no copies of his amendment, then there will be difficulty, and that is why I am suggesting that if an honourable member wants to move an amendment at short-notice and wants the Chair to exercise his special discretion under rule 64 of the Rules, he must come prepared with copies of the amendment. Otherwise, it will be inconvenient.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, with respect to rules 79 and 80 which you have just referred to, I would like to point out that 10 days' notice is given when the Bill comes up for consideration. But, so far as this Bill, I mean the Finance (Sales Tax) is concerned, notice has not been given before this House. Ten days' notice is given when the Bill comes up for consideration and not from the day it is introduced—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Das, I think I was right and you misunderstood me. The Bill came from the other House and notice for consideration of the Bill has already been given by the Hon'ble Minister. So, these two rules 79 and 80 do apply.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: If notice for consideration is given, then it is the usual practice in this House to give us time fixing a particular day for the members to give notice of amendments either for circulation or for reference to the Select Committee. But we have got nothing of the sort here.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The notice was given for consideration and passing of this Bill by the Hon'ble Minister in charge some time ago. So there was ample time, and no fixing of a particular time was necessary.

Khan Bahadur M. A. MOMIN: Sir, this point about short-notice amendments was raised by me yesterday, and I pointed out the difficulties. I am grateful to you today for making an observation on this point and for reminding us about our duty. But in the rules you have quoted there is no such thing as the consent of the House being obtained for the acceptance by you of short-notice amendments. Yesterday, the amendments which were objected to by any member of the House were not taken into consideration, and you did not say anything about the consent of the House.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question regarding consent of the House was obvious.

Khan Bahadur M. A. MOMIN: Obvious but not compulsory.

Mr. PRESIDENT: It is compulsory in this sense that unless you supply the members with copies of your amendments, it is impossible for the members either to support or oppose the amendments. Just place yourself in the position of a member not moving an amendment, and you yourself, I am sure, will draw the attention of the Chair to the fact that you cannot make up your mind as there is no copy of amendment before you. Therefore, if a member wants to move an amendment he should take upon himself the responsibility of supplying sufficient number of copies of his amendments, otherwise how can the Chair use the discretion under section 64 of the rules? It will be unfair to the House. This is how the question of consent arises. If there is any objection, then the amendments should not be considered, because the members have no copies of the amendments before them, and the Chair has necessarily to refuse permission.

Mr. SULTANUDDIN AHMAD: Sir, are we to understand then that if a member wants to move a short-notice amendment, he should have ready as many copies of amendments as there are members of the House? If this is so, then there is no necessity for the consent of the House and the members thereof?

Mr. PRESIDENT: It depends on the nature of the amendment. Suppose it is a very long and very complex amendment then in that case, certainly the Chair can refuse permission.

GOVERNMENT BILLS.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order, order. Let us now take clause 3 of the Bengal Destitute Bill.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: Sir, I rise to a point of order with regard to the Bill itself. Yesterday, in placing amendment No. 10 before the House, it was read out as if it was an amendment to clause 13 and the motion was also put that clause 13 as amended be passed. Sir, looking at the agenda I find that there was no amendment to clause 13. What was proposed by Mr. Clarke was only that a new clause be added and when there is no amendment to a clause the new clause proposed to be added should be placed before the House as an independent amendment to the Bill itself and not as an amendment to a clause. I think, therefore, that the procedure has got to be regularised; otherwise it would be somewhat irregular and not in consonance with the rules of this House.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Thank you, Mr. Mukherjee. Yes, I agree that it is a separate clause and not an amendment to a clause. I remember that point. In fact, I was going to mention the matter. Therefore, just to regularise the position with reference to the point of order raised by Mr. Mukherjee, I would read out the new clause moved by Mr. Clarke yesterday. The question before the House is that after clause 13 of the Bill, the following new clause be added, namely;—

“14. The provisions of this Act shall be without prejudice to the provisions of the Bengal Vagrancy Act, 1943, and to the powers conferred by that Act for dealing with vagrants which shall remain in full force and effect.”

(The motion was agreed to.)

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: Sir, may I raise a point of order, again?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Yes, what is it?

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: Clause 13 will have to be read again.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Yes, I am doing so. The question before the House is that clause 13 stand part of the Bill.

(The motion was agreed to.)

Khan Sahib FARIDUDDIN AHMAD: It is a new clause that is being added; will it be numbered 13A, or 13B?

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: It will get a new number surely; or the whole thing will have to be re-numbered.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Yes. Now, Mr. Mukherjee you may move your motion.

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: I beg to move that to sub-clause (3) of clause 3 of the Bill, the following proviso be added, namely:—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Mukerjea, may I suggest that the amendment be moved by someone else and not by yourself?

Mr. BIREN ROY: I beg to move that to sub-clause (3) of clause 3 of the Bill, the following proviso be added, namely:—

“Provided that nothing in this sub-section shall be deemed to confer any power to enter into any dwelling house—

(a) at any time after sunset and before sunrise,

(b) at any other time without previously giving to the person in actual occupation thereof at least two hours' notice of his intention to do so.”

Mr. PRESIDENT: Amendment moved that to sub-clause (3) of clause 3 of the Bill, the following proviso be added, namely:—

“provided that nothing in this sub-section shall be deemed to confer any power to enter into any dwelling—

(a) at any time after sunset and before sunrise,

(b) at any other time without previously giving to the person in actual occupation thereof at least two hours' notice of his intention to do so.”

Dr. KUMUD SANKAR RAY: Sir, I do not understand the meaning of this amendment. The amendment gives two hours' notice but the culprit or the destitute may be running away in two hours—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Do you oppose it Dr. Ray?

Dr. KUMUD SANKAR RAY: I want some clarification on the point.

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Sir, honourable members may see that in the original clause we gave carte blanche to the officers concerned to enter any house and to remove the destitutes. But in obedience to popular wishes we have amended this clause, so that people may not be harassed in any way and the owner of the house may get sufficient notice before any officer enters his house for the purpose of trying to repatriate a destitute. So the question of running away does not arise, because if he runs away he does not get the benefit of repatriation.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: Sir, with regard to my amendment No. 4 "that sub-clause (3) of clause 3 of the Bill be deleted", I may say that this amendment was moved by me yesterday and then there was a proposal—

Mr. PRESIDENT: What is your point? Do you want to put it to vote?

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: It was not put yesterday and I thought you lost sight of it.

Mr. PRESIDENT: No, I have not lost sight of it. I will put it now.

The question before the House is that sub-clause (3) of clause 3 of the Bill be deleted.

(The amendment was negatived.)

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that to sub-clause (3) of clause 3 of the Bill, the following proviso be added, namely:—

"provided that nothing in this sub-section shall be deemed to confer any power to enter into any dwelling—

(a) at any time after sunset and before sunrise,

(b) at any other time without previously giving to the person in actual occupation thereof at least two hours' notice of his intention to do so."

(The amendment was agreed to.)

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: Sir, I beg to move that in clause 3 of the Bill, the following proviso be added, namely:—

"provided that no female destitute be apprehended by the use of any force or without her consent."

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Mukherjee, may I make a suggestion that in view of the recent Government amendment which has been carried in the shape of a proviso, will it not be better if you move "Provided further". You move your amendment again in the altered form.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: All right, Sir. I beg to move that in clause 3 of the Bill, the following proviso be added, namely:—

"Provided further that no female destitute be apprehended by the use of any force or without her consent."

Sir, in moving this amendment I would like to place a few facts before the House for the consideration of the honourable members. On the last occasion when female destitutes were being removed, force were used by male persons while apprehending them. I have seen with my own eyes that in some cases the male persons caught hold of the hair of the female destitutes and in spite of their cries and protestations they were carried away in the lorries to distant places. In one instance a lady was removed who was a maid-servant in the house of a gentleman and she protested saying that she was not a destitute, but she was removed. Then there is difference between a destitute and a vagrant. Vagrants are professional beggars. As regards the female destitute, we all know how they keep themselves within their huts in the villages. Their condition is so precarious that they are now forced to come away from their seclusion to look for shelter and food in the urban areas. Among the destitute females there might be some who at one time were respectable people, had their houses and means of their livelihood. We all know that in the villages even the ladies of the cultivating class do not come out of their houses, though there is some relaxation of this custom in the urban areas. Therefore, I would submit that the Hon'ble Minister should make a distinction between female and male destitutes. Females should never be handled in any event by the male persons and without their consent. Some female destitutes are being sheltered by residents of the towns who take pity at their condition. Those gentlemen give them shelter for some time to come, until they can provide themselves with better means of livelihood. So the female destitutes should not be removed without their consent. (Khan Bahadur M. A. MOMIN: Will they be left on the streets?) They may be left on the streets but I am not saying that. My point is that the female destitutes should never be taken away bodily without their consent. A civilized Government should not use physical force to remove a woman destitute and then place her in a place where she does not like to go. If she finds that she is absolutely helpless and is agreeable to go to a place where she can find shelter and food, then and then only she can be removed. She cannot remain in the street without food for days and days together. She must have the means of subsistence. If she is convinced that she will get food as well as shelter by being removed, then she will readily consent to the proposal of removal by Government. I, therefore, propose that in the case of a female destitute Government should make a distinction and decide that she should not be apprehended by use of any force or without her consent. With these words, I move the amendment for the consideration of the House.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Amendment moved: that in clause 3 of the Bill, the following proviso be added, namely:—

“Provided that no female destitute be apprehended by the use of any force or without her consent.”

Mr. BIREN ROY: Sir, may I say that the amendment just moved is practically out of order, but if—

Mr. PRESIDENT: I do not think you can say that.

Mr. BIREN ROY: Sir, I want to move that “provided further that no woman shall be removed except by another woman empowered in this behalf by the authorized officer”. If that be accepted, then we are moving this amendment.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order, order. What is the amendment? Will you let me have a copy of that?

Mr. BIREN ROY: All right, Sir, I am handing over a copy to you. I am reading out the amendment as it would be.

“Provided further that no woman shall be removed except by another woman empowered in this behalf by the authorised officer.”

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTY: Sir, may I with your permission and leave of the House add “avoiding force as far as practicable”.

Mr. PRESIDENT: What I would suggest is this. I would suggest an adjournment for 10 minutes to enable Government and the Opposition to come to an agreement on this point. We shall meet again at 2 o'clock.

After adjournment.

Mr. BIREN ROY: Sir, we have consulted and come to an agreement, as regards the wording of the amendment—

“that to sub-clause (2) of clause 3, the following proviso be added, viz. :—

‘Provided that no woman shall be removed by the use of force except by another woman empowered in this behalf by the authorised officer.’ ”

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Mukherjee, do you then in view of this amendment withdraw your amendment?

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: Yes, Sir, I beg leave of the House to withdraw my amendment.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Leave has been asked by Mr. Bankim Chandra Mukherjee to withdraw his amendment. Is it the pleasure of the House to give him this permission?

Honourable Members: Yes, Sir.

The amendment was then, by leave of the House, withdrawn.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Amendment moved:

“that to sub-clause (2) of clause 3, the following proviso be added, namely :—

‘Provided that no woman shall be removed by the use of force except by another woman empowered in this behalf by the authorised officer.’ ”

(The motion was agreed to.)

The motion that clause 3, as amended, stand part of the Bill was also agreed to.

Preamble.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is that the Preamble be added to the Bill.

(The motion was agreed to.)

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: I beg to move that the Bengal Destitute Persons (Repatriation and Relief) Bill, 1944, as settled in the Council, be passed.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: On a point of order, Sir. So far as the third reading is concerned, it cannot be taken up on the same day as the amendments are passed. So the third reading may be taken up on some other official day.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The Chair can always allow it. I do not think it is such an important matter that it should be held up. So I allow Government to move the motion for the third reading of this Bill.

Motion moved that the Bill, as settled in the Council, be passed.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, this is an emergency measure—practically giving an Ordinance a lease of life for two more years. In view of the fact that it is an emergency measure we accorded our consent to the principle of the Bill. But by the subsequent amendments, particularly by the adoption of the amendment of Mr. Clarke, the Bill has practically changed its character. It has been metamorphosed to such an extent that it is as the Bengali proverb says, “ছিল ঢেঁকি হোলো তুল কাঁটে কাটিতে নিৰ্ভুল” and now it has become a punitive measure. From the point of view of the religion of India—I may say not only of the Hindus but also of the Muslims—the whole spirit underlying this Legislative measure is repugnant. Our religion confers on a destitute person the right to approach a householder for charity with the name of God on his lips and commands the latter to offer alms according to his mite. The time-honoured custom of দান দিবা—giving a handful of foodgrain to the caller at the door has saved millions in a land where poor relief and the dole for the unemployed are not yet a State obligation. If there be adequate arrangements for the subsistence and rehabilitation of destitute persons at their usual places of residence as now assured by the Government, why should there be a flow of such persons into the city and its suburbs at all? They do not come here for sight-seeing but from the pangs of hunger. As a matter of fact, they did not come during 170 years before this famine. If there be an immigration of beggars into this area, Government officers can easily ascertain where they are coming from and arrange adequate relief measures in those localities so that, like water finding its own level, these men and women may instinctively return to their villages. The attachment of our rural population to village homes is proverbial and many western students of labour in this country have written volumes describing it as an impediment of the growth of industrial labour in India. The same complaint was heard the other day in connection with the recent decrease of raisings in collieries. It is a travesty of truth to say that Calcutta and suburbs offered ample facilities to the poor during those terrible months in regard to food and clothing. They died on the streets of Calcutta. If they still come, the reason is not that Calcutta is over-flowing with milk and honey for them but that there is sheer starvation in the countryside. This ancient land has seen many famines but the use of force to beggars and shutting of the door against humanity are unheard of. A society is judged by the treatment it metes out to its poorest members. The Ministry supported by European votes may chop off one after another the various limbs of this hoary civilisation but all should remember that while Rome, Egypt, Assyria and Babylon perished, we are still not a negligible lot in world economy only because of our anxiety to live and let live.

From the clauses of the Bill, the House will find that there is no attempt to provide these people with permanent rehabilitation in their hearths and homes. In section 4(I), the Bill states "The Provincial Government may provide and maintain together with the necessary equipment." Then again it states, "The Provincial Government shall make necessary arrangements for the maintenance of destitute persons while such persons are detained. As soon as they are let off and brought to their own houses in the rural areas, they are left out uncared for, and who knows that at the end of this year there might not be another famine and what would be the effect of this Bill? The people would be dying and there might be necessity for them to come back to Calcutta where they might get shelter and food but they would not be allowed to come to Calcutta or to the suburban areas. They would be throttled to death in their own villages.

In these circumstances, I beg to say that though I accorded my consent to the principle of the Bill when it was moved first, I find it difficult for me to accord my consent to the Bill in its present form. With these words, I oppose the passing of this Bill.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: Mr. President, Sir, I would like to say a few words on the third reading of the Bill. Some inconsistencies have crept in in view of the recent amendments which have been accepted by Government, though those inconsistencies were pointed out by us. But Government could not see their way to accept the Opposition point of view. I would refer, Sir, particularly to the amendment of clause 7 which stands thus after the amendment has been passed: "If after repatriation a destitute person again returns to the area in which he was apprehended and detained under section 3, for the purpose of begging, he shall be liable to be convicted." This is how the Bill at present stands. Now, if we refer to the provision of clause 4 of the Bill, we find that "the Provincial Government shall make necessary arrangements,.....etc." So, it is obligatory upon the Provincial Government to make provision for the maintenance of destitute persons. Under that clause it is mandatory upon Government to provide for the maintenance of these destitute persons. The Government take upon themselves the liability to maintain these destitutes. If that is so, then where is the room for saying again that persons who have been repatriated if they come back again will be convicted. I, therefore find, Sir, that these two clauses in the Bill seem inconsistent and clause 7 makes it a criminal offence. If it had been anything else, we could have ignored it. But here we are dealing with liberties of the people and talking of imprisonment. Sir, ordinarily all civilized governments are liable to maintain the people whom they govern. It is the primary liability of a government, if it calls itself a civilized government. I am not saying of any other form of government. The clause says that after repatriation if a destitute person returns to the urban area he shall be liable to imprisonment. Therefore, Sir, this clause is inconsistent with other clauses of the Bill. So, I oppose the Bill as a whole, because this provision of the Bill as it stands cannot be allowed to be passed without any opposition.

Mr. NUR AHMED: Sir, I rise to support the motion which has been moved by the Hon'ble the Revenue Minister who is piloting this Bill. I never expected any opposition from any side to a beneficial measure like this. Sir, I rubbed my eyes when I saw Messrs. Mazumdar and Mukherjee rise to oppose this motion for Third Reading of this Bill. The Ministry must be congratulated on piloting this most beneficial measure for the benefit of those unfortunate victims of famine. The Ministry have shown great courage and they have taken upon themselves the great responsibility of not only maintaining the destitutes but also repatriating them and also seeing that they are provided with the means of subsistence in their place of residence. An objection has been raised to the acceptance by the Government of an amendment regarding making the return of the destitute persons to their place of begging an offence. Sir, we must be grateful to the European Group for the two beneficial amendments sponsored by them. One of these is that before a destitute person is repatriated, it will be the duty of the authorized officer to see if there are sufficient arrangements for maintenance in his usual place of residence. That, I think, is a very great improvement made to the Bill. As regards the other amendment to which vehement objection has been taken, in my humble opinion, is that if a destitute returns to the place where he was apprehended, he may be hauled up before a court. Of course, at first sight it may appear to be a little harsh and reactionary; but on going through the other amendments which have been added to clause 7, it would appear that the mover of the amendment assured the House that first of all arrangements should be made for maintaining and housing the destitutes and only if after that they come back again to the urban areas for begging they should be punished. There is a clear check too regarding punishment. Clause 9 says that no prosecution for an offence under this Act may be commenced except by, or with the permission of, such officer as may be empowered in this behalf by the Provincial Government. That I think is a great check on punishment. The Provincial Government is in the best position to decide whether any prosecution will be lodged or not. By this the apparent harshness of the amendment is mitigated and it will be for the provincial Government to take action or not in their discretion. Taking that view, I think the amendment is not so objectionable as at first sight it seems to be. I again congratulate the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Bill for piloting this Bill for the good of the people. With these words, I support the motion.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Mr. President, Sir, there were certain wholesome provisions in the Bill and I had a mind to extend a qualified support to them; but certain amendments have since been made to the Bill which have nullified these wholesome provisions. It will appear that under section 13 of the Bill anything done or any action taken or any proceedings commenced in exercise of any power conferred by or under the Bengal Destitute Persons (Repatriation and Relief) Ordinance, 1943, shall, on the said Ordinance ceasing to be in operation, be deemed to have been made, done, taken or commenced in exercise of the powers conferred by or under this Act, as if this Act had commenced on the twenty-sixth day of October, 1943. Sir, what is the effect of this section 13? The effect will be that several thousands of destitutes who have been detained and maintained and ultimately repatriated to their homes are to be considered as having been dealt with under this Bill when passed into Act. Sir, the economic distress in Bengal threw them into such a terrible condition that there was no other alternative for them but to come to Calcutta and the suburbs to maintain themselves. If a similar situation arises next year and they come to Calcutta again, that act itself will be an offence under section 7. The Bill as it was drawn up was meant to meet a situation like that already dealt with under the Ordinance. The Bill is a temporary Bill. Power was taken by Government for the purpose of apprehending and detaining the destitutes and also for maintaining and repatriating them. And it was only under certain conditions, namely, disobedience and breach of discipline, etc. that they were made liable for punishment or imprisonment. But when suggestion was made from the European Group that whenever they will come as a destitute next time in Calcutta or its suburbs or to the urban areas they will be liable to the same punishment as in the case of disobedience of orders or breach of discipline, the Government did not recognise it as a retrograde step but actually welcomed it as an improvement on the provisions of the Bill. We do not understand how it is an improvement on the provisions of the Bill. I say, the amended provision of punishment is illegal, because the Bill intends that should a serious situation recur a large number of destitutes will have to come to Calcutta, its neighbourhood and other urban areas. In that event, these destitutes should be detained, maintained and fed and then repatriated to their homes—that is the purpose of the Bill. Now, Sir, provision has been made by certain amendments as a result of which these destitutes would come with Damocles' sword hanging on their heads. Government, in exercise of the powers conferred under rules 3, 4, 5 and 6, can detain, maintain, make arrangements for treatment in hospital when necessary and then repatriate them in good condition to their village home. But now by the amended provision, at the very outset, they can be arrested, prosecuted and sent to jail for three months. The whole purpose of the Bill has been made nugatory. Sir, things have come to such a sorry pass that under all circumstances the Ministry had to support this amendment brought by the European Group which had cast to the winds the main purpose of the Bill. Under the circumstances, Sir, I have been compelled to go against the motion for Third Reading of the Bill and oppose the Bill as a whole.

Mr. SACHINDRA NARAYAN SANYAL: Sir, I do not wish to take much time of the House. Simply I want to offer my suggestion that instead of hurrying through the Bill, in future Bills like this may be sent to Select Committee. But in this case I think the intention of the Government is to pass this Bill hurriedly only because it expires on the 13th March, 1944. But I think it is wise that Government should send such Bills to Select Committee as has been suggested by my friend Khan Bahadur Abdul Momiu. In this case, I think it is too late to do so. But I hope Government will kindly consider the desirability of Bills like this being sent to the Select Committee in future as it will save a lot of time of the House.

Mr. KADER BAKSH: Sir, I fail to understand how objection could have been taken to the motion before the House by the members opposite. They have not been able to show to us that the provisions of the Bill are unwholesome or that the Bill is not at all necessary at the present moment. Look at the condition prevailing in the countryside. These destitutes who are coming from the interior to town areas are not only responsible for affecting the sanitary condition of the towns but they do many acts which are not at all desirable. So a Bill like this is very necessary. My friends opposite, Mr. Mazumdar, Mr. Mukherjee and Mr. Das made an attempt in their speeches to show that this Bill will adversely affect the people who will come to Calcutta. But they have not given their suggestions. Now, if the provisions of the Bill in its operation hereafter show in any way that they are not working properly or that there is any defect, certainly, Sir, the Government can bring up an amending Bill at any moment. Even during the present session of the Council, Government can do so if they find that the provisions are not salutary. (Mr. HARIDAS MAJUMDAR: Yes, after 9 years.) Why after 9 years? You may get it within the next three or four months, say in June this year. These defects can be remedied. Sir, nobody denies that there is a necessity of a Bill like this. There has been a loud cry from amongst us and from very responsible members in the country that some provisions should be made for these people who are called destitutes and who are in distressed condition. In response to that, Government have taken this measure. There may be defects but they would be rectified as times pass. It is not possible to know the defects before the Bill is given effect to. Now, why should there be any cry in the House that this is not a salutary Bill, or that it has nullified the wholesome provisions of the Bill? I cannot understand that. Sir, I support the Bill as it stands now.

Mr. C. E. CLARKE: Mr. President, Sir, the Bengal Destitute Persons (Repatriation and Relief) Bill, 1944, is very definitely necessary, it is important and it is urgent. It is definitely one that should be applied with the fullest possible vigour contingent upon one or two points on which it is necessary that Government should be fully agreed. These points, Sir, formed the subject of the amendments moved by this party at our last sitting. We refer in particular to the desirability or otherwise of repatriating destitutes where conditions for rehabilitation do not exist or where the transport system has so deteriorated as to render it impossible to keep such areas properly supplied with food and other necessities of life. In supporting this measure, it is our considered opinion that it should be incumbent upon the "authorised officer" referred to in clause 7 of sub-clause (1) fully to satisfy himself that destitutes so repatriated will, in fact, be able to remain in their homes and subsist. And if there is the slightest shadow of doubt, our opinion is that they should be kept in places of detention until necessary arrangements can be made for permanent re-settlement. We realise that it is a matter of extreme urgency that destitutes should be sent back to their own localities at the very earliest possible moment; but until this can be done to the fullest satisfaction of Government and also without the likelihood of repatriated persons again leaving their homes, relief that this Bill is intended to give will not have been achieved. It, therefore, follows that there is no alternative but to make use of places of detention as referred to in clause 4 of sub-clause (1), and in this respect we refer to camps that were said to have been formed during the autumn of 1943, and in particular, to the Homes at Mahalandi that have taken over two years to be completed. Sir, we are not satisfied that the anticipated progress has been made in connection with these Homes and if this measure is to be prosecuted with any degree of success, very much energy is required. We cannot express ourselves too strongly on the delay that must hamper the application of the Bill now in its third reading and also the Bengal Vagrancy Act passed by this Council in September, 1943. Particularly, we would ask if a recent inspection has been carried out to keep the Government informed as to the progress and to the present conditions of the camps and Homes to which reference has been made. The problem resulting from destitution is necessarily inter-related with that of begging and we seek information as to what steps have been taken to prevent homeless people—particularly professional beggars—coming to the city—indeed in many cases returning to the city, having already been evacuated—as the signs are not wanting that once again the main streets of the city are becoming populated by these unfortunate people. If our information is correct, Homes and Camps are in existence and, in our opinion, no reason exists why full control should not be exercised.

With the approach of the hot weather, Sir, we view with some alarm the possibilities of the spreading of epidemic diseases due to the presence of large numbers of disease-carriers included among destitutes and beggars. It has to be remembered that famine conditions and high living-costs must have resulted in reduced power of resistance and deterioration in stamina of a very large section of city workers, thus rendering them vulnerable to scourges that are likely to impair the highly organized conditions of service imposed upon all sections of the community by war-time necessities. For these reasons, it is absolutely essential that the city streets shall be made free from sources of infection that may more easily be brought under control by the proper administration of this Bill.

Sir, we consider the time opportune to draw attention to the apparent encouragement that is being extended to destitutes who habituate the precincts of military centres in the hope and perhaps knowledge that they will be fed. While we do not doubt the good intentions and generosity of our soldiers who are only too ready to assist those less fortunate than themselves, such actions are a disservice to Government and to the public in general. They should, therefore, be discontinued so that responsible officials can be given every assistance in successfully operating this very necessary measure.

Sir, an honourable member has returned to the subject of my amendment to clause 7. I need only tell the House that in one case a destitute was found to have collected six free blankets by returning repeatedly after repatriation. Government must have powers to deal with such cases and may I add that clause 7 is permissive?

I congratulate the Hon'ble Minister on his handling the Bill and I support the motion.

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTY: Mr. President, Sir, I had no intention to intervene in this debate but the observations of the previous speaker has induced me to say something. This measure is certainly a salutary measure with the principle of which all sections of this House agree fully. So, it was only meet and proper that this Bill should have been passed without a single division or without a single amendment. But this thing could be achieved if only Government had taken the Opposition into their confidence and asked for real co-operation which this side of the House is always prepared to give if Government looks to the public interest. But this has never been accorded by Government, though this procedure is being followed all over the world. Now practically in every part of the world Opposition has ceased to function, and Government and the Opposition are acting in close collaboration for the interests of the public at large. But, here the attitude of Government is to please a particular section of the House and treat the other section, namely, the Opposition with scant courtesy. I find that my friend Mr. Kader Baksh was very jealous and was feeling very much vexed because of the Opposition's express disapproval of certain amendments. But I may remind him that the leader of his party, I mean Khan Bahadur Abdul Momin, also declared in the House that there was a lacuna in the Bill and if passed in its present form it would not serve the purpose properly. (Khan Bahadur M. A. MOMIN: Well, that has been removed.) Yes, removed, although not one of the amendments he had a mind to move was allowed. And even in spite of this fact my honourable friend Mr. Kader Baksh could not see any defect in the Bill. However, what has been done cannot be now undone. As Mr. Kader Baksh says the Act can be amended in three months' time if the Government like but I do not know whether this will ever be done. With these words, I do not support the motion of the Hon'ble Minister.

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEE: As I have already stated at the very initial stage this is an emergency measure meant to meet an emergent situation. During the last 5 months Government have repatriated about 45,000 destitutes from Calcutta alone and 25,000 from other cities. In removing these destitutes and repatriating them Government was perfectly aware of the serious responsibility it had to shoulder not only for their lodging but also for their food, clothing and medical treatment. I may inform the House that Government is now seriously considering a scheme of repatriation through which they propose to make adequate arrangements for a Workhouse and giving to these destitutes some kind of occupation. And we do hope that it will be possible for us to start such a workhouse very shortly and thereby provide occupation and afford a source of living to these destitute and also to other people whom we generally call landless labourers. I hope, Sir, that with the best co-operation of our countrymen, it will be possible for Government to achieve this end at no distant future. As regards the observation by Mr. Haridas Mazumdar I am thankful to him that in his eloquent address he has only supported our contention and has proved the urgency and absolute necessity for a Bill of the nature that has emerged out of this House. As regards the observations made by Mr. Bankim Chandra Mukherjee, I would only say that if he had kindly gone through all the clauses of the Bill separately he could have seen that all his points have been actually met. The only point, of course, that I cannot meet is his proposal to impose a fine upon a destitute instead of sending him to imprisonment. I do not know, Sir, how it is possible for any Government or for any Administration to realise any fine from a destitute person. I am thankful to the Maulana Sahib and other honourable members of the House who have made many constructive and useful suggestions. It is true that no Bill can be perfect. I am also thankful to the honourable members that it is mainly through their kind efforts that the Bill which is just emerging from this House will be free from all objectionable features and lacunae about which mention has been made in this House. I can also assure the House that if practical difficulties are found out later on, Government will take the earliest possible opportunity to remove them. I only hope that strict enforcement of this Act will not be necessary and the situation in the country will change for the better. I expect that with the best co-operation of the honourable members of this House and the people at large and with the blessings of God the situation will immensely improve in the near future, and it will not be necessary to take recourse to this measure in the distant future.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that the Bengal Destitute Persons (Repatriation and Relief) Bill, 1944, as settled in the Council, be passed.

(The motion was agreed to.)

The Bengal Non-agricultural Tenancy (Temporary Provisions) Extension Bill, 1944.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Saiyed MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Sir, I beg to move that the Bengal Non-Agricultural—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Before you move this motion Khan Bahadur Saheb, I should like to point out to you that in the printed copy of the Bill that has been circulated the Hon'ble Nawab Musharruff Hossain Khan Bahadur is mentioned as the member in charge, whereas you have given notice for moving this motion. This should have been corrected by Government.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Saiyed MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: I beg to move that the Bengal Non-Agricultural Tenancy (Temporary Provisions) Extension Bill, 1944, be taken into consideration.

In moving the motion I may say shortly that the object of the Bill is merely to extend the time of the Bill by another year. A temporary Act for preventing enhancement of the rents of non-agricultural tenants pending the passing of a comprehensive Act dealing with chandina rights was passed some three years ago (Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Four years, this is the fifth extension.) No, I think it is the fourth extension. However, the comprehensive Bill is ready and is going to be introduced in this session. But the time of the present Bill will expire in May, 1944, and if the comprehensive Bill is not passed into law by that time, there will be trouble; that is why it becomes necessary for further extension of one year. I hope this Bill will be passed unopposed.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Motion moved: that the Bengal Non-Agricultural Tenancy (Temporary Provisions) Extension Bill, 1944, be taken into consideration.

Mr. BIRENDRA KISHORE ROY CHOWDHURY: Sir, I oppose the consideration of the Bill. The Bill seems to be an attempt to secure the support of the under-tenants of the province. In its zeal to be popular with this section of the population, the Government has classed them with the ordinary tenants which they are not. The Bill seems to supplement the obstinacy of the under-tenants who, after they could get an access into the premises of the permanent tenants or landlords, will not now move, and will not even try to pay some valuable consideration for portions acquired by them. People sometimes let out a portion of their premises to some needy persons on small annual rent out of sheer pity. Tenants so doing will be highly prejudiced, if they lose their right of ejectment, even if the portions let out are wanted for charitable or religious purposes. And what will be the ultimate result?—

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Saiyed MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: On a point of order, Sir. Is that all relevant? He is mentioning about the Act itself. The present Bill is only for extending the time of the Act and not the comprehensive Bill which is contemplated to be brought in.

Mr. BIRENDRA KISHORE ROY CHOWDHURY: Sir, can I speak on the subject generally?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Yes; but you cannot refer to the Bill.

Mr. BIRENDRA KISHORE ROY CHOWDHURY: Sir, I am opposed to the extension of this Bill and as regards the principle of this Bill I want to say a few words.

Nobody will venture to let out his holdings for the simple apprehension that timid sub-tenants of today may be themselves the permanent co-sharers of the holdings tomorrow.

If one cannot let out portions of his premises for fear of ultimately losing it, he will think thrice before he buys any, because he cannot count upon it as a source of income, at least for some days. With plenty of holdings that could be let out being systematically left vacant, the really honest-intentioned people requiring accommodation will be faced with an artificial scarcity of the same.

Several Bar associations and a number of experts have sent memoranda to the Government criticising the Bill in its present form—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Roy Chowdhury, you are again referring to the coming Bill which has been mentioned in the Statement of Objects and Reasons. Government seeks to extend this measure pending the introduction of a permanent and more comprehensive legislation on the subject.

Mr. BIRENDRA KISHORE ROY CHOWDHURY: Sir, I have already said what I had to say in this matter. I have nothing further to say.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, it is an irony of fate that it has been left to the Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Saiyed Muazzamuddin Hosain, the Leader of the House, to move for the extension of the Bengal Non-Agricultural Tenancy (Temporary Provisions) Extending Bill, 1944, by one year. If I remember aright, and I speak subject to correction, it was from that side of the House, as the Leader of the Opposition at that time, he was vehemently opposing the extension of this Bill. Now, it has fallen to his lot to ask for the extension of time by one year more. I may adopt his own arguments which were used by him last year and tell him to his face that the consideration of the motion should be refused on his own grounds then advanced.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Mr. President, Sir, I also cannot but refer to the speech of the honourable mover of this motion, for last year it was he who was most vehement in opposing further extension to this Bill. The arguments that were advanced by him last year in refusing further extension to this Bill have far greater validity today. The Bill was almost in shape last year—at least that was what we were given to understand. I would like to know from the Hon'ble Minister why he could not give the final touches to the Bill during the last 10 or 11 months. Why could this Bill not be brought to the House and passed during the course of these months? Besides, in the present Bill which is sought to be extended, there are very serious defects. I wish to point out to the honourable members that if these serious defects are not remedied, definite hardship would be caused to a class of poor persons of the bustee areas of Calcutta. In the Bill which he proposes to extend for another year, there is a provision by which an under-tenant in bustee areas cannot be ejected during the duration of war for non-payment of rents. This is a good provision no doubt, because if they are ejected great hardship would be caused to them. But what about the hut-owners who have taken the land on lease from the landlords and let out the tenants? No protection has been given to them.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Saiyed MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: On a point of information, Sir, to which Bill he is referring?

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: I am referring to the Bengal Non-Agricultural Tenancy (Temporary Provisions) Extending Bill, 1944. The Hon'ble Minister ought to know that as soon as he brought this extending Bill he is liable to criticism for the provision of the Bill which he seeks to continue. I am suggesting that some protection should be given to the hut-owners. In the Bill there is no protection whatsoever to this important section of the people of this town, namely, the owners of huts in the bustee areas. These hut-owners are people who are often poor persons and who have invested a few hundreds of rupees in taking land on lease from landlords for building bustee huts thereon. These bustee hut-owners who have improved the lands are subject to ejectment without notice and many of them have been actually ejected. Many cases are lying at the moment and attempts have been made to draw the attention of the Hon'ble Minister and his predecessor to the very serious nature of the case. That is why pressure has come continually from us on this side or the other side of the House. I would like to appeal to the Hon'ble Minister who has changed his opinions with the change of his geographical position in this House. I would also like to remind him that we have pressed that a permanent measure should be put on the Statute Book as early as possible, I think, Sir, that there is no reason whatever for further dilatory tactics of this nature in bringing about a measure which is needed and which is almost complete, as such delay is causing hardship to a large number of people. I think that if the House throws out this Bill today, it will be putting pressure upon the Government so that a permanent Bill may be put on the Statute Book. In the Statement of Objects and Reasons, you will find, Sir, that this Bill is to expire on the 29th of May, 1944. There is yet sufficient time, if the Government so desire, to pass a permanent Bill during this session. There is no reason why this temporary measure should be again brought before us to extend its term by another year. This is simply postponing the Bill and refusing to legislate and refusing to redress the grievances of those who are suffering today. In view of these circumstances, I feel that we on this side have no option but to refuse consideration of this Bill.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Saiyed MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Sir, I certainly admit that I opposed the extension of the Act last year, and I would not have moved this unless a comprehensive Bill was going to be introduced this session. As a matter of fact, it was put in for introduction even in the Order Paper, but on account of certain technical difficulty it is being delayed for a few days. But, I believe it will be placed before the House within a few weeks. Unless I were sure about it I would not have moved this Bill at all. So, when I give this assurance that the comprehensive Bill is going to be placed before the House this session, there should be no objection to the motion for consideration being accepted.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that the Bengal Non-Agricultural Tenancy (Temporary Provisions) Extending Bill, 1944, be taken into consideration.

(The question was agreed to.)

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Sir, may we know when amendments are to be sent? You fixed a day for the motion for consideration. But amendments to that motion are motion for circulation or for reference to the Select Committee. It is only after the consideration motion is agreed to that the question of amendments to the Bill clauses comes in.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Kabir, you are not exactly correct. 14th was the last date for putting in amendments to the motion for consideration and 15th was the last date for putting in amendments to the clauses of the Bill.

The question that clause 1 stand part of the Bill was then put and agreed to.

The question that clause 2 stand part of the Bill was then put and agreed to.

The question that the Preamble be added to the Bill was then put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Saiyed MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Sir, I beg to move that the Bengal Non-Agricultural Tenancy (Temporary Provisions) Extending Bill, 1944, as settled in the Council, be passed.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Sir, in view of the assurance which the Hon'ble Minister has given—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order, order, Mr. Kabir. I have not yet placed the motion before the House. Motion moved: that the Bengal Non-Agricultural Tenancy (Temporary Provisions) Extending Bill, 1944, as settled in Council, be passed. Yes, Mr. Kabir.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Sir, in view of the assurance which the Hon'ble Minister has given that the comprehensive Bill will be introduced this very session, it is not my intention to oppose the third reading of the Bill; but I would at the same time make certain suggestions to him. Since a comprehensive Bill is going to be introduced during this very session, I would re-emphasise and draw his attention to the point which I have already submitted, namely, that in the Bill as it now stands, one half of the picture only is visible and the other half is not complete. The case of the under-tenants has been dealt with but the case of the tenants, those who are directly under the landlords has not been considered at all in the Bill that was passed in 1940. When the Hon'ble Minister proposes to bring in a new comprehensive Bill, I take it that he will include a provision in it which will meet the case of the tenants also. I would also ask him to keep these points in mind. Many ejection suits are actually lying with the High Court today and they too ought to be considered. He may probably be aware of the fact that the Minister holding the portfolio about a year and half ago, gave certain assurances to the hut-owners of Calcutta. He held out the hope that he would try his best to redress their grievances. After the unfortunate dissolution of the last Ministry and the sudden transference to power to the present Ministry through the agency of a certain personality who shall remain nameless, after that unfortunate event the present Ministry has been simply sleeping over this matter, and that in spite of many reminders. I would ask my honourable friend to consult his colleague Mr. Shahid Suhrawardy as to the assurance which he himself gave in this respect at the Muhammad Ali Park where he proclaimed before a large number of hut-owners in Calcutta that as soon as he was able to come back to power, he would try to redress their grievances. I may also ask the Honourable the Leader of the House to enquire of his colleague whether it is not a fact that reminders were sent to Mr. Suhrawardy and a deputation waited on him drawing attention to this matter after evasive replies from him, so much so that some of them who were vehement supporters of Mr. Shahid Suhrawardy have now submitted a representation to him that—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Kabir, you need not refer to these personal matters in connection with the provisions of this Bill, to what happened outside this Chamber. This House had no official knowledge of these affairs.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: All right, Sir, I submit to your ruling. But I think, I am allowed to put it in this form. When the Government are bringing comprehensive legislation before the House, we expect that it will not contain any glaring defects. We would ask our friend accordingly to follow the advice given to him only yesterday by his leader, I refer to Khan Bahadur Momin, not to hurry the Bill through the House but to give it ample time to consider the provisions of the Bill. I can assure him that if he keeps these points in mind, and safeguards the interests of the hut-owners and other poor tenants and takes the Bill in hand with the co-operation of the different sections of the House, then we on this side of the House shall not be failing in that co-operation.

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: Sir, may I say first of all that no assurance has been given—

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Yes, Sir, an assurance has been given by the Honourable Leader of the House some moments ago that a comprehensive Bill will be introduced during this session.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order, order. The question before the House is that the Bill as settled in the Council, be passed.

(The motion was agreed to.)

Mr. PRESIDENT: The House now stands adjourned till 2-15 p.m. tomorrow.

Adjournment.

The Council then adjourned till 2-15 p.m. on Friday, the 18th February, 1944.

BENGAL LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL DEBATES

First Session, 1944—No. 9.

THE COUNCIL met in the Legislative Chamber of the Legislative Building, Calcutta, on Friday, the 18th February, 1944, at 2-15 p.m., being the ninth day of the First Session of 1944, pursuant to section 62(2)(a) of the Government of India Act, 1935.

Mr. President (the Hon'ble Sir BIJOY PRASAD SINGH ROY, K.C.I.E.) was in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Paddy seeds for the aman crops in Noakhali.

55. Khan Bahadur ABDUL COFRAN: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Agriculture Department be pleased to state—

- (a) what quantity of paddy seeds for the aman crops has been sanctioned for the district of Noakhali;
- (b) what portion of it has already been distributed;
- (c) what are the quantities received by respective unions and what are the dates of their distribution;
- (d) from where and whom these seeds were purchased and what was the quantity purchased from each;
- (e) if he has received any complaints against the method and agency of this distribution; and
- (f) if he contemplates any change in the method and agency of future distribution?

MINISTER in charge of the AGRICULTURE DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Saiyed Muazzamuddin Hosain): (a) 30,000 maunds.

(b) 20,772 maunds (including 510 maunds from Government farms).

(c) Union figures are not readily available. Subdivisional and thana figures are given below:—

Subdivision.		Thana.	Quantity.
			Mds.
Sadar	...	(1) Sudharam	... 3,135
		(2) Lakshmipur	... 1,178
		(3) Begumganj	... 4,173
		(4) Senbag	... 2,021
		(5) Companyganj	... 707
		(6) Raipura	... 403
		(7) Ramganj	... 200
		(8) Sandwip Island	... 3,035
Feni	...	(9) Feni	... 1,057
		(10) Chhagalnaya	... 263
		(11) Parashuram	... 2,848
		(12) Sonagazi	... 1,752
			... 20,722

Dates of distribution—from May to August, 1943.

(d) Excepting a small quantity procured from Tippera district the bulk of the seeds was purchased from within the district.

(e) Yes.

(f) The question of distribution of seeds through a special staff is under consideration.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state the reason why Union figures are not yet available—even at a distant date like this—arising out of (c)?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Saiyed MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: It will involve considerable labour and cost to find out the figures.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state when this question was tabled?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Saiyed MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Of course, I cannot say exactly when the question was actually tabled. But I may say that it would have involved considerable labour and cost and it would not have been worthwhile to collect figures union by union.

Social Hygiene.

56. Mr. NUR AHMED: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Public Health and Local Self-Government Department be pleased to state if any measures have been adopted by the Government of Bengal to spread knowledge about social hygiene in Bengal? If so, what are they? If not, why not?

(b) Have the Government of Bengal made any arrangements for facilities of diagnosis and treatment of persons suffering from venereal diseases in Bengal and for the investigation into the sources of infections of these diseases? If so, what are they?

(c) Do the Government propose to carry on any propaganda for the spread of the knowledge about prevention and cure of venereal diseases in the municipal areas and to introduce elementary course of sex education in selected high schools and colleges of Bengal? If not, why not?

Mr. BIREN ROY, Parliamentary Secretary (on behalf of the Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi Jalaluddin Ahmad): (a) Nothing has hitherto been done to spread knowledge of social hygiene. A post of Director of Social Hygiene has, however, been recently created and an expert has been appointed. His duties are (i) to organise venereal diseases clinics in towns and rural areas, inspect them and to see that proper diagnosis and treatment are carried out, and (ii) to arrange for propaganda by posters, magic-lantern slides, etc., which may be considered necessary for educating the people with a view to reducing the incidents of venereal diseases among the civil population.

(b) Government of Bengal have recently established five clinics for men and two clinics for women for treatment of venereal diseases in Calcutta. There is also another clinic for the treatment of seamen suffering from such diseases. Government are considering the desirability of taking measures for compulsory medical examination and treatment of prostitutes suffering from venereal diseases.

(c) The first part of the question is disposed of by replies to questions (a) and (b).

As regards introducing a course for sex education in schools and colleges, Government have taken no steps yet and there are obvious difficulties in the way. Also before taking such a step, public opinion will have to be consulted. Government have, however, before them a scheme for appointment of medical men for teaching hygiene in high schools and for examination of health of school children where the return of normal times makes doctors available.

Mrs. LABANYAPROBHA DUTT: Arising out of (a) and (b), does the Hon'ble Minister think it advisable to open birth-control clinics with women health visitors in bustee areas and in industrial areas near the labourers' quarters, so that the spread of venereal diseases may be checked at its root?

Mr. BIREN ROY: Government have already taken some steps and will certainly consider the suggestion favourably specially in regard to the bustee areas people and industrial areas people.

Mrs. LABANYAPROBHA DUTT: Arising out of reply to (b), will the Hon'ble Minister consider the question of increasing the number of clinics for women to at least 5, as their need is more urgent?

Mr. BIREN ROY: If sufficient number of trained doctors are available and if instruments are also available, Government will certainly consider the suggestion favourably.

Mrs. LABANYAPROBHA DUTT: Will the Hon'ble Minister please state where these clinics for men and women are situated?

Mr. BIREN ROY: For men, Belgatchia Medical College Hospital, Medical College Hospital, Campbell Hospital, National Medical School Hospital and Sambhunath Pandit Hospital. For women, Dufferin Hospital and another hospital at Alipore.

Mrs. LABANYAPROBHA DUTT: Is it not possible to open annexes for women too in those hospitals where centres for males have been opened?

Mr. BIREN ROY: Sir, I have already answered that question saying that if sufficient number of trained doctors are available and instruments are available, they would open more centres for women. But Government would not consider at the present moment the question of attaching women centres with male centres.

Mrs. LABANYAPROBHA DUTT: Arising out of replies to (a) and (c), does the Hon'ble Minister think it advisable to make arrangements for elementary courses of lectures on Social and Sex Hygiene specially in classes IX and X of Girls' High Schools and in the 1st and 2nd year classes in Girls' Colleges?

Mr. BIREN ROY: Government have already got a scheme before them, as has already been stated by me in reply to the main question, for appointing medical men for teaching hygiene in high schools and for examination of the health of school children. In that reply it has also been stated that there are obvious difficulties in the way in that public opinion will have to be consulted and if opinion comes from progressive women Government would certainly consider this matter favourably.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Will the Government inform the House the name of the gentleman who has been appointed Director of Social Hygiene to teach social hygiene and his qualifications?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Does that question arise?

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: But in the answer it has been given that "A post of Director of Social Hygiene has, however, been recently created".

Mr. BIREN ROY: He has been appointed on Rs. 1,000 per month. He is trained abroad in venereal diseases.

Mrs. LABANYAPROBHA DUTT: May I have the name of that gentleman?

Mr. BIREN ROY: Dr. Sourin Ghose.

Mr. NUR AHMED: Will the Parliamentary Secretary please state if there is any scheme for starting of clinics in mofussil centres?

Mr. BIREN ROY: As has already been stated by me, more clinics will be opened in mofussil areas as soon as more instruments and doctors are available and also with the return of normal times.

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: Sir, there are two short-notice questions, one by Mr. Haridas Mazumdar and the other by Mr. Humayun Kabir. Shall I read out the question first?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Yes, I think that will be better.

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY:

Short Notice Question by Mr. Haridas Mazumdar—

(a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Civil Supplies Department be pleased to state if he is aware that the supply of the bad quality of rice is causing serious distress and the outbreak of diseases like beri-beri in the city?

(b) Is he aware that many persons are foregoing their whole quota of rice on account of the bad quality supplied?

(c) Does he propose to permit individuals to import from outside Calcutta the amount of rice which they have actually foregone from the sanctioned ration?

Answer—

(a) I have received complaints of the bad quality of rice in some shops and equally I have received reports that in certain other shops the quality has been very good. Steps are being taken to ensure that all rice issued from the ration golas are of good quality. I am not aware that the supply of this bad quality of rice has caused serious distress, as it has already been open to ration card-holders to purchase wheat products instead. I have no information regarding outbreak of diseases like beri-beri in the city due to any bad quality of rice which may have been supplied.

(b) It is possible that many persons have taken atta instead of rice. I am fully aware of the fact that many persons laid by large stocks of rice previous to the introduction of ration and are utilising these stocks instead of purchasing rice from the ration shops.

(c) No; it is proposed however to issue an order which will enable licenses to be given to persons to import into Calcutta rice or paddy from their own lands outside the rationed area up to a limit of 3 maunds ration per individual, the ration being computed at 30 seers per person per month. Equivalent quantities will be cancelled on the ration card at the time of granting licenses.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Out of one of the answers given by the Hon'ble Minister that he has received complaints of bad quality of rice in some shops, will he take steps to remedy the state of affairs immediately so that this rice is replaced by good quality rice?

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: Sir, as I have already informed the House, we have been taking steps to see that the godown of the ration authorities are stocked with good quality rice which the public will get at the next issue.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: May we then take it that from this week bad quality rice will not be available from any of these shops?

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: We hope so.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: With regard to the acceptance by the Hon'ble Minister of one part of the suggestion in the question, namely, that he will permit those who have lands of their own to indent rice into Calcutta, will he state the reason why he does not propose to extend the same facilities to those who have no lands of their own?

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: Sir, I have made a statement here not in acceptance of any proposal of the honourable member. The honourable member who put the question had proposed that I should allow imports to the extent which a person in Calcutta had refrained from taking from the ration shops. My proposals are totally irrespective of anything of that nature. I am permitting persons who have lands outside Calcutta and who grow their own paddy to import their own paddy from their own lands to Calcutta and not as a sort of general purchase.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Will it be confined only to paddy?

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: No, rice comes out of paddy. The point is that they do not grow rice.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Will the Hon'ble Minister please state the reason why he finds it difficult to give the same facilities to those who have no lands of their own and who are prepared to indent good quality of rice to Calcutta?

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: The answer is obvious; because we do not want to flood the markets of Bengal with purchasers from Calcutta.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Does the Hon'ble Minister think that the amount of purchase by individuals or families will be such that it will lead to over-flooding of the markets of Bengal by purchasers from Calcutta?

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: Yes, Sir, I hold that view most definitely.

Mr. HARIDAS MAJUMDAR: Is the Hon'ble Minister aware that the supply of bad rice or paddy brings into existence black markets?

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: I suppose it might, but it is rather a theoretical question.

Mr. PRESIDENT: You are asking for an expression of opinion.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: Will the Hon'ble Minister state if the persons who have already brought rice from their lands in the mofussil and which has been confiscated, that quantity will be released if they surrender their ration cards to the extent of the rice so bought?

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: Yes, it could be done up to the limit of 30 seers per head.

Sir, there are two other questions asked by Mr. Humayun Kabir to which I would like to give an answer if you allow.

The following is the question by Mr. Humayun Kabir:—

(a) Is the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Civil Supplies Department aware that the absence of any gradation is causing serious distress and disease to all classes of people?

(b) Does he propose to classify all Punjab atap rice, known as Dehra Dun Banasmati, as first quality rice, average Bengal rice of the type of banktusi, dadkhani, etc., as second quality rice and the rest as inferior rice?

(c) If so, does he propose to fix the price per md. of inferior rice at Rs. 10, of second quality at Rs. 12 and the first quality at the present rate or at any other rate he may consider suitable?

Answer.—The matter is under consideration.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Is the Hon'ble Minister aware that such a system of gradation has actually been introduced in Bombay and is working there satisfactorily?

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: A system of gradation has been introduced there and we are considering whether we shall not also introduce that system here; but I may tell the honourable member for his information that if he wants to have first quality rice of Bombay, he will have to pay Rs. 40 per md. and not Rs. 16-4 per md.

The next question of Mr. Kabir is as follows:—

Mr. Humayun Kabir.—Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Civil Supplies Department be pleased to state—

- (a) Whether any special provision has been made for the supply of better quality rice to Firpo's, Great Eastern Hotel, Grand Hotel and similar other hotels; and
- (b) if the answer to part (a) is in the affirmative, if the Government propose to make similar provision for the supply of better quality of rice to such householders as desire it?

Answer.—

(a) No;

(b) does not arise.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Is the Hon'ble Minister aware that the quality of rice supplied to these hotels is of the finest?

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: No, Sir. I have not taken rice at any of these hotels.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Does not the Hon'ble Minister wish to take some rice at any one of these hotels?

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: I have given up taking rice ever since the rice shortage, Sir.

Issue of Ration Cards for "bhog" and other religious ceremonies of Hindus.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Yesterday I mentioned about ration cards for bhog and for sradh and other ceremonies of the Hindus and the Hon'ble Minister was pleased to state that he would do something very soon. But up till now the promise has not been implemented by any issue of press-note. I would request the Hon'ble Minister to let this House know when he is going to issue a press note inviting the sebaits and trustees to apply for ration cards, in order to arrange bhog and for sradh and other religious ceremonies.

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: I have been trying to gather opinion from official as well as non-official Hindus on this question and I must say that their advice as to what the Government should do in this behalf differs widely. For this purpose, I am going to appoint a committee of representative Hindus with whom I propose to discuss the question of bhog-ration and then come to some sort of understanding with them regarding the issue of ration cards for bhog. I similarly propose to appoint a committee of the representatives of any other community if they come forward for the purpose of asking special privileges for their religious ceremonies.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: When is it likely that this discussion and consultation will come to an end and ration cards will be issued for bhog?

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: It is very difficult to say that. It depends so much on the reasonableness that may be shown by the parties concerned.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Will you please realise the urgency of issuing ration cards to the sebaits for bhog? It is a very urgent matter.

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: No case has yet been brought to my notice to show that bhogs have been suspended owing to the non-issue of ration cards. I do not know where the supplies come from. But they seem to come from some sources for the performance of obligatory religious ceremonies.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Is the Hon'ble Minister hinting that black-marketing is in operation in Calcutta?

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: I am suggesting that there is plenty of stocks.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Is the Hon'ble Minister aware that it is obligatory for the Hindus to offer bhog to their deities and if no ration card is issued the Hon'ble Minister presumes that supplies are made available through black market. Thus, he is encouraging black-marketing.

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: I have just told you that there are large stocks with the persons concerned and they get their supplies from that for bhog.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, the Hon'ble Minister is building his answers on stocks and therefore may I ask him again if his research in this subject is at an end?

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: I have already answered that question.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, the difficulty is that the Hon'ble Minister wants to have some concrete example of non-availability of ration for bhog. However, I am prepared to read a letter to show that.

Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: Give it to me in my chamber.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Mazumdar, you can hand over that slip to the Hon'ble Minister in his Chamber.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: All right, Sir. I was going to read the slip because the Hon'ble Minister was saying that he was prepared to receive any notice or letter regarding the difficulties experienced by a shebait in respect of bhog.

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: Yes, Sir, nothing has been received by me yet. Nobody has brought it to my notice that the *shebait*s were experiencing difficulties in regard to bhog. However, if the honourable member wishes to bring anything to my notice, he is at liberty to do so. But I submit, Sir, that this handing over of letter does not arise here at all. Because this is not the forum to bring in a matter like that.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, in view of the urgency of the matter, —and there are no two opinions about its urgency,—we demand that a time-limit be given within which it will be possible for the Hon'ble Minister to bring about a solution of this problem (Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: But why you are telling him that?). I have to—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order, order. Mr. Mazumdar, you cannot go on talking to your neighbours in that way. If you have got to say anything, please address the Chair.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, I want an assurance that within a reasonable time the Hon'ble Minister will arrange the matter to the satisfaction of the Hindu population of Bengal, particularly of Calcutta. The proposal made by him amounts virtually to shelving the matter. He wants to appoint a committee. He knows perfectly well that the *shebait*s are experiencing much difficulty and their stocks, if they have or had any, as has been spoken of by the Hon'ble Minister, are well-nigh exhausted. This matter does not brook any further delay. I request the Hon'ble Minister to issue a press-note at once asking for applications from the *shebait*s to come forward with statements of their requirements.

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: I could not exactly follow what the honourable member is wanting. I am going to appoint a committee which, I hope, will come to a conclusion soon but how long it will take is more than I can say just now.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, last time the Hon'ble Minister promised to solve this question of bhog. Now he comes with the promise of appointing a committee.

Mr. PRESIDENT: You cannot say that now. He has given a definite promise that he hopes to solve this problem soon.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: But he gave a definite promise before this. So, when will this long-drawn up affair come to an end?

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: Sir, I propose to appoint this committee in the course of today or tomorrow.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: Sir, may I request the Hon'ble Minister to pass orders to the *shebait*s so that they may get their bhog-rations pending the decision of the committee. Because, I have received definite information from the *shebait*s of the Kalighat temple that they have been experiencing considerable difficulties as regards the bhog every day.

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: If the honourable member is referring to the applications from the *shebait*s of public temples, I think that could be done; because I do feel that they have a case. I hope the committee will consider this question of how much rice should be allotted to a temple specially in view of the fact that the bhog to the deities is sold to the public.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: It may be known to all honourable members here that many people come to the Kalighat temple from distant places and it is, therefore, essential that they should be fed by the *shebait*s of the temple. It is their custom. So, I would request the Hon'ble Minister to come to a decision immediately.

Mr. PRESIDENT: That disposes of all the questions.

Amendment to rule 9 of the Bengal Legislative Council Procedure Rules.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Notice of a motion for leave to amend rule 9 of the Bengal Legislative Council Procedure Rules, has been received from Mr. Haridas Mazumdar.

As required under sub-rule (2) of rule 110 of the said Rules, I now read the draft amendment proposed by the member, namely:—

“9. If any member is unacquainted or not sufficiently acquainted with the English language he may speak in any other language.”

Those members who are in favour of leave to move the motion being granted will please rise in their places.

As more than 13 members have risen, leave has been granted.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Nur Ahmed.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, should I not move this today?

Mr. PRESIDENT: No, not today. A date has to be fixed by Government.

Khan Bahadur ABDUL HAMID CHOWDHURY: Sir, first it should be allowed to be referred to a committee.

Mr. PRESIDENT: A date will have to be fixed for reference of this matter to a committee and that will be done on a non-official day. Nothing is to be done today.

The Bengal Public Gambling (Amendment) Bill, 1940.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Now I will take up unofficial Bills. Mr. Nur Ahmed.

Mr. NUR AHMED: Sir, I beg to move that the Bengal Public Gambling (Amendment) Bill, 1940, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration.

Sir, this Bill was not considered, clause by clause, as Mr. Humayun Kabir wanted to put in some amendments. So time was taken.

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: Sir, there are some consequential amendments that have to be moved. Will you kindly accept a short-notice amendment? In accordance with your ruling, I ordered for 60 copies of amendments but they have not yet been received. But anyhow this is a consequential amendment which is sought to be moved. I am reading out the amendment, which runs as follows: "In clause 1, for figure 43, the figure 44 be substituted".

Mr. PRESIDENT: I do not think there can be any objection to your moving that.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Sir, I believe the Secretary has the power to make corrections of this type.

Mr. PRESIDENT: No, they are not corrections of a clerical nature. They are more than that.

NON-OFFICIAL BILLS.The Bengal Public Gambling (Amendment) Bill, 1940.Clause 1.*

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is that clause 1 stand part of the Bill.

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: I beg to move that in clause 1, in place of the figures "1943", the figures "1944" be substituted.

(The amendment was agreed to.)

The question that clause 1, as amended, stand part of the Bill was then agreed to.

Clause 3.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is that clause 3 stand part of the Bill.

I take it that the mover of the Bill has no further information to supply to the House.

(The motion was agreed to.)

Clause 5.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is that clause 5 stand part of the Bill.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: May I enquire what has happened to clause 4?

Mr. PRESIDENT: That clause has been deleted.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Then the clauses should perhaps be re-numbered!

Mr. PRESIDENT: Yes. I believe there are no speakers on clause 5.

The question that clause 5 stand part of the Bill was then agreed to.

Clause 6.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is that clause 6 stand part of the Bill.

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: I beg to move that in clause 6, the figure 3 be omitted.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, will the Hon'ble Minister please explain what is the implication of this omission?

Mr. PRESIDENT: I hope the Hon'ble Minister will please explain the purpose of his amendment; otherwise it becomes difficult for honourable members to follow the matter at times.

The question before the House is that in clause 6 the figure 3 be omitted.

(The question was agreed to.)

The question that clause 6, as amended, stand part of the Bill was then agreed to.

Clause 7.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is that clause 7 stand part of the Bill.

(The question was agreed to.)

Clause 10.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is that clause 10 stand part of the Bill.

(The question was agreed to.)

Clause 11.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is that clause 11 stand part of the Bill.

(The question was agreed to.)

Mr. PRESIDENT: I think there should be an amendment to the Title to be consistent; because the figures "1943" should be "1944".

Mr. NUR AHMED: May I move a short-notice amendment that in the Preamble and Long Title of the Bill in place of "1943", the figures "1944" be substituted.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is that in place of "1943", the figures "1944" be substituted.

(The motion was agreed to.)

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is that the Preamble and the Long Title of the Bill, as amended, stand part of the Bill.

(The motion was agreed to.)

Mr. NUR AHMED: I beg to move that the Bengal Public Gambling (Amendment) Bill, 1940, as settled in the Council, be passed.

Sir, in moving this motion I accord my hearty thanks to the honourable members of the House and also to the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Department. I am grateful to them for according their whole-hearted support to this important piece of legislation. I first introduced the Bill in 1937 and as my first term of membership expired, it was again brought in in 1940. It was circulated several times for eliciting public opinion and a large volume of opinions was received in support of the clauses of the Bill. In this Bill very important changes are going to be made. There is one sort of gambling which is practiced in carnivals known as skill of the hand. This gambling has been made punishable under this Bill. Gambling has increased to a great extent and it is now found in every town in Bengal and also in the remote villages causing great suffering to the poor people. The definition has been thoroughly recast in the light of the present condition and has been made up-to-date. Now, according to the Bill, the instruments of gaming include any article used as a subject, means or appurtenance of or for the purpose of carrying on or facilitating or in connection with gaming and any books, lists, tickets, form or other document or documents intended to be used as a register or record or evidence of gaming. In the old Act the words used were "any article for gaming". I have added all these words in order to make the Bill comprehensive and wide enough. Also a definition of the term "common gaming" has been given. By all these changes many forms of gambling which used to go unpunished have been made punishable. Sir, gambling in a vessel has also been included. These are the most important changes and there is another change regarding punishment. There was only one sort of punishment in the old Act. Now, by this amendment, punishment for the first, second, third and subsequent offences has been provided. Another new thing has been added to the Bill and by that the scope of the Bill has been widened. Formerly, sections 7 and 11 were applied only to the city of Calcutta and section 13 was applied to the whole of Bengal. The other sections of the Act would have to be extended by notification to be published by the Provincial Government. Gambling increased in many districts as a result of these sections not being applied to the districts. Now, by this amendment all the provisions of the Gambling Act of 1867 have been extended to the whole of Bengal except Calcutta, because in Calcutta the Police Act contains a similar provision.

Sir, I again thank the honourable members and the Hon'ble Minister for supporting this Bill.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Motion moved: That the Bengal Public Gambling (Amendment) Bill, 1940, as settled in the Council, be passed.

(The motion was agreed to.)

The Advocates' Robes Bill, 1941.

Rai Bahadur BROJENDRA MOHAN MAITRA: Sir, I beg to move that the Advocates' Robes Bill, 1941, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration.

Sir, on the consideration motion I do not wish to make a long speech, because I have said what I had to say. It is practically a one-clause Bill and its purpose has been fully explained to the honourable members in my previous speeches. It has now passed through the Select Committee and emerged with slight alteration by way of fixing the time for making the provisions compulsory. This was rendered necessary by the exigencies of the war which have made a new costume rather costly and it was therefore thought expedient to keep the new robe optional during the pendency of the war which might not terminate within six months. The Select Committee has therefore suggested in clause 3 that the robe will be compulsory after six months of the cessation of the war or after six months of the publication of the Act whichever is later. The only other amendment made by the Committee is to provide an exception to the general rule in favour of the Advocates-General who wear a special robe by custom. Sir, I commend the Bill as modified by the Select Committee for the acceptance of the House.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Motion moved: that the Advocates' Robes Bill, 1941, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA DUTTA: Sir, I want to speak on this motion.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Yes, you may speak.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA DUTTA: Sir, I am sorry I could not be present at the meetings of the Select Committee—owing to my absence from town for over 2 months for reasons over which I had no control. I signed the Report subject to my note of dissent where I have given expression to my views. I hope the honourable members have gone through it. Sir, this House as the House of Elders has earned the reputation of being a body which can dispassionately discuss and understand each other's views sympathetically and then come to a decision. They are the custodians of fair-play, equity and good conscience, and as such they will approach this particular Bill, weigh its usefulness, assess its equity and then decide the issue with a clean conscience. Sir, this is a Bill which wants to take away the very ancient privileges of a particular section of lawyers, I mean, the Barristers, in the matter of their robes which have been given to them by the Inns of Court in London, and which they have been wearing, I think, for over five or six centuries, or even more. I think it dates from the 13th century. Sir, what is the grievance of my friend who wants to take away this robe from the Barristers? I am sure he will not contend that this robe by itself confers any preference in practice on the wearer or clothe the wearer with any additional merit. I had talk with distinguished members of the Vakils Bar, and they are quite unconcerned about the particular dress they wear when appearing before their Lordships in the High Court. They know that they can stand on their own merits and they value and honour the particular dress or costume they wear. Sir, in this connection may I have your leave to read out the discussions from the proceedings of the Central Legislature at the time when the Indian Bar Council Act was introduced there? Sir, Mr. Neogy, who was then the accredited representative of the Vakils' Association, said that "the Vakils of Calcutta are not ashamed of being called Vakils." Sir, I am quoting from his speech. He referred to such distinguished names as Sir Dwarkanath Mitter, Sir Ramesh Mitter, Sir Chandra Madhab Ghose, Sir Rash Behary Ghose and the last, though not the least, Sir Ashutosh Mookerji—names of which any legal institution of the world would be proud. In the same strain, Mr. Rangachariar from Madras also addressed the Assembly and said, "I do not wear a barrister's robe at all. I have got my own robe which I wear with dignity, honour and prestige". That was the feeling of such eminent popular representatives as Mr. Neogy and Mr. Rangachariar when they addressed the Assembly at the time when the Indian Bar Councils Act was introduced in that Legislature. I do not know, Sir, what has since happened to justify this agitation against this robe over here. The only reason which has been given in the Statement of Objects and Reasons is that the object is to create a self-contained Indian Bar. Sir, I think, the sponsor of the Bill meant an autonomous Indian Bar which was recommended by the Indian Bar Committee. If that really is his intention, then the only way to achieve that object is to introduce a comprehensive Bill in the Central Legislature and not here. The Indian Bar Councils Act has set at rest all differences in the status of gentlemen practising in the High Court, I mean between Advocates and Barristers. This question of robes should have been left to the Bar Council who could advise the learned Judges of the High Court in the matter or take such step as they might think fit. Sir, I started by appealing to the good sense of honourable members here to consider the matter dispassionately. It is certainly not a party question. It is a question which affects vitally a particular section of lawyers, and it is a disabling Bill so far as the Barristers are concerned. At the same time, it does not benefit the public in any way. Sir, as I have stated in my note of dissent, that if the object of the Bill was really to create a self-contained Bar, my friend ought to have taken the trouble of drafting the Bill in such a way as to leave no room for any distinction of robes whatsoever between the various classes of lawyers practising in Bengal. But he defeats his own object by creating a distinction between lawyers practising in the High Court and those practising in other courts. It is well known that besides the Vakils and Advocates, there are the District Court pleaders, Small Cause Court pleaders, the Police Court pleaders, Revenue agents and Mukhtears who practise in the different courts of Bengal. Our friend Mr. Moitra is not anxious for one uniform robe for all these classes of lawyers. He leaves the other unfortunate classes of lawyers severely alone and would not allow them to wear the same gown to be prescribed for the High Court lawyers. This is his plan for a self-contained Indian Bar! I leave it to honourable members to draw their own conclusion. Is it founded on good conscience? Then, Sir, the Barristers from time immemorial have a distinct robe worn by them all over the world, and no reasons have been given in this Bill as to why this robe should be taken away from them. Why should they be deprived of it or why others should not be allowed to copy it? Apart from this, the matter of robes is, if I may submit respectfully, a domestic affair for the learned Chief Justice and the Judges of the Hon'ble High Court. The matter of robes did actually come before the learned Judges and after hearing all concerned they have directed that particular robes should be worn by a particular set of lawyers. By trying to legislate in this matter, are we not encroaching on the jurisdiction of the High Court in a way? After all, it is the discretion of the High Court. In this connection, I may also refer to section 9 of the Letters Patent, which gives power to the High Court to approve, admit and enrol such and so many Advocates, Vakils and Attorneys as to the said High Court shall seem meet. They also give power to the High Court to regulate such rules as it may think fit regarding the manner in which such Advocates, Vakils and Attorneys shall appear and plead. Now, Sir, if this Bill is passed, it would certainly interfere, if not take away the powers which have been conferred on Judges of the High Court by section 9 of the Letters Patent. Would it be fair-play to enact such a Statute? I would submit that this Bill is unique of its kind. It takes away the time-honoured privileges of Barristers and creates a disability. On the other hand, it does good to nobody and its own clause betrays want of uniformity; it has not yet been introduced in any of the other Provincial Legislatures. Lastly, Sir, a Bill which has not for its object the benefit of the general public should not be encouraged or passed by this House. Sir, in this connection, I would only refer you to the reply which was given by the Bar Council in England to a letter which was written by a junior member of the Calcutta Bar. I am giving the language of the letter: "The wearing of this costume (the Barristers' robe) is equivalent to the costume of the member of the English Bar. The Council are of opinion that a person should not be permitted to wear this costume unless he is a member of the Bar". Finally, I would submit that a legislation of this kind should not be placed on the Statute Book as it would interfere with the discretion of the learned Judges of the High Court and to that extent would be ultra vires the Statute. I would once again appeal to my honourable friend, the mover of the Bill, not to press this Bill but to leave it to the Bar Council to devise ways and means to achieve the object of the Bill, namely, the creation of an autonomous Indian Bar as recommended by the Indian Bar Committee.

The Hon'ble Nawab MUSHARRUFF HOSSAIN, Khan Bahadur: Sir, may I submit that this Bill cannot be introduced without the previous sanction of His Excellency the Governor?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Perhaps my predecessor in office thought that no sanction was necessary.

The Hon'ble Nawab MUSHARRUFF HOSSAIN, Khan Bahadur: But, Sir, if that ruling was wrong, can it not be righted now? Suppose your predecessor was wrong then, can it not be righted by his successor?

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: On a point of order, Sir. Is it open to the Hon'ble Minister to question the ruling of the President?

Mr. PRESIDENT: I was just going to impress that fact on the Nawab Sahib.

The Hon'ble Nawab MUSHARRUFF HOSSAIN, Khan Bahadur: Sir, I find that a Bill which empowers any authority to impose by reference to any professional qualification, any disability, restriction or condition in regard to the practising of any profession, shall not be introduced or moved without the previous sanction of the Governor in his discretion. Section 81 and section 119 of the Government of India Act, 1935, clearly lay down that. Therefore, this disability is there. Suppose we pass the Bill and then the High Court does not accept the Bill, what will be the position? It did not receive the sanction of the Governor which sanction was necessary for introduction in the House. The matter whether the sanction should be obtained is to be decided by the President, as the late President, his predecessor in office, had made a mistake—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order, order. I would request you not to refer to the late President's mistake. When a ruling is definitely given by the President, you have got to accept it and cannot question it. If you have got any case, please argue on its merit, and do not lay stress on the President's mistake.

The Hon'ble Nawab MUSHARRUFF HOSSAIN, Khan Bahadur: Sir, I understand that the President's rulings, however wrong they may be, will have to be accepted, and I bow down to them; but I want to explain to the House the implications of them and the difficulty that has arisen now. Suppose, a Bill passed by this House—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order, order. I would cut short your argument, and make the position clear. The position is this: that under section 119 of the Government of India Act, if any Bill or any amendment imposes any disability on the members of any profession, then the matter has to be referred to the Governor for his previous sanction. Now, as regards the Governor's previous sanction, he is the ultimate authority which should decide whether previous sanction is required or not. My predecessor in office was of opinion that it did not impose any disability on the members of any profession, and as such the matter was not referred to the Governor.

But if Government now raise the question and insist that the matter should be referred to the Governor, I have got to refer the matter to the Governor under the Bengal Legislative Council Procedure Rules.

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: What is your ruling, Sir?

Mr. PRESIDENT: I am not giving my opinion at the present moment. As it is, I hold the same opinion as my predecessor. If, however, the Hon'ble Minister insists that the matter should be referred to the Governor, in that case, we have got to stop here and refer the matter to the Governor, who is the ultimate authority for deciding whether previous sanction is necessary or not.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Sir, before you proceed further, may I point out that so far as the present case is concerned, we quite understand that the imposition of any disability on any person in the discharge of any profession should be considered by the Governor; but whether this Bill actually imposes any disability or not has to be considered by the Chair?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Certainly, but if it is insisted on by Government that the matter should be referred to the Governor, I have got to place the matter for the Governor's consideration, he being the ultimate authority for decision. Now, I would like to know from the Hon'ble Minister whether he insists on the matter being referred to the Governor or not.

The Hon'ble Nawab MUSHARRUFF HOSSAIN, Khan Bahadur: I have expressed my desire for it, and I cannot withdraw it—

Mr. PRESIDENT: You have to make it clear, Nawab Sahib, whether you want me to refer the matter to the Governor or not.

The Hon'ble Nawab MUSHARRUFF HOSSAIN, Khan Bahadur: I do want that the matter should be referred to the Governor.

Mr. PRESIDENT: In that case, the matter should stand over till the next non-official Bill day. In the meantime, the matter should be referred to the Governor for his decision.

The Bengal Local Self-Government (Amendment) Bill, 1943.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Sir, I beg to move that the Bengal Local Self-Government (Amendment) Bill, 1943, be taken into consideration.

Sir, I may be permitted to recall very briefly the history of the Bill specially in view of the fact that an erstwhile very staunch supporter of the Bill, namely, my honourable friend, Khan Bahadur Saiyed Muazzamuddin Hossain, has seen it fit to table an amendment that the Bill should be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinion thereon by the 31st August, 1944. I would like to remind my friend that this Bill which was introduced originally in 1937—

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Saiyed MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSSAIN: Sir, may I say a word in this connection, as the honourable member has referred to my motion? I find that my amendment of which I have given notice is out of order and I may not move it at all, because after a Bill has come out of the Select Committee it is definitely laid down that such a motion is out of order.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I believe this Bill was not referred to any Select Committee; it is a new Bill. The old Bill which lapsed during the re-election of the mover was referred to a Select Committee.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Saiyed MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: I believe the Bill is being re-introduced as the original Bill was already referred to a Select Committee.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: My honourable friend is in a sense right, because this Bill is actually the result of the deliberations of a Select Committee.

Mr. PRESIDENT: But in matters like this you cannot go by "in a sense"; you must be guided by things as they are.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: I may say that it is only in a sense a new Bill, for the original Bill was introduced as early as 1937. It was circulated three or four times and after that some time in 1942 it was referred to a select committee and the select committee had taken the Bill into consideration and my honourable friend was perhaps also a member of that committee. (The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Saiyed MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: No.) Very well, but representatives of my friend's party were members of the select committee; and after the report of the select committee had been presented, when it was going to be taken up for consideration by the House, my friend expressed approbation if not of each item of the Bill, at any rate, of the general principles of the Bill. In fact, I would like to point out to him that the main function of the Bill is the abolition of nomination. I take it that so far as the House is concerned, in the course of the last 7 years almost every member of this House has come to realise that nomination is an unmitigated evil. Many members of Government have publicly and also in private admitted that nominations are an unmitigated evil. Not only that, Sir. On the last occasion that I had an opportunity of speaking on this Bill, I referred to the opinions of District Officers and Divisional Commissioners. Official opinion is today almost unanimous that nominations have outlived their purpose and that they are not only unnecessary but a positive source of harm and a hindrance to the proper functioning of local self-government. It was in the light of these considerations that when it had been re-introduced, I thought that the Bill would be accepted by all sections of the House. My honourable friend would perhaps also remember that when I half laughingly taunted him with a possibility of changing his opinion with a change in his seat, he vehemently protested that whether he was on this side of the House or that, he would always stand for the abolition of nomination. I do not, therefore, understand why at this late stage it is necessary for Government to re-circulate a Bill which has already been circulated many times and which has been before the public of Bengal for almost six or seven years and on which official opinion has been given not once or twice but on many occasions. Moreover, it is a Bill to the drafting of which the Legislative Department has given not a little time. I may tell the House, Sir, that the Bill as it stands today is not my drafting. It was actually drafted by the Legislative Department of the Government of Bengal and therefore I do not understand why Government should at this stage now suddenly awake to the fact that they want to circulate it and, worse still, try to kill the Bill by opposing it. I leave it to the consideration of the members of this honourable House. If my friends opposite do not consider that nominations have outlived their purpose, that nominations have proved more a hindrance than a help, then they are certainly welcome to oppose and throw out my Bill. But if they consider—and I have already said that even some officers of Government have admitted in public and also in private—that the time has come when an experiment on these lines should be made and the public should be given an opportunity of deciding local issues in their own interests, then I leave my honourable friends opposite to decide if they can vote against a Bill of this type. I challenge them that if they vote against this Bill, they would be voting against their own conscience.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Motion moved that the Bengal Local Self-Government (Amendment) Bill, 1943, be taken into consideration.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Saiyed MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: I beg to move that the Bengal Local Self-Government Bill, 1943, be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinion thereon by the 31st August, 1944.

Sir, in moving my amendment, I assert that I am still of opinion that nomination should not exist. But the question as to how the Bill should be drafted for removing the provision of nomination has to be very carefully examined. So it is necessary to send it for circulation. The honourable members opposite want the Bill to be taken into consideration by the House at once without even being sent to the Select Committee. It is a very important matter which the Bill seeks to deal with and there has been sharp difference of opinion. Although I am always of the opinion that nomination should not exist, I think it requires very careful consideration as to how the interest of minorities should be safeguarded. If the honourable members had asked for a Select Committee, that would have been considered. As the Bill now stands, we cannot accept it. I think that public opinion should crystallise, before final action is taken; that is why I have moved my amendment. With these words, I move the amendment. I hope the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Department will be able to throw more light on the subject.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Amendment moved: that the Bengal Local Self-Government (Amendment) Bill, 1943, be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinion thereon by the 31st August, 1944.

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Sir, it may be surprising to my friends opposite that I rise to support this motion. As one who is intimately—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Mukerjea, are you speaking as a member of the Government or in your individual capacity?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: I am speaking in support of the amendment of the Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Muazzamuddin Hosain.

Mr. PRESIDENT: All right, then go on.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Is it permissible for him to speak again? The Leader of the House has spoken on behalf of Government.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Why not? If more than one member want to speak from the Government benches in support of a particular matter, they are perfectly entitled to do so.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Will you kindly consider that the Leader of the House has already spoken?

Mr. PRESIDENT: I have considered that point. You are one of the Opposition leaders; not only you have spoken but half a dozen members from your side have spoken. Then why should not members from the Government side speak?

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: My point is: we on this side have spoken as members of the House. But in his case he is encroaching upon the right of the House.

Mr. PRESIDENT: More than one member can speak on a particular motion on behalf of Government.

Khan Bahadur M. A. MOMIN: I submit, Sir, there is one point. I quite agree that as a member of the Cabinet Mr. Mukerjea can speak in support of the statement of his colleagues. But if he is speaking only as a member of this House, may I draw your attention that he is not a member of the House, and therefore the question arises whether he is entitled to do so?

Mr. PRESIDENT: In fact, that is why at the outset I asked whether Mr. Mukerjea was speaking in his individual capacity and he made it perfectly clear that he was speaking on behalf of Government and in support of his colleague's motion.

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Sir, I feel and sincerely feel that I shall be failing in my duty if I do not place before the House my humble experience which I have gathered in the course of the last 22 years during which I have been closely associated with the workings of the union boards, local boards, district boards and municipalities. I respectfully remind the House and the honourable members that great hardships have been caused to the suppressed minority communities inasmuch as there are no proper and adequate reserved seats for them on those boards. Abolition of nominations is certainly our ideal but before we attain that ideal we shall have to be prepared for the ideal. We should be fit and well-qualified for attaining that ideal. It will be a mistake to abolish nominations thereby leaving the minorities to their fate. There being no provision for reservation of seats for representatives of the minorities, what will be the position of the minorities in West Bengal as well as in East Bengal? I do claim that excepting in my own district, Hooghly, where we have adequate seats for the minorities, there is no other district where the minorities are properly and adequately represented. There are many instances where we had received complaints regarding inadequate representation of the minorities in those Boards. There is no reservation under the Village Self-Government Act. There are nominations also in municipalities. So the minorities will immensely suffer. I do not know what harm will be done if we wait for another 4 or 5 months. I appeal to the member in charge of this Bill to take up the matter for providing reserved seats for minorities simultaneously, if not earlier.

With these words, I support my honourable friend's proposal for circulating the Bill for eliciting opinion.

Khan Bahadur M. A. MOMIN: Sir, it is with a good deal of regret that I have to oppose the motion for circulation. I refrain at this stage from making any observation on the merits of the Bill altogether; but the question of circulation can only be supported if it is really to know what the people and the public have got to say in the matter or that we may get any new light on the subject. As a matter of fact, this question is a very old one, and people have discussed this matter in the Council as well as outside and have clamoured for the abolition of nomination. Of course, I know that there are certain sections,—some Muslims and also some Scheduled Castes—who prefer that nomination should continue. On the other hand, the majority advanced opinion is for the abolition of nomination on grounds which have been set forth by the mover of the Bill, but that is a different matter. Unless there are some really very good grounds on which the Bill can be postponed or delayed, I do not think that this motion for circulation is justified, because we have had all the opinion that it was possible to have on the Bill. But there is one point which has been raised by the Hon'ble Mr. Mukerjee, namely, that there are many things which have to be considered, for instance, reservation, the rights of every community, abolition of the local boards and so forth and these may need also many corollary and other corrections and amendments in this Bill. So, in that case, if Government would agree to bring in a more comprehensive Bill including these questions about nomination and put in the Bill various safeguards which have been suggested by Mr. Mukherjee, I think that it would be a good case for not considering the Bill at the present moment, because piecemeal legislation is never desirable. Therefore, if the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Local Self-Government would assure the House that such a Bill is contemplated or he assures the House that he is really going to bring a Bill in the near future, then it would be desirable to postpone consideration at this stage. But I must say that I personally, without reference to the Party or anybody, feel very strongly, in the same way as my honourable friend Khan Bahadur Saiyed Muazzamuddin Hosain, that nomination should go.*

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: Sir, in rising to oppose the amendment that has been moved by the Hon'ble Minister, I would like to say a few words. The amendment is that the Bill should be circulated for eliciting public opinion. I do not understand why this motion has been moved by the Government knowing fully well that since 1937, as the mover of the Bill clearly stated, the Bill has been circulated on several occasions for eliciting public opinion and for eliciting the opinion of the authorities concerned. Now, I think public opinions were received, and after the Bill was introduced in the previous Council, it was referred to a Select Committee. The Bill was considered by the members of the Select Committee and the Legislative Department and the Government took their time and the Bill was drafted by the Legislative Department and the Select Committee members considered the various provisions of the Bill. Thus the Bill as it now stands, is the outcome of the labours of the Select Committee after considering the public opinion which was elicited after the Bill was circulated for a long time. I do not understand why the Hon'ble Minister, Mr. Tarak Nath Mukerjee, is supporting the motion for circulation. In supporting the amendment he has made certain observations which show that he was not supporting the amendment for circulation but he was really asking that the provisions of the Bill itself as it now stands should be considered by another Select Committee. I think Government should have come straightway in that case with a motion for referring the Bill to a Select Committee so that the provisions of this Bill might be considered again by a Select Committee. Such a motion could be understood but the motion for circulation means only that the time of the public would be wasted, the time of the House would be wasted and the consideration of the Bill would be shelved for a long time. It really means that the present Government want that the power of nomination which it holds should continue for a little time more in order that it might consolidate its position. If that is the view, I can understand a motion for circulation; but the Hon'ble Minister in moving his motion clearly indicated that his personal opinion was against nomination. If that is so, then I do not understand why he has again raised the question of sending the Bill for circulation. He should have only asked for a Select Committee so that the provisions of the Bill might be considered, reservations might be provided for, if they have not already been provided for minority communities. I think that if Government comes to the House with such a proposal, then all sections of the House may combine and come to a settlement. But so far as the motion for circulation is concerned, we as members of the Opposition, will certainly strongly oppose it as a measure to shelve this very useful Bill. I, therefore, oppose the amendment of the Honourable the Leader of the House.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: I rise to oppose the motion for circulation moved by the Honourable the Leader of the House. It is a motion practically for re-circulation of the Bill for eliciting public opinion. The Bill was circulated previously and opinions were gathered as to the desirability as to whether nomination should stand or go. The House was practically unanimous on this point that nomination should go. Now, Sir, in moving this motion, the Hon'ble Minister himself has admitted that nomination is a bad thing and he strongly holds the view that it should go. If so, then why circulate the Bill for eliciting public opinion thereon again? I, for one, do not understand the meaning of this unless it be that Government does not like that a Bill sponsored by the Opposition should be passed, and that a Bill however good if it comes from an Opposition member should be opposed. Otherwise, there is no rhyme or reason as to why this very necessary measure, admitted as necessary also by the Government party, should not be gone through but a clog must needs be placed in its way saying that public opinion must be elicited again. The Hon'ble Mr. Tarak Nath Mukerjee said that there were other improvements which should be incorporated in the Local Self-Government Act, namely, reservation of seats for those for whom seats should be reserved, minority communities, the Scheduled Caste people, etc. May I ask, Sir, who stood in the way of Government making those amendments in the Bill itself? Nobody stood in the way, surely! They can do it whenever they want and whenever they are pleased to do so. There is already reservation of seats in the district boards and municipalities with respect to minority communities. If further extension of privileges for the protection of the rights of minority or the weaker community including the Scheduled Castes are to be given, Government can do so at any time by bringing in an amended Bill to the Local Self-Government Act and add a clause therein reserving seats for minority and Scheduled Castes and others who they think should be represented on the local bodies. This Bill deals with the question of the abolition of nomination and there is no reason why it should be re-circulated for eliciting public opinion. My honourable friend, Khan Bahadur Momin, and the Leader of the House, in moving his motion, both admitted that such a Bill is necessary, that the thing is bad and that nomination should be abolished. Then why not do it immediately? Why should the Bill again be circulated and why should it again go to the Select Committee? When the Bill has gone through a Select Committee and when the Select Committee report is there, when the Bill is ready for being taken up for consideration, why should Government come forward now and say that it should be sent for circulation. There is no reason whatsoever behind this motion for circulation. Sir, I oppose the amendment.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Sir, in opposing the motion for circulation, I would like to add a few remarks to what I said at the time when I moved my original motion—

Mr. PRESIDENT: I think the Hon'ble Minister in charge must speak first.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: All right, Sir.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi JALALUDDIN AHMAD: Mr. President, Sir, there has been misconception regarding the amendment of my friend, the Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Saiyed Muazzamuddin Hosain, for circulation of the Bill. There are many honourable members including my friend Khan Bahadur Momin who do not like the idea of this motion because the motion proposes to send the Bill for eliciting public opinion. Now, Sir, this Bill discusses only two points: one is abolition of nomination and the other is an attempt at adult franchise, though now it has been dropped.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Not now; it was taken out by the Select Committee.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi JALALUDDIN AHMAD: I am aware of it.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: The Hon'ble Minister is not aware that it had been taken away.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi JALALUDDIN AHMAD: I am aware of it and the honourable member need not be so presumptuous that he is the only person who knows everything.

Mr. NUR AHMED: On a point of order, Sir. Is the honourable member entitled to put direct question?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi JALALUDDIN AHMAD: As I was saying, in clause 6 it is said, "In section 9 of the said Act—two-thirds of the members of each local board established in a district mentioned in the third schedule of this Act, the words 'elected members of a local board' shall be substituted"; and also clause 6(b) wants the proviso to be omitted. Now, this proviso declares the qualification how the members would be entitled to vote in the election to district board. Sir, I was submitting that there is an indication as to the mind of the author of the Bill in the Statement of Objects and Reasons of the Bill. He states in the Statement of Objects and Reasons, "The purpose of the Bill is to do away with nomination in local bodies and also to extend the franchise to include all adult persons within the area under the control of a local body." Even in the Legislative Council and Legislative Assembly there are nominations. It is very doubtful whether election in Bengal or in India at the present moment on the adult franchise basis will be fruitful, because 60 or 70 per cent. of our people are illiterate. I do not know whether they would be able to exercise their votes intelligently or whether the elections will return candidates with headless heads or persons with brainy heads. We all know how a few persons dominate in the villages over the whole population. So, it is really doubtful and controversial how far abolition of nomination or extension of franchise will be useful and there is really honest difference of opinion as regards its suitability in our province. I may cite one example. From the Noakhali district one cartman was elected during the Non-Co-operation days. Now, will that be an ideal exercise of franchise? (Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Why not? What is the harm!) (Khan Sahib FARIDUDDIN AHMED: Marshal Stalin was a cobbler.) However, Sir, we have copied our ideas from England and America and from other Western countries without any reference to the present condition in our province. For that reason Government have taken up the matter, and if adult franchise is suitable it would be introduced. But before that we shall have to ask for public opinion with regard to this Bill. So, we cannot accept this Bill. We want to bring a comprehensive Bill including abolition of the system of nomination. It has been found in the operation of delimitation that there are some defects in the working of this Bill. We want to remedy them. In view of the above circumstances, I request the honourable member to withdraw his motion.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Sir, I find that most of the remarks made by the honourable members of the Government benches have been made simply because they have not read the Bill. I am surprised so far as the Hon'ble Mr. Mukerjea is concerned that in spite of the fact—and strangely enough—that he is a Minister of the Province of Bengal and, as he has said he has adorned or mis-adorned the chair of a district board for 20 years, he is not conversant with the provisions in regard to district boards in Bengal today. He has raised a great deal of haloo-baloo and unnecessary flurry with regard to the question of the minorities. I am surprised that an honourable gentleman who is occupying the position of a Minister of this province and, as he has said, he is also the Chairman of a District Board, does not know that in every district board in Bengal today there is a provision for the representation of minorities through special seats—

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: On a point of personal explanation, Sir. I am aware that there is a provision for representation of minority communities in the district boards and local boards. But I said that there is no such provision for representation in the municipalities and union boards and that there is room for improvement in the Local Self-Government Act.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: In that case, Sir, I find that Mr. Mukerjea has doubly justified my remarks. This Bill does not deal with such provisions. The Cabinet of that time on the suggestion of the Legislative Department abolished certain clauses dealing with such questions and these clauses were taken away. Since there is no mention whatsoever in this Bill about union boards, I fail to understand why the Hon'ble Minister wasted the time of this House in attempting to point out the fallacy of the Local Self-Government Act which is not within the purview of our consideration. I think, Sir, that the explanation which the Hon'ble Minister has given further justifies my remark that he has not read the Bill. I regret also, Sir, that the Hon'ble Minister for Local Self-Government has not also proceeded beyond the Statement of Objects and Reasons, or he has not even read the clauses of the Bill, or if he has read he has read them in a most perfunctory manner. It is true that in the Statement of Objects and Reasons there is a sentence that "to extend the franchise to include all adult persons within the area under the control of a local body". Sir, there were other sentences in the Statement of Objects and Reasons which have been taken out by the Government. These sentences were to the effect that in view of the fact and in spite of my conviction that adult franchise should be introduced, the Legislative Department and the Government felt that during war time it would involve too much labour and energy on the part of Government Department. The question of franchise should for the time being not be raised. Therefore, reluctantly I have omitted these clauses from the Bill. In the Bill as it stands, there is no reference to the adult franchise. Notwithstanding that, the Hon'ble Minister for Local Self-Government said that there is no doubt that there is reference to the adult franchise in the Statement of Objects and Reasons. Sir, if he had proceeded carefully to read the clauses of the Bill, he would have found that this argument is equally fallacious as the other arguments that he has advanced. Since he has raised the question, I would submit for his consideration whether it is not a fact that if we want to introduce adult franchise, local bodies are the place where adult franchise can be best introduced. If you have extended franchise in the Legislative Assembly and the Council, is it not far more necessary and proper that a training in self-government should start with small units where a person can interest himself in the affairs of local government and thereby acquire experience and administrative knowledge and also in this way develop his powers of self-government? It was for this reason that I suggested that adult franchise should make a beginning in the local self-government area. As I have made it clear and I suppose the Hon'ble Minister now understands that in spite of my intention in the matter and my conviction that adult franchise should be there it is not there in the Bill. It was only the perusal of the Statement of Objects and Reasons by the Hon'ble Minister which led him altogether astray. Therefore, Sir, the two main objections which have been raised, namely, that there is no question of protection of minorities and that this Bill wants to extend the franchise to cover all adults, I find that both of them are completely imaginary. Government have not applied their minds to this matter. Therefore, I agree with my honourable friend Mr. Bankim Chandra Mukherjee who said that if the Government had applied their minds and had put down any concrete proposals we could consider them. Sir, a prima facie and even a superficial analysis of the statements of the Hon'ble Minister made on the floor of the House today shows that Government have not applied their minds to this subject. With regard to the question of safeguarding the interests of the minorities, very detailed discussions took place in this connection and it was the opinion of the public bodies to whom that Bill was originally sent for opinion as well as the opinion of Government's own officers and administrators who had applied their minds to the study of the Bill, that nomination as it existed was no protection to minorities save and except in very rare cases. In many cases, it was said, nominations only strengthened the party position and nominations were given—there are records, Sir, in the Legislative Department and in your Department too, written opinions of responsible administrators and public bodies who have given instances where Government have given nominations only to strengthen their party position—nominations are given irrespective of the suitability of the person or persons nominated. Therefore, Sir, in this Bill at the suggestion of Government an innovation was introduced that Government officers would be associated in the administration of local boards but would be debarred from exercising their vote. Accordingly, a new clause was introduced in the Bill with a change in nomenclature introducing certain Government officers called “advisers” in local bodies, as suggested by Government itself. Therefore, the Hon’ble Mr. Tarak Nath Mukerjee when he says that different provisions of the Bill were not considered, the question of representation of minorities was not considered or the question of the repercussion of the abolition of nominations or other considerations were not taken into account, he was obviously speaking—if I may be excused for using almost a non-parliamentary expression—he was obviously speaking in a “Pickwickian” sense, and very often the Hon’ble Minister reminds me of Picwick when I look at him and listen to his speeches. It is, therefore, very surprising that a Minister who has not applied his mind or has not taken any trouble to study the Bill, in any case for any Hon’ble Member of the Cabinet to simply get up and talk on a problem without having read the Bill on the subject, seems very very improper—I will not use any stronger language than that. In any case, the argument which he has brought in respect of local boards also shows that he is living in his imagination; many of his friends think that today he is living in his imagination in his political life in many respects. One does not know what will happen when this imaginary world comes to be shattered one day and he will have to face the realities of public life.

But when he talks of representation on local boards if the Bill was passed, I cannot help feeling that he had not applied his mind to the Bill. Who does not know that local boards have been abolished except in a few districts where this abolition has not been given effect to. So that in most districts local boards do not exist. A resolution was passed at the instance of Khan Bahadur Ataur Rahman by which it was sought to fix a final date and by that date all local boards in the province were to cease to function in any part of Bengal. If an Honourable Minister of Government is not aware of this fact, it is very regrettable for the province as a whole and even more so for the Cabinet. The only reason that I have been able to think of for the opposition of my friend Khan Bahadur Saïyed Muazzamuddin Hosain since he has given no argument or reason whatsoever—is that he took his defence on a technical point, namely, that it was a new Bill. A new Bill it is indeed, I do not deny that. But he knows better than anybody else that it is a new Bill only technically. Actually it is a Bill to which the mind of the Council has been applied not once but on many occasions—and you, Sir, I hope, will give me this credit—I have been fairly persistent in this and I have not let the House rest and have pursued the matter to the best of my ability. After all, when he gets up—

MR. PRESIDENT: Mr. Humayun Kabir, will you finish your speech now?

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: No, Sir, I will take a few minutes more.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Then I think you had better stop now.

Mr. BROJENDRA MOHAN MOITRA: May I know, Sir, at what stage my Bill—the Advocates' Robes Bill—stands?

Mr. PRESIDENT: I made it quite clear that in view of the objection taken by the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Judicial Department, under rule 6, sub-clause (2), I have got to refer the matter to the Governor. The rule runs as follows:—"If in the opinion of the President any question arises whether a Bill or amendment thereto is or is not a Bill or amendment which cannot be introduced or moved save with previous sanction, he shall refer the question to the Governor, and the decision of the authority—(namely the Governor)—which would have the power to grant the previous sanction, if it were necessary, shall be final." So the matter has to be referred to the Governor as the question has been raised by the Hon'ble Minister in charge of Judicial Department and we shall have to await the Governor's decision. So nothing can be done before the next non-official day.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: Under rule 6(3), we find that—

Mr. PRESIDENT: I know sub-rule (3); but what is your point?

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: It is said there "notwithstanding the fact that the President has made no reference to sub-rule (2) if in the opinion of the Governor acting in his discretion—he may intimate to the President the fact" but here in this case the Governor has not intimated anything to the President and I think it is not the business of the Hon'ble Minister to refer it—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Mukherjee, I think you have not followed what I have said. There are three procedures: first, sub-clause (1) where we find that a Bill should be referred to the Governor for his previous sanction before it is placed in the list of business: the second is—under sub-clause, (2) if in the opinion of the President any question arises whether a Bill or amendment thereto is or is not a Bill or amendment which cannot be introduced or moved save with previous sanction, he shall refer the question to the Governor, and thirdly, under sub-clause (3) the Governor can take action whether the matter is referred to by the President or not. These are the three different procedures. Here we find that under sub-rule (2) of rule 6 the question has been raised by the Hon'ble Minister today on the floor of the House: so the President shall refer the matter to the Governor for decision. As regards the question put by Mr. Moitra my reply is—the matter has to be referred to the Governor. I have no other alternative and we shall have to await His Excellency's decision. So nothing can be done before the next non-official day.

The House stands adjourned till 1 p.m. on Monday next.

Adjournment.

The Council then adjourned till 1 p.m. on Monday, the 21st February, 1944.

BENGAL LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL DEBATES

First Session, 1944—No. 10.

THE COUNCIL met in the Legislative Chamber of the Legislative Building, Calcutta, on Monday, the 21st February, 1944, at 1 p.m., being the tenth day of the First Session of 1944, pursuant to section 62 (2) (a) of the Government of India Act, 1935.

Mr. President (the Hon'ble Sir BIJOY PRASAD SINGH ROY, K.C.I.E.) was in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Census of babies and expectant mothers.

58. Mr. NUR AHMED: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Revenue Department be pleased to state—

- (a) whether any census of babies and expectant mothers has been taken in any district of Bengal;
- (b) what are the names of such districts;
- (c) whether any such census has been taken in the district of Chittagong; if not, why not;
- (d) whether the Government propose to take such census in future;
- (e) whether it is a fact that the death-roll among the destitute expectant mothers and small children for want of proper milk-supply is great; and
- (f) if so, what measures have been taken by the Government of Bengal to supply free milk to such destitute children?

MINISTER in charge of the REVENUE DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Mr. Tarak Nath Mukerjee): (a) No.

(b) Does not arise.

(c) Not after 1941.

(d) No. The 1941 Census figures calculated by random survey are recent enough to give us reasonably accurate picture regarding babies and children. The number of expectant mothers can be calculated from the annual birth rate.

(e) Government have no positive information. It is not unlikely that there have been cases of death among destitute expectant mothers and small children. But it is not possible to say if the deaths were due to want of proper supply of milk.

(f) Free milk canteens are being run in many places for distribution of milk to destitute children, nursing and expectant mothers, directly by Government and through the Friend's Ambulance Unit and also by the Indian Red Cross Milk Distribution Sub-Committee. Arrangements have been made to obtain very large quantities of milk powder and other milk products from abroad in view of the shortage of local milk-supplies.

Mrs. LABANYAPROBHA DUTT: Arising out of (e), will the Hon'ble Minister kindly let us know whether there have been any deaths of women destitutes leaving their babies uncared for in Calcutta and whether Government intend to start orphanages for these destitute children and take over the charge of their education and maintenance?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: It is quite possible; Government have already taken charge of destitute children's maintenance and education.

Mr. LABANYAPROBHA DUTT: Arising out of (f), will the Hon'ble Minister let us know whether free milk canteens have been started?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Large number of milk canteens have been started not only in Calcutta but all over Bengal.

Mr. LABANYAPROBHA DUTT: Will the Hon'ble Minister kindly give the names of places where these canteens have been started?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Hundreds of such canteens have been started and if the honourable member wants the name of any in particular I shall be glad to supply the information.

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: How many have been started in Calcutta?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: I cannot give the exact number, probably about 25.

Mr. LABANYAPROBHA DUTT: What is the amount of tinned milk received from overseas and how much have been supplied to the destitutes?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: I want notice.

Mr. K. C. ROY CHOWDHURY: Was the Hon'ble Minister present in Calcutta when infants were dying in Calcutta at the rate of 30 a day?

Mr. PRESIDENT: That question does not arise.

Minimum price of jute.

59. Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Commerce, Labour and Industries Department be pleased to state if the Government are aware that—

- (i) the Indian Jute Mills Association of Bengal have been receiving orders for hessian to the tune of crores of yards from the United States of America; and

(ii) the prices fixed by the Indian Jute Mills Association compare very unfavourably with the price of hessian at which the Association usually secures orders?

(b) If so, what steps, if any, do the Government propose to take to fix a reasonable minimum price of jute for the year 1944?

MINISTER in charge of the COMMERCE, LABOUR and INDUSTRIES DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja Shahabuddin): (a) (i) The Government are aware that in March and June, 1943, the Indian Jute Mills Association received large orders for hessians from the United States of America.

(ii) The prices fixed by the U. S. Government for the June order were in accordance with the U.S. Government ceiling prices which were lower than the prices of hessian then prevailing in the Calcutta market

(b) The steps taken by the Government to fix minimum prices for jute for the season 1944-45 have now been announced.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Do the Government propose to take steps to fix the maximum price of hessian?

The Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja SHAHABUDDIN: Sir, it is expected that maximum price of hessian would also be fixed.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, may I rise on a point of order?

Mr. PRESIDENT: What is your point of order?

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: I shall ask your permission to say that this budget cannot be presented unless it is——

Mr. PRESIDENT: Let me first ask the Hon'ble Minister to present the budget, and then you rise on your point of order.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, my point is this——

Mr. PRESIDENT: You cannot rise on a point of order. There must be some item before the House.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: I have got the agenda, and it is in connection with this agenda that I want to raise a point of order.

Mr. PRESIDENT: You have got the agenda, but I have not yet called the Hon'ble Minister to present the Budget. When I call him to present the Budget, then you get up.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: All right, Sir.

Presentation of the Budget.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The Hon'ble the Finance Minister.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, I raise the question of the constitution of a Public Accounts Committee of the Bengal Legislature. Sir, I purposely use the word "Legislature", because section 169 of the Government of India Act, 1935, expressly provides as follows—

Mr. PRESIDENT: But what is your point of order?

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: I am coming to that, Sir. The reports of the Auditor-General of India or of the province as the case may be—

Mr. PRESIDENT: No, no. You cannot go on like that. Please come to the point at once.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: My point is that by the presentation of this report practically the rules Nos. 108 and 109 of the Council Procedure Rules are violated.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The Hon'ble Minister is presenting the Budget and not a report.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: In that case, I shall have to rise on a point of order. The presentation of the Budget also comes in this way—

Mr. PRESIDENT: No, I am afraid, it is not a point of order.

Presentation of the Budget Estimates for 1944-45.

The Hon'ble Mr. TULSI CHANDRA COSWAMI: Sir, I rise to present to the Bengal Legislative Council the estimates for the year 1944-45. The estimates were presented to the other House on Friday last and in the statement which I made on that occasion I had reviewed in detail the financial results of the working of the current year as well as of the budget proposals of the coming year. In accordance with the usual practice copies of that statement have since been made available to the honourable members of this House for their convenience. With that statement before them honourable members will, I feel, desire me to confine my observations in this House to the principal features of the estimates. In September last when presenting the budget for the current year I anticipated a revenue deficit of 7 crores, 36 lakhs. The revised estimates indicate that inspite of an improvement of 3 crores in revenue the deficit will be nearly 4 crores higher. This is explained by the increase in expenditure to the extent of close upon 7 crores. The principal heads which are responsible for this growth in revenue are Income-tax—Rs. 50 lakhs, Excise—Rs. 46 lakhs, Stamps—Rs. 40 lakhs, Forests—Rs. 25 lakhs, Registration—Rs. 20 lakhs and Other Taxes and duties—Rs. 20 lakhs. About the improvement under Income-tax I need not say much now; I will come to that later. The increase under Excise is due to the post-budget enhancement of rates of duty which has resulted in a larger revenue from greatly reduced consumption of excisable articles. The improvement under Stamps is distributed evenly between Judicial and Non-judicial. The larger yield from Forests is due to the heavier orders for timber from the Supply Department. The growth under Registration is accounted for by a large increase in the number of registrations partly as a result of the unfavourable economic situation. Finally under Other Taxes and Duties receipts from the Entertainments Tax, the Motor Spirit Sales Tax and the Raw Jute Tax are expected to be well above the original estimate. On the expenditure side there is an increase of 2 crores under Famine, 2 crores under Extraordinary charges, three-fourths of a crore under Jail, and half a crore each under Agriculture, Public Health and Irrigation. The increase under Famine is due to the special measures undertaken for the relief of the destitute from starvation and disease. Apart from the larger expenditure on gratuitous relief in the form of cash doles and free kitchens, the more important items responsible for the increase are Rs. 33 lakhs for temporary poor-houses and destitute camps, Rs. 53 lakhs for emergency medical relief centres and Rs. 40 lakhs for the free distribution of cloth and blankets amongst the destitutes. Under Extraordinary Charges the budget contained a provision of $3\frac{1}{2}$ crores, representing the loss on account of the sale of subsidised foodstuffs to the public and Government employees on a small pay. The corresponding provision in the revised is Rs. 5 crores—an increase of a crore and a half. The balance of the increase under Extraordinary Charges is due to the expansion of the Department of Civil Supplies, and to the introduction of rationing in Calcutta and certain industrial areas. The extra expenditure under “Jails” is due to a large increase in prison population coupled with greatly increased cost of foodstuff, clothing, medicine and other contingencies.

The increase under “Agriculture” is due to larger expenditure on “Grow More Food” schemes mainly as a result of buying seeds in the current year for the “Grow More Food” campaign of 1944-45.

Under “Public Health”, the increase is due mainly to the following additional provisions, viz., 13 lakhs under “Rural Water Supply” for the repair and resinking of tube wells in areas affected by epidemics; 14 lakhs under “Epidemic charges” for the control of cholera and small-pox; and 12 lakhs for free distribution of quinine.

The increase under “Irrigation” is due to larger outlay on the repair of the Damodar Left Embankment and other embankments damaged by flood.

Let me now turn to the capital head “85A” which, as I explained in September last, accommodates both charges and receipts in connection with the large scale trading operations which have had to be undertaken by Government. It was assumed when the Budget was framed that the unadjusted capital outlay at the close of the year would be a sum of 50 lakhs laid out for the building up of a reserve stock of salt. It is now estimated that over and above this, capital to the value of over 29 crores is likely to remain invested in stocks of foodgrains and sugar at the close of the current year. The requisite capital has been obtained from three sources: loans from the Central Government, cash credit advances from the Imperial Bank of India and Treasury Bills.

We have also had to obtain loans for our general ways and means purposes. The main items of Provincial indebtedness at the close of the current year are estimated as follows:—

	Crores.
Treasury Bills	15
Cash credit advance from the Imperial Bank ...	18
Loans from the Central Government for—
(1) Ways and Means purpose	5½
(2) Purchase of foodgrains	2½
(3) Civil Defence expenditure	2
(4) Closing the breach in the Damodar Embankment	1
(5) Grow More Food schemes	¾
Total ...	45

Against this, as already explained, we shall be holding stocks, worth 29½ crores and a closing balance of 2½ crores, that is to say 32 crores in all. Our net uncovered indebtedness at the close of the current year will therefore stand at 13 crores.

I may add that since the estimates which I have spoken of were sent to the Press, intimation has been received from the Government of India that the divisible pool of income-tax, both this year and the next year, will be some 5½ crores greater than was anticipated by them at the end of December last. This means that Bengal whose share in the pool is 20 per cent. will receive an extra crore and 10 lakhs in each of these two years and our indebtedness will be reduced to this extent.

Let me now summarise the Budget proposals for the coming year.

It is estimated that revenue receipts next year will be about half a crore higher than the Revised—the increase being due to larger receipts from Income-tax. As I have already explained the estimates do not take into account the further accretion of a crore and ten lakhs under Income-tax just intimated by India.

Revenue expenditure in the coming year has been estimated at 2 crores less than the Revised. This is the net effect of a reduction of 3 crores under “Famine” and an increase of 1 crore under “Extraordinary charges”.

The “Famine” budget has been framed on the assumption that the need for test works and gratuitous relief will greatly abate though intensive medical relief will have to be continued for some months in the coming year and poor houses and orphanages maintained till a comprehensive scheme of rehabilitation can be given effect to.

The increase under “Extraordinary charges” is due mainly to larger loss on the sale of subsidised food to the public and to a full year’s provision for the Rationing scheme which came into operation in the closing months of the current year.

There are two items of additional expenditure included in the Budget which call for individual mention. One is a contribution of 5 lakhs to the Scheduled Castes Education Fund. The other is a provision of 16 lakhs for payment of subsidies to sugar mills in this province in order to enable them to pay cane-growers a minimum economic price of Re. 1 per maund against 12 annas which is all that the mills can afford to pay in view of the price fixed for sugar by the Sugar Controller on an all-India basis.

Under the Capital Head "85A" the net result of trading transactions will be a surplus of 17 crores over the capital outlay during 1944-45 as a result of the sale of the greater part of the stocks worth 29½ crores carried over from the current year. The value of stocks in hand at the close of 1944-45 is estimated at 12½ crores.

According to the estimates in the hands of honourable members our indebtedness at the close of the coming year is expected to be close upon 21½ crores, and it is made up as follows:—

	Crores.
Cash credit advance from the Imperial Bank ...	12
Loans from the Central Government for—
(1) Ways and Means purposes ...	5½
(2) Civil Defence expenditure ...	2½
(3) Closing the breach in the Damodar Embankment	1
(4) "Grow More Food" schemes ...	½
Total ...	21½

Against this we shall be holding stocks worth 12½ crores so that our net uncovered indebtedness would amount to 9 crores. This, however, does not take into account the fact that our closing balance according to these estimates is a minus figure of 10½ crores. With the additional receipts from the Income-tax pool to which I have already referred, the closing balance will stand at minus 8½ crores. A negative closing balance, is, of course, not a workable proposition and we shall certainly require further accommodation sufficient to give us a working balance of at 2½ crores. This would involve the securing of further finances to the extent of 11 crores. A part of this we may hope to obtain when the new taxation measures put forward by Government are assented to by the Legislature. For the rest, we have asked the Government of India for a subvention, and I earnestly hope that assistance so patently necessary and urgently required will not be withheld, and I hope on this subject honourable members will not expect me to speak at great length. The object of presenting a negative budget and, therefore, of taking an unprecedented step is that I might thereby make it clear to the honourable members and to the Government of India what the true financial position is. Sir, I have briefly outlined for you the financial position and prospects of the Government of Bengal. The Government of Bengal expects that the honourable members will assist us in the very difficult task of discharging the duties of administration in these circumstances.

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOUDHURY: Sir, are we going to have copies of the statement which the Hon'ble Minister has just made for facility of discussion?

The Hon'ble Mr. TULSI CHANDRA GOSWAMI: Sir, last September, I found that the practice in the Upper House was not to supply a printed copy of the statement made by the Hon'ble Minister as in the other House but simply to make a statement, and in fact, the speech that I have just made is a summary of my statement in the other House.

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOUDHURY: Sir, I think that even that short statement should also be made available to the members, so that within the shorter compass of discussion they can focus attention upon it.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I must observe here that whatever might have been the practice in the past, I think we must have our own practice henceforward. The Hon'ble the Finance Minister's statement as made in this House should be circulated to the members of this House. I do not think that this House should take note of what happens elsewhere. That is a practice which we should discourage rather than encourage.

The Hon'ble Mr. TULSI CHANDRA GOSWAMI: I quite appreciate it, and I shall take steps to have copies of my statement made available to the honourable members.

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOUDHURY: Sir, there is another point. During the general discussion of the Budget, the Hon'ble Minister in charge should be present in the House throughout to give replies to our points that are raised on the floor of the House.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I think that can be assumed. I am sure the Hon'ble Minister will take note of this request.

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: We will follow the parliamentary practice that we have been following since the last 15 years.

Mr. PRESIDENT: One point in reply to the Hon'ble the Chief Minister's statement is that there is not much similarity between 1921 and 1935. Our rights and responsibilities have much increased under the Government of India Act, 1935, and we cannot go beyond 1937.

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: You knew, Sir, of this practice when you were in office.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The House stands adjourned till 1 p.m. on Thursday, the 24th.

Adjournment.

The Council then adjourned till 1 p.m. on Thursday, the 24th February, 1944.

Members Absent.

The following members were absent from the meeting held on the 21st February, 1944:—

- (1) Khan Bahadur Naziruddin Ahmad.

BENGAL LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL DEBATES

First Session, 1944—No. 11.

THE COUNCIL met in the Legislative Chamber of the Legislative Building, Calcutta, on Thursday, the 24th February, 1944, at 1 p.m., being the eleventh day of the First Session of 1944, pursuant to section 62(2)(a) of the Government of India Act, 1935.

Mr. President (the Hon'ble SIR BIJOY PRASAD SINGH ROY, K.C.I.E.) was in the Chair.

Obituary Reference.

MR. PRESIDENT: Order, order. Honourable members of Council, it is the melancholy duty of the Chair to refer to the death of Mrs. Kasturba Gandhi. Her death is being mourned today all over the civilized world and it is only proper that this universal expression of regret should find its echo in this House also. Throughout her long married life Mrs. Gandhi shared the joys and sorrows of her illustrious husband and she played her part nobly as a wife. I am sure her life will be a source of inspiration to womanhood not only in India but throughout the world. If sorrow shared is sorrow soothed, then Mahatma Gandhi will find that millions of his countrymen share his bereavement.

I believe it is the desire of the House that a message of condolence on its behalf should be conveyed to Mahatmaji.

MR. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Yes, Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT: I request the honourable members to rise in their places.

(Honourable members rose.)

MR. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: May I suggest that the House should adjourn as a mark of respect to the memory of the illustrious deceased?

MR. HARIDAS MAJUMDAR: I support this proposal whole-heartedly.

MR. PRESIDENT: May I have the views of the Honourable the Leader of the House?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Sir, the House may be suspended for half an hour as a mark of respect to the deceased.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I think that would be quite proper. I, therefore, adjourn the House till 1-30 p.m. today.

(After adjournment.)

[When the House re-assembled after the adjournment, the Deputy President occupied the Chair.]

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Scarcity of fish in Bengal.

60. Mr. HARIDAS MAJUMDAR: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Agriculture Department be pleased to state—

- (a) if he is aware that scarcity of fish in different parts of Bengal is being keenly felt;
- (b) if he is aware that immature and spawning fishes are sold in large quantities in the markets;
- (c) if it is not a fact that the Government are spending a big amount for the Fishery Department; and
- (d) if the reply to parts (a) to (c) be in the affirmative, what urgent steps the Government propose to take to put a stop to the indiscriminate and unscientific destruction of fish fries and spawning fishes in the rivers of Bengal?

MINISTER in charge of the AGRICULTURE DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Saiyed Muazzamuddin Hosain): (a) Yes.

(b) Yes, certain quantities of immature and spawning fish are sold in the markets of Bengal.

(c) The Department of Fisheries, Bengal, was established in May, 1942 at an estimated annual expenditure of about Rs.54,000.

(d) Certain measures for the protection of Hilsa and Carp fisheries are already under the consideration of Government, but it has to be realised that for any legislative measures regarding the sizes of meshes and harmful methods of catching fish to be effective, precise data on the life histories, migrations and bionomics of the principal food fishes of Bengal have to be collected and this will take time.

Fish culture in jute and paddy lands.

61. Mr. NUR AHMED: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Agriculture Department be pleased to state if any special steps have been taken by the Government of Bengal to encourage and help fish culture in jute and paddy fields of Bengal? If so, what are they?

(b) Is it a fact that Bengal peasants may earn an additional income of five crores of rupees a year if they cultivate fish in these paddy and jute fields along with paddy and jute cultivation?

(c) Is it a fact that fish culture in paddy fields help growth of paddy to some extent?

(d) Is it a fact that fish grow rapidly in paddy fields?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN:

(a) In 1943, the Director of Fisheries, Bengal, invited attention of the Indian public to the immense possibilities of fish culture in paddy fields in two articles and raised this point for discussion at the Rice and Fish Committee Meetings of the Imperial Council of Agricultural Research. Both the Committees accorded approval to his idea and recommended submission of schemes to the Director of Agricultural Production-(Food), Government of India.

The Director of Fisheries, Bengal, carried out experiments and investigations on fish culture in paddy fields during the last paddy season and the data so far available indicate that in the Abad areas of Sundarbans paddy cultivation and fish culture can be successfully undertaken as correlative industries.

The Director of Fisheries, Bengal, delivered lectures to the landholders of the Sundarbans and the members of the British Indian Associations so as to induce them to culture fishes in their paddy fields. Several landlords evinced great interest in the subject and it is hoped large areas in the Sundarbans will be brought under fish culture in paddy fields during the coming season.

The Department of Agriculture, Bengal, has issued a leaflet on the subject (copy laid on the Table) in which attention of the cultivators is directed to the beneficial results that can be obtained by undertaking this new development in cultural operations. A coloured poster on the subject is under preparation.

The Director of Fisheries, Bengal, has submitted schemes for increasing fish production in the Sundarban Abads in which he has laid special stress on carp farming in the paddy fields. The schemes are under the consideration of Government and if they are approved financial help and technical advice will be made available to the would-be fish farmers in terms of "Grow More Food" campaign.

(b) Yes. From the experiments carried out on a small scale, an additional income of five crores to the cultivators from a subsidiary crop of fish does not seem to be improbable.

(c) Yes. It is roughly estimated that in China by culturing fish in paddy fields the yield of paddy has been increased by 10 to 15 per cent.

Experiments conducted by the Department of Fisheries show similar results.

(d) Yes. Under experimental conditions in small plots, young of pona fish, about $\frac{1}{2}$ inch in length, grew to a weight of 4 to 6 chhataks in five months, while in larger areas the growth was 10 to 12 chhataks in a period of about four months. From some places ever better results have been reported.

Department of Agriculture, BengalLeaflet No. 5 of 1943*Agriculture and Pisciculture as Correlative Industries.

There is no gainsaying that fish like rice constitutes an important article of diet of the people of Bengal. But due to various causes fish has been getting more and more expensive every day and there is, thus, fear of vitality of the nation being impaired through the deficiency of such a nourishing food as fish. It, therefore, behoves every well-wisher of the country and the nation to find ways and means to increase the supply of fish.

It is, perhaps, not known to many that transplanted aman paddy and fish can be cultured simultaneously in embanked paddy fields as a correlative industry without entailing any great labour, expenditure or elaborate preparation. Young of pona fish, such as Rohu, Catla, Mrigal, Calbasu, Bata, etc., can be cultured even by the poorest cultivator at a small cost as it should fetch him a handsome return. Though in paddy-cum-fish culture, the yield from individual plots may not be great, it should be remembered that paddy covers nearly 90 per cent. of the cultivated area in this Province, a fairly good proportion of which is such as is not flooded during the rains. If a number of cultivators were to take to this enterprise, the aggregate produce of fish as a by-product of paddy cultivation would run into several lakhs of rupees. The fish produced in the paddy fields would, at the same time, go a long way in solving the fish-food problem of the Province.

Experiments have shown that if one or two inches long fry of the selected types of fishes be stocked in the standing water of the aman paddy fields as soon as transplantation of seedlings is over in July they would grow to 9 or 10 inches in the course of 3 or 4 months when water in the paddy fields begins to dry up. Sold at that stage the fish would fetch a profit of about 15 times of the capital outlay. But if, instead of selling off at that stage, they be transferred to some big pond, the profit would easily amount to much more. The fry can also be reared for a month or so before transplantation in trenches dug around the paddy fields, if possible, and they can thence automatically spread to the paddy fields when the entire area goes under water or recede into them when waters fall low.

The movements and ground-feeding habits of certain fish, by preventing formation of crust on the surface of soil, promote tillering of paddy and thus ultimately increase its yield. The presence of fish also prevents excessive growth of aquatic weeds and algæ. Some of the insect pests of paddy form a delicious food for fish and thus their growth is kept in check. The paddy crop also benefits from the excrements of fishes which serve as manure.

It would thus appear that agriculture and pisciculture can be taken up as correlative industries and each benefits the other. If fish be cultured in suitable paddy fields, the entire area of the field would form an extensive grazing ground for the fish. Free running about over long distances greatly accelerates growth and development of fish.

It has already been stated that the fish should either be sold when the water in the paddy fields begins to dry up or preferably transferred to some other big reservoir. There is great advantage in rearing fry in shallow waters of paddy fields which can thus serve as nurseries.

As large tanks required for the further fattening of the fishes from paddy fields are not easily obtainable, trenches recommended above for the culture of young fishes before the transplantation of paddy can be used for rearing fishes when the fields dry up. The excavation of such trenches, indeed, entails some expenditure but their advantages far outweigh the cost. The advantages of the trenches are:—

(i) The earth of the trenches would form high embankments around the paddy fields thereby facilitating ingress and egress of water, as required, for the benefit of both paddy and fish. This will also make it possible to cultivate different seasonable vegetables or fruits like pineapple and banana, on the embankments, thus augmenting the income of the cultivator.

(ii) The water of the trenches can be used to irrigate crops grown in the fields or on embankments, as and when necessary.

(iii) The trenches and embankments would protect crop against thieves, grazing cattle and also rats.

(iv) Deep water aus or aman paddy can be cultivated in the trenches, thereby adding to the income of the cultivator.

(v) The high embankments would check erosion of soil, thereby preventing the loss of its fertility and also enriching it by arresting the washing from other areas.

(vi) By erecting machans over the trenches, it would be possible to grow some climbing vegetables, like gourd, pumpkin, sponge gourd, cucumber, bean, cowpea, etc., and this would increase the income of the grower.

It would thus appear that paddy-cum-fish culture, if conducted with a little bit of intelligence, is profitable in more than one ways. In Bengal besides aman paddy, low-land jute also grows in standing water. If the jute fields are properly embanked, fish can be cultured there as well. In these hard days when the Province is in the midst of an acute food crisis, if the agricultural community be alive to this new enterprise it would not only greatly add to the supply of a nourishing food like fish but also considerably better the rural economy of the country.

Mr. KADER BAKSH: Is it the opinion of the Hon'ble Minister that only the paddy lands near the Sundarbans are fit for fish cultivation and no other area in Bengal?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Experiments have been conducted in the Sundarban areas and in no other place. So it cannot be said that the other areas are unfit. I am unable to give a definite reply to the question.

Mr. KADER BAKSH: Is the Hon'ble Minister aware that fish is more scarce in the Rajshahi Division than in other parts of Bengal for want of rivers and dobas and bils; and so it is desirable that more attention should be paid to the cultivation of fish in the Rajshahi Division than in other parts of Bengal?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: May be, the Rajshahi Division is very bad in respect of fish; but we have got a very limited staff. We have to remember that the Department has been started with only 4 District Officers, 2 have been appointed and 2 yet to be appointed. If they have got to cover the whole province, they have to start from one place. If they roam about throughout the whole province, no substantial results can be obtained. We have a mind to spread the work in other areas as well.

Mr. KADER BAKSH: Is it in the contemplation of the Hon'ble Minister to make experiments in the Rajshahi Division in the nearest future? If so, how long after this experiment will be taken up?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Experiments in the Sundarbans have already been started. Experiments in other areas will be started: but how long it will take, I cannot say that definitely.

The Coroners and Criminal Procedure (Bengal Amendment) Bill, 1944.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Saiyed MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Sir, I beg to move that the Coroners and Criminal Procedure (Bengal Amendment) Bill, 1944, be taken into consideration.

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: Motion moved: that the Coroners and Criminal Procedure (Bengal Amendment) Bill, 1944, be taken into consideration.

(The motion was agreed to.)

Clause 1.

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: Clause 1 stand part of the Bill.

(The motion was agreed to.)

Clause 2.

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: Clause 2 stand part of the Bill.

(The motion was agreed to.)

Clause 3.

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: Clause 3 stand part of the Bill.

(The motion was agreed to.)

Clause 4.

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: Clause 4 stand part of the Bill.

(The motion was agreed to.)

Preamble.

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: The title and Preamble be added to the Bill.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN:

Sir, this is a very simple Bill. There is a provision under section 8 of the Coroners Act, 1871, and under section 174 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, that in all cases of death by accident there should be an inquest by a Coroner and an investigation by a Police Officer. Sir, in cases of deaths from bombing by the enemy, it has been found that there have been so many deaths at a time that it has become impossible to hold an inquest and an investigation in time so as to dispose of the dead bodies quickly. Indeed, it is hardly necessary at all to have an inquest or investigation in these cases, because the real object of this inquest is to find whether there has been foul play or not. In these cases everybody knows that there has been no foul play and there is no necessity at all for an inquest or investigation. So this Bill seeks to provide that no inquest or investigation would be necessary in cases of deaths on account of enemy action. This is all that is provided for in this Bill, and I hope the House will accept it, and the Bill as settled in the House will be passed into law.

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: Motion moved: that the Coroners and Criminal Procedure (Bengal Amendment) Bill, 1944, as settled in the Council, be passed.

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that the Coroners and Criminal Procedure (Bengal Amendment) Bill, 1944, as settled in the Council, be passed.

(The motion was agreed to.)

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: Order, order. The House stands adjourned till 2-15 p.m. tomorrow.

Adjournment.

The Council then adjourned till 2-15 p.m. on Friday, the 25th February, 1944.

Members Absent.

BENGAL LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL DEBATES

First Session, 1944—No. 12.

THE COUNCIL met in the Legislative Chamber of the Legislative Building, Calcutta, on Friday, the 25th February, 1944, at 2-15 p.m., being the twelfth day of the First Session of 1944, pursuant to section 62(2)(a) of the Government of India Act, 1935.

Mr. President (the Hon'ble Sir BIJOY PRASAD SINGH ROY, K.C.I.E.) was in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Bengal Mining Settlements Act.

63. Mr. MOAZZEMALI CHOWDHURY: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Public Health and Local Self-Government Department be pleased to state when he proposes to take up the amendment of the present Bengal Mining Settlements Act?

(b) Are there any provisions in the present Bengal Mining Settlements Act regarding the application of the fund of the Asansol Mines Board of Health? If not, why not?

(c) What are the functions of the Asansol Mines Board of Health?

(d) Is there any provision in the present Act of the Board for this purpose?

(e) Have the Government received any suggestion from the Asansol Mines Board of Health to convert the said Board into an Industrial Board and to impose taxes on other industries in the Asansol Mining Settlements? If so, how far do the Government propose to take up these matters?

Mr. BIREN ROY, Parliamentary Secretary (on behalf of the Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi Jalaluddin Ahmad): (a) The question of amendment of the present Mining Settlements Act has already been taken up and views of different interests received in this connection are now under consideration of Government.

(b) No.

(c) The powers and functions are as specified in rules 41 to 60 of the Rules made under section 11 of the Bengal Mining Settlement Act, 1912 (vide notification No. 3591Com., dated the 11th September, 1916).

(d) The honourable member is referred to sections 6 to 8 of the Bengal Mining Settlements Act, 1912, and the rules framed under section 11 of the said Act and published with Notification No. 4100, dated the 19th August, 1913.

(e) No proposal from the Asansol Mines Board of Health for its conversion into an Industrial Board has been received by the Government. The Divisional Commissioner, however, forwarded a proposal of the Board, for imposition of taxes on certain industries within the mining settlement. This is under consideration of Government.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Will the Parliamentary Secretary be pleased to state how long this proposal has been under the consideration of Government?

Mr. BIREN ROY: For the last one year.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Will the Parliamentary Secretary please state why the answer to the latter portion of (b) of this question has not been given?

Mr. BIREN ROY: It has not been answered because an amendment to the Act is being drafted and as soon as that is done, there will be provision for such application.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Will the Parliamentary Secretary please state whether Government think that an amendment of the Act is essential?

Mr. BIREN ROY: Because the Government think it to be essential that is why the amendment of the Act is being drafted. The question has I think been already answered.

Financial position of the Central Co-operative Bank in Bengal.

64. Mr. NUR AHMED: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Co-operative Credit and Rural Indebtedness Department be pleased to state what measures have been adopted by the Government of Bengal to improve the financial conditions of the Central Co-operative Bank in Bengal?

(b) Have any Co-operative Commission shops on the lines of those started in the Punjab been established in Bengal? If so, what is their number?

(c) Have any consumers co-operative societies been started in Bengal for the sale and distribution of foodstuff and other necessities of life? If so, what is their number and in what districts have they been started?

(d) Has any co-operative society for the manufacture of (i) salt, (ii) sugar, and (iii) hand-made paper been formed in Bengal? If so, where and how many have been formed? If not, why not?

MINISTER in charge of the CO-OPERATIVE CREDIT and RURAL INDEBTEDNESS DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Mr. Jogendra Nath Mondal): (a) Establishment of Central Bank Special Debt Settlement Boards for the liquefaction of frozen assets; material reduction in the rate of or suspension of interest on deposits; reduction in the cost of management; and lately introduction of side-business in controlled commodities and standard cloth.

(b) No.

(c) Yes: 200 in all the districts of Bengal, including Calcutta. The majority of Central Banks and important Urban Banks and multi-purpose societies have also lately opened Stores Sections.

(d) (i) No. Manufacture of salt as a cottage industry has been permitted only from April last as an experimental measure. The possibilities of organising co-operative societies will be examined when the industry has worked for a sufficient period and definite results have been ascertained.

(ii) Three, one in each of the districts of Malda, 24-Parganas and Pabna.

The society in Malda only has got its sugar mill which, however, is not working now on account of certain disadvantages, the chief being the open pan system.

In Pabna and 24-Parganas no mill has been established yet.

(iii) No. In normal times hand-made paper cannot compete with mill-made paper and the industry is fast declining.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state whether due to the scarcity of mill-made paper now a days, hand-made paper is in great demand in the market?

The Hon'ble Mr. JOGENDRA NATH MONDAL: Yes, of course.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state then what steps Government have taken as war emergency measure to help the production of hand-made paper and the growth of that industry in Bengal?

The Hon'ble Mr. JOGENDRA NATH MONDAL: It does not relate to my department. But I may say that Government are taking every possible measure to facilitate the manufacture of hand-made paper.

Mr. NUR AHMED: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state why no commission shops have been established in Bengal?

The Hon'ble Mr. JOGENDRA NATH MONDAL: The matter is under investigation and if it is considered fit and suitable the department will take up measures for establishing such commission shops.

Mr. NUR AHMED: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state if such commission shops have been very successful in the Punjab?

The Hon'ble Mr. JOGENDRA NATH MONDAL: I have very scanty information about that. But so far as our information goes, there has been some amount of success in the Punjab; but in Bengal it is said that the possibility is not such as in the Punjab.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, under rule 18, Friday, is set apart for non-official business but from today's agenda we find that it has been taken up for Government business. So my request is that you will kindly see that we get an extra day for non-official business.

Mr. PRESIDENT: During the budget session it is usually taken for Government business. As many members want to express their views on the budget, it is the practice to appropriate a non-official day for the discussion of the budget.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: But during the last session we got an extra day as we had very little time for the discussion of non-official business. I submit, Sir, that if this facility of discussing non-official business is curtailed, it will cause a great hardship. So I would request that another day may kindly be allowed for the discussion of non-official business.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Sir, I think this will be a very long session and the number of non-official days is likely to be sufficient for discussion of non-official business. Even so, if at the end of the session, members want to have an extra day, that may be considered at that time.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJI: Sir, we have had practically no day for discussion of resolutions this session. I think we had only one day for resolutions so far. Therefore, I would request that sufficient days may be allotted for the discussion of non-official resolutions. In view of the fact that it relates to a valued privilege of the members, I hope the Hon'ble Leader of the House will consider this aspect when fixing days for the transaction of non-official business.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I hope in view of what has fallen from some members Government will consider this point.

Presentation of Supplementary Estimates of Expenditure for 1943-44.

The Hon'ble Mr. TULSI CHANDRA GOSWAMI: Sir, I beg to present the Supplementary Estimates of expenditure for the current year.

Additional funds are required under as many as 22 different major heads and the total amount involved is 36 crores and a quarter.

The largest individual demand amounting to 29½ crores is under the capital head "85A". As I have already explained in my Budget Statement before this House, it was originally anticipated that the unadjusted capital outlay on Government's procurement operations at the close of the current year would be a sum of 50 lakhs laid out for the building up of a reserve stock of salt. It is now estimated that over and above this, capital to the extent of 29½ crores will remain invested in stocks of food grains and sugar.

Under "Famine", the original budget provision of 3½ crores is likely to be exceeded by 2 crores 13 lakhs. Apart from larger expenditure on gratuitous relief the more important items responsible for the increase are 33 lakhs for temporary poor houses and destitute camps, 53 lakhs for emergency medical relief centres and 40 lakhs for the free distribution of cloths and blankets among destitutes.

Under "Extraordinary charges", the Budget contained a provision of 3½ crores representing the loss on account of sales of subsidised foodstuff. This loss is now estimated at 5 crores—an increase of a crore and a half. Some extra expenditure is also involved in the expansion of the Department of Civil Supplies and the introduction of rationing in Calcutta and certain industrial areas. The aggregate supplementary demand under "Extraordinary charges" amounts to a little over 2 crores.

The extra demand under "Jails" amounts to 78½ lakhs. It is due to a substantial increase in prison population coupled with the increased cost of foodstuffs, clothing, medicine and other contingencies.

Under "Agriculture", the original budget provision of a crore and 34 lakhs requires augmentation by 59½ lakhs. The increase is due mainly to larger expenditure on "Grow More Food" schemes as a result of advance purchase of seeds for distribution in the coming year.

Under "Public Health", the additional requirement amounts to 41½ lakhs. This includes an extra 13 lakhs under rural water-supply for the provision of tube wells in areas affected by epidemics; 14 lakhs under epidemic charges for the control of cholera and small-pox; and 12 lakhs for the free distribution of quinine.

The extra demand under "Irrigation" is 32½ lakhs. This is necessitated by larger outlay on the repair of the Damodar left embankment and other embankments damaged by flood.

It is not necessary for me to tax the patience of the House by a recital of the reasons for the demands under the remaining heads which are comparatively small.

Honourable members will find the reasons set forth fully in the Explanatory Memorandum under each demand.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: On a point of information, Sir. I find from the "Explanation of excesses", that the excess under the first item was due to a larger number of cases of obligatory commutation of pensions towards the close of the year—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order, order. Mr. Majumdar, today is the Presentation of Supplementary Estimates, 1943-44. You may raise the matter when it will be actually discussed.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Very well, Sir.

Presentation of Demand for Excess Expenditure.

The Hon'ble Mr. TULSI CHANDRA COSWAMI: I beg to present to the Bengal Legislative Council the demands in respect of expenditure incurred in excess of grants and appropriations in 1941-42.

The voted grant was exceeded under three heads, viz., (a) Forest; (b) Ports and Pilotage; and (c) Interest-free advances.

The charged appropriation was exceeded under two heads, viz., (a) Superannuation allowances and Pensions, etc., and (b) Extraordinary Charges.

The reasons for the excess expenditure have been set forth fully in the memorandum which has been placed in the hands of the honourable members.

General discussion on the budget.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, I do not really feel happy as I cannot congratulate the Hon'ble Finance Minister, Mr. Goswami, on the budget presented by him on the 21st instant. The budget as a whole is a budget of desperation,—a drowning man's budget,—clearly the product of a perplexed mind. If I am permitted to say so—it is a Ministry-saving budget instead of being a nation-saving one.

Before discussing the budget, I am under the painful necessity of asking the Government through you, Sir, whether the Government is really serious in having the view of this House on the annual financial statement. Sir, from experience in the past I find that criticisms and suggestions that have been offered in course of the annual discussion of the budget have never been seriously considered by the Government, as will appear from the fact that grievances of this House in particular have not yet been redressed though times without number such grievances are being placed before Government. Sir, credit must be given to Mr. S. C. Mitra, the late President, who by his persistent demand on behalf of the House got at least the principle of inclusion of one of the members of the Upper House in the Cabinet accepted. Sir, a Cabinet consisting of 13 Ministers and an equal number of Parliamentary Secretaries has got only one Minister and one Parliamentary Secretary from the Upper House.

To my mind it is callous neglect of the claims of the rights and privileges of this House in not being given due share in the Council of Ministers and in the appointment of the Parliamentary Secretaries. I cannot but impress on the Government and through you, Sir, on His Excellency the Governor to consider it seriously whether in the formation of the Cabinet at least one Hindu and one Muslim should not be taken from the Upper House. So long as it is not done, it will remain a perennial source of grievance to this House particularly to the Hindus for the present.

Sir, next I come to the question of the appointment of the Public Accounts Committee of this House. Sir, this question is hanging fire for the last several years before the Government and it appears that the Government for reasons best known to them are not prepared to comply with the demand of this House. Sir, the Government of India Act, 1935, and the rules made thereunder do not in any way preclude the appointment of a Public Accounts Committee consisting of members of this House.

I challenge the Government to quote any section of the Government of India Act, 1935, or the rules made thereunder, which directly or indirectly debar this House from appointing a Public Accounts Committee of its own.

A Public Accounts Committee is nothing but a select committee of the Legislature to examine whether money voted upon by the Legislature has been spent for the purposes for which sums were granted to the Government.' Sir, we are not demanding that we should vote on the demand for grants, a power which has not been given to us by the Constitution Act. We concede that this power of voting on demand rests in another place but once the sums are voted upon for a particular item of expenditure, I do not see that there can be any ban on this House to criticize the action of the Government in not spending such sums of money as were voted upon for particular purposes by the Legislature or diverting them to other purposes. Further, the rules and the procedure framed under section 84 of the Government of India Act, 1935, lay down clearly that the report of the Public Accounts Committee shall be placed before the Provincial Legislature and it clearly means that this House has got the right to discuss and criticise such reports.

Sir, the ordinary convention is that reports of Committees appointed by the other House even when placed before this House should not be criticised by this House as it will mean casting reflections on the members of the other House. There can never be any doubt that rules 108 and 109 were framed with the clear objective that this House shall have a Public Accounts Committee of its own and that the reports of such Committee shall be placed before the House for the purpose of criticism and discussion.

In this connection, I cannot but accuse the Government of a partiality for the other House and a bias against this House so far as this matter is concerned.

Sir, this House demanded the appointment of a Public Accounts Committee of its own. The Privilege Committee of this House in unmistakable terms recommended the appointment of such a Committee. Sir, the late Mr. S. C. Mitra who occupied the chair before you actually appointed a Public Accounts Committee of this House but that Committee was never allowed by Government to function. Later on, the question was being shelved by the Government but the alertness of the members of this House forced the Government again to bring back the question before the House. Sir, a Public Accounts Committee of the Upper House is not ultra vires of any section of the Government of India Act and any rules, as has been pointed out. As such, I hope and trust that the Finance Minister should come with a definite and concrete proposal laying down the procedure and manner in which a Public Accounts Committee of this House should function. If, however, no such concrete proposals are forthcoming from the Government, this House will then be forced to have recourse to steps which might not be very comfortable for the Government.

I am now going to deal with the budget which has been presented by the Hon'ble Finance Minister. Sir, its true character is realised only when it is remembered that out of a total expenditure of 30 crores 43 lakhs, 7 crores and 86 lakhs comprising the three items of Famine relief—2 crores 61 lakhs, increase under Public Health 25 lakhs, and losses on Civil Supplies Department's trading operations in selling rice cheaper than at the cost price—5 crores, represent actual expenses for relieving the famine-stricken. This is roughly 23 per cent. of the total Budget at a time when famine and its horrible aftermath of diseases are estimated by the Anthropological Department of the Calcutta University to have carried away 35 lakhs of people; while the number of those who are still hovering between life and death and those who have been undernourished for months and have sold their all must be legion. It is this lack of a sense of proportion and a sense of reality more than any lack of resources which is in a large measure responsible for the failure of the Government to tackle the gigantic problem of last year's famine and prevent its continuance, though in a milder form, at present.

Unless we awake to the stern reality of the situation and make a supreme effort even now, the Bengalee race, save and except a small section of wealthy people, will be extinct. How long can the poor Bhadralogs, among whom our Vidyasagars and Gurudases are born, carry on with rice selling at Rs. 16 as against the pre-famine price of Rs. 4? How long can our non-agricultural labourers like weavers and muchis, ground down by machine-made products,—the former losing a small privilege under the uniform sale tax of an uninformed Finance Minister—remain in the land of the living with half ration and quarter ration? How long can our fishermen struggle—men from whom boats, the only means of their livelihood, were taken away by the over-zealous Government? Is there any item in this budget for their relief? Will not the vast army of precariously employed landless labourers whose ranks have now swelled inordinately by the sale of small plots of land fall dead even if the present rate of rice prevail, not to speak of a higher price? These people constitute 90 per cent. of the Bengalee population. How can we save them? What plan should we adopt as practical men meaning business? To achieve our purpose a re-orientation of outlook is necessary and many of our cherished ideas have to be discarded. The need of the hour is not tinkering with the problem of budget-making, patching up here and there or adding and subtracting a few thousands but a thorough recasting of the budget with the sole object of saving the nation. A potent cause of the famine is excessive provincial taxation carried on for decades. Romesh Chandra Dutt, who with Ranade and Gokhale forms the trio of pioneers in economic investigations in this country, wrote in his essay on "Famines in India" published in 1897 in the Fortnightly Review of England: "But more important administrative measures are needed to rescue the agriculturists of India from their chronic state of poverty and indebtedness. The first and the most obvious means of improving their material conditions is a reduction of the public expenditure, and a corresponding reduction of the taxes which press heavily on those classes. All Indian administrators within the last quarter of a century have contemplated with something akin to alarm the steady growth of taxation". In Lieutenant Governors' days our annual budget was below 7 crores. The actual figure for 1910-11 is 6 crores 45 lakhs and 46 thousands. Even so late as 1930-31, 1931-32, 1932-33, 1933-34, it was roughly 9 crores. Do we live in a better Bengal than in the past? Most of our departments are do-nothing and are kept up to provide people with jobs. For example, the Agriculture Department which now accounts for an expenditure of 1 crore 30 lakhs and 26 thousand has added to its heritage of supine inactivity the present record of spending colossal sums of money on the "Grow More Food" campaign with results not very tangible. This Department, in spite of strong agitation in the Press for years, has been unable to restore cultivation of mustard seeds in Bengal to its former position of 40 years ago when the province was self-contained in respect of this article and we had not to export annually a fabulous sum of money to other provinces for mustard oil coming here. In consequence a prosperous oil-mill industry consisting of 80 mills in Calcutta and 30 in Howrah, almost all owned by Bengalees, has been ruined. The competition of mustard oil from Cawnpore and Bihar has stopped the village 'ghani' and has thrown out of employment our Kalus and Telis whose number, according to the census of 1931, was 3 lakhs 65 thousand. A very large number of Muhammadans did this work of working 'ghanis' in East Bengal. I may be permitted to point out here that in 1938, I, as the Honorary General Secretary of the United Bengal Association of which Sir P. C. Ray is the Chairman, had occasion to draw pointed attention of the Government to this matter but in vain. Wagon scarcity has occurred since the beginning of the present war which is now 4½ years old, and if the Agriculture Department took a little care in this long period, mustard seeds would have been cultivated in plenty and we would not have to buy mustard oil at Rs. 1-8 per seer now. The Jute Regulation scheme employed an army of men in the past but the jute acreage has generally been fixed at such a figure as would not have been exceeded even if there were no scheme at all. This year the acreage has been fixed at the same figure and this has been described by Sir Shafaat Ahmad Khan, Indian High Commissioner in the Union of South Africa, to be one of the causes of this famine. The whole thing is a huge fraud upon the public to show that something is being done in response to the popular demand: that jute cultivation should be so restricted as to ensure a fair price to the grower. The proof of the pudding lies in the eating. The result is that in regard to 1942 crop 35 seers of jute sold at Rs. 14-10 while 100 yards of hessian requiring the same quantity of jute for manufacture sold at Rs. 26. The present rates fixed by the Government are Rs. 15 to Rs. 17 for raw jute while the ruling price of hessian is Rs. 28-8: so that, quantity for quantity, the grower is getting in Calcutta Rs. 14 and the mills Rs. 28-8. The Finlow Committee of Jute Enquiry compiled a table showing the disparity between the prices of raw and manufactured jute over the years 1920-21 to 1931-32 and the ratio was the same then as now. If the lot of the jute growers, 90 per cent. of whom are Muhammadans, cannot be improved on account of the opposition of mainly British Jute interests on either side of the Hooghly though successive Muslim League Ministries have been in power, why this expenditure for carrying out a jute restriction scheme signifying nothing? This is provincial autonomy with vengeance! The Agriculture Department, with "sweet records and promises as sweet", was given 1 crore 35 lakhs last year and is given 50 lakhs this year for the "Grow More Food" campaign. The result has been a big zero in the past and will not be commensurate with the heavy expenditure in future. Rather, instead of more food, political weeds will be grown throughout the province by offering State-aid to those voters who support the M. L. As. and M. L. Cs. of the party of the present Cabinet. In Bengal land has for some time been accumulating in a few hands of agriculturists. The famine has accelerated the process. This new development has to be recognised by all well-wishers of the province and the sympathy which we formerly felt for the agriculturist has now to be transferred to the landless labourer. It was found during the terrible famine months that in Barisal while people died by thousands, a class of land-owning agriculturists was selling hoarded rice at fancy prices and buying sandesh and rasagolla and hilsa fish in every hat in an unprecedented measure. It is this class which, along with others, is now hoarding rice and does not allow the price-level to come within easy reach of the poor and middle-classes. The seeds distributed under the "Grow More Food" scheme will in most cases go to benefit the prosperous agriculturist who can very well take care of himself.

The Co-operative Department takes Rs. 17 lakhs 19 thousand this year. The past record of this department is dismal. Co-operative credit system, so full of promise in a poor country, has failed completely in Bengal on account of the inefficiency of the administrative machinery. Most of the Co-operative Societies and banks are in a frozen condition. In the past the Department got large sums of money from the Imperial Government for improvement of the hand-loom weaving industry. The result, however, was so marvellous that Bengal before famine was flooded by Cauvery sarees of Madras where weavers have been taught new designs for borders and new methods of dyeing. Cannot the hereditary Bengali weaver, the zola and the 'tanti' whose products once carried favour with the ladies of ancient Rome and the daughter of the Emperor Aurangzeb, learn what his Madras brother can? Here, in appointing organising officers in connection with the Central Government's project meticulous care was taken to maintain the Muhammadan ratio with the result that weavers of whom more than 50 per cent. are Muhammadans have been languishing for years before the famine.

Education, which is our second largest item of expenditure of normal times, is being carried on on the principle of robbing Peter to pay Paul. By far the major portion of the provincial revenue comes from the toiling millions. All avenues of taxing the rich, such as the Income-tax and Super-tax, fall within the territory of the Central Government. What right have we to spend a disproportionately large amount on Secondary and Higher education which are not partaken of by poor masses while primary education is sadly neglected? The result of spending the hard-earned money of the tiller of the soil, the fisherman, the potter, the blacksmith and the shoemaker, is the none too inspiring spectacle of the educated unemployed described by Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru as "learned beggars". The amount budgeted for the education of the Scheduled Castes, however insufficient it may be, should be spent. The plan is beautiful but if the building be not raised no useful purpose will be served. Education of tribes, 19½ crores in number, according to the 1941 census, should be specially provided for.

The Industries Department sometime ago claimed to have trained a number of youths in handicrafts and made them bread-winners. The Ananda Bazar Patrika proved to the hilt that the claim was a myth.

The Civil Supplies Department takes one crore and 48 lakhs exclusive of 5 crores on account of rice selling at a loss. Of all culprits, this Department is the most guilty. Why has it evolved the system of appointing contractors with heavy commission bills and godown charges and valuable stocks spoilt for bad storage? I would never tire of pointing out to this House that only 150 miles from here the Government of Bihar is securing immense quantities of rice through the instrumentality of Government officers with Government money keeping the stocks in the godowns of the merchants at their risks. Last year in all towns it maintained an adequate number of controlled shops which were under the supervision of the local gentry and were the very model of efficiency and honest management where buyers had not to wait for more than half an hour, while in Calcutta poor buyers had to wait sometimes for eight hours at night in the midst of a downpour of rain. Sir Thomas Rutherford said on the 7th September, in regard to Calcutta controlled shops:—

It is a farce of control right through. The late Mr. David Yule of Messrs. Andrew Yule & Co., whose sympathy for the children of the soil is still famous and one of whose relatives George Yule was one of the founders of the Indian National Congress, said to an Indian friend at a time when not a single Indian-owned jute mill existed, that Indians would prove their fitness for Self-Government if they could manage a jute mill. If that gentleman were alive to-day, he would be glad to find that Indians managed a number of jute mills and some with machinery manufactured by themselves. Now, judged by this standard what will be the estimate of a Government which could not for months and months manage controlled shops of which the number in those days never exceeded 200 in Calcutta? And this department comes here and asks unabashed for the modest sum of Rs. 6 crores and 48 lakhs! There is a saying among jail birds that if one wanted to send 2 annas to a prisoner in jail one must send a rupee, the 14 annas being meant for 7 intermediaries within the prison through whom the money must pass. I have just a suspicion that of every rupee spent by the Civil Supplies Department, the famine-stricken for whose benefit 5 crores have been set apart by the present budget to cover loss on account of trading operations will not get more than 2 annas in the rupee.

The Police Department takes Rs. 3 crores 2 lakhs and 8 thousand. During Lieutenant Governors' days in 1910-11, it was Rs. 84 lakhs 75 thousand. Has the efficiency of the department been such as to warrant this increase? As soon as the maximum prices of rice were fixed last year rice stocks disappeared in Calcutta the second city of the Empire which has to pay a heavy police bill. Our guardians of Law and Order could not track the hoarder and profiteer and could not unearth the stocks that went underground. The example was followed by other towns and people died by thousands. One cannot imagine how things could be worse if there were no police or only half the present strength of the police. Now spoilt rice is reappearing at Dacca and elsewhere to the tune of lakhs and lakhs of maunds to be sold for the consumption of animals and worse than that the landless beggars.

The administrative machinery in Bengal has been so defective for some time and specially during the famine that to place large sums of money in the hands of the present executive is not only to waste hard-earned money of the poor but to let loose those forces of corruption which will make bad situation worse. The "Statesman" wrote on the 23rd September last, "We say with deliberation that the present famine constitutes the worst and most reprehensible breakdown in India since the political disorders of 1930-31". It again wrote on the 13th January last, "The local civilian shows up badly in comparison" with the military in bringing succour to the distressed. The Governor of the Central Provinces recently referred in clear and unambiguous language to the administrative inefficiency in Bengal. So, why bleed the poor tax-payer on the ostensible plea of relieving him? This is something like drawing blood out of the veins of a weak, diseased man, dropping a considerable quantity outside and then injecting the remainder into the body of the same person.

The present famine is to a considerable extent due to the heavy and ever-increasing burden of provincial taxation carried for decades chiefly by the poor and middle classes and in this process—

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: On a point of order, Sir. Is it not necessary that the Hon'ble the Finance Minister should be present in the House to listen to our remarks?

Mr. PRESIDENT: He has left the House and will come back soon.

Mr. AMULYADHON ROY: Did he take your permission?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Yes.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: —of augmentation the time has definitely arrived for crying a "Halt". Revenue in the budget is estimated at 21 crores 97 lakhs, a record in the history of the province. Dr. Bentley said sometime ago that the Bengali cultivator lived on a diet on which a rat could not live for any length of time. This is the inevitable consequence of heavy taxation. Unless we be prepared to exercise brutal economy in our provincial budget and reduce it to the size at which a hundred per cent. British rule under an able and honest band of British members of the I.C.S. left, this province will become the land of chronic famine. This is only the beginning of the end.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Mazumdar, you have spoken nearly for half an hour.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: I would like to have a little more time, Sir.

Mr. PRESIDENT: How long?

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: About ten minutes.

Mr. PRESIDENT: In that case, I should have to give 40 minutes to each speaker!

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: I believe there are not many speakers for today, Sir.

Mr. PRESIDENT: But that would not be fair to others.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: —Reduce all items of provincial taxation except the amusement tax which may be doubled and even quadrupled. Even in that case not a single seat of our cinemas and theatres will remain vacant. The sale tax should be so designed as to exclude completely all articles used by poor and middle classes, say for example, coarse mill-made cloth and other articles of every day necessity and text books. To attain this purpose not doubling but quadrupling of the tax on luxury articles is desirable.

As soon as the burden that falls inequitably on the poor is relieved, the countryside will brighten up and famine conditions cease. Our rural people are not barbarians. As soon as money is left in their hands, they of themselves will send their boys and girls to schools and send for doctors during illness. Now with their money costly hospitals are maintained where the practising physicians with some honourable exceptions have established the practice of admitting only those patients who can call them and pay "visit" to the amount of Rs. 16 to Rs. 64. A substantial part of the money spent on relief should be used in re-purchasing land sold during the time of distress with Government money and restoring it to the original owners. The Bengali proverb says that it is very difficult to steal a tank. This work of restoring land does not lend itself easily to corruption. Besides, it will be done by the Judicial Department which in this holocaust of corruption all around is the only branch of the administration that appears in bright colours.

Now, Sir, I come to one of the most important constitutional questions. Sir, it is the constitutional convention in all civilised Parliaments that budgets are divided into two parts: one consists of voting of demand for the grant of sums by the representatives in the Popular House for expenditure during the course of the year for the administration of the different departments of the Government; and the other of voting of supplies, i.e., the proposal by which money required is to be raised, and it is always done by means of annual Finance Bills. But, Sir, what do we find today? We find that demands for grants are voted upon by the other House, i.e., the sum required for expenditure on the administration of the different department of the Government. So far so good. But in order to raise the fund required for such expenditure, the Government come out at random with taxation proposals whenever they think they cannot balance the budget. Sir, taxation proposals are always brought before the legislature in the form of separate legislative measures and as soon such legislative measures are passed, they are incorporated permanently in the Statute Book of the province. In all other civilised Governments, even under the Central Government, a Finance Bill is brought before the Legislature annually containing all taxation proposals required for meeting the expenditure of the year under review and such taxation proposals remain in force only during the year under review and are never passed in the form of separate legislations. If they find that taxation proposals held in force are not sufficient to meet their needs, they bring in fresh proposals for taxation and such temporary taxation proposals remain in force only for one year. At the end of the year if the Government find that such taxation proposals are to be continued even in the next year, they ask the legislature to allow them to raise the same taxation for the coming year. On the other hand, if they find that revenue of the Government shows a surplus, they immediately rule out such a taxation. Sir, if such legislations for taxation are made to exist only for one year, Government remain always in an anxious mood to see that the expenses are cut down to the minimum as they can never be certain whether the said taxation will be continued during the coming year or not. But under the existing arrangements in Bengal, whenever Government find that there is deficit they bring in taxation proposals; as soon as taxation proposals are accepted by the Legislature Government know for certain that the said taxation proposals will continue for ever and so they go on increasing the expenditure sometimes unnecessarily, with the result that the question of economy is always lost sight of. I, therefore, demand that all taxation proposals required for meeting the deficit in a particular year must be brought forward in the form of a legislative measure to be enforced during the year under review and at the end of the year, i.e., with the introduction of the next budget, the whole question should be reviewed by the Legislature in order to decide whether such taxation should be continued or not. This procedure will work more or less as a check on the executive Government from raising the limit of expenditure.

Before I conclude, Sir, I cannot but refer strongly to the pledges broken so many times in this House. Still I insist that before they ask the Legislature to pass their taxation proposals this year, they should give a definite undertaking to this House that whatever money is being raised by the increased taxation from the people would be kept apart in separate accounts only to be spent for the purposes of developing the nation-building departments, namely, improvement of agriculture, improvement of village sanitation, improvement in medical relief and improvement in local self-government. These are departments which need the utmost succour if the province is to advance at all. Last but not the least, comes the question of the extension of compulsory primary education. To my mind if sufficient money had been spent all these years for the expansion of education, all the communal squabbles which we find today would have been a thing of the past. Sir, it is the darkness of the minds of the people specially of the masses which is being taken advantage of by the communalist leaders not for the amelioration of the condition of the masses but for the purposes of aggrandising their selfish motives.

Sir, neither the question of music before mosque nor the slaughter of cows would have been a matter of communal squabble, if the Hindu and Muslim masses had been literate. Therefore, I do not blame one community or the other for such communal strife but I blame the system of Government in vogue which is responsible for all our miseries. Had compulsory education been in force all these years and illiteracy removed, any lack of knowledge of self-government and of village sanitation would also have been removed.

With these words, Sir, once again I say that the budget which has been presented by the Hon'ble Finance Minister is a budget which it will not be practicable to give effect to: it is a Ministry-saving budget.

Mr. DHIRENDRA LAL BARUA: Mr. President, Sir, the budget for the year 1944-45, together with the statement of the Hon'ble Finance Minister, is now before this House for its scrutiny. Even a cursory glance through it will suffice to realise the magnitude of the task the Government of Bengal has got to face in coping with a most trying situation created in the province by famine conditions, transport difficulties and pestilences prevailing all over the province. To tide over the various difficulties that are mentioned by the Hon'ble Finance Minister in course of his review of the financial position, it is as much necessary that there should be a whole-hearted co-operation between the Provincial and the Central Governments as there should be a whole-hearted co-operation among all the leaders in and outside the House, as well as between the Government and the people at large.

It is gratifying indeed to notice that Government have been concerned with the question of the welfare of the orphans having no friends and relations. But in my opinion the expression "orphan" should be taken in the widest sense of the term so as to include all destitute children of the land. Not only that, it should also be the bounden duty of Government to see that our women are taken proper care of, for they are either the actual or future mothers of the nation. Coming as I do from the district of Chittagong which is very hard hit not only being within the war zone but also for its being a deficit area as regards the produce of rice, I can tell the House that the condition of our women in several areas is worse than that of the orphans and destitute children. The free supply of medicines and diet must go hand in hand with the supply of food and clothing. I cannot but observe also with satisfaction that the Government of Bengal has not neglected education in all branches. The Civil Budget estimate is shown to be higher than the Revised by Rs. 7,75,000, including a contribution of Rs. 5,00,000 to the Scheduled Caste Education Fund and also increased provision over the Revised in respect, inter alia, of grants to Madrasahs and Sanskrit tols, to the extent of Rs. 1,10,000; but in the case of Buddhist tols there is no such provision made. On the contrary, the actuals of 1942-43 go to show out that of the statutory grant of Rs. 5,900, only Rs. 4,834 was spent. When the Buddhist tols were first started and were fewer in number, the budgeted amount could be disbursed but not when their number has increased and the necessity is most pressing in the present circumstances. I should like to draw the attention of the Hon'ble Finance Minister as well as the attention of the Minister-in-charge of Education to this fact with a request to see that it is not interpreted, for the fault apparently of the officers concerned, as an instance of invidious distinction.

As for special provision of a reasonable sum for the higher, general and technical education of Buddhist boys and girls, I have been crying in the wilderness for the last four years. The need for such a special provision can be felt all the more keenly now from the fact that all the four districts of the Chittagong Division where the Buddhists are concentrated are placed in the war zone and are seriously affected by the famine conditions. The Buddhists are the people who did most in the past to promote the cause of education and culture in this province and also in other parts of India. They are now a small minority. Though the British Government as well as the popular Ministry of Bengal swear by the protection of minority interests, from the fact that they have turned deaf ear to my pitiful cries for a reasonable special budget provision for Buddhist secular education, I am compelled to think as if in the present world-order the number alone counts, and not the cultural heritage nor any other historical importance of a community such as mine. I sincerely hope and trust that Government no longer would neglect the cause of the education of the Buddhist boys and girls.

Mr. NUR AHMED: Mr. President, Sir, with your permission I wish to make a few remarks on the Budget Estimates presented in this House by the Hon'ble the Finance Minister. Sir, the previous speaker has styled this budget as a drowning man's desperate budget; but I think the Hon'ble the Finance Minister should be complimented on presenting a unique budget following a novel method. Sir, this budget cannot be said to be a drowning man's budget. Of course, Bengal was in a very pitiable condition, in a very desperate condition but the Ministry rose equal to the occasion. They did not hesitate to spend money to save the vast population of Bengal from starvation. It was for the timely step, it was for the bold and courageous measures which were taken by the Ministry that Bengal's population could be saved; otherwise they would have gone to the graves in larger numbers. Sir, if the Hon'ble Finance Minister had cared for the finances and had only thought as to how to repay the huge loans, he could not have done so much. Sir, this budget presents a novel way of thinking as to how measures were taken and how money was obtained to save the nation. Sir, nobody can prophesy whether the famine condition will again prevail in Bengal, but we fervently hope that it will not recur. I have compared the present budget figures with the figures of other budget-estimates presented to this House from 1937. One glaring feature in this budget differs from its predecessors. This budget can be called a nation-building budget rather than a nation-saving budget. In the budget-estimates a big rise of 7 crores of rupees in the revenue of the Province is shown as compared with the budget of the year 1937-38, but in spite of this there is a deficit of about 18 crores and 75 lakhs, because Government had to provide for numerous beneficial measures and other nation-building schemes besides repaying its debts.

Sir, Bengal has not been treated very fairly and justly by the Centre. During the last budget discussion I pointed out the injustice done to Bengal.

Bengal always protested that out of its income of 28½ crores, it was given only 7 crores according to the Meston Award. This is only 25 per cent. of its income. Out of the income of Rs. 20 crores of Madras, it was given 8 crores which is about 40 per cent. The U. P. was given 8 crores out of 13 crores, i.e., 60 per cent. of its income. The increased spending power of Bengal as compared with other provinces is very low, as it was given only 7 lakhs by the Meston Award while Madras was given 228 lakhs, the Punjab 1 crore 82 lakhs and U. P. 1 crore 57 lakhs. Bengal protested very rightly pointing out that on account of its increase in population, its industrial development, its monopoly of jute cultivation, its income from the ports of Calcutta, its larger contribution from duties on Customs and Excise, it should have been treated differently from the other provinces. With these rippling resources, Bengal was carrying on and on the top of that there was a serious depression in 1930-31. There was a deficit of 2 crores in that year in the finances of Bengal. Then came the great reforms of 1935 and under the Government of India Act, 1935, according to the Neimeyer Award Bengal's share of the jute duty was raised from 52 per cent. to 62½ per cent. and 20 per cent. of the divisible pool of income-tax was given to Bengal. But, at that time Sir Otto Neimeyer recommended a sum of three crores per year as subvention to the provinces by the Centre but Bengal was not given a single pie out of this sum. With this difficulty Bengal tried her utmost to augment its finances to meet its needs. It appears, therefore, from a comparison of the budget figures of 1937-38 up to 1943-44 that Bengal's income from new taxation had exceeded 2 crores and 20 lakhs and if we take the proposed enhancement of revenue from the Sales Tax and from the Agricultural Income-tax, it will exceed 3 crores. That is, it has taxed itself to the extent of about half of the income originally given to Bengal. Since Bengal has still a huge deficit of 18 crores 65 lakhs, the Centre must come to its help and do justice to it. The Hon'ble Finance Minister in his statement said that he has gone up to the Government of India for subvention and I strongly support Bengal's case for a subvention. Sir, this inadequacy of Bengal's finance was realised by the Parliamentary Committee which recommended that Bengal should be treated differently. In the White Paper there was a recommendation made to treat Bengal on a special basis, and as a result of that, provisions were inserted in the Government of India Act, 1935, to allot under the provisions of sections 140 and 142 of the Government of India Act certain sums from the Central Excise and Customs to the provinces to repair the injustice done to Bengal. Today, Bengal on account of the war emergency stands in a very difficult position. The Finance Minister has said that practically there is no closing balance and this is certainly not a sound position. Then I must refer to the proposal that has been made by the Centre that Bengal should take a loan and pay it off in the course of the year. Sir, I dread the idea of taking loan for this purpose and having to pay it off within so short a time. For in that case Bengal's progress would be retarded and Bengal could not go ahead along with the other provinces. Sir, what is the position of Bengal today? I am quoting from the figure of expenditure of the province in 1930-31. From this, I find that in 1930-31 the expenditure on nation-building departments was 18 per cent. in Bengal as compared with 82 per cent. in Madras and 86 per cent. in the Punjab. Even in normal time Bengal's finance is such that it cannot spend more than that on nation-building departments. Then, Sir, this war has entailed a huge expenditure and placed Bengal in such a position that its deficit has increased. So I think it is the business of the Centre and it is the business of His Majesty's Government to see that Bengal is lifted from her present position and her debts are written off. With these words, Sir, I strongly support the Hon'ble Finance Minister for a subvention for Bengal.

Then, Sir, there is another matter which is very near to my heart and that is the question of education. Education in Bengal, specially Muslim education, has not received as much attention as it ought to have received. With a heavy heart, Sir, I submit that although the portfolio of Education has been in charge of the Muslims for the last 20 years, yet Muslim education has not received its proper share. I do not ask for any undue favour at the cost of the other communities. I want justice to be done to the Muslims so far as their education is concerned. Muslim education should be given a fair deal so that it may progress and the community may eradicate its backwardness. As compared with the other provinces, I find that Bengal is lagging behind. I find that the percentage of Muslim girls in primary schools in Bengal is 55·5: but it dropped down to 14 per cent. in the middle school stage, i.e., it dropped down by 3/4 in the middle school stage. It was 8·9 per cent. in the high school stage; it dropped down to 6 per cent. in the college stage and in the post-graduate stage it is 4 per cent. In the professional education stage, it is 1·9 and in the case of technical education 10·3. Sir, that was the state of things regarding Muslim girl education in 1943. As regards the education of boys also it has not improved very much. We find that in 1940-41, in class I, there were 897,483 boys against 593,915 non-Muslim boys, i.e., 61 per cent.; in class II it dropped to 236,325, i.e., to 19·4 per cent.; in class III to 123,558, in class IV to 80,989 from 897,000. In class V to 30,765; in class VI to 24,916; in class VII, it dwindled down to 15,603 and in class VIII, it came down to 12,793. In class IX, the number is 10,885 and in class X, 10,655. The number of Muslim boys dropped to about 10,000 from about 9 lakhs in class I of primary schools.

As regards University education, in 1942 we find in the first year the number was 2,405 Muslim boys as against 7,792 non-Muslim boys. In the Second Year 2,557 as against 8,911 non-Muslim boys. In B. A. 1,168 in the third year, in the fourth year 857 and in M.A. 297 in the 5th year and 169 in the 6th year. There are only two research students. Thus, in 1942, out of 26,577 boys studying in university and undergraduate classes only 7,516 were Muslim boys.

The above shows clearly how Muslims are progressing in the field of education. Sir, I moved a resolution in this House on the 11th August, 1938 for an allotment of Rs. 25 lakhs in the course of 2½ years. That resolution was carried unanimously but from 1938 right up to now, 1944, no effect practically has been given to this resolution. Sir, not only my resolution was moved, but even the present Leader of the Opposition in the other House, who was once the Prime Minister of Bengal, wanted to set apart in 1930 a sum of Rs. 10 lakhs for Muslim education. Before that in 1929, the Hertog Committee recommended that the Muslims of Bengal should be given extra advantage in the University and other education and they recommended that Rs. 47½ lakhs should be set apart for Muslim education.

Sir, in reply to my question it was said in this House that out of 2,640 scholarships only 840 worth Rs. 2 lakhs and some thousands have been given to the Muslims. With this picture before my eyes, and with this state of things in Bengal, I really feel ashamed that though I cried myself hoarse for justice being done to the cause of Muslim education, the question of Muslim education has not been taken up by any Ministry up to this time in right earnest. Sir, this sort of tinkering with this great problem of Muslim education will not do. No far-reaching scheme has been prepared up to this time. With great respect I draw the attention of the Hon'ble Education Minister to this state of things. I understand that a scheme of post-war reconstruction work is being prepared but the cause of Muslim education is being neglected. I am not asking for favour. I only ask for bare justice.

Now, I will speak a few words in respect of expenditure on Police. I find that expenditure on Police is increasing year after year. As compared with the figure of 1937-38, it has increased by about Rs. 77 lakhs. I wonder why Bengal with a comparatively small area should spend so much on police. While the other provinces manage with lesser sums, Bengal's expenditure on Police is being increased by leaps and bounds every year. Sir, in the year 1940-41 during war time Madras has spent 1 crore 62 lakhs on Police as against 2 crores 73 lakhs on education. In 1942-43 she spent 2 crores 87 lakhs on Police as against 2 crores 95 lakhs on education. Bombay spent in 1940-41 Rs. 1 crore 51 lakhs and 59 thousands on Police as against 2 crores 3 lakhs and 36 thousands on education. U. P. spent in 1940-41 1 crore 78 lakhs and 68 thousand on Police as against 2 crores 18 lakhs and 19,298 on education. Punjab spent 1 crore 28 lakhs and 64 thousand in that year on Police as against 1 crore 60 lakhs and 23 thousand on education. But Bengal spent in the year 1940 2 crores 30 lakhs and 76 thousand on Police as against 1 crore 63 lakhs and 60 thousand on education. Sir, in the revised budget it has increased to 2 crores 89 lakhs. Now, from the present budget estimate we find that it has still increased to 3 crores and more.

Sir, my humble suggestion to Government is that a committee of experts should be appointed to see if any retrenchment can be made in the Police expenditure.

With these remarks I come to the present economic condition in Bengal and the distress that is prevailing. Coming as I do from Chittagong, I must say a few words about Chittagong. Sir, Chittagong stands alone and in a peculiar position being a border land between Arakan and India. Sir, it was Chittagong which was bombed first of all by the barbarous Japanese. It was Chittagong which suffered from the very beginning of the famine. All other parts of this province were no doubt affected but they were affected in June or July, while Chittagong was affected as early as April, 1942. But it is a pity that in spite of its difficulties and sufferings even Chittagong has not received its proper share of justice. Malaria and smallpox are raging there furiously in an epidemic form. I have received reports that there is no lymph available for vaccination purposes, no quinine is properly distributed. It is doubly unfortunate since the Hon'ble Minister who is in charge of the Medical and Public Health Department comes from that district—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Nur Ahmed, you have already taken more than half an hour.

Mr. NUR AHMED: All right, Sir, I will finish soon. I may conclude by saying that Chittagong is now a district where rice is still selling at 1½ seers a rupee in some thanas. So, I appeal to the Hon'ble Minister to see that the brave people of Chittagong are saved, for already a lakh of its inhabitants have gone to untimely grave. I hope, therefore, that the Ministry will not allow any more of them to die in this way for want of food and nourishment, and medical treatment.

Mr. SACHINDRA NARAYAN SANYAL: Mr. President, Sir, I do not want to take much time of the House because I have been taking part in budget discussions for many years. It is customary that the Opposition should criticise the budget but under the circumstances peculiar to this year, I mean due to the war, the Hon'ble Finance Minister is in an extremely difficult position to adjust income and expenditure. I must also say that unfortunately for this House we have got the right only to criticise the budget but we have no right to vote upon its items. I hope, therefore, that the Hon'ble Finance Minister will kindly listen to our remarks and not ignore them because we have no right of vote. If we can give the Hon'ble Minister a few concrete suggestions, I hope he has still ample time to modify the Budget. My first suggestion is that the Hon'ble Finance Minister should kindly see that famine may not recur in the next year, and my earnest request to him is that he will kindly take steps for the maintenance of the poor families of the security prisoners. I also hope the Government of India will respond to the direct appeal of the Hon'ble Minister about rehabilitating famine-stricken Bengal in the situation which is largely the result of War. With these few words, I take my seat.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Do I understand that no other member is willing to speak today?

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: Sir, as I find there are no speakers to speak today, may I speak?

Let us take up the statement which has been made by the Hon'ble Finance Minister, and carefully examine it with a view to see whether he has done his best and whether it is the outcome of a mature policy which ought to be followed in the circumstances in which we are placed now. Sir, the very first point which has been raised by the Hon'ble Finance Minister in his statement is with regard to famine that ravaged Bengal last year. It is a question which is uppermost in our mind and the Hon'ble Minister has done well in placing the subject of famine in the forefront of his statement for the consideration of the honourable members of the House. In considering the question of famine he has taken up the budget of last year and the budget of the coming year together. I think he has done well in lumping the two budgets together for consideration. We have to consider the condition of things that prevailed in Bengal during last year and what is expected during the coming year. With regard to this matter he says that the history of the province so far as the last few years is concerned is the tale of famine and measures taken to combat it and prevent its recurrence. Now, Sir, let us see whether he has succeeded in placing the budget in the light in which he has tried to place it in his statement. Let us consider what has been done by the present Ministry in this connection after it came into office in April last year when famine condition already prevailed in the province. During last year we find at the time the present Ministry came into being rice was selling at Rs. 30 per maund which was beyond the capacity of ordinary people of Bengal to purchase and that Bengal had never been in a situation like that in the earlier years. May we ask what steps were taken by the present Ministry to ease the situation? I do not think it would be out of place for me to remind the honourable members of what was our experience of the past year. What action was taken by the Ministry while Bengal was under famine condition? The first action which the Ministry took was to launch a food-drive in the country for the purpose of taking a census of the food position in Bengal. Now, we pointed out and I repeat with emphasis that the step taken during the last year was a mistaken policy which resulted in bringing about the condition of things which prevailed in Bengal during the months of distress. I repeat it with all the more emphasis which I can command for the consideration of this House in order that the same mistake may not be repeated in the coming year; so that the condition of things may not reappear in a much more aggravated form which will be beyond the control of the present Government, beyond the control of the numerous relief organisations, beyond the control even of the people of this country to alleviate, if the Government take up the same attitude and repeat the policy which they pursued during the last year. And what is the policy which was pursued by the Government last year? Now, before taking up this census there was no consideration as to how the food-drive was to be made. It ultimately resulted, as the things turned out later, in really driving away the foodstuff which were lying in the villages. The food went underground for the profiteers who made profits and the steps that were taken by the Government after the census was taken were responsible to a large extent for the distress that followed. I will support my argument by referring to one or two concrete instances which came to my knowledge during the last year. Neither before nor during the food-drive the Government took any step to prevent the food going to the speculators. The result was that a large number of speculators and merchants with large sums of money at their disposal went to the countryside, took advantage of the panicky condition of the villagers, who in some instances sold away even the foodgrains which they themselves required without keeping anything for themselves. In some cases, the people sold out of panic whatever they had keeping just sufficient for their own purposes, without considering whether they should keep sufficient reserves for their neighbours which they used to do in former years.

Then, another step was taken after the food-drive and that is still more lamentable and I bring that to the notice of the honourable members of this House. The Government requisitioned large amount of stocks which were lying with merchants in Burdwan, Midnapore, Bankura, Birbhum and Dinajpur. The Government did not allow the merchants and mill-owners to distribute the rice among the people though many people were starving. I will cite one instance for the consideration of the Hon'ble Minister. The honourable members of this House will remember that some time in July last there was a terrible flood in the district of Burdwan due to a breach in the Damodar embankment. At that time Government had requisitioned a very large stock of rice lying with merchants and mill-owners of Burdwan. I went to Burdwan and I found that the mill-owners were holding this requisitioned stock—

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: On a point of order, Sir. The Hon'ble Finance Minister is absent, and nobody seems to be taking notes.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: I am taking notes for him.

Mr. CHAIRMAN (Mr. Kamini Kumar Dutta): He has left the House with permission of the Chair.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: Now, Sir, as I was saying, I went to Burdwan and came to know that there were large stocks of rice lying with the mill-owners. I saw some of these mill-owners and they told me that they were willing to sell the rice for relief purposes at Rs. 15 per maund—rice was selling then at Rs. 30 a maund. I asked them whether they made any representation to the District Magistrate in respect of this stock. They replied that the District Magistrate refused to grant them permission to make the rice available for the unfortunate flood-stricken people of Burdwan who were suffering from the results of the flood. I came down to Calcutta to see the Hon'ble Minister for Civil Supplies but I could not see him. Then I went to the Director of Civil Supplies to persuade him to release a portion of this stock of rice for the people of Burdwan who had suffered from the flood in order that they might have this requisitioned rice which was lying next-door at the concession rate at which the mill-owners were willing to sell. I had a long discussion with the gentleman who was then officiating as the Director of Civil Supplies, and he told me after a long discussion of half an hour that he would write to the District Magistrate of Burdwan to release some portion of the stock. But, after a fortnight I heard that nothing was done.

Let me give another instance in respect of the requisition of foodstuffs by Government. At Saktighar, one Panchu Gopal Dewan had stocked 10,000 maunds of paddy and rice. Government had requisitioned all his stock and he was neither allowed to sell it nor did the Government purchase the stock from him immediately. The result was that the whole stock was lying idle with him. Now, shortly before the July flood, a Supply Officer went to this gentleman to see whether this stock of rice was still lying there. On the very day when the Supply Officer went to him what happened was this. There was a slight breach in the Damodar embankment and some water had already come through, and the mill-owner asked permission from the Supply Officer to remove the rice and paddy to a safe place so that it might not be submerged in the flood which was apprehended. The Supply Officer said "No, no, the water will subside soon. You cannot remove the stock from this place." Now, in course of the night the terrible flood came and the whole stock of 10,000 maunds was submerged and destroyed. This is the condition, Sir, with regard to one of the villages.

I would like to quote still another instance regarding the district of Dinajpur. At Dinajpur Government had requisitioned a large stock of rice from the people which was more than 1 lakh and 30 thousand maunds, and this was offered for sale in December when the aman crop was ready. Now, Sir, the whole of these stocks which have been requisitioned by Government in the different districts of Bengal, namely, Birbhum, Bankura, Midnapur, Burdwan and Dinajpur—I have no personal experience or knowledge of any other district—the whole of these stocks was lying under the control of Government while people were dying like cats and dogs in the streets of Bengal for want of food. If the policy of Government is repeated this year, then we will have the same thing, the same distressful conditions repeated in a much more aggravated form in the coming year and therefore Government should take note of this fact that they should not take recourse to the same procedure in the coming year. I would like to mention one matter in this connection and that is this; that if Government want really to help the distressed people and prevent a recurrence of this state of things that happened last year, then Government should immediately launch upon a very extensive programme of taking census of the foodgrains, but before doing so they should stop the export—

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, is there a quorum in the House?

(On a count being taken, it was found that a quorum was present.)

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: What I was going to submit for the consideration of the House is that Government should take an immediate census of the foodgrains for each union and in this connection I would refer to the statement of the Hon'ble Minister himself that the estimates which the Government at present has of the foodstuff in the various districts (estimates of Government that certain areas are surplus and certain areas are deficit districts), Government have themselves admitted that such estimates are merely guesswork, that such estimates are not quite accurate. Therefore, it is essentially necessary that an estimate of foodgrains in each union—I should like to emphasise the fact that the lowest unit should be a union—that Government should take a census of foodgrains in each union as also a census of the requirements of each union during the coming year up to the harvesting of the aman crop. And Government while taking a census as to the requirements should make adequate provision for the labouring classes, and not lay down the rate of 2 chhitaks or 4 chhitaks a day for the labouring population which Government did last year. As a matter of fact, 2 chhitaks or 4 chhitaks is not at all sufficient for even a quarter of a meal of a labourer. A labourer takes at least half a seer for one meal a day and they would, therefore, require about a seer a day, in order that they may be able to work hard in the fields for the promotion of the grow-more-food campaign with regard to which we are hearing so much in the papers but nothing in actual practice. Sir, what is the position as to this? If we take a census of the foodgrains, union by union, and provide a reserve for the deficit unions by removing foodstuffs from the surplus areas, the position may be saved. Here again Government should not come to purchase these foodgrains through its so-called agents whom they have appointed this year. As a matter of fact, what do we find? I had been to Dacca very recently and I found that the price of rice there is Rs. 20 per maund for boiled rice, and Rs. 24 per maund for atap rice; and even at these prices the people are finding difficulty in securing rice. Now, Sir, what is the condition of things in Dinajpur? There, we have been informed that rice is selling at Rs. 10 to Rs. 11 per maund and paddy at Rs. 6 to Rs. 7 per maund. Can Government justify this policy? Can they justify that this policy of purchase and distribution is equitable and perfect? We find that in Dinajpur people have sold rice at Rs. 10 or Rs. 11 per maund while people at Dacca cannot get rice at less than Rs. 20 and Rs. 24 per maund which is higher than the controlled rate. We have to consider this aspect of the case. If we consider the position in its proper aspect, what do we find? We find that Government have sent out agents to purchase rice at Dinajpore and they are purchasing rice from the cultivators at Rs. 10 and Rs. 11 per maund and it may be that the same rice is being sold at Dacca at Rs. 20 and Rs. 24. Why should it not be sold at Rs. 15—the controlled rate—why should not the rice be despatched immediately to Dacca and other deficit districts and sold at the controlled rate so that the people there may get rice—(Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJI: At Bogra rice is being sold at Rs. 9 per maund.)—Yes, the position is still more staggering. What is the policy behind it? While at Bogra rice is sold at Rs. 9 and in Dinajpur at Rs. 10, people in Dacca are not able to procure rice at less than Rs. 20. I, therefore, ask the honourable members of the House to consider whether the selling and purchasing policy of the Government so far as aman crop is concerned is proper and whether it is working properly. If it is not working in a proper manner—and there is no doubt that the scheme of the Government is not working properly—then Government ought to take steps immediately to redress the defects so far as the purchase of aman crop is concerned. I have got a copy of the newspaper in which is published a detailed scheme of the Government as regards aman crop purchase and its distribution. I have analysed the position and I can give facts and figures of four districts to show that their scheme is not working properly and that steps should immediately be taken to revise and set it right.

Then, Sir, with regard to famine which is in the forefront of the Hon'ble Finance Minister's budget statement, Government ought to consider the scheme a little more seriously—Government must get the co-operation of the people at large. Unless we secure this co-operation, there would be great difficulty in having a proper distribution. Foodstuff, for instance, in Munshiganj in the Dacca district is extremely difficult to get and we are told that it is mainly due to war condition, transport difficulty and so on. But we do not know when the war will end and we cannot sit idle on the plea of transport difficulties and let thousands of people suffer. We have to take into account these facts and make each union the lowest unit for the purpose of food census. If you do so there would not be any difficulty of transport. In that case you will be able to get your supplies from the neighbouring places and no transport difficulty will arise as no foodstuff will have to be sent out to far off distances. As a matter of fact, we are now getting alarming news that paddy and rice are being sent away from the surplus districts in large quantities and if this continues we shall have to face a similar situation as last year.

There is another fact which I want to bring to the consideration of the honourable members of this House in this connection and that is this. Last year, the middle class people had exhausted their resources in maintaining themselves. Ordinary people were turned into destitutes. They could not stand the strain. They had to borrow money from Government, they had to sell away their lands, some who were fortunate enough to have corrugated tin-sheds, had to sell them and some had to sell their houses and were reduced to the position of homeless destitutes. This year, the situation is still more grave. Last year the middle class people could hold back their own reserves but they have now exhausted those reserves and if the Government do not fix up the price at a reasonable limit, they will be turned into destitutes this year. Sir, the middle class people are the backbone of the society and if timely action is not taken, the middle class people will be utterly destroyed and they will be faced with a more serious situation. The middle class people saved many destitutes from death last year, but this time they will not be able to save even themselves.

I do not want to take much time of the House. Government should consider this position more clearly before they go on with the purchasing of aman crop. Another thing I cannot leave unnoticed and that is with regard to the Civil Supplies Department. Sir, the cost of that Department in 1942-43 was Rs. 4 lakhs. I ask the honourable members to mark the figures with close attention. We find that in 1942-43 the cost of the Department was Rs. 4 lakhs and this will be increased to Rs. 1 crore in 1943-44. From Rs. 4 lakhs to Rs. 1 crore! Now, in 1944-45, the cost is Rs. 1 crore 48 lakhs. Sir, our deficit is Rs. 10 crores. Out of that this Department alone absorbs Rs. 1,48 lakhs and for what purpose? It is for the Civil Supplies Department, for the maintenance of a large staff, officers, for opening large number of shops under Government control, for providing large number of fatly-paid posts, and for what other purposes I do not like to say; Government may disclose that in reply. But one thing we find and that is this that so far as Calcutta is concerned, there are about 800 shops which Government have started under their own control with Government officers, with Government servants and so forth. They have also 400 or 500 private shops with ordinary tradesmen. Now, Sir, I submit that could not Government have taken the help of the normal trade channel in securing and distributing the foodstuffs in Calcutta? If they had done so, the huge staff that have been employed for running 800 controlled shops would not have been necessary. I think the Government would be able to eliminate this huge staff if they took the help of the normal trade channel. In Bombay Government have taken the help of the normal trade channel in distributing foodstuffs throughout the Presidency town and their work is going on with success and this fact is admitted on all hands. There is no defect in the system and there is no complaint from anywhere, as we find here. I think Government will explain why is it that having regard to the huge deficit of 10 crores they are providing 1 crore and 48 lakhs for the Civil Supplies Department which, if I may say so without any offence to the Government, may be abolished, because this Department is not supplying food to the people sufficiently and properly. The Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Civil Supplies Department told us the other day that from the next week the shops of Calcutta will not supply any bad quality of rice. But this very week we have received numerous complaints from the people to the effect that they are getting rice which is not eatable and one gentleman has received rice which when lumped together was reduced into powder. We all know, Sir, that the provinces outside Bengal do not manufacture rice of such a bad quality and we also know that Bengal does not manufacture such bad quality of rice. Then where does this bad quality of rice come from—this rice which is unfit for human consumption and which spreads disease? I have a strong suspicion in my mind with regard to this matter and that is that Government agents who are in charge of the Government stores and who supply rice to the shopkeepers for distribution among the people of Calcutta supply it from their old stock, keeping in hand good quality of rice that has been supplied by the Government of India. I lay a charge here definitely and I wish the Government to enquire as to where this bad quality of rice came from. We know that the Hon'ble Sir J. P. Srivastava, the Food Member of the Government of India, said that when he sent rice from outside Bengal there was no complaint, and that complaints are coming after four months, and that he is unable to say where the bad quality of rice which the Government of Bengal are supplying to the people came from. Therefore, I ask the Government that they should launch an enquiry as to where this bad quality of rice is being supplied from which is not fit for human consumption.

Mr. CHAIRMAN (Mr. Kamini Kumar Dutt): Mr. Mukherjee, will you take long to finish?

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: Yes, Sir, I will take a little more time.

Mr. CHAIRMAN (Mr. Kamini Kumar Dutta): In that case you had better speak on the next day. The House has to be adjourned now.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: All right, Sir.

Mr. CHAIRMAN (Mr. Kamini Kumar Dutta): The House stands adjourned till 1 p.m. on the 28th.

Adjournment.

The Council then adjourned till 1 p.m. on Monday, the 28th February, 1944.

BENGAL LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL DEBATES

First Session, 1944—No. 13.

THE COUNCIL met in the Legislative Chamber of the Legislative Building, Calcutta, on Monday, the 28th February, 1944, at 1 p.m., being the thirteenth day of the First Session of 1944, pursuant to section 62(2)(a) of the Government of India Act, 1935.

Mr. President (the Hon'ble Sir BIJAY PRASAD SINGH ROY, K.C.I.E.) was in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Substitute diet.

65. Mr. NUR AHMED: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Public Health and Local Self-Government Department be pleased to state whether any committee of experts has been appointed by the Government to go into the question of proper diet and substitute diet?

(b) If not, do the Government propose to appoint without further delay a committee of experts to report about substitute diet for the people of Bengal? If not, why not?

Mr. BIREN ROY, Parliamentary Secretary (on behalf of the Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi Jalaluddin Ahmad): (a) The question of proper diet and substitute diet in Bengal for normal times as well as with special reference to present post-famine conditions is being examined by a Nutrition Sub-Committee of the Sanitary Board and by a Committee constituted under the auspices of the Indian Research Fund Association.

(b) Does not arise.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Will the Parliamentary Secretary please state when Government expect the report of the committee mentioned in the reply?

Mr. BIREN ROY: The committee has already had several meetings and final proposals are expected in a very short time.

Bengal Civil Service.

66. Mr. NUR AHMED: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Home Department be pleased to state whether it is a fact that both the members of the Bengal Civil Service and Bengal Junior Civil Service perform for all practical purposes almost similar duties?

(b) Is it a fact that the members of the Bengal Junior Civil Service draw smaller pay and other emoluments as compared to that of the Senior Civil Service?

(c) Is it a fact that great discontent prevails among the members of the Junior Civil Service in Bengal over their pay and other emoluments?

(d) If so, do the Government propose to stop further direct recruitment to the Bengal Civil Service and to fill up all future vacancies in that service by promotion from the Junior Civil Service in Bengal, strictly in accordance with the Communal Ratio Rules laid down by the Government of Bengal? If not, why not?

Mr. BIREN ROY, Parliamentary Secretary (on behalf of the Hon'ble Khwaja Sir Nazimuddin): (a) Generally speaking, no. But owing to excess deputation to new departments, occasionally it has been necessary to place officers of the Bengal Junior Civil Service in posts which would normally have been held only by officers of the Bengal Civil Service.

(b) Yes; a statement of the scale of pay in each service has been laid on the Table.

(c) Not so far as I am aware.

(d) Does not arise.

Statement referred to in reply to question No. 66.

TIME-SCALE OF PAY FOR THE BENGAL CIVIL SERVICE (EXECUTIVE BRANCH).

Unrevised scale.

Detenu Srijut Ananta Kumar Banikya.

67. Mr. KAMINI KUMAR DUTTA: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Home Department be pleased to state—

(a) if the Government are aware that Srijut Ananta Kumar Banikya of Chandpur, Tippera, is a detenu; if so, how long he has been in detention;

- (b) if the Government are aware that there is no one to support his mother and that she is without any means of subsistence; and
- (c) if the Government propose to consider the question of providing a suitable allowance for her maintenance and give necessary directions in the matter?

Mr. BIREN ROY, Parliamentary Secretary (on behalf of the Hon'ble Khwaja Sir Nazimuddin): (a) Yes, since 16th September, 1943.

(b) My information is that the prisoner has four other brothers jointly living with their cousins and they depend upon the income from several shops which varies from Rs.4,000 to Rs.5,000 per annum.

(c) No.

Mr. KAMINI KUMAR DUTTA: Will the Parliamentary Secretary be pleased to state if any enquiry has been made about the nature of the shops from which the income is derived?

Mr. BIREN ROY: Yes: there are several shops: at Hajiganj there is one shop selling hardware, stationery, medicines, besides there is a stationery shop at Rajganj.

Mr. KAMINI KUMAR DUTTA: Will the Parliamentary Secretary be pleased to state if these shops are still in running order?

Mr. BIREN ROY: Must be in running order, because the income, as is stated in the answer, is Rs. 4,000 to Rs. 5,000 per annum.

Mr. KAMINI KUMAR DUTTA: That was the past income. But what is the income now in the current year?

Mr. BIREN ROY: I have no information about the income today, or up to date, strictly: my information relates income up to the last month.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Is the Government aware that by the detention of this gentleman the joint family has been broken up?

Mr. BIREN ROY: There is no such information.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Do the Government propose to enquire into the matter so that the important question of maintenance may be taken up.

Mr. BIREN ROY: Government may enquire into the matter again.

Rehabilitation of famine-stricken people.

69. Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Revenue Department be pleased to state whether the Government have any scheme for rehabilitating the famine-stricken and diseased people of the districts of Bengal? If so, will he please place a copy of the scheme on the Table? If not, do the Government propose to prepare a well-planned scheme to rehabilitate these people and carry it into execution without delay?

(b) What will be the estimate cost of such a scheme and how do the Government propose to meet it? What has so far been the Government's expenditure to rehabilitate these people?

(c) Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state the approximate percentage of the population in Bengal who have been affected by famine and diseases, such as malaria, cholera, dysentery, small-pox, pneumonia and kala-azar who would come within the benefits of the Government's Rehabilitation Scheme?

MINISTER in charge of the REVENUE DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Mr. Tarak Nath Mukerjee): (a) A scheme of rehabilitation is at present under consideration of the Government but has not yet been finally adopted: no copy can therefore be placed on the Table. Government propose to give effect to the scheme as finally adopted as soon as practicable.

(b) The estimates are now being worked out.

(c) It is regretted that even approximate statistics are not available.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state when is it likely that the scheme will be finally worked out?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: The committee is working on it and we expect its report very soon.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Has any attempt been made to get a statistics of the percentage of population of Bengal affected by the famine and the diseases?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Yes, that matter is also being considered.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: What I want to know is whether any attempt is being made to gather statistics of the population affected by famine?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Yes, as far as practicable, statistics are being gathered.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJI: Will the Hon'ble Minister consider the imperative necessity of coming to a decision immediately in the matter so that the destitutes who are being discharged from the different hospitals may have places to live in?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: The committee is considering all these matters and will come to a decision very soon.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: For the purpose of rehabilitation of famine-stricken people a committee has been constituted: but has any provision been made in the budget for carrying out the schemes which would be formulated by the committee?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Unless a cut and dried scheme is before Government how is it possible to make provision in the budget?

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Are we then to understand that when the scheme is finally worked out it will not be carried into effect till after a year for want of provision?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEE: No, no. It will be carried into effect immediately and the Hon'ble Finance Minister will take steps for this purpose.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, I have a short-notice question which is hanging fire with the Government: it runs as follows:—

“If the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Civil Supplies is aware of the fact that a huge stock of foodgrains supplied by the Government of India for feeding of Calcutta and the industrial areas has been spoilt and rendered unhygienic by the recent heavy showers in Calcutta:

If the reply to part (a) be in the affirmative whether the Government propose to distribute——”

Mr. PRESIDENT: That question has been admitted.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Yes, Sir, I know that. But I do not know what has happened to it.

Mr. BIREN ROY: Sir, tomorrow the Hon'ble the Minister for Civil Supplies is expected to be in this Chamber and he would reply to all these questions personally.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: I have given notice of an adjournment motion regarding the strike in the Bengal Chemical and Pharmaceutical Works——

Mr. PRESIDENT: I have not yet received it.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: I handed that over to the department this morning. Would you kindly find out——

Mr. PRESIDENT: At what time did you hand over the motion?

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: I think at about 10-30 or 10-40.

Mr. PRESIDENT: If it was handed over at 10-30 a.m., then 3 hours' notice has not been given.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: But the office opens at 10-30 and I thought that there would be some people to receive it. Previously we used to sit at 2-15 p.m. and the usual notice was to be given at 11-15 a.m.

Mr. PRESIDENT: In that case we might take that up tomorrow.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: All right, Sir.

General Discussion on the Budget.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: On the last occasion when the House rose I was speaking on the situation of the famine and the question of having a census with regard to the food products of this year and I pointed out that if the matter is not taken up immediately, we may have to face a worse situation this year than that of last year. As a matter of fact, if I give certain figures with regard to the policies followed last year by Government, it will be found that unless we are careful from now, possibly we will have to face a similar situation also this year. On the 24th February, 1943, Khan Bahadur Hashem Ali Khan, who was then the Minister in charge, disclosed in his answer that the estimated produce of rice in Bengal was 69 lakhs tons for 1942-43, and the estimated consumption of rice was about 93 lakhs tons. That meant a deficit of 24 lakhs tons. On the basis of 93 lakhs tons of rice for consumption annually, the monthly requirement comes to about $7\frac{1}{2}$ lakhs tons. So, if we take the deficit of 24 lakhs, there was a deficit for 3 months only, which would mean that if Bengal is kept on full ration for the first 9 months, January to September, there would be deficit of foodstuffs for the months from October to December. Supplies from Burma with regard to which we were hearing so much amounted to about 4 crores maunds of rice per annum or 15 lakhs tons of rice, but this source of supply was completely stopped. I may mention for the honourable members' information that a substantial portion of this Burma rice used to be re-exported and therefore the question that stoppage of import of Burma rice is the main cause for the deficit last year cannot be substantiated. The deficit of 24 lakhs tons, as I said before, would only affect the province from October. If we take into account the carry-over of 1941-42, then the deficit would only have been from November. With the aus crop in September, 1943, we would have carried on for another month, that is, November; and the situation would have been controlled if supplies were made available from outside the province of Bengal in the shape of wheat, etc. The early aman crop which appeared in the middle of December would have saved the situation and Bengal would have stood on its own legs even with the deficit of 24 lakhs tons which were disclosed on the floor of this House by the Hon'ble Minister. Now therefore, what I want to point out to the honourable members of this House is that either the estimate was wrong or there was something wrong in the method of distribution or there was something wrong with regard to the procurement or there was some mistake somewhere which led to the cause of the famine and neither the failure of crops nor the stoppage of imports of rice from Burma should be made the cause of the famine last year. We have to look for the cause of the distress of last year somewhere else. It is, therefore, I say with all the emphasis which I can command that this year we should not commit the same mistake as was done last year. If we want to save the people of Bengal, we must take a proper census so that we may not be faced with the situation of transporting large quantities of rice from some areas to other areas where unfortunately there are no foodstuffs for the consumption of the people. That is why I have urged that there should be a census taking each union as the unit and then sufficient provision should be made for feeding for the people of the union. Now, Sir, I have said enough with regard to this subject; I will take up the next subject which is connected with the question of the famine, that is, agriculture. On the question of agriculture, I find, Sir, that the Hon'ble Finance Minister in his statement says that there were approved schemes of seed distribution which included aus and aman paddy seeds, rabi seeds and others, and with regard to this distribution of seeds and their procurement again unfortunately I have to refer to some incidents which came to my own notice during the last year. It is with regard to the subject of distribution of wheat seeds to the cultivators last year. I myself applied for obtaining supply of wheat seeds from the Agriculture Department and the seeds that were supplied to me were very bad, because when they were sown they did not germinate, and as the same seeds were distributed at my instance in the whole village, the cultivators were faced with a very bad situation. As a matter of fact, they had to cultivate their lands again with fresh seeds procured from somewhere else at enormous cost and the result was that the late sowing did not give the normal yield. I enquired from the Director-General of Agriculture about the bad quality of those wheat seeds and was informed that the whole stock of wheat seeds procured by Government was lying in an open field and so got damped and deteriorated. It was further stated that the total value of the seeds thus wasted was about 7 lakhs of rupees, and by the time instructions reached the various officers of the Agricultural Department not to distribute the seed, they had already distributed the stuff to the cultivators who could not know that the stuff was bad. I, therefore, say, Sir, that this sort of procurement and supply of seeds not only cause immense loss to the cultivators but also bring discredit to the Government process of distribution of seeds. The people lose all faith in purchasing seeds supplied by Government because they find that these seeds do not germinate. Sometimes they no doubt purchase seeds from markets which are bad. With regard to seed distribution, I would like to suggest—and I think the Hon'ble Agriculture Minister who is very active and sympathetic and wants really to save the cultivators of Bengal—a scheme for the purpose of procurement of seeds. I suggest that attempts be made to grow the seeds in the province itself by taking the help of large cultivators, by subsidising them with funds for better kinds of seeds so that they may be grown in each union for distribution among cultivators in that union. It is in that way that the problem of seed distribution and the "Grow More Food" campaign with which we are now dealing and which is now one of the main problems which Government is tackling can be made effective. I say that the "Grow More Food" campaign will not succeed by merely spending a huge sum of money on establishment and printing literature for distribution. Our cultivators are not lacking in knowledge about actual cultivation; they are in want of funds and therefore they cannot procure seeds; when they find that seeds are not available sometimes near about their villages they do not take the risk of spending large sums for the purpose of procuring seeds from somewhere else. I would like to suggest while on this subject that another important thing is the procurement and distribution of manure. With regard to the manure I would state that there is a scheme for the production of scientific manure on a huge scale, viz., ammonium sulphate and other chemicals which I need not name but that scheme is lying shelved and cannot be given effect to. If the Government want the "Grow More Food" campaign to succeed, they should immediately take steps to give effect to the scheme for the production of manure as without its help it would not be possible to make the experiment a success. Sir, I leave the subject of Agriculture for the time being. So far as Education is concerned, I find that the total provision is one crore 90 lakhs and 74 thousand for a population of 6 crores. That is, the Government of Bengal is spending the huge sum of 5 annas a year for each individual for educating the people of the province. I would only leave these figures for consideration of the House; further comment is useless. I would like to emphasise to the Hon'ble Minister for Education that he should see that very substantial and liberal provision is made for education of the people of this province and sooner a scheme for compulsory primary education for all is taken up the better—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Mookerjee—

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: Sir, I will finish now. Please let me have only 5 minutes more.

Mr. PRESIDENT: All right.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: So far as the Revenue Department is concerned, I would like to make only one comment and that is with regard to the question of the manufacture of salt in this province. With regard to this matter I find that the Hon'ble Minister has provided only Rs. 12,000 for the salt scheme and the scheme is to continue till June, 1944. I personally know, Sir, that so far as salt production is concerned, there are immense possibilities of salt manufacture in the subdivisions of Contai and Tamluk in the district of Midnapore, and, as a matter of fact, during the last distress there were many people who maintained themselves with the income derived from the production of salt from the salt areas and selling it in the markets. I would, therefore, request the Hon'ble Minister that so far as salt manufacture is concerned, he should try to make it a permanent scheme and get a suitable provision for this scheme in order that there may be a permanent department in Bengal so far as salt production is concerned. I do not think that with the time at my disposal I can deal with other subjects which I intended to dwell upon; so with these words, I close my discussion.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJI: Sir, my friend Mr. Bankim Chandra Mukherjee—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Rai Bahadur, you should speak from your seat.

Mr. KAMINI KUMAR DUTTA: Mr. President, Sir, though the Budget presented by the Hon'ble Finance Minister is really a very dismal Budget, yet it is couched in very charming phraseology. I must congratulate him on his remarkable ability in hiding the distressing features of this Budget with suggestive palliatives. I hope, Sir, my friend is taking notes as I am saying something which deserves attention. In the case of all the budgets which sanction grants, the basis of the grant is the receipts. First receipts must be procured and guaranteed, and then only grants can be provided—whether it is in the shape of taxation or loans or subvention. In the Budget statement the Hon'ble Finance Minister has told us that he hoped to raise receipts to the extent of 10 crores more than was raised in the preceding year—"the ever expanding social functions of the State call for greater elasticity of revenue. If to a certain extent and in last resort the State is force, a truer conception of organised human society is that the State is service. And to this end we will, whenever necessary, tax ourselves". I do not quarrel with that general proposition laid down by the Hon'ble Finance Minister, but since one who pays the piper must call the tune, we in the Upper House always feel the unreality of the Budget discussion because we know that we have no voice either in voting the grants or in the taxation. These financial measures providing for the finances are practically adopted permanently and they are made permanent statutes of the country. Sir, a particular tax may be imposed for a particular occasion, but even when the necessity for the occasion does not exist it remains permanently on the statute book of the country. In the Central Legislature we find that these Finance Bills are introduced annually. They first obtain sanction for the receipts and then the sanction for grants. We want this principle to be adopted in the Legislature in Bengal so that we may have voice in regard to the taxation measures every year. We want to know first whether tax ought to be allowed or not. But here the procedure is that the taxation measure becomes a permanent thing for all time irrespective of the question whether the exigency of the situation demands it or not. There is no reason why we should not follow the procedure which is followed in the Central Legislature. We should follow the convention which is in use there. Of course, I have no personal experience of the Central Legislature or of the House of Commons in Great Britain, but so far as I can gather from the reports, the same practice is followed everywhere. I think those who are holding the reins of administration should not fight shy of this procedure at all. They should see that taxation measures are not made permanent. As representatives of the people they should not think that their only business consists in making their position secure once for all. In this respect I do fully agree with the leader of the Nationalist Party that taxation measures should be introduced annually and sanction should be obtained first. I would appeal to you, Sir, to help this House to adopt the procedure which is followed in the Central Legislature. Otherwise it is absolutely useless and unreal to discuss the Budget generally. I would repeat my request to you, Sir, as the custodian of the rights and privileges of this House, to see that henceforth this practice is adopted in the Legislature of Bengal too.

In discussing the Budget generally, I would not discuss the items which are really items for building up the nation. I think it will be a huge joke on the House on my part if I discuss all the items. Because when one takes the whole Budget looks at it, scrutinises one or two items, he finds one factor looming large and what is that factor? That factor is nothing but the problem of supplies of food which means the question of our existence, the existence of the nation as a whole. So when practically the whole budget is engrossed with our life and death problem, discussion of a nation-building department would be nothing but a farce. The people had to live first, then they would discuss the matter of future development; but it seems the existence of the nation as a whole is at stake. I am not exaggerating when I say that really our existence is at stake. Behind these figures in the Budget there is a dreary picture of want of food, a dreary picture of famine and of epidemic, the necessary sequel of famine. One who has had experience of the suffering of the people of this province for the period since September last would only shudder to think what is in store for the future. Those who were lucky enough not to see with their own eyes and had not to come in contact with thousands and thousands of people who were crying for a morsel of food would not be able to appreciate the position in which the country was plunged. Indeed, in one place the Hon'ble Minister has remarked "Bengal once so richly dowered with Nature's bounties is today bent double with woe and agony and is a suppliant for neighbourly charity". I can only say that to be a suppliant for neighbourly charity means the negation of manhood and it means the negation of the elementary right to live. Charity cannot keep a nation living. I was connected with some of the organisations for supplying food to the poor and some of the gruel kitchens. When I saw people going with bowls in their hands for a cup of gruel, I thought within myself—it may be that my statement makes me liable for penalty—but nevertheless I thought why these people flocked to the gruel kitchens, it would have been more honourable for them to resort to robbery and looting than to go to a gruel kitchen for a cup of gruel: it is a negation of manhood and is killing the manhood in the nation. Indeed, I did tell some of my friends that these gruel kitchens are teaching the people that they have no right to live and that they have to live upon the charity of others. I told these people that they should demand their food of those who are in charge of the administration and that they should cry about that they have the right to live as anybody else and assert their right to live not on charity not on this grant of medicine or other things but to live on the products of their own toil and enterprise. So when I read the catalogue of the organisations and the history of how supplies were given, my heart sinks within myself. Is it really the Budget for a living nation or is it the Budget of a nation which consists of beggars who live on the charity of others? I would again implore, I would again appeal that the nation should not be a nation of beggars but the nation should have manhood and should know how to assert its right to live under the Sun. Now, Sir, this Civil Supplies Department is, according to the Budget a huge organisation. I have some personal experience of the working of this machinery in the rural areas but not much of towns. My idea is that this machinery is over-burdened with officers and that its upkeep eats up the major portion of the huge sum allotted to this department. Very little is left really for the people. This department seems to have been created without any plan to save the people. Sir, I have come in contact with many of the officers who think that they are officers and their supplies are therefore assured and secured but the desire to serve, real sympathy for the people is wanting in them. Instances are not very rare when complaints of corruption and bribery have reached the Government and I say that I have every reason to believe that these charges are not always unfounded.

One of the Ministers happened to be present in my town and there was a small conference at which some of the officers were also present. I had a talk with the Hon'ble Minister about the bribery and corruption and greed, not the greed of the profiteers only but the greed of the officials too, corruption among the officials too. It seemed that desire for greed had infected the whole atmosphere of the country. Every one thinks that it is a fine time in which to make a fortune out of the distress of the people. People are trying to build their fortune on our misfortune and to the Hon'ble Minister I said that even your officers who were beyond reproach sometime back have succumbed to the temptation and have been corrupted. He asked me, "do you mean officers of the position of the Subdivisional Magistrates, or higher officers"? I said that I did not know of higher officers but they were reported to be of the rank of officers of whom he was speaking. I say, Sir, that these officers have succumbed, and if the Hon'ble Minister wants to know I could give him the figures and tell the names of the guilty officers even in that very conference itself. The Hon'ble Minister told me that some of the complaints were true and that some had reached his ears also. After this, Sir, what better is expected? If there is this unholy alliance between those who are to work the organisation and the profiteers, can you expect any good out of this department? The normal trade channel has collapsed; practically it has been stifled out. Of course, I do not say that they are all men of virtue; they are suffering for their own faults. They had their greed too: but not all, but some. But the result has been that there has been the total collapse of the normal trade channels with the consequence that nowhere do we find any supply today. We find,—of course, I do not know the exact source, but I can only surmise—that there has been distribution of foodstuffs in the country which is of an absolute rotten quality. Where was this foodstuff when the people were dying for want of food? Why was not this foodstuff released earlier? A report has reached me from an authentic source that this Government has asked some chemists of the Government laboratory if any profitable use can be made of the rotten rice for any commercial purpose. If expert chemists can find some means by which this rotten rice can be used for commercial purpose—rice snatched away from the hungry mouths of millions, it would be something. But the reply they have got from the experts is that the rice is absolutely rotten and cannot be converted into useful commercial commodity. If it is not so used, the result we know would be to give it to the hungry people to eat and invite disease and epidemics.

In the budget estimate under the head "85A", the Hon'ble Finance Minister has remarked that this head was opened in the current year for the expansion of the large scale transaction undertaken by the Government to promote healthier marketing condition in respect of certain commodities of foodgrains. Personally, I would say that I agree with the Hon'ble Minister that a scheme of this kind should be adopted. But there is some defect in it, because there is no reality, no real desire to work it out successfully. I would ask the Finance Minister if Government have any desire to work it. These schemes seem quite all right on paper; there is nothing wanting about it. But if the question be put—has it really resulted in the healthier growth of the condition of foodgrains—the reply would be simply an emphatic “no”. Whatever statements are made here—whatever statements are made in the press, whatever communiqués are issued we know that they are mere eyewash—mere propaganda. We know what is the real condition of the people. People have no confidence in the Government and the Government have no confidence in the people. I say this because we find that in the working out of the schemes of food supply Government did not ask for the co-operation of the non-officials at all. If they had asked for the co-operation of the non-officials, I can assure them that it would have been available to them in plenty and still it is available to them in plenty: people are anxious to serve to solve the food problem irrespective of party politics. The problem of food is outside the party politics. It is the problem of the whole nation. But no co-operation has ever been sought for from the non-officials. I do not speak from theory. I am one of those who offered his co-operation; but the officials are afraid of us: if we go into the organisation perhaps the back door policy and bribery and corruption would be stopped. So they do not like that we should be in the organisation. No non-official co-operation was sought for. So I say Government have no confidence in the people and the people have no confidence in the administration and we are moving in a vicious circle. This proposition of promoting healthier marketing condition therefore cannot materialise. What is the condition in the rural areas? Of course, in Calcutta there is rationing and in some of the mufassil urban areas rationing is being introduced, but there is no rationing in the villages uptil now, and irrespective of the question whether rationing introduced has been a success or not, so far as the present condition of the country is concerned, people are shaky and very panicky. They do not know what would happen. They are apprehending a situation similar to that of last year. Foodgrains do not come sufficiently in the markets and at the same time from the various reports we find, the reports may be baseless or may have some foundations, that Government are making huge purchases—

Mr. W. B. C. LAIDLAW: Sir, may I interrupt the Leader of the Opposition to raise a point of privilege? It is a privilege of this House annually to discuss the Budget and truly it is a breach of privilege of the House if the Hon'ble Ministers be not present here to listen to the discussion. The Leader of the Opposition has been talking about foodstuffs and the famine and I have not seen the Minister of Civil Supplies throughout the Budget discussion and even the Finance Minister himself was absent for a short while.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I think it is a very important point of privilege that has been raised by Mr. Laidlaw. It may be that Government are taking notes of the various points raised by the members of the Opposition, but Government should realise one fact that this House does not vote on Budget items. So this House does not get an opportunity of expressing its views on them. Therefore, it is probably desirable that the Hon'ble Ministers in charge of different departments should be present as far as possible, so that they might reply to the various points raised by members in addition to a general reply which would be given by the Hon'ble the Finance Minister.

May I know the views of the Leader of the House in this matter?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Saiyed MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN:

Sir, I have been taking exhaustive notes of the discussion to be handed over to the Hon'ble Minister.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Yes, but at the same time I hope you appreciate that the Hon'ble Ministers' presence is sometimes necessary.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Saiyed MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN:

Sir, Mr. Suhrawardy was away from Calcutta. He came only yesterday and he is perhaps very busy with other urgent work regarding food supplies.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Sir, as you have very rightly said that we do not get opportunity to discuss the Budget separately and that this is the only occasion when members get an opportunity of discussing various matters, one by one. My honourable friend just now said that Mr. Suhrawardy has come and is engaged with other urgent work, perhaps thinking that this discussion is not sufficiently important. But this reply in another place would not have been satisfactory. I do not think there his reply would be acceptable. Therefore, through you, Sir, who is the custodian of the rights of the House, I request that at any rate during the Budget discussions for these two or three days every Hon'ble Minister should make it a point to be present in this House and listen to the suggestions of the members of the House.

Khan Bhadur M. A. MOMIN: Sir, I entirely agree with what Mr. Laidlaw has said, and it is very depressing for members to find that the Ministers are absent as they do not feel any encouragement to speak out their minds. It is no use my honourable friend Khan Bahadur Saiyed Muazzamuddin Hosain's saying that he is taking exhaustive notes. He may be taking very exhaustive notes. As a matter of fact, the official reporters are also taking verbatim reports of speeches. But will the Ministers read the speeches or the notes? They have never done that. The only thing that they can be expected to do is to have some impression after hearing the members so that they can speak out their minds. But, if they do not avail themselves of this impression even, I do not think it is any use our trying to speak either for or against Government, for that would tantamount to speaking in the wilderness.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I hope the Hon'ble the Leader of the House will realise one fact that not only the Opposition but also the supporters of Government have the same feeling about the absence of the Hon'ble Ministers. I hope you will kindly convey this information to your Hon'ble colleagues.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Saiyed MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN:

Yes, Sir, I will do so.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Sir, I was going to suggest that on a previous occasion when the then Hon'ble Finance Minister—I think it was Mr. Suhrawardy who was then Finance Minister—went away during the Budget discussion, the House was adjourned for 20 minutes till he came back.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The Hon'ble the Finance Minister is here.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: But just now we are discussing a subject which relates to the Civil Supplies Department, and therefore the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the department ought to be present in the House.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Reply to the general discussion on the Budget is generally given by the Hon'ble Finance Minister, but as the food problem has assumed undue importance this year, the presence of the Minister in charge of the Civil Supplies Department is desirable, and am I assured by the Hon'ble the Leader of the House that he will request his colleague the Minister in charge of the Civil Supplies Department to attend tomorrow?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Saiyed MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Yes, Sir.

The Hon'ble Mr. TULSI CHANDRA GOSWAMI: I think, he is away from Calcutta.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Saiyed MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: No, he has come back.

Mr. KAMINI KUMAR DUTTA: Sir, as a matter of fact, it has not inspired the confidence of the people. It has not stabilised the market in the least. People had no faith in the measures taken by the Government. In the same district I have observed different prices in different parts. It is not only that the prices differ in different districts but even in the same district prices vary. It depends not upon the failure of the Government but upon the surroundings and circumstances of each area. Practically, the market has not been stabilised in the least. In some of the urban areas in East Bengal, I can speak from personal knowledge, rice is not available in the towns. It is available in the rural areas. Rice sellers do not come to the markets. They roam with loads of rice on their shoulders from house to house, or if anybody takes the trouble to requisition rice from the villages, then they came from the villages with their loads of rice. They do not come to the urban areas. Why? Because, if they come to the market, they will be forced by some of these officers to sell the rice to the officers or their supporters at any price they dictate. It is better for them to have a free market, to attend to other customers than their usual ones. I tell it and I tell it very frankly, Sir, that these officers who are there for supplying articles and who are for affording supplies to the people never inspire these men with confidence; they are rather looked upon with suspicion. There is a general talk among officers and we have been heard the people saying that if a general line officer were transferred to the Civil Supply Department, he would come back as a most fortunate man when he returned from that department. So, Sir, as to the effect of all this also Government should take note: it is not at all desirable. It may be said that the war condition has contributed to this economic disruption of the country. Now, Sir, Bengal is a province which is on the frontier, in the war zone and on the border of an enemy-occupied country. But that is not a fact which was not known to the Ministry: it was known to them all through and anybody holding the reins of administration should have forethought that the problem of supply would be an important problem to face in the war zone. Bengal is today in the war zone. Of all the provinces in India the situation of Bengal is very peculiar. So, the exigency of the war can be no excuse. If we compare Bengal's position with countries which are actually engaged in war, for instance the United Kingdom, we find that when the war actually broke out there England had provided for the food of the people for years; but here, Sir, it appears that the Government was merely toying with the situation. This problem of food they thought was a commercial concern; they thought perhaps at first that it was a concern in which for the time being people might make some fortune and the result of that has been that some fortunes have been built up at the cost of the death of thousands of our unhappy countrymen. And it has a far-reaching debilitating effect on the rest of the population which was left to survive. Sir, what has been effect of this bungling of the food situation in this country? If you go to any part of the rural areas of Bengal you would find that the class of people who used to be strong and sturdy have become weak and have lost their vitality for work. The labour population has become decimated and emaciated. Sir, today we are also talking of the "Grow More Food" campaign. Sir, food will not grow by pasting posters in the cinema houses here and there and in the crossing of roads. Food has to be grown by human hand, but that human agency is lacking in the country. If any one would go to the rural areas, he would not be able to find any agricultural labourer. The labour population has been considerably reduced on account of deaths due to starvation and its concomitant factor, disease, which they could not resist. Sir, I am a man who lives in the town but for a considerable period of time I also remain in the rural areas. I have travelled through villages and have found many of the villagers to have been pitifully shrunk down on account of under-nourishment. Medicine is being distributed now. In our part of East Bengal there are some military units working in the matter of distributing medicines and I am glad to admit that they have been doing wonderful work. In my own district these units are working. But medicines cannot save under-fed men. It cannot save the lives of the people: it may cure disease but unless food is given one cannot survive. Then, Sir, speaking of the craftsmen who used to follow the various crafts for their livelihood do not now find any crafts: they are also dying. Various classes of people who used to follow various classes of crafts are dying and their number has been reduced to a considerable extent. There is another problem facing us. In our country there is no scientific cattle-breeding. In other countries there is scientific breeding—countries which know how to live. The cattle in this country is not of a high quality. There is dearth of cattle and there is not sufficient cattle for agricultural purposes. This is a problem which should be carefully considered. We talk of "Grow More Food" campaign—we talk of improvement of agriculture. But in agriculture human agency is labour and animal agency is cattle—both are wanting. With both wanting there should be no talk of "Grow More Food" campaign. I have been informed that shortly an order would be promulgated under the Defence of India Act under which people will not be able to leave any land fallow—without cultivation. This, Sir, is a healthy measure. Not a single inch of land should be allowed to remain fallow. But mere introduction of this rule will not do. Land must be ploughed, crop must be grown, simply the semblance of the growth will not do. Government should apply its mind to meet this problem. Merely publication of posters will not do. They must see that there is intensive cultivation to make the "Grow More Food" campaign successful. They must supply good seeds, they must supply good manure necessary for healthy growth of crops. They cannot make the "Grow More Food" campaign a success by mere posting placards here and there and making a few propaganda lectures. People should be taught to grow healthier crops. They should go to the rural areas and educate the rural population on the subject of agriculture and they must themselves know how to educate the rural population. There are vast tracts which can be reclaimed and released in the Sundarbans and other areas. These should be released and reclaimed and brought under cultivation. Let this campaign be real "Grow More Food" campaign and not a campaign of job-hunters and a few propaganda here and there. Propaganda alone will not do. Propaganda cannot save the lives of the people—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Dutta, how long will you take to finish your speech?

Mr. KAMINI KUMAR DUTTA: I shall finish in a few minutes. Now, it may be said that war has raised various exigencies and the Provincial Government is not in a position to meet all the exigencies of the situation. I do agree with that. But it will be the duty of the Government to make a demand from the Centre to render aid to the Government of Bengal in this abnormal situation.

I will not take any more time of the House. It is not necessary to discuss the other items of the Budget. I have already said it would be absolutely unreal to discuss any other problem now. The only problem is the problem of our existence as a nation, living as a nation, problem of feeding the nation. We have a right to live and we shall live.

Mrs. LABANYAPROBHA DUTT: Mr. President, Sir, I must congratulate the Hon'ble Finance Minister on his boldness in presenting an unusual Budget in these extraordinary and emergent times, but I cannot refrain from making a few observations.

The Hon'ble Mr. Goswami has been at pains to explain the huge deficit and to satisfy some of the sectional interests by setting apart Rs. 5 lakhs a year for Scheduled Castes education, Rs. 1 lakh for communal harmony, and so on and so forth. Even in this House I have heard speeches by members for and against the Government touching such interests. Mr. Barua raised the question of education of Buddhist minorities, but nobody has spoken on behalf of us, the women of Bengal, who represent more than 50 per cent. of all sections of the population—Hindus, Muslims, Christians, Scheduled Castes, etc. Has any sum of money been ear-marked by the Finance Minister for the extension of primary education amongst girls or has any provision been made for making such education compulsory amongst girls in this province?

The Hon'ble Minister for Local Self-Government Department in the course of a reply in this House once said that there were 170 women medical practitioners in Bengal with a population of nearly 65 millions and when questioned further he stated that he would consider the question of providing more facilities for training of women in the medical line. Has any provision been made for the encouragement of young educated women in this province to take to the medical profession in this time of widespread distress when epidemics are raging in various parts of Bengal amongst womenfolk and children specially? Is it not yet apparent to the Government that money should be spent for training a large number of women as health visitors and nurses even by giving allowances, scholarships in all the district hospitals of Bengal, and if necessary, by opening such Health Visitors' Training Schools in 10 or 15 selected towns? The most important need of the hour is to confer the benefit of expert medical help at the time of child-birth and the provision of improved maternity homes in every district and sub-divisional centres of Bengal should have been provided with a good share of the provincial revenue. I want to draw the particular attention of the Hon'ble the Finance Minister of Bengal in this direction.

Alhadj Khan Bahadur Shaikh MUHAMMAD JAN: Mr. President, Sir, unlike my previous speaker, I am sorry, I cannot congratulate the Hon'ble the Finance Minister on his performance. I do not know on what ground my friend has congratulated him. We all know that the Budget presented by him is a deficit Budget of Rs. 13 crores, a little less than the whole provincial revenue of Bengal. In my opinion, the Budget for 1944-45 is the same old melancholy tale of privations, national agony and new taxation which we have been witnessing from year to year. And, Sir, I do not know how long and in how many ways this province is going to suffer. There is shortage of food, shortage of clothing, shortage, in fact, of everything, whether it is the product of this province or imported from outside. Even coal which is the monopoly of this province is not sufficiently available to the people here. Sir, though famine conditions have to a large extent subsided now by the grace of the Almighty God, yet everyone admits that hundreds of thousands of people are either still dying of starvation or are not getting two square meals a day and are living in almost half-naked condition. Nature is not unkind to the province; and is fertile and She gives us two bumper crops every year. The mineral resources of our province are, I think, greater than those of some provinces combined together. Therefore, in my humble opinion if the people here are still living in wretched condition, it is due to maladministration of the province for the last 20 years by the so-called representatives of the people, that is, since the time when the Montagu-Chelmsford Reforms were introduced in Bengal. Sir, in spite of sincere advice from almost all quarters an all-Party Government has not been formed; and in its place one-Party Government is functioning, which are only anxious to reserve for themselves all loaves and fishes of office. Sir, a few years ago when the Provincial Autonomy was introduced in India, the Congress which was in absolute majority in some provinces and whose members were not after loaves and fishes of office, formed an one-Party Government, and there was a hue and cry all over India against it. But, now when there is war emergency, one-Party Government is not only supported but advocated. The funny thing is this that the Party which has formed one-Party Government is not in majority, and it has to look to others who have their votes in the Legislature but who have little influence outside the Legislature and are therefore not helpful to the Party in ameliorating the pitiable condition of the people at this critical juncture. Sir, the House will probably remember that Khan Bahadur M. A. Momin, a staunch supporter of Government, hinted about nepotism and corruption in the General Administration of the province since last 7 years when the Provincial Autonomy was introduced, and he appealed to the Ministers to look into this state of things. But I do not know how they can take effective steps to check these all-round abuses, as they are afraid that thereby they may not get the co-operation of their supporters.

Sir, Congress members did not take office for any monetary consideration as they wanted to serve the people and not to be served at public expense. They were always prepared to resign from their position if the country did not require their services. In spite of vehement opposition even from their own party, the Congress Government introduced complete Prohibition in Bombay at the cost of millions of Excise Revenue, and they did not care whether they were thrown out of their office or not. They wanted to do their duty at all costs. But here it is quite a different thing altogether. The party which is in power thinks as if public service is its monopoly and it cannot get out. It can swallow any bitter pills of humiliation against its conscience as the love of position does not allow it to go out of office. Sir, it has been suggested that the Meston Settlement, and the Neimeyer Award are responsible for the present economic break-down of Bengal, because the recommendations made by Sir Otto were not carried out. The subvention recommended by him was not accepted by the Centre and not a rupee was paid in terms of the subvention. Of the jute duty that was recommended, only 62½ per cent. was allowed and the Centre treated Bengal in a step-motherly fashion. But, Sir, I ask: who is responsible for this? Is it not a fact that our present Prime Minister, Sir Nazimuddin, was the Education Minister at the time and was he not also a member of the Executive Council of the Governor of Bengal? Was he not, I may say, the good boy of Sir John Anderson? Certainly, he enjoyed full confidence of the Governors at that time. He had a great influence over Sir Stanley Jackson and Sir John Anderson. Did he protest to the Centre against this injustice? Did he ever utter a word that if Bengal was treated in that fashion he would resign? Was he prepared to bid goodbye to his position and take the public into his confidence? I think certainly not. And, therefore, if the Niemeyer Award is now said to be instrumental for the economic breakdown of Bengal, I may say that it is only our so-called leaders, our public-spirited representatives who are responsible for it. I think that if the Punjab or Bombay were treated in this way by Sir Otto Niemeyer or by Lord Meston, then the whole province would have risen in revolt and all the people of the province would have stood by the Ministry and compelled the Centre to give in. Now, Sir, it has been suggested by Mr. Gladding, the leader of the European Party in the other House, and I do not know what their leader in this House will say, that a subvention must be asked for by Government from the Centre, that is, that this Government should appeal to the Central Government to give them not loans but a subsidy and loans so far given must be wiped out. I ask my friends if they think that any appeal made by the present Government in this behalf will be accepted by the Central Government. In my opinion, unless all of us join together, the Centre will not allow any substantial subvention or subsidy to this province. I am afraid, however, that the present Ministry will not take any such serious step as it may jeopardise their position and it may cost them their office. Therefore, they will introduce new taxes and increase them. Sir, no province in India has had a sales tax imposed upon it, but in Bengal we find that not only is there a sales tax but the incidence of this taxation is going to be increased. Last year it yielded about 90 lakhs; this year it has yielded 2 crores but this revenue has come not from the rich merchants or shopkeepers as is wrongly asserted by the supporters of the Government. It is obvious that the shopkeepers are not at all hit by it; as it is, the poor people of this famine-stricken province will bear the burden.

It is true that poor man's clothing has been exempted from this tax but there are hundreds of other necessities of life such as medicines, household utensils, etc., which are purchased by almost all persons everyday and they will all pay this double tax. Shopkeepers will either add this tax in cash memos or proportionately increase the price so as to be able to pay this tax not from their own pockets but from the pockets of their customers. There is no denying the fact that the present Ministry do not care for the poor rayats: they only want to govern the country at all cost as so-called representatives of the people. With these words, I resume my seat.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Mr. President, Sir, I confess I have a feeling of sympathy for the Hon'ble Finance Minister in the task with which he is faced today. This is the more so because the Hon'ble Finance Minister of today does not command that respect or support from the public to which at one time his abilities, his talents and his services to the country entitled him. He has yet some reserves of old credit to live down, and I am all the sorrier for him that he should squander old goodwill by persisting in a mistaken course instead of admitting his own blunder and resuming the career which he has so wilfully destroyed. He comes here today with a Budget which cannot by even the farthest stretch of imagination be regarded as progressive or beneficial to the province. He had a very brilliant past and was one from whom the country expected much. Today, through circumstances into the details of which I need not go, he finds himself in a company which I think he will himself admit is neither commendable nor glorious—(Khan Bahadur M. A. MOMIN: Why?). Because it is a company which has never done any service to the country, because it is a company that looks up to the British bureaucracy and its favour for all its show of power and prestige. His whole Budget today is wrong—the whole Budget from the beginning to end is wrong. He comes before this House with a Budget which threatens us with further burdens of taxation—impositions which are vague and indefinite. He hopes to raise 10 crores more revenue than was raised in the two preceding years by this imposition in addition to what has been raised before. I confess, Sir, I am appalled at the dreary prospect which he has laid open before us. I am also forced to ask if this prospect has behind it any redeeming feature. Is there any hope that the increased receipts from this taxation are going to be spent for the poor? If the money is going to relieve the distress of the people, there may be something to say in favour of it. But the actual conduct of this Government which has been in office for a little less than a year makes all such hopes illusory. The record of these 11 months is not only a record of failure, but also a record of callousness—record of utter indifference to the sufferings of the people. It is even lacking in the decencies of political life, of—

Khan Bahadur M. A. MOMIN: What about the Government of the previous year?

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: I am surprised at the interruptions of my honourable and revered friend. Khan Bahadur Momin is not wanting in criticisms of the activities of the present Government whenever they are wrong, although he is a member of the Government party. My only quarrel is that he criticises the Government but remains silent and is not prepared to follow up his criticism to its logical conclusion and go against the Government, as we have all along done whenever we have found the Government—whatever Government was in power—go wrong. Why does not my honourable friend act up to his criticism and force his will on the present Government? Why does he not compel them to take measures according to his advice and follow his way of thinking and do things which are its obvious duties?

As I said a moment ago, the record of the Government in the last 11 or 12 months has been very dismal indeed. The first grave charge against this Government is in respect of the false pronouncement with which it started its tenure of office. On the 5th of May, Mr. Suhrawardy after assuming charge as the Civil Supplies Minister told this province that there was no deficit. He said that there was plenty of foodstuffs in this province and that assurance was repeated time and again. That assurance was again repeated by the Hon'ble the Chief Minister in the Howrah Town Hall.

He assured the people that there was enough of foodstuffs and that it was only a question of proper distribution and proper arrangement, liquefying the stocks of the hoarders. In March last year, we brought a motion to declare the province of Bengal a deficit province; but my honourable friends on my left, members of the European party, opposed the motion saying that there was no shortage, in spite of the fact that the price of rice was rising and Calcutta was overflowed with hunger-marchers. I have already told the House on another occasion that it was to the credit of the hunger-marchers who by coming to Calcutta had saved themselves and saved Bengal. Today, there is again a move to prevent—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Kabir, I hope you remember the time-limit.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: I hope, Sir, 15 minutes.

As I was saying, Sir, there is now a move to prevent the hunger-marchers from coming back to Calcutta. I can quite understand the anxiety of my friends on the left and the present Government that there should not be any repetition of the scenes of last year. That was a tale of disgrace. The suffering of the people was grievous, but even worse was the conspiracy of secrecy. It was a conspiracy to conceal the fact that people were dying on the streets of Calcutta. Once the hunger-marchers came and died on the streets of Calcutta, it was no longer possible for Mr. Suhrawardy or for anybody else to say that there was no deficit. The whole world knew of it. The whole world knows how the people were reduced to a state which made it difficult to recognise them as human beings. I am going into the past history to show how that situation was created as a result of the so-called food drive. If the Government follow the same procedure as they did last year, a more serious crisis will come over this province and the signs are already there. In spite of bumper crops, the price of rice is going up in the rural areas. In the mofussil you cannot get rice at less than Rs. 20 (Mr. RANAJIT PAL CHOWDHURY: At Rs. 22). Yes, so I was saying at not less than Rs. 20 a maund. And this is the position today, in the month of February when the crop has not yet left entirely the hands of the cultivators. I shudder to think what will happen this year. The calamity might be far greater this year than last year. I ask Government whether they are going to pursue the same policy as they did last year, namely, the policy of food drive and liquefying the stock. We know the results of the food drive; we know how foodstuffs were brought from the rural areas to Calcutta and how they were allowed to go underground in a mysterious manner. Government can follow a person from Calcutta to Bombay and know if the man travels in a particular train. They can ascertain whatever they want to ascertain. They claim to know even our thoughts and punish persons for only entertaining ideas. And yet this Government with their numerous officers cannot find where thousands of maunds of rice are gone. They cannot unearth this rice, wheat and other foodstuffs which are whisked away and disappear altogether. A reference has been made by Mr. Kamini Kumar Dutta to corruption as the canker of the administration, and, Sir, if that canker is not removed, it is useless for the Government to make verbal professions. I would remind the House of an English saying that "the Herring rots from the head". The administration in Bengal is rotten at the head. Unless the rot at the top is removed, it is impossible for any officer or Hon'ble Minister to try to reform their subordinates, because they may be faced with the retort that they were following the precedents of their superiors. The rot must be stopped from the head. If the food drive is again started in the rural areas and if these stocks are brought to Calcutta, we may face consequences more serious than last year.

The Hon'ble the Finance Minister has in his speech made some reference to the procurement of the foodgrains and difficulty in distribution.

He has spoken of the difficulty of reaching food to the areas where it was most needed. I myself find that the problem exists today in an exaggerated form. Any attempt on the part of Government to take the stock away from the cultivators who actually need it to urban areas is fraught with very grave danger. If the Government want to succeed in their scheme, they should be able to procure and store food in selected areas and then distribute it as the situation arises. Everywhere, we are trying today to persuade the cultivators and the villagers to be self-sufficient as far as possible. If every union and every thana is made self-sufficient, then and then alone is there some hope for the rural areas. Otherwise even the story of their sufferings will not reach the people abroad, especially now when a new law has been promulgated by which the destitute persons are prevented from coming to Calcutta.

This is the picture, Sir, this is the background against which we have to judge the activities of the present Ministry. They have failed signally to cope with the situation with which Bengal was faced last year. It was an unprecedented situation no doubt; but by their commissions and omissions, by their blatant assertion that there was surplus when actually there was no surplus, by their unmeaning repetition of their Master's voice from the House of Commons, the incorrigible Mr. Amery, they have done more harm to the people of Bengal than perhaps any other Ministry or individual or Government in the course of the unfortunate history of this country for the last two hundred years. If in the months of July and August last they had organised relief and caused relief to come from abroad, the situation would have been otherwise. But they kept on repeating that there was no deficit and that there was surplus and the result was that no help came from any foreign source, neither from England nor from America nor even from the surplus provinces in India. It was only towards the end of September, after thousands of people—why thousands, I might say millions of people—had died, that the Government awoke to the fact of deficit. Then they admitted the famine conditions of the country and help began to pour in during the months of October and November. If that help had come to Bengal in the months of June, July and August, I am confident, Sir, and I think all honourable members will agree with me that if that help had come in the months of June, July and August, these unfortunate people would not have died. The death of these two, three or four millions of people—I do not know the exact number, neither Government knows nor anybody else, and it is not possible to make an exact estimate, but even on modest estimate it will not be perhaps less than five millions—would have been averted. I submit, Sir, that the Ministry will be held responsible for the death of five millions of people. They died on their own lands, they died on their own soil crying for redress. The Ministry cannot deny that but for their foolish policy in persisting that there was no deficit, outside help and outside charity would have come to the rescue of these unfortunate people and they would not have died.

If the Ministry want to do some good to the people, let them not be callous, let them rise to the height of the occasion and let them seek the co-operation of all parties, even the parties which are in opposition to them. My honourable friend, Mr. Kamani Kumar Dutta, has suggested that the non-official members have found that even when they offered co-operation, it was not accepted by the Government and the Government went its own way. The Government's plea is that the people hoarded last year. There was certainly hoarding, but Government was the greatest hoarder, and they hoarded while the people starved. At Naogaon, 20,000 maunds of rice were kept in stock by Government while thousands of people were dying there. At Jessore, more than one lakh maund of rice was held in stock by Government when the people there were dying like fleas, and today that rice has been thrown into the market. The members of this House know from their personal experience that the rice which is thrown into the market is rotten rice released from the stores hoarded by Government. This rice is often unfit for human consumption. In my areas, people have given it a new name. It is not rice for cows, not rice for horses but rice for elephants! They suggest that perhaps elephants alone may be able to consume this poor quality of rice. Mr. Kamini Kumar Dutta has referred to the fact that Government are making a chemical analysis of this rice in order to find if any proper use can be made of it. The present Government are able to go on in this way because there is no chance of any general election now. This protects them from the condemnation and fury of the people. But, Sir, I would make a special appeal to the Hon'ble the Finance Minister to reconsider his own position once more. He has some credit to live down even now. Still some finer feelings are left in him. I ask him: how can he associate himself with an administration which is responsible for the death of five millions of men, women and children of this province through no fault of theirs, through no natural calamity but merely through the maladministration of a Government which was pitchforked into office by a person about whom the less said the better.

Sir, this is the position. The reason why I am emphasising this point is: that unless steps are taken even now, then a worse calamity might befall Bengal. No amount of discussion about "the Grow More Food" campaign will do—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Kabir, your time is up.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: I am under the impression that I began at 2-30 and have spoken for ten minutes only.

Mr. PRESIDENT: No, no. But I give you 5 minutes more.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Thank you, Sir. I find that this "Grow More Food" business is confined to the compound of the quarters of Government officials, or in a few yards, and strips of land lying on either side of the road. This does not suggest that Government have taken the business seriously; they are simply tinkering with the problem. Every one who travels in the countryside knows that there are waste lands to be found on either side of the roads which are not utilised for cultivation. Why does not the Government try to acquire these lands? They ought to take up these waste lands and jungles and utilise them for cultivation immediately and grow foodgrains there. The Floud Commission Report tells us that in Bengal one-third of the arable area is not cultivated. Why does not the Government undertake to see that they are brought under cultivation by the owners themselves with help of the Government? If the owners are not prepared to cultivate them, in that case does the Government contemplate the acquisition of these lands and farming them out? Here is a concrete suggestion, Sir, by which Government may increase the food supply for the province by undertaking measures for the cultivation of areas not under actual cultivation even though they are arable.

I might refer to one other matter in this connection. The Government of India have imported some scientific appliances and scientists from Russia to combat locusts. Sir, it is known to all that Russia has made a tremendous advance in the development of food crops in the last 15 years. Is this Government prepared to get help from Russia? After all, Russia is an Allied country: it is a member of the United Nations. Are Government prepared to send young men, Hindus and Mussalmans of this province—five hundred young men from Bengal to Russia to be trained for six months or a year and come back and contribute to the improvement of the cultivation of this province? Will Government invite Russian help to find out the proper utilisation of the resources of this country?

You are looking at the clock, Sir, and my time is almost up. I will conclude by referring to the grievance, to which Sir, you also were pleased to lend a patient hearing. I am referring to the fact that in this House we have no opportunity of discussing the details of the Budget. In the course of 15 to 20 minutes, we have to compress whatever we have to say. But in this way, a very valued privilege of the House has been taken away. We have a Budget—a Budget which is unreal to us. We talk about it but we cannot vote for or against it. We do not discuss the supplies at all. I suggest to the Hon'ble Finance Minister that in this way, a valued right has been denied to the House. If supplies were brought before the House, each item would have to be mentioned. In discussing these items, we would get greater opportunity of expressing our opinion and making our voice felt. I am sure that my honourable friend Khan Bahadur Momin, even though he might differ with me in other respects, will be at one with me in this matter. This House will have in that case a greater voice in controlling supplies and in directing the actual items of expenditure out of the revenues of this province.

As my time is up, Sir, I must conclude with these remarks.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Mr. President, Sir, Like my friend Alhadj Khan Bahadur Shaikh Muhammad Jan, I am also unable to compliment the Hon'ble the Finance Minister "on the Grow More Food" campaign to which reference has been made in his Budget statement. I would have congratulated him if he had initiated a "Dig More Graves" campaign, for our past experience shows that there is a greater necessity for digging more graves in Bengal than for growing more food. (The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Saiyed Muazzamuddin Hosain: What campaign? Rai Bahadur Keshab Chandra Banerjee: "Dig More Graves" campaign.) It is difficult to resist one's emotion when one looks at the gloomy Budget estimates presented by the Hon'ble the Finance Minister. I am not one of those who passionately look for a surplus Budget. I am in entire agreement with the Finance Minister that the State is not only Force, it is also Service. But the Budget, as presented, shows the claws of coercion and not the avenues of service. Hence I call it gloomy—gloomy for the country as a whole. The first thing that strikes me is the unusual expenditure on every front. It does not speak well of the Government to be tied down to the chariot-wheels of expenditure born of emergency conditions due to war. The expenses in connection with the steps taken to deal with famine in Bengal should primarily be the concern of the Central Government and of His Majesty's Government. Bengal being the spring-board for an offensive against Japan, steps leading to the procurement of supplies of foodstuffs and the dispensing of relief to the famine-stricken people have been necessitated primarily by war conditions, and it is unfair to commit the Provincial Revenues to such colossal expenditure on that account. The subvention from the Centre should come not by way of loan but as a gift to meet such unforeseen expenditure. The terrible cost of living in Bengal is undoubtedly the direct result of war conditions which do not concern the Provincial Government. The huge expenditure by the Provincial Government to meet war emergencies is amazing, the more so when it is considered that Provincial Autonomy is the pronounced feature of the Constitution Act. The Budget provides melancholy reading from the constitutional point of view. The Central Government seem to dictate at every step, but they are not agreeable to bear the financial responsibilities. They have stifled Provincial Autonomy and provincial revenues so that the provinces may not stand erect for some time to come. It is not complimentary on the part of the Provincial Government, principally the Ministry, to have drained the province dry at the bidding of the Central Government. It is doubtless ominous for Bengal.

I congratulate the Hon'ble the Finance Minister on the chaste and elegant diction of his Budget statement and the new schemes which he has adumbrated to supplement the so-called nation-building activities of the Government, but I cannot compliment him on his method of approach to the various problems with which Bengal is confronted at the present moment. The Budget Estimates presented by the Finance Minister is, as I have said, full of gloomy forebodings. It is, to put in a nutshell, a "Beg, borrow or tax" budget, or in other words, the present Ministry propose to carry on the administration of the province by begging, borrowing or by taxing a people already over-burdened with taxes. He seems to take his stand on the celebrated dictum that taxation is "an engine of social and national policy". It is an economic principle which is hardly suitable for this poor country where the average income per capita is Rs. 66 annually, that is, Rs. 5-8 per month. It is all very well to enunciate theoretical principles and tenets but it is a different thing altogether to apply them to practice. The prevailing conditions, political, social and economic and various other factors have got to be taken into account before resorting to taxation. Administration by taxation is the worst form of Government. No civilised country in the world relies for its day to day administration upon revenues derived from taxation. It is universally agreed that the famine conditions prevailing in Bengal are largely responsible for the depletion of her finances. The past was bad enough, the present is gloomy and the future is equally dark and uncertain.

The Hon'ble the Finance Minister would have done well to look within and to have suggested retrenchments in the ministerial sphere by foregoing the costly paraphernalia with which the province has been saddled. There can be no gain-saying the fact that the administration has become top-heavy. If eight Ministers with no Parliamentary Secretaries to assist them could manage the various departments a year ago, there is absolutely no justification whatsoever for having 13 Ministers, 13 Parliamentary Secretaries and a number of Whips to run the Ministerial chariot at the cost of the poor taxpayer. It is well known that Parliamentary Secretaries have no administrative functions; they can only reply to questions in the Legislature. For only replying to questions on behalf of the Ministers, the Province has been made to maintain 13 Parliamentary Secretaries! The Ministry may have the power of squandering away public money; they have the opportunities of abusing their power; but there is no reason why the nation should tolerate such prodigal waste of public money for political sport. The innumerable appointments on the administrative side on the plea of "war conditions" without any reference to merit but in strict adherence to the canons of political gambling and party domination are making a large draw on the Provincial Exchequer, much of which is unjustifiable. It is sickening, it is distressing that political morale has sunk so low that public money is not considered a trust for the nation's welfare but a fund for individual and party aggrandisement. The Budget unfolds the depressing tale of unconscionable and unjustifiable expenditure undertaken with a view to stabilising party ascendancy in utter disregard of national development. This criminal waste of public money without a national policy of development calls for the severest indictment.

Sir, the province is going to be burdened with the doubling of the Sales Tax; there is also to be a fresh levy on Agricultural Income. All this for what? Evidently for the purpose of narrowing down the margin of deficit resulting from the pursuit of unimaginative and uncalled-for expenditure. The Ministry has hardly any policy which will add to the welfare of the people; it has no scheme which will nurse the people and increase the wealth of the country. It has one governing policy—that is, the policy of distributing patronage amongst its adherents and supporters with prejudicial repercussions on administrative efficiency. Whenever we have found the crisis deepening and the distress growing in magnitude, we have been consoled with new appointments. It has adopted the policy of “buying up discontent”. The food crisis has revealed the extent of corruption on the administrative side, and we are asked to vote for money for the manifest purpose of keeping up the corrupt facade. The Ministry sings, the expenses of administration rise, but the people wither away.

In a province which has seen the severest kind of food crisis, it was natural for the Government to have devoted their attention and energies to the increase of agricultural production. The Budget speaks of the “Grow More Food” campaign, but those who know land and agriculture know it fully well that hardly have the Government been successful in increasing food products by intensive cultivation or by bringing cultivable waste lands under the plough. The Governmental activities have been confined to the printing of leaflets and the payment of travelling allowances to the Ministers and other administrative officers. Better seeds have not been made available to the cultivators, better irrigation facilities have not been provided for, better public health has not been aimed at, better methods of cultivation have not been adopted, better marketing of produce has not been arranged for, better credit facilities have not been provided, and, last though not the least, there is no plan for increased production. The Agricultural Department, one of the most vital departments connected with the increase of national wealth, has mishandled the situation when the people were starving peacefully in the streets and in hovels. But we now understand that a special officer from the Punjab has been recruited to instil new life into the dry bones of the department! Is it not a sad commentary on the activities of the Government of Bengal that they should be sporting while dire famine and pestilence have been taking a huge toll of human lives?

The staggering waste of public money without any well-thought-out scheme for national well-being, coupled with the rise in the administrative expenses and fall in administrative efficiency, has strangled the province, and it will increase hundred-fold the difficulties in launching any scheme of reconstruction during or after the war. The province is sucked dry making future reconstruction difficult—this is the definite contribution of the Ministry.

The question which is uppermost in our minds at the present moment is the solution of the Food problem. Our experience of the past year makes us nervous. The scenes of desolation and misery in the country-side and in the city of Calcutta are still fresh in our memory. Sir, assurances have been received from high quarters that there will be no recurrence of famine next year. We are grateful to His Excellency the Viceroy for the kind initiative he has taken to grapple with the problem and for the sympathy and keenness with which His Excellency has taken up the question. Sir, Bengal has not yet become the scene of battle in the sense in which the European countries have been. We are told that enough food has been stored for emergency in England and that Britain's emergency lenders can, if necessary, feed the whole nation from now until the next harvest without calling on extra shipping. Millions of tons of canned foods, meat and flour are now reported to be in 10,000 hidden depots. In store are thousands of tons of Canadian and Australian flour, sugar, cases of tea, canned meat, fish and fruit. In addition, there are carefully conserved food stocks on farms and record stores of grain immediately available in granaries, barns, and even empty school rooms, which could be turned into flour and bread within a fortnight in case of an emergency. If Britain which is by no means self-supporting in the matter of foodstuffs could make ample provision for the future, it is unfortunate that Bengal should share an altogether different fate under the aegis of the British Crown. We should like to know what provision has been made on these lines to meet any emergency should it arise in Bengal in future.

Sir, one word and I have done. I find from the Budget that supply of foodstuffs at concession rates to Government employees including Civic Guards and A.R.P. personnel has been provided for in the current year. But I very much regret to have to bring to the notice of Government the fact that the provision made for the Civic Guards is more imaginary than real. Foodstuffs have no doubt been supplied to the Government employees and the A.R.P. men at concession rates but not to the Civic Guards. I can say from my personal experience and first hand information that the Civic Guards of Dacca, Mymensingh, Chittagong and Bogra have not been supplied with rations, although the Police whose auxiliaries the Civic Guards are have got their share. We have been pressing the district authorities and the Government to supply basic rations to the Civic Guards but to no effect. A deputation on behalf of the Civic Guards of Dacca waited on the Hon'ble the Chief Minister when he visited that place in July or August last. This was followed up by a representation in which the grievances of the Civic Guards were set forth in detail; but nothing has yet been done to remedy their grievances. The Civic Guards whose duties are voluntary and of an arduous character have to undergo considerable hardships for the non-supply of rations at concession rates. They have to buy their food articles from the market at high prices, whereas the Police and the A.R.P. have been regularly getting their supplies from the Government stocks. If the Government really want to run this organisation, they should not ignore the claims of the Civic Guards. If it is thought that the Civic Guards are not required, Government should disband them rather than create discontent among them by differential treatment and indifference.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The House now stands adjourned till 1 p.m. tomorrow.

BENGAL LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL DEBATES

First Session, 1944—No. 14.

THE COUNCIL met in the Legislative Chamber of the Legislative Building, Calcutta, on Tuesday, the 29th February, 1944, at 1 p.m., being the fourteenth day of the First Session of 1944, pursuant to section 62(2)(a) of the Government of India Act, 1935.

Mr. President (the Hon'ble Sir BIJOY PRASAD SINGH ROY, K.C.I.E.) was in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Health Survey Committee.

71. Mr. NUR AHMED: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Public Health and Local Self-Government Department be pleased to state if any Provincial Health Survey and Development Committee has been formed in Bengal to assist the Central Health Survey and Development Committee formed by the Government of India in drawing up post-war health programme for Bengal?

(b) If so, who are the members of the said Committee and what are its functions?

(c) If not, why not?

Mr. BIREN ROY (Parliamentary Secretary, on behalf of the Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi Jalaluddin Ahmad): (a) No. Provincial Committee has been formed directly to assist the Central Health Survey and Development Committee; but a Public Health Sub-Committee of the Bengal Post-War Reconstruction Committee has been formed which will survey the whole field of public health development and will suggest schemes for the expansion and improvement of all Health Services. Their recommendations will be made available to the Central Committee.

(b) The terms of reference of the Public Health Sub-Committee are as follows:—

(i) to devise ways and means for raising the level and enlarging the scope of health and medical services and nutrition in accordance with generally accepted standards of civilised countries including provision of supply of pure drinking water and effective sanitation in rural areas. The Committee may consider in this connection how far indigenous systems of medicines may be utilised;

(ii) to consider schemes for model villages in each region of the Province.

A list of the personnel of the Sub-Committee is laid in the Library.

(c) In view of reply to (a) and (b) does not arise.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: It is understood that the public health sub-committee has been appointed and the personnel is there. Will the Government be pleased to say whether it consists only of officials or there are members of municipalities and district boards?

Mr. BIREN ROY: It is not possible to say whether there are members of district boards and municipalities on the committee. Officially they are not members as such but there are such members who are members of district boards and municipalities.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: On a point of information, Sir. May I enquire what has happened with regard to the appointment of the committee to consider the "bhog rationing". Though today is the 30th day of rationing, we have not yet been informed as to the arrangement that has been made in this connection. We should like to know the names of the members of that committee. This is a very urgent matter and the Hon'ble Minister for Civil Supplies gave us a definite promise in this respect.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Is the Hon'ble the Leader of the House in a position to supply information on this matter?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Sir, Mr. Suhrawardy will be coming to the Chamber soon and he would personally reply to the point raised.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Well, let us wait till he comes. The House will now resume general discussion on the Budget.

General Discussion on the Budget.

Mr. W. B. C. LAIDLAW: Mr. President, Sir, at the outset I would like to congratulate Mr. Nur Ahmed on his contribution to this discussion. The line he took, namely, that this province has been treated as a sort of Cinderella among the provinces, is I believe, the right stand-point and the figures he gave to support his views were most interesting. The financial restrictions on the nation-building activities of Government were bad enough in the days of peace. But now that Bengal is in the position of a frontier province with a major war over its borders, surely there is a claim not merely for equal treatment with other provinces but for preferential treatment. So to Mr. Nur Ahmed's statistics let me repeat the point that I made in the last Budget discussion that for the maintenance of morale in this frontier province it behoves the Central Government to see that essential services are not restricted for lack of finances. In September last, I said that the economy of this province had been ill-equipped to withstand a calamity such as the famine of 1943 and the Hon'ble Minister has added point to this by bringing out revised figures for 1943-44 showing a deficit to the tune of Rs. 1½ crores of which Rs. 9¼ crores are made up of expenditure arising out of the famine. I refer to the expenditure on famine and medical relief and the loss on food for 1943-44. It is impossible to regard the relief of famine in the province which contains the major port and transport facilities, on which operations for the defence of India depends, as anything but a responsibility which should be borne by India as a whole and therefore I would again plead that this House should sustain the Hon'ble the Finance Minister in his efforts to obtain financial relief from the Centre.

Let me draw particular attention to one aspect of Government activities which is not being pressed with sufficient vigour mainly, if one is to judge from the Budget, from lack of finance and staff, namely the countering of inflation by strict control of prices. Enforcement of price-control on consumers' goods other than food is still largely ineffective and the estimates do not include any provision for setting up a proper price-control organisation. The Anti-hoarding and Prevention of Profiteering Ordinance has had a good effect but little has been done to back it up with an effective enforcement organisation.

While on the subject of price-control, I wonder whether the full measure of suffering and misery which can result from inflation getting out of hand is fully realised. To this country it is a new problem, not yet experienced, and therefore it is all the more necessary for Government to keep the possibilities constantly in view and to take all available steps to counter the danger. In addition to price-control therefore, I would stress the importance of an increased supply of consumers goods so as to counteract hoarding of cash by the cultivator and a vigorous policy for the recovery of loans to cultivators.

As regards Government's trading operations, I would stress the necessity for these operations being conducted along strict business lines with a view particularly to minimise loss owing to wastage in stocks, bad quality and losses in transit. The Provincial Government should endeavour to cover themselves against such losses as far as possible.

Our view in regard to quality of imported rice is that the Government of India should accept responsibility for the quality of rice and other food-grains imported into Bengal and should appoint Inspectors in the exporting provinces for this purpose. The Bengal Government's arrangements for the inspection of supplies on arrival and for sending samples to the Government of India is no solution to the problem since it is not practicable to return supplies which are found to be of inferior quality.

I would also stress the necessity for accounting for Government's trading operations in a business-like way. The accounts as at present presented cannot be easily understood by the public and may even fail to reveal to Government points which ought to receive the attention of the departments responsible. In this respect, therefore, I would strongly recommend the use of well-tried business methods of accounting. I believe that this would be to the benefit of Government in revealing the full magnitude of the operations undertaken. For example, it would show the loss on foodgrains estimated at Rs. 5 crores in 1944-45 in a better light, when compared with the total expected outlay of Rs. 81 crores. The co-relation of all the connected figures should appear in a form of Trading Account and Balance Sheet which can be understood by all concerned.

While on the subject of Accounting, may I also draw attention to the duty cast on the legislature of seeing that the huge expenditure envisaged in the estimates is applied to the best purpose. In fulfilling this function the detailed estimates furnished are of no assistance. For example, only two pages out of 461 of the detailed estimates are devoted to Famine Relief and no details at all are given with regard to expenditure in the current year of Rs. 3½ crores on gratuitous relief. Similarly, under the heading "Extraordinary charges in India", the expenditure of the Department of Civil Supplies is mixed up with a number of miscellaneous items such as the Home Guard organisation. There are no details of the expenditure on rationing and no explanation appears in the accounts for the anticipated increase in this expenditure from Rs. 26 lakhs in the current year to Rs. 97 lakhs in 1944-45.

While the business of this House in regard to the Budget is limited to a general discussion, the Hon'ble Minister will, I am sure, agree that this discussion would be more valuable to him if the House were placed in possession of the full details to which we are entitled.

In closing, I would congratulate the Hon'ble Minister on his handling what is probably the most difficult financial period through which this province has passed.

MR. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: Mr. President, Sir, I would begin by congratulating both Mr. Laidlaw and the European Group here and also my friend Mr. Nur Ahmed for emphasising the financial position of the province of Bengal vis-a-vis the Government of India. They have fully brought out the points and these will give strength to the Government of Bengal in their fight for getting for this province what is due from the Government of India. I submit that if the opposition had also joined in this demand, they would have really helped the province. Sir, in the present system of government we cannot go on without the existence of the Opposition; but here are occasions when even the Opposition can easily over-reach themselves. In this particular case we have been witnessing the sorry spectacle that instead of being helpful, in many instances they have created difficulties in the way of the province. Look at the mutual mud-throwing now going on over a matter in which there should not have been any such nickerings. Sir, it is everybody's case that Bengal is passing through one of the most difficult periods that have overtaken any province in India, or of the matter of that anywhere in this world. Probably, Bengal has suffered more than any other country that is situated in the fighting area during the year 1943-44. In very few countries shall we find millions of men having died from the effects of actual starvation on account of the impact of the war. For the Opposition being cognisant of this state of affairs to say that Government have not brought about a solution of this problem seems to me to be nothing but cussedness. The difficulty, Sir, is of such a magnitude that the Provincial Government, limited as it is within the sphere that the Government of India Act, 1935, has laid down and the insufficient resources which it can control, cannot solve all her problems.

Therefore, to find fault with the Government for all the evils from which this province may be suffering is only to create an opportunity for the people who want to shirk their responsibility. We are only quarrelling among ourselves and are not throwing the responsibility on the shoulders of others who are to a large extent responsible for all this difficulty and who can also really shoulder them. Therefore, to this extent we are creating an atmosphere which gives an advantage to those who want to shirk their responsibility instead of bearing it. The real duty of the Opposition in this critical juncture, as Mr. Laidlaw and Mr. Nur Ahmed have suggested, is to demand from the Government of India the fulfilment of their own obligations to this province. The heaviest items of expenditure which have caused the deficit in this province are those which are the direct result of the war. Some two to three hundred thousands of armed men together with their retinue of about a million, entirely dependent on the province for maintenance except for what the Army gets by way of rations from outside, have caused much of our troubles. The result is that the Government finds itself confronted with a task which is of an unprecedented magnitude. This difficulty has been created not by maladministration, as I have said before, not by mishandling but by the fact that the province has become an isolated base for a major war, a situation for coping with which the provincial administrative machinery was not prepared or to deal with which the Provincial Government had no experience to draw upon. The month of July of the year 1943 was the turning-point in the history of this province. The province was not prepared to handle such an unprecedented situation as happened then. Therefore, the Opposition's proper function in this novel crisis is to join hands with us in making a united demand. It shall be the demand not of the Government of the day alone but of the whole nation, as De Valera is reported to have said that the neutrality of Ireland is not the policy of Government but the policy of the whole nation, though it was being given voice to by his Government.

In such matters we should have what is called a national policy. The Opposition speaks of national Government. It is a national Government that is working in Bengal at present; but at the same time the existence of Opposition is necessary even now. It is necessary because the Opposition can perform the essential duty of offering healthy criticism, which is certainly very useful. You left the affairs of the province while in mid-stream and now blame the present Ministry for all the troubles which made their appearance when you were in office. The present Party came into power last year when the situation was critical. Everything possible was done by the present Ministry to grapple with the problem and bring the situation under control. But the situation was of gigantic magnitude and the present Ministry have done the best that could be done in the circumstances. If half of what has been done was left undone, I am sure several more millions of people would have died. It is true that there is nothing in the Budget but the tale of our sufferings—it is true it speaks of the miseries of the people of the province: but that is inevitable. I must congratulate the Hon'ble the Finance Minister and the Government for the courage and imagination they have shown, for the patriotic spirit in which they are trying to grapple with the difficult problems. They have not minced matters; they went boldly forward to tackle the problems of saving the people suffering from disease, hunger, want of hundred and one essentials of life and from hundreds other difficulties which are bound to come after such a devastation as we have had. At the same time, we must not forget that we are still in the midst of trouble and our difficulties are not over in any sense of the term. The longer the war goes on, the greater will be our difficulties. The paralysis that will come will be a crippling paralysis. If Mr. Harry Hopkin's examination of facts is true, war is not going to end in 1944, 1945 or even in 1946. This province is essentially in the war zone and so there is no occasion for us to be complacent. So far as the Government is concerned, there is no reason to doubt that they will do their best to meet the future in a spirit of determination. Last year we suffered only for want of rice. But this year it seems we shall have to suffer for want of everything. I may speak of one district in this connection—the district to which I belong—the Noakhali district where a fowl is selling at Rs. 5, while in Calcutta it can be had for Rs. 1-12. Again, fish which is available in Calcutta at Rs. 1-12 a seer cannot be had at Noakhali for less than Rs. 4 a seer. Vegetables which used to be sold in normal times at one pice per seer are being sold for six annas.

(Interuptions from the Opposition benches.)

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order, order. I think when the Opposition members spoke yesterday, they were listened to without any interruption from the Government side. I hope the same courtesy should be shown to members of the Government side.

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: Thank you, Sir. That, Sir, is the position in almost every village in the mofussil. There is another matter which is very important: that is the cattle position in Bengal. Mr. Subhawardy had been on tour in some districts of the Eastern Bengal and he himself has said that a pair of cattle worth in normal times Rs. 150 is selling for Rs. 1,100 or Rs. 1,200. Some steps have to be taken to see that the position does not go beyond control. I would suggest that immediate steps should be taken to ration the consumption of meat. In fact, there was a suggestion and it would not be a wrong one to restrict slaughter of cattle to certain days in the week. In the whole of the northern districts there is no breeding system and they have to depend on imported cattle for cultivation and other things. So some steps must be taken to improve the transport difficulties in this respect.

Next I come to the clothing problem. We find that there has been no solution so far as this question is concerned. Steps that have already been taken are very inadequate to cope with the situation. The most important thing in regard to this problem is the transport question and for this we have to depend on the Central Government. This Government should put pressure on the Government of India so that more transport facilities are given in this respect. Regarding the position of the weavers of this province, Government has a great responsibility. Their position requires to be improved. They are one of the worst sufferers. Sir, the prices of yarn are being controlled, but the machinery that has been set up to control the prices are not adequate. We should see that the weavers get yarn at the controlled rates. We should be more particular about the dyeing of the yarns and its distribution among persons engaged in handloom industries. We must keep the handloom industries going. Otherwise we shall not be able to revive this industry after the war.

Then, there is the problem of agriculture. The most important thing in this connection is the growing of better seeds. It is an accepted proposition that we have not got the right kind of seeds. We are carrying on with the old seeds that are available now. The Government should start seed-multiplying organisations. Imported seeds can relieve the scarcity of seeds. But unless we multiply seeds of improved strain here, we cannot improve our yield. The Government should start research stations for the improvement of the seeds and distribute the seeds to the cultivators in large quantities after multiplying them in seed stations.

Another important thing that rests on the Provincial Government is with regard to the marketing of jute. We do not find in the Budget any provision for organising the marketing of jute, which has been the crying need of the province for years. This is a problem of great magnitude. Jute is a great agricultural commodity. Nearly 50 to 100 crores of rupees are involved in this trade. Government should see that the right type of men are appointed to this Department for drawing up a plan. If the Government find it impossible to get any one so acquainted with this subject, they should try to secure men from Australia, America and other countries, who have experience of handling agricultural commodities on a large scale measure. Merely appointing certain I.C.S. men would not solve this great problem. Good plan is very essential for the purpose of a successful solution.

As I said, Sir, jute is one of the biggest commercial commodities on which the prosperity of the province really depends. At this stage, I cannot help referring to an omnibus department known as the Rural Reconstruction Department. The idea of this department has possibly been borrowed from a neighbouring province of ours. It appears to me to be an airy nothing. So far as this Rural Reconstruction Department is concerned, it has been able to do nothing, because it can do nothing. Sir, the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh is responsible for the invention of words "rural reconstruction". The officer who is known as the Director of Rural Reconstruction has got to administer several other departments also. In fact, Sir, he reminds me of the character of Phooba in the "Mikado" by Gilbert and Sullivan. He is not only the Director of Rural Reconstruction but also the Chief Controller of Jute and he is also in charge of three other departments. Therefore, I think this Rural Reconstruction Department has got no work. Because, after all what is rural reconstruction? Rural reconstruction means reconstructing the society in the villages and improving the lot of the people in the villages by giving them education, better agricultural facilities, better medical facilities and a good marketing system, better road. But, for this purpose we have got the specialised departments such as the Agriculture Department, the Education Department, the Public Health Department and so on. If these functions are not being properly performed, then improvement should be made in these departments. By creating an omnibus department such as these, we will make confusion worse confounded and create unnecessary friction.

Lastly, Sir, I come to the post-war reconstruction scheme which the Provincial Government has undertaken. It is a very necessary task which has been taken up by the Government in right earnest and they have set up a large number of committees. But one thing, Sir, which I should like to suggest to Government is that planning is a hard and difficult work, and the officers whose hands are already full should not be made Secretaries of such a department. Because, if you entrust this most important work to an officer who is already overburdened with other works, he will not be able to do justice to this work. For this work whole-time officers are necessary. We do not know when the war will come to an end. Therefore, it shall be the duty of every government to so organise itself from now that it may not be overtaken by overwhelming difficulties to adapt itself to the changed situation at the end of the war. After the war there will be so many problems to deal with. One of the biggest problems will be the unemployment problem for tackling which this Government has had no experience in the past. Millions of people in the villages whose ordinary avocation was cultivation have been taken away from the villages and trained and employed as technicians, motor drivers, etc. Now, after the war these people will be thrown out of their present employment and they cannot go back to their villages: we will have to take charge of them and divert them on to other works which also will have to be found. Therefore, Sir, we have to set up our organisation from now, because after the war the problem will be so difficult that it will not be possible for the Provincial Government to draw up its scheme then and at the same time tackle it. The unemployment problem has baffled much bigger governments elsewhere. Therefore, I would say that this post-war reconstruction planning work should be really and earnestly taken in hand. There should be a full secretariat department working entirely for this business, with Chairmen who have got not only ideas and imagination but expressed views of their own so that they can guide the deliberations of the committee and give directions to the work of the Planning Committee. This work will be of far-reaching importance. Suppose, tomorrow the war comes to an end. We shall immediately be faced with a hundred and one problems. One of the task that we must take in hand is the construction of roads which has been hanging fire for a number of years now. We need to have our plans ready at once; the old plans will not do. We should have plans ready to take up at the stage where the military have stopped and switch them over for the construction of provincial roads and communications. A large number of tractors and road-making machineries will be available to us and there will also be the problem of employing thousands of unemployed who can be employed in the work. Suppose we have in the meantime kept ready a plan which will require an expenditure of 20 crores in 5 years. In that five-year period, we can at least have prepared 5 to 7 thousand miles of metalled roads in this province that will bring prosperity, civilisation and education to the villages. In a similar way, I can name hundreds of other schemes and tasks that lie ahead of us. For instance, we must have a provincial transport service for Bengal. Whether it will be State managed or privately managed, the committee will decide. I may say that after the war hundreds of crores of rupees will be available to this country which belong to this country and is being accumulated in countries like Britain and America which will have to be returned. The sufferings of the people during the war has contributed to the building up of such funds. Much of these will be repaid in the shape of machinery, and other commodities. If we have not got the plans ready, those machinery will not come to us for the service of those who have really contributed to the creation of these funds and finances. So far as post-war reconstruction therefore is concerned, it is of the highest importance that Government has already made a beginning. I would suggest that they should reorganise the Secretariat in such a way that its full energy can be directed towards bringing out proper results within the shortest possible time.

I shall close, by stressing that the present financial arrangement between the provinces and the Centre should be revised, our field for taxation should be widened; the Government of India should be asked to contribute to all the expenditures which are directly the result of the war, namely, extraordinary charges, on creating the A.R.P. and services of semi-military nature—all these should come from the Centre as a war and defence expenditure. So far as the famine is concerned, it should be entirely financed by the Central Government also. It looks ugly that one part of the country should be rolling in wealth and should have a surplus budget of 2 or 3 crores and another part of the country should be dying of starvation and close the year with a deficit of 10 crores for no fault of theirs. Sir, this province should not be a province which should be asked to burden herself with expenditure not of her own making but because the war has been brought to her door.

MR. BIRENDRA KISHORE ROY CHOWDHURY: Mr. President, Sir, I would like to speak a few words about the Budget presented by the Hon'ble Finance Minister. I can appreciate, as the Finance Minister has pointed out, that the changed circumstances of the day demand a departure from the old conventional form of presentation of the Budget. None would have been happier than myself to see the Hon'ble Finance Minister pilot the finances of the province in the midst of the heaviest odds to a desired goal. But I must admit that I feel that the Budget could be made happier than what we find before us.

I do not intend to go very deep into details of all the figures and shall base my talks mostly on the broad figures quoted by the Finance Minister in the course of his speech.

The expenses for the Civil Supplies Department first deserve mentioning, although they have been thoroughly opposed by other members in this discussion. The expenses for the current year have been calculated at one crore and that for the coming year at one crore and forty-eight lakhs. It is also pointed out that this provision is not expected to cover the losses which may be faced one day in respect of shortages, damaged stocks and unsaleable stocks.

The Hon'ble Finance Minister has tried to justify the heavy losses by pointing out that, to a great extent, the Government's loss will be the measure of success of their operations. It is my conviction that the department failed to work efficiently and economically and the policy of rice purchase through a number of particular agents had pushed up the price in the mofussil areas with the result that the price which the Government had to pay was also proportionately high, thereby increasing the difference between the controlled sale rate and the buying rate. These losses are definite indications that the Government failed to regulate the prices throughout the province. What steps were taken by the Finance Minister to make sure that the prices paid by him to Government agents were approximately the prices paid by their agents to the agriculturists? There are reasons to believe that there was a big gap at times between the prices paid by the agents to the agriculturists and the prices received by these agents from the Government.

Another word must be said about the shortages and the damaged stocks and unsaleable stocks. Besides landing the province into financial losses, the damaged stocks have been doubly harmful in getting their access into the diet of the people and proving to be a menace to their health. There have been systematic murmuring about the quality of the rice sold at the different controlled shops of the province and the Central Government has pointed out that it was incumbent upon the Bengal Government to make sure that the stocks received by them were of approved quality. A municipal chairman has been known to have telegraphed the Minister at Calcutta informing him that while his people were about to starve, the local stocks purchased by the Government were rotting at the railway station exposed to the heavy monsoon and deteriorating in quality and quantity every day.

As a matter of fact, the Finance Minister himself has confessed that the twin problems of procurement and distribution were far beyond the resources of the Provincial Government and that bigger catastrophe than what had happened could not be avoided unless Lord Wavell intervened. We can join with the Finance Minister in paying compliments to His Excellency Lord Wavell for the promptness with which he intervened in the present situation; but we fail to understand if it was merely a consideration of prestige which stood in the way of the province asking for military help at earlier stages. I can remember the systematic demands made by the Press of the province and can specifically recollect the plan laid down by the Statesman wherein military intervention was sought for as the only panacea.

While much has been said about gratuitous relief and test relief work in connection with the famine, there is no separate provision for the rehabilitation of the people who had been ruined as a result of the famine. This, as a matter of fact, appears to be one of the black spots in the entire Budget. No amount of relief work can bring timely relief to the people unless all relief operations are supplemented by a strong plan for rehabilitation of the people to be started immediately. Thousands of families have been disintegrated, thousands of villages have been damaged and the entire society is in utter disaster today. No Government can expect to attain success in meeting these problems by scrappy relief measures only. To delay a plan for rehabilitation till later days will mean inviting a repetition of the distress which overwhelmed the province only recently. The cold assurance that the matter is engaging attention of the Government is disappointing.

I do not also approve the Government's ways of pushing the "Grow More Food" plan. While admittedly production in the already cultivated areas should be intensified, the area to be cultivated for foodstuffs must necessarily be expanded immediately. The acreage of jute production recently fixed by the Government shows how the authorities are still following the grossly mistaken policy of allowing cultivable lands to be cultivated by commercial crops rather than by foodstuffs. The contributions of jute to the finances of the country cannot be minimised. But it should be admitted that the present abnormal days demand that all production besides production of foodstuffs should be shelved temporarily, so that millions may be fed and a second famine avoided timely.

With regard to the estimate under "Jails", the apology that the increase of over 150 per cent. is a direct result of famine condition is really interesting. The Government will admit that throughout the current year there have been new additions to the political prisoners in jails, and that means a sharp increase in the expenses, besides of course the higher cost of foodstuff etc. provided for the jails. These expenses could be brought down if the Government started releasing the detenus in larger numbers than at present on financial grounds, if not on any other.

I should next like to speak about the expenses under "Public Health". The maldistribution of quinine which developed almost into a public scandal is a pointer that the Government's present system of distribution has yet to be improved, so that the scheme may acquire intrinsic worth not different from its apparent face value. In my own district I have first hand information that the Sadar subdivision was very much neglected in respect of quinine distribution; and when distribution at all started, it was charged with so much inefficiency that the quinine available for distribution was known more by its non-availability among the poorer classes.

It has appeared to me time and again while studying the different schemes tried by the Government with regard to agriculture, famine relief, public health and industries, that the entire system of Governmental administration has to be changed radically in order that it may fit into the present situation and may prove to be of permanent benefit to the country at large.

The Department of Co-operation, the Department of Industries, the Department of Rural Development and other allied departments of the Government have tried to do work in their own scrappy way without evolving a constructive plan whereby they could all work jointly and harmoniously. The famine days,—the war uncertainties,—have imposed upon the Government the task of procuration and distribution of food grains and have called for Government intervention in matters which were hitherto regarded by individuals as exclusively private and personal. The time has come when the Government should go a step further and make their plan more socialistic whereby they can undertake not only to regulate and supplement individual actions, but themselves sponsor a plan of collective and scientific farming with Government aid especially in the khas mahal areas, so that the Government may themselves conduct the entire agricultural system of the country towards a goal of self-sufficiency. Ravaged are the people of our province today. The “blessings” of inflation bringing extra income to the people, referred to by the Finance Minister, have been localised with only a microscopic section of the society. The working class and middle class people who could not figure themselves in war-production in any way have been faced with huge expenses necessary to meet their bare living, with no extra income to their aid. The abnormal conditions of the days should open our eyes to the very great and immediate desirability of checking our past, taking stock of our errors and omissions and usher in a plan where the great responsibility for production should be shouldered by the Government, so that the task may be easier and equitable.

The present Government has before them the unique opportunity of trying this method at a time when they are likely to receive sympathy from all corners and I suggest that the Bengal Government should immediately set up a committee for launching an economic plan on radical lines, based on intelligence and appreciation of all socialistic and examples before us such as in America, England, Ireland and Russia. If they have been able to undergo radical changes and proceed on progressive lines rapidly even during the present crisis, why should not we be able to emulate them.

In closing my remarks, I must not fail to pay compliments to the Finance Minister for trying certain new sources of accommodation, temporarily of course, in making cash credit arrangement with the Imperial Bank and in successfully trying the Treasury Bills issues. If these have yielded satisfactory results, I do not find any reason why the distressed people of the province should be threatened with more taxes especially in the shape of more purchase tax, camouflaged as sales tax and agricultural income-tax likely to ruin the middle class. I am quite in agreement with the Finance Minister that taxation is not always an evil. It has offered an opportunity to the people to contribute their quota to the Governmental administration. But when people are unnerved, fighting with famine and epidemic, and are stripped of their last belongings in many cases, these new tax proposals appear to be most uncharitable, coming from men they learnt to admire. Let us not forget that the people have already been taxed beyond their capacity. Let us not satisfy ourselves with the cheap dictum that when Government taxes, society taxes itself. Taxation obviously is "an engine of social and national policy" as has been said by the Finance Minister; but here unfortunately it has appeared to be an engine which is crushing the very existence of our society at large rather than implementing its growth. Let not war unnerve us.

I would, therefore, close with an appeal to the Finance Minister to take a more sympathetic attitude towards the people, to be more vigilant over the policy and methods of expenses by other Government departments, to make his task easier and less bitter to others.

Dr. KUMUD SANKAR RAY: Mr. President, Sir, I really did not want to speak on this Budget, because the whole atmosphere here seems to be unreal and the members feel that whatever they may say, they have no power to influence the Budget in any way and the Hon'ble Ministers probably think that since these fellows have no power whatsoever, there is no need for them to listen to their speeches carefully and to reply to their remarks. I find the Hon'ble Minister for Civil Supplies is half asleep (The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. STHRAWARDY: Oh, I am listening to every word that has been spoken. Dr. Ray's words are so precious that I cannot but listen to them attentively.) Thanks, but if I were a Minister, I would have felt that this is absolutely a farce. These people are no good. Let them talk as long as they like. It does not matter so long as we have a majority in the Lower House. I submit, Sir, this discussion of ours is a waste of time. This is an unreal atmosphere and I think that accounts for the dullness which is noticeable in this House. I do not know what is the remedy. I am not a lawyer and I do not know whether it is possible to have a joint sitting of both the Houses at least during Budget discussion. That would save time and unnecessary expenditure of public money. I would like to say one or two words regarding the Budget. I do not want to deal with some of the subjects which have been touched on by previous speakers, such as civil supplies, famine and other things. I should like to lay stress on one thing which I had said on many occasions in this House in the past. I had always asserted that there was nothing like a medical policy or a public health policy not only of this Government but also of the governments in the past, and I am glad to find that the present Finance Minister had the frankness to admit it. I will quote his words: "A score of hospitals with from 100 to 150 beds in each were opened in the worst-affected districts and in these hospitals, equipped with the most modern devices for the treatment of war casualties in the field, thousands of sick destitutes learned for the first time what real medical attention means." While I admire the Hon'ble Finance Minister for his frank statement, I find that there is still no medical policy at all in this province, and had it not been for the temporary intervention of the Army, I believe, that many more lives would have been lost. In this connection, I should like to join in the tribute paid by others in this House to the military for their timely intervention in the transport of foodstuffs to the depleted areas, and also in rendering prompt medical aid in the rural areas. I submit, Sir, that the real problem is that you must have a proper, broad and bold policy, and it was really through the intervention of the military that the public knew what real medical attention should be. Sir, it is very difficult to criticise the Medical Budget to which I shall limit my remarks. I find that these "estimates also include a provision of 53 lakhs for the administration of special medical relief in rural areas. This provision is intended to meet the cost of some 60 emergency hospitals of a hundred beds each and 500 hospitals of 20 beds each attached to selected dispensaries in the worst affected areas. In addition to this huge expansion of the existing facilities for indoor treatment—an expansion representing a 200 per cent. increase on the number of beds normally available—arrangements have been made to provide outdoor treatment nearer the patient's home by the opening of some 2,800 satellite treatment centres based on existing dispensaries." Now, let us analyse this a little more elaborately. We find that there is a provision of 53 lakhs of rupees. If the entire provision of 53 lakhs is meant to be utilised for the emergency hospitals of which the number is 60, then roughly calculated the number of beds will be 16,000. Now, what is the allotment per bed per month? Per bed expenditure per month for the 16,000 beds, if the entire provision of 53 lakhs is spent, will be something like Rs. 30 a month or one rupee per patient. I submit, Sir, that the cost of food alone would probably not be covered by one rupee. I do not know, probably there may be some other heads of expenditure placed in some other items. Therefore, all the remarks I make are subject to correction; but from the statement which has been made here it seems to me very puzzling how the Government propose to maintain 16,000 beds with the money, and there are other expenditure also such as medicine etc. I find that in addition to these 16,000 beds, another 200 per cent. increase on the number of beds are to be managed out of this 53 lakhs and also 2,800 satellite treatment centres based on existing dispensaries. I do not know how it can be possible with this allotment of 53 lakhs. I want further enlightenment on this subject, and I will revise my comments on hearing further enlightenment on this subject.

Now, Sir, the last thing that I would like to refer to is a remark made sometime ago on the floor of the House that Government was very much hampered due to the dearth of medical men. I suggested at the time and also asked what the Government had done to increase the supply not only of medical men but also of nurses. In response to an appeal made by the Chief Minister in his speech at Karachi asking for 350 medical men from outside Bengal to come to the aid of Bengal, the President of the Indian Medical Association issued a circular asking for volunteers. Only yesterday I was informed by the Honorary General Secretary of the Medical Association that he had forwarded the names of about 80 volunteers of whom not even 50 per cent. have been utilised till now. I am told that the outside provinces have been asked not to send any more medical men because of the language difficulty. Out of these 80 volunteers, 44 had a knowledge of the vernacular of this province; they either knew Bengali or could speak it. I do not understand the real position. Either get these doctors from outside or do not. Nor do I understand how the language difficulty comes in. Language difficulty did not come in in the case of the army doctors. The army doctors and the R.A.F. doctors they did not understand the vernacular but in spite of that they have become very useful and rendered medical relief for which we have here given them our tribute of praise. I really do not know what is the position. If there are plenty of doctors, why do you complain that you cannot take up relief work because of the dearth of doctors? I should also have been glad to find some provision for increased supply of doctors when we are going to take this additional responsibility. How are you going to supply doctors to the hospitals that you are going to start? A large number of doctors have been recruited to the Army from this province and the number of doctors now available to the people is not adequate. You are going to set up 2,800 satellite dispensaries and also 16,000-bed hospitals; they will require doctors in addition to the doctors in your existing hospitals. Therefore, how are you going to get doctors for these new dispensaries of yours? I should like to have a definite reply to that point, Sir. For instance, I have not seen anywhere in the Budget any scheme which would ensure additional supplies of medical men that are required. What about the nurses? How do you propose to maintain the 16,000-bed hospitals without nurses? I see no scheme here in the Budget for additional facilities for the training of nurses. Suppose you give one nurse for four or five patients. Of course, I do not know if you can reach that standard which is the standard of all civilised countries. The Medical Council is insisting on that ratio—of one nurse to 5 patients—in regard to the Calcutta hospitals and recognised institutions. Even if you provide that number, you cannot expect one nurse to be working for 24 hours! They can at best be employed for 8-hourly duties. And where are you going to get the institutions for giving them training? Of course, the Ministry may say that this is a long-term policy. I agree but there are methods by which you can cut down the period of training. The A.R.P. had a training course for 6 months. I know from personal experience that some nurses were deputed by the A.R.P. for training in the different Calcutta hospitals and though they have not received full training, yet their training may be said to be sufficient, if not adequate. I do not see any scheme in the Budget for the training of nurses that would be required in the tremendous task of giving medical relief which is intended by Government.

Now, Sir, with regard to the quinine policy of Government, I have again and again drawn the attention of the Government that there must not only be a short-time policy but also, side by side, a long-time policy. Some years ago we were told that a sum of Rs. 3 lakhs had been provided for developing the quinine plantation. We have not heard since whether any further attempt is being made to increase the production and supply of quinine. We all know that the supply of quinine we used to have from Java has stopped. We also know that India produces only 70,000 lbs. of quinine: but I think we want about 2 lakhs lbs. of quinine in normal times and during epidemics we shall require much more than that quantity—probably one million 20,000 lbs. according to the calculation of the experts. But I do not see any reference to that subject in the Budget statement apart from a grant of Rs. 60 lakhs for quinine. I should like to know where the excess quinine is going to come from. Then, if you distribute the quinine next year you would require it again. So unless there is a long-term policy, I do not know what would happen. I also cried hoarse about the need for mass vaccination. So much money is spent when there are actual epidemics; but no attempt is made and nothing is done to prevent epidemic diseases. I have on many occasions not only spoken about it in this House but also spoken from the public platform and through the Press regarding the necessity of compulsory vaccination and re-vaccination, so that small-pox may be stamped out once for all. But I do not see any indication in the Budget to show that there is any such scheme under the consideration of Government. These are, Sir, the few words which I would like to mention. I am not concerned whether the Budget is a deficit Budget or not. In times of emergency there must be an emergent Budget and we would have welcomed the Hon'ble Finance Minister if he had come forward with a much greater amount of deficit in order to meet the urgent needs of the people of the province. I am not concerned, again, whether this deficit is to be met by subvention or by loan from the Central Government; it is for the experts to work out.

Then, Sir, although I am not an expert in matters agricultural and in the "Grow More Food" campaign, I am rather pessimistic about its results. My friend Mr. Hamidul Huq Chowdhury has said that there are not enough cattle in the province for agricultural purposes. We know that there is no cattle. But other countries do not depend on cattle for the development of agriculture. There human labour and cattle are not used for agricultural purposes and deficit in cattle for cultivating lands do not affect them. Other countries use machinery for this purpose—tractors are used for cultivation. Some years ago we were told that the Agriculture Department had a few tractors; we do not know where they are at present. I should have thought that in these days of modern inventions Bengal Government would have been up and doing and utilised scientific devices instead of human labour and cattle. I have practically finished what I had to say. I would again implore the members of Government to see that a broader and a bolder policy is undertaken. If they do so, I am sure all sections of the House will lend their support.

Khan Bahadur ABDUL HAMID CHOWDHURY: Mr. President, Sir, the chief characteristic of the Budget under discussion is, as has been stated by most of the speakers who spoke before me, its deficit to an extent unknown and unprecedented in the history of Bengal. We are passing through an abnormal crisis and it is no wonder that the Budget prepared under emergent circumstances should reveal things extraordinary. When I say this I mean neither appreciation nor condemnation of the Budget as a whole; but, Sir, I think that the Hon'ble the Finance Minister deserves our sympathy for the unfortunate circumstances under which it has been his hard lot to assume the heavy responsibility of financial administration of the province. My Hon'ble colleagues who have spoken before me during the previous two days as well as today, have dealt with the Budget in its different aspects. I do not propose to traverse the same ground over again. During the very short time at my disposal I want to take this opportunity simply to speak a few words by way of reference to the policy of the Government in regard to the recruitment of officers for general administration. Sir, in this connection, I desire to draw the pointed attention of the Government to an act of glaring injustice that is being perpetrated to a band of very useful workers in the field of public administration, I mean, the members of the Bengal Civil Service, Junior Branch, who are commonly known as the Sub-Deputy Collectors. They indeed constitute the essential arms for the running of the primary and essential functions of the Government. They are the main link between the people and the Administration. They mould and shape the primary self-governing units including union boards in Bengal. They run the criminal administration of the province, some with the highest magisterial powers that the Criminal Procedure Code can bestow. They are the people to be requisitioned for tackling all kinds of extraordinary situations such as famine, relief, supply and various kinds of war works and civil defence functions. Some of them are in the fronts; out there to make the supreme sacrifice for the King and the Country. An indefatigable, resourceful and dependable band of public servants they are; but it is a matter of great regret that they are treated by the Administration just as anybody would treat an under-dog. Relegated to the shade of neglect and constantly living under an atmosphere of scorn, this class of workers find it so difficult to develop proper manhood in them. And who are they? These officers are recruited by the same competitive examinations as the Deputy Collectors. They are made to do the same magisterial and revenue duties side by side with the Deputy Collectors. Sir, my contention finds confirmation in the fact that there are two honourable members of this House, one of whom is now adorning the Treasury Bench and another rose to the eminent position of a Commissioner of a Division as well as other high positions of trust and responsibility, both commencing their career as members of the cursed service referred to before.

It might suit the convenience of some to say that these are exceptional cases. But, Sir, I may be permitted to be a bit optimistic and to suggest that every member of this much-neglected service has the potentiality of rising to the top, provided they are given opportunities, provided unnecessary impediments are not thrown on their way. Quite a number has recently been put in charge of subdivisions and I believe, the Home Department will bear me out that they are shouldering their responsibilities as efficiently as any Deputy Collector. But still Government will not remove the stamp of inferiority attached to the cadre. They will not merge them with Deputy Collectors nor will they give them proper facilities to put forth their best. To crown all, they will rather bring Deputy Collectors from other provinces than promote Sub-Deputy Collectors, the children of the soil, to the higher rank. What a shame to think that Bengal administration and Bengali intelligentsia is so poor today as to necessitate the induction of Provincial Service men from neighbouring provinces, people who have no affinity to Bengal and who are least expected to know Bengal's problems. This is a stigma which will always blacken the good name of Bengal's administration,—a stigma which will always be used effectively to prove the inferiority of the Bengali community. The Hon'ble Ministers responsible for this queer decision will not escape their share of responsibility in this behalf.

I take it that in this matter of a non-controversial character, the entire House will be with me when I suggest to Government to be more reasonable in their dealings towards the members of the Bengal Junior Civil Service. There may be a black-leg here and there just as there are black legs in the B.C.S. (senior) and the other services, but that can never be any ground to condemn the entire class. Let there be wider scope for the recognition of the merits of the Sub-Deputy Collectors. Let the number of promotions be increased, and let the induction of foreign Deputy Collectors be stopped.

Mr. MUNCTURAM JAIPURIA: Spoke in Hindi.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Mr. President, Sir, charcoal remains black however much we may wash it; and so however much the Hon'ble Finance Minister may have dressed his Budget with charming expressions and presented it before the House in his own inimitable style, yet the Budget remains as black as ever. This Budget reveals a frightful deficit of about 20 crores. Not that Bengal had not attempted to raise up its own revenue. It did. Sir, from 16½ crores in 1942-43 it raised its own receipts to over 21½ crores in the current year. And our revenue will be better by about 70 lakhs in the next year. Sir, there has been increase under several heads. Particularly noticeable is the increase of revenue under "Excise". This, I say, is a feather to the cap of the Muslim League Government which stands for prohibition. On the side of expenditure, it will be seen that the expenditure has doubled. In the year 1942-43, the expenditure was 16½ crores; this year it is over 32 crores, and will be only 3 crores less in the next year. A large slice of expenditure has been covered up by extraordinary charges in India on "Agriculture" and "Famine". Sir, when one looks at the expenditure on one side and at the receipts on the other, as I have pointed out, for the two years 1943-45, there would be a deficit of 17 crores, 46 lakhs. Now, Sir, when there is going to be so much deficit and so much expenditure I fail to understand why the Hon'ble Finance Minister has cut down the famine relief expenditure to 2 crores 61 lakhs in 1944-45 as against 5 crores 64 lakhs for the current year. It is said that the Finance Minister hopes for the best but has he got any just ground for this optimism? Rather, I would point out to him that all the circumstances point to the fact that what is coming will be as bad as the last year. Prices of all commodities which are the absolute necessities of life are again ruling sky-high—about double of what they were in normal years at this time of the season. Sir, the prices, I apprehend, will be ruling as high as last year, in the months of May to September next. I am afraid, that the class that was hard hit by famine will be the very people who will be again hard hit with disastrous consequences to themselves.

Sir, I would remind the Hon'ble Finance Minister of the statement which he himself made in the last session, namely, that this war has made the rich richer and the poor poorer. Sir, living in the midst of a record harvest year, these people tantalus-like will not have the wherewithal to taste the cup—that is the position to which they have come to. We have tried our best to impress on the Government that the expenditure on test relief works and gratuitous relief should not have been cut down even by a penny. But, Sir, there is a grim humour underlying the provision of a heavy increase of expenditure under the head “Jails”. There has been an increase from 53 lakhs in 1942-43 to Rs. 1 crore 36 lakhs in the current year: it seems as though the Hon'ble Finance Minister is inviting the destitutes to be His Majesty's guests in future rather than have test relief works and gratuitous relief. We hope however that the increased allotment of expenditure for “Police” and “Jails,”—they are pampered departments of Government,—does not foreshadow the policy of the Government for repression and more repression in the face of the public demand for the release of political prisoners without any further delay. Several thousands of political prisoners are still rotting in jails. There is no justification for their continued detention. The war is on since September, 1939, and we do not know when it will end. Will they remain in jail ad infinitum? They are mere victims of Police suspicion. Try them if you please or set them free. Nothing short of it will satisfy public opinion. May I, in this connection, point out that the present Ministry on the eve of its assumption of office made a bold bid for public support and so promised a very liberal policy in the matter of the release of the political prisoners. They came into office about a year ago. The mountain was in labour and has now produced the proverbial mouse. In the last ten months a tenth of the political prisoners—about 500—have been released and several thousands are still rotting in duress vile. The snail's progress has now come to a dead halt, so far as the release of political prisoners is concerned. Am I not entitled to ask why they are rotting in the jails still? Nothing untoward happened when some releases were made. Why should it be assumed that if the rest of the political prisoners are set free, the situation would be different. Sir, let us examine the point a little more closely in the light of famine and in the light of repercussion their releases may have in the country. Sir, East is East and West is West. Famine produces different results in the East and the West. In the West, in France, Monarchy was replaced by a Republic brought about by revolution due to famine. In the East, famine produced a different result, for East is East and West is West. In Bengal, people died, famine-stricken people died in their thousands, unwept, unsung, unhonoured without a single untoward incident. In England, the Secretary of State for India could not face the public. While attempting to do so, Mr. Leopold Amery was jeered and hooted down because, forsooth, there was famine in Bengal. But here in Bengal, our Ministers in spite of appalling deaths from famine and intense suffering of the general public could go out, address meetings and even receive addresses instead of kicks. You cannot whip a dead horse to life. If famine failed to stir the people to any acts of violence, it would be madness to hold that a few security prisoners, if set free, will set the Ganges on fire.

Sir, if these political prisoners are released, they would be of great help to the Government as well as to the public in humanitarian works as well as in the task of rehabilitation of the masses who have been ruined by the famine. I search in vain for any provision in the Budget specially meant for the economic and social rehabilitation of the famine-stricken people. As a result of the famine, many homes have been devastated and innumerable peasants have turned landless labourers. Fishermen, jogi, julas have lost their trade. I am afraid, no less than six million people of Bengal are affected and require rehabilitation. It is the elementary duty of the Government to protect the lives and properties of the people under its charge and where they lost their all as a result of what may be described as man-made famine, the responsibility of this Government in the matter of rehabilitating them is undoubtedly both great and urgent. The Government, it may be said, has placed a Bill on the Legislative anvil and they hope by it to restore the lands which the raiyats and under-raiyats were compelled to sell owing to acute distress. But, Sir, that Bill contains provisions which will frustrate the very object the Government has in view. For, these people who sold their lands for want of money would be unable to get back their lands for want of money. The people cannot pay the consideration money. Therefore, the provision of re-transfer is a make-believe one. The conversion to usufructuary mortgage and return of lands, say, after ten years, will hardly benefit the ruined peasants who require immediate possession of their lands for sheer sustenance. Government should constitute itself a trustee of the destitutes, arrange payment of the consideration money to the transferees and secure immediate return of the lands to the transferors so as to enable them to face the future with equanimity and with a sense of security and confidence. The Government should do more. They should allow their khas mahal lands lying waste in their possession to be cultivated by the destitutes with occupancy rights thereon. This, Sir, will solve the problem to some extent. While on this subject, I would like to make a reference to the question of "Grow More Food" campaign. Sir, an allotment has been made of Rs. 1 crore 35 lakhs this year and 50 lakhs for the coming year. The most important part in this campaign should be the reclamation of waste lands to increase output of paddy and the other agricultural products to avert famine. Government has failed to do this. Government instead has concentrated its attention to get more out of the land already under cultivation, by purchase and distribution of manure and improved seeds and doing other things. They are necessary but the waste lands must, in the first instance, be brought under cultivation if we really want to fight this famine and to add permanently to the agricultural wealth of the province.

Sir, agriculture is in a great danger for want of cattle and also for want of labourers. The duty of the Government now is to import a large number of labourers from outside as well as cattle. The prices of cattle have gone very much up due to indiscriminate slaughter of cattle. Government should issue an ordinance for the preservation of milch cows and also for the preservation of able-bodied cattle as this is intimately connected with the agriculture and the health of the public.

Then as regards education and industries, Sir, every nation is having its own plan and working them out for its educational and industrial uplift and fitting its nationals for competition which is bound to follow as soon as the war would be over. When we look at the Education Budget, we find a step-motherly attitude has been taken in this regard. It has been given less money than the Police. But we know that if we educate our people, there would be less crime and there would be less necessity for more money on Police.

Sir, the lot of teachers in Bengal is highly pitiable, though the teachers are responsible for building up in right good style the future citizens of the land. Teachers should be respected and given a high place in the society. Sir, if you look at the Budget, you will see that there is no indication of any attention having been given in a matter of such importance. I should think that at least 50 lakhs of rupees should have been budgeted for the uplift of the condition of the teachers. Sir, it is not yet too late and the Government may very well do it even now. While speaking on this subject, Sir, I notice that 5 lakhs of rupees have been allotted for the encouragement and spread of education amongst the Scheduled Castes people. I hope there is no motive behind it. Can it be that this has been done only for retention of the support of the Scheduled Castes people for the present Ministry? But, I hope, Sir, that the money will be spent, and spent rightly, in the next 12 months. Till then, I will withhold my judgment on this.

Sir, there has been a provision of 53 lakhs in the Budget for special medical relief in the rural areas for the current year which has been raised to 63 lakhs for the year 1944-45. As Dr. K. S. Ray has said just now on this subject, I would not like to dilate on this point, although I had my points ready. The provision is not sufficient for giving medical relief to the poor. People died in their thousands on account of famine and for want of proper medical treatment. They could not resist the attacks of preventible diseases, such as, malaria, cholera, etc. which were running rampant striking down the people whose constitution was already run down by famine. In view of all these, I hope Government will make adequate provision for the same.

Sir, a large slice of the expenditure, it is 63 crores, for the years 1943-45 has been swallowed up by the three heads—Extraordinary charges in India, Famine and Agriculture. Extraordinary charges, Sir, were necessitated by the extraordinary conditions of the war and the expenditure is shown on “Civil Defence” within which is the Civil Supplies Department.

Sir, keeping pace with corruption and bribery so rampant in Civil Supplies, the cost for Civil Supplies Department alone has risen up from 46 lakhs in 1942-43 to one crore in the current and one crore and 43 lakhs in the next year. The Provincial Government made a bad bargain with the Central Government regarding the proportion of contribution to be made by each of them with regard to Civil Defence. This agreement should be revised and as the extraordinary charges have been due to the war which is a Central subject, the whole cost of this item should be borne by the Centre.

Sir, there is no opening balance. It is minus. How to meet the deficit? The Hon'ble Mr. Goswami seems to think that Bengal has further resources to tap and that he will be able to make it up by further taxation if necessary. He pictures himself in the position of a tax-gatherer and observes that taxation is a sort of an engine of social and national policy. But can he employ the money which is proposed to be raised for the well-being of the nation? I ask him, could he employ the money that was raised from jute taxation for the purpose of bettering the condition of the jute-growers? Will he be able to ear-mark the income from the Agricultural Income-tax for the improvement of agriculture? Could he employ the money from the sales tax for the betterment of the poor?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Das, you have already spoken for more than 18 minutes. Will you try to finish in two minutes?

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, I want five minutes more. During the regime of the Hon'ble Mr. N. R. Sarkar we were given four days for the general discussion of the Budget. He said that as we have no right to vote on demands, the members of this House should have plenty of time.

Mr. PRESIDENT: You are also going to have four days.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Can he employ the money which he is going to raise by new taxation for the well-being of the nation? Can he ear-mark, I say, the income from the Agricultural Income-tax for the improvement of agriculture? The truth is that only promises are made whenever taxation measures are brought in this House that the receipts from them will be devoted to the welfare of the nation-building subjects; but we have seen that in actual practice they are spent largely on greasing the administrative machinery of Government. It is only when a truly national government comes into existence that taxation will be proposed and passed mainly for the good of the nation as a whole. In fulfilment of the Hon'ble Finance Minister's dictum I quoted, he should exert himself to form a national government or failing that at least an all-parties Ministry to share with him the responsibility of the taxation, so that it may be truly said that taxation is a sort of engine for social and national policy. But till then it is a one-sided engine, I should say, of mere oppression. Sir, the source of revenue allocated to this province is highly inelastic. The Niemeyer Award is highly ungenerous and stingy. There should be a further Order in Council revising the heads of revenue between the Centre and the provinces. Bengal under a new award should be made to stand on her own feet. So long as this is not done, Mr. Goswami should stay his hand from proposing more and more taxation. In the meantime, the Centre should come to the rescue of this province and wipe out all its deficits and take upon itself all expenses incidental to the war and bear a major share of the burden arising out of the Famine.

Khan Bahadur M. A. MOMIN: Sir, during the last three days we have heard numerous criticisms about the shortcomings of the working of the various branches and departments of Government. But I am a little disappointed that very few constructive suggestions have been made with regard to the financial condition in which we find the province today. I do not for a moment belittle the importance of these criticisms because this is the only occasion in the year when members of this House are privileged to discuss the various aspects of the administrative machinery of Government. But one would have expected that under the abnormal conditions which prevail now and which have been emphatically indicated by the dismal Budget presented to us that members should have given their valuable advice at least partially to meet the difficulties with which the Province is faced. As I have said, the Finance Minister has presented a dismal Budget. The financial condition of the province is abnormal and we are on the verge of financial bankruptcy. It is, therefore, necessary that something should be done to rehabilitate the finance of this province and in the best way that we can think of. The Finance Minister has been trying his best to get what money he can out of this province by taxation. But I think, Sir, that his efforts will not prove successful, for he cannot get blood out of stone.

The last Act of taxation has been the Agricultural Taxation Bill which has the approval of the Floud Commission. But I am afraid this taxation will bring very little to the coffers of Government. It is, therefore, necessary to try and get outside assistance which in my opinion is perfectly legitimate to claim. The abnormal conditions of Bengal today is due to extraneous circumstances, I mean the war. It is, therefore, only fair that other provinces and the Government of India should all combine to help Bengal in this crisis; and that is not all. I believe and I think there is every hope that the Hon'ble Finance Minister will be able to balance the budget by securing assistance from elsewhere. What we are most concerned with is about the future of the province. Most of us perhaps do not realise the great drain that has been taking place from our province annually now owing to the position in which we are placed. What about the purchasing of rice, wheat and other essential commodities, sugar and other things? Bengal today is perhaps sending out of the country for these commodities about 30 crores of rupees which with properly-laid policy could be avoided and conserved in the province. This condition of things has caused great anxiety to every one of us. We have heard criticisms about the working of the various departments and most of these criticisms have been directed towards the "Grow More Food" campaign. Necessarily, that department is very much in the lime-light except, of course, the subject of food and the activities of the Food Minister. It has been criticised that the "Grow More Food" campaign has not been as successful as was expected. I think there is a lot of truth in that criticism. Only the other day I was pointing out to the Agriculture Minister that we spent 45 lakhs of rupees on seed distribution for which we have not received even a lakh worth of return. He replied—and his reply was a painful surprise to me,—that if I were in his position, I could not have done anything better and that this criticism was levelled against him only because the potato seeds were rotten and could not germinate.

Sir, potato seeds alone were not rotten, the system of distribution was rotten. Wheat seeds, potato seeds and everything was rotten. They did not germinate. I think, instead of asking for light from Above, it was very unseemly particularly for the Hon'ble Minister of a holy character and of a God-fearing nature, of all people, to have said things like that. To the query as to whether I could have done anything more, my reply would be: that I certainly never claimed the capacity of doing it. But I certainly would have thought twice or thrice or many more times before I could throw away public money uselessly without expecting a proper return. There are extraordinary difficulties and unless a new orientation is adopted in this matter, I am afraid all our efforts will be in vain. Sir, merely distribution of seeds will not help, unless seeds are good and the seeds are sown on good land which will produce crops. We should see first whether the ground is prepared to receive the seeds. I remember that in the old days missionaries from America and England used to show the magnitude of their work in this country to their supporters at home by showing to them the millions and billions of leaflets and posters they used to distribute among the heathens. That used to please the old and pious ladies and when the hat went round it came back full. Similarly, the amount of success which the Agriculture Department has achieved cannot be judged by the amount of seeds distributed, but on the amount of seeds which have been judiciously and systematically grown and not thrown all over the place. I think my friend will not take amiss, the criticisms which I have made. Everybody in this House, including even the members of the Opposition, have got faith and confidence in our Agriculture Minister. His energy, his integrity and his will to do a thing perfectly is well-known to us all. But at the same time, I must sound a note of warning that unless he tries to get out of the advice and influence of experts (advice of experts is sometimes very embarrassing), in the long run he will find himself at the end of a dead wall or fall into the deep abyss of despond. He should not only take officials but also non-officials, who are really interested in this scheme, into his confidence. We are personally affected by the "Grow More Food" campaign; but it is not the hysterical purchase and distribution of seeds which will help and improve the country at all. While joining in their criticism against the Agriculture Department I must remind the members of the Opposition that when you rise to criticise the nation-building department you must remember that this nation-building work is of very recent date. Before the Reforms came into operation, the Government were chiefly concerned with the administration of Law and Order and the collection of revenue, and all other departments found a very back place in the administration. It is only recently, not more than I think 20 years or even less, that nation-building work has been started, and you cannot expect that this department which had been so charily treated by Government in the past should be able to do much. Of course, now that a crisis has come, we want that the Agriculture Department, the Public Health Department and the Education Department, the three departments which are in the charge of three Ministers in whom we all have great confidence, the Ministers who are political commoners and not aristocrats, must establish themselves on stable foundation and not run away through fear of criticisms or rush about the country making plans and notes which will ultimately miscarry. Sir, my friend Dr. K. S. Ray has in his usual sober manner deplored the deficiency in the medical and other administration. I entirely agree with him as regards the necessity of giving more medical relief, more medicines and getting sufficient quantities of quinine and so forth. But these things cannot be done in one day. You cannot expect the country to produce 1 lakh 33 thousand lbs. of quinine in less than five or six years. So unless you get quinine from Java and other countries,—let us hope we will get it from next year—but if you do not, you will have to wait your time and probably the doctors must put their heads together and make other researches by which the consumption of quinine may be conserved or they might find other medicine to replace that drug. But these things must take time. It is no use trying to spend money simply to try and rush these things—the preparation of quinine or the training of nurses or the qualifying of doctors cannot be rushed.

Sir, I do not like to say anything about food organisation. I feel very nervous when the Food Minister is sitting there and looking at me. This is a subject I do not know where to begin or where to end. I only want to confine my remarks today to rationing. I am not criticizing it, I am only making a request that when you have once started rationing, every commodity, every article of necessity should be rationed. I know the difficulties and I do not say that you have got the Aladdin's Lamp that you can make it successful in one day. That should be our aim and that should be our goal. While on this subject, I would like with the greatest humility to place before him, to plead on behalf of the people that his men employed in the rationing offices should be more courteous and sympathetic and really try to help in the same spirit as I believe exists among the superior officers of the Ministry. Sir, I will relate a story which happened to myself. About a month ago, I received some ration cards for my servants, five or six in number. At the present moment, as the House knows servants have become very slippery and will always go over to another house without notice. Five of my servants had left and as I am supposed to be an honest man, instead of taking rations for my new servants in their names I wrote to the rationing officer enquiring whether I could take the supplies in the names of my old servants or if new ration cards would be necessary. I got no reply for 14 days. I had to send a letter again and again till I got a reply written in very bad English, which was very difficult to read, in which it was said "No, those ration cards which you had returned were cancelled and you must apply for new ration cards". Two days later, I received another letter saying that I had not given the serial number of the ration cards. How could I do so when I had already returned the cards to him? That was pointed out to him. I personally went to the office and said "why make all this difficulty? These are for my servants, and I want ration cards for my five servants". "No, Sir, I cannot give you the cards without the serial numbers, as the number has got to be entered in the register", I was told. I was then told that age was not given. I did not remember whether it was mentioned in the application form. But when I came home I found out that the ages were written and accordingly they were told so. But then I found that they wanted my age as the head of the family. Sir, I became very exasperated in spite of my usual good temper. So I wrote to Mr. Hartley relating my grievance. I have all these days been feeding my servants from my reserve of 14 seers but I did not know what to do if I had to go on in this way for long. Then I tried to phone to the office and one gentleman who seemed to be evidently annoyed asked me "what was the trouble", to which I said that I was not getting rations for my servants. He asked me to telephone to the Tollygunge ration office. But I found that the officer there had no phone. So that is that, and I have not yet got the thing. And if these things happen to me who is supposed to be a friend of the Food Minister, what will be the lot of those who have got nobody to go to? As a last resort, I took recourse to the Parliamentary Secretary, who, in his turn asked me to let him have a written statement. Sir, this is only one example. So I would only humbly ask the Food Minister to tell the officers of his department to be a little sympathetic. Even now I do not understand why my age was necessary.

In conclusion, I would request the Hon'ble Finance Minister to take every one of us into confidence and I am sure that even the members who are in the Opposition will certainly respond to his request for co-operation. If we can be of any assistance to him at this time of dire need, we should be only too glad to do so. I have known Mr. Goswami for many many years and I have still got the same admiration for him which I had when he was much younger. Whether he was in the Opposition or not, whether he is friend or foe, he will never lose his capacity and ability and I can assure him that if we can be of any assistance our services are at his disposal.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order, order: the House stands adjourned till 1 p.m. tomorrow.

BENGAL LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL DEBATES

First Session, 1944—No. 15.

THE COUNCIL met in the Legislative Chamber of the Legislative Building, Calcutta, on Wednesday, the 1st March, 1944, at 1 p.m., being the fifteenth day of the First Session of 1944, pursuant to section 62(2)(a) of the Government of India Act, 1935.

Mr. Deputy President (Khan Bahadur ABDUL HAMID CHOWDHURY, J.P.) was in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Evacuees from Bengal to Assam.

70. Mr. NUR AHMED: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Revenue Department be pleased to state if it is a fact that about 3 lakhs of landless evacuees from Bengal have gone to Assam to seek food, shelter and land?

(b) Is it a fact that these helpless evacuees from Bengal are still loitering in Assam without any provision for land or food?

(c) If so, what steps have been taken by the Government of Bengal either to get them repatriated to Bengal or to secure cultivable lands for them in Assam? If not, why not?

MINISTER in charge of the REVENUE DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Mr. Tarak Nath Mukerjée): (a) and (b) Government have no information whether 3 lakhs of Bengalis are still loitering in Assam in search of land or food. But it is believed that a considerable number of landless people from the border district of Bengal have gone to Assam in search of lands or to find work.

(c) Steps have been taken by this Government to repatriate to their native villages those evacuees from Bengal who are being turned back by the Government of Assam from the borders of that Province.

The Government of Assam have imposed restrictions on the settlement of agricultural lands with the emigrants who went to that Province after the 1st January, 1938. The question of moving that Government to withdraw the restrictions is now under the consideration of this Government.

Mrs. LABANYAPROBHA DUTT: Arising out of answers (a) and (b), has the Government thought it necessary to ascertain the number of such unfortunate persons and not vaguely say "considerable"? What is the source of the Hon'ble Minister's information when he says that he "believes that the number is considerable"? Has Government taken any step to know the exact number?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Our information is mainly based on reports received from the local officers. In this particular case, the number can only be ascertained from the Assam Government.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Do the Government propose to take retaliatory measures against the Province of Assam in regard to the Assamese coming into Bengal?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: No, Sir.

Mr. NUR AHMED: Arising out of (c), is it a fact that a motion was passed in this House requesting the Central Government to the effect that all existing restrictions imposed by the Assam Government on cultivators from this province in getting settlement of land in the Assam Valley should be removed?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: I think so.

Mr. NUR AHMED: Has Government taken any action on that motion?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Yes, Sir, the Government have moved accordingly the India Government.

Mr. NUR AHMED: May I know what has been the result?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: No reply has yet been received.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, day before yesterday I wanted information as regards a short-notice question tabled by me some days back, and it was settled that the Supply Minister would reply to this question today. May I read that question, Sir? It runs thus:—

“If he is aware of the fact that a huge stock of foodgrains supplied by the Government of India for the feeding of Calcutta and the industrial areas has been spoilt and rendered unhygienic by the recent heavy showers in Calcutta?”

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: Sir, I did not accept that short-notice question.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, it was arranged by the Hon'ble President that the question would be answered today.

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: Order, order. As far as I remember the Hon'ble the President requested the Hon'ble the Leader of the House to refer the matter to the Hon'ble Minister concerned; but he did not convey any idea as to the acceptance or otherwise of the question.

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: Sir, I have got to answer two questions which were held over.

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: Order, order. The Hon'ble the Chief Minister will answer two questions which were held over during his absence on tour. One question stands in the name of Mr. Lalit Chandra Das and the other in the name of Mr. Haridas Mazumdar.

Arrest of S]. Dhirendra Nath Dutta, M.L.A., and Srijut S. C. Saha, B.L.

62. Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Home Department be pleased to state when (1) Srijut Dhirendra Nath Dutta, B.L., M.L.A., and (2) Srijut Surendra Chandra Saha, B.L., pleader of 16 years' standing of the Tippera District Bar, were arrested under the Defence of India Rules and Act, and when they are due to be released?

(b) In which class were they placed originally in jail and in which class are they now? What is their present state of health?

(c) Why were they not placed in class I in jail? Is it not a fact in an earlier conviction under the Defence of India Act, Dhirendra Babu was a class I prisoner?

(d) Were any maintenance allowance to the families of those prisoners given? If so, what is the amount?

MINISTER in charge of the HOME DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Khwaja Sir Nazimuddin): (a) Both were remanded to jail on the 13th August, 1942, they were released on the 9th April, 1943, and the 15th February, 1943, respectively.

(b) Both of them were classed in Division II as under-trials and after conviction in Division II and III, respectively. I do not know of their present state of health.

(c) The honourable member is referred to rules 617 and 910 of the Bengal Jail Code, a copy of which is in the Library; Yes.

(d) No family allowances are or were ever granted in the case of persons convicted after trial for specific offences.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state whether this question is about a year old?

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: Yes, very likely.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Will the Hon'ble Minister please state why this question was not answered in the last session?

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: I believe the session had finished before the time for answering this question came.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Is it only a belief on the part of the Hon'ble Minister? Does he not know it for a fact?

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: No.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Will the Hon'ble Minister please state how is it that both the prisoners were classed in Division II as under-trials and after conviction one was continued as Division II and the other was placed in Division III?

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: The division is finally decided by the trying Magistrate.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: How is it that Mr. Dhirendra Nath Datta, M.L.A., was in Division I previously, but on the last occasion was placed in Division II after conviction?

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: I want notice.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Will the Hon'ble Minister please see that such distinctions are not made in future?

(No answer.)

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: Will the Hon'ble Minister please state who fixes the division of under-trial prisoners?

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: I want notice.

Music before mosque.

66. Mr. HARIDAS MAJUMDAR: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Home Department be pleased to state—

(a) if he is aware that the grievances of the Hindus of Bengal in general about this question of music before mosque require immediate attention on the part of the Government of Bengal; and

(b) what steps, if any, the Government have already taken or propose to take in this connection to avoid inter-communal unpleasantness and occasional breach of the Law and Order?

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: (a) No.

(b) Does not arise.

Point of information.

Mr. HARIDAS MAJUMDAR: May I rise on a point of information, Sir? I mentioned this matter also yesterday and it is with reference to an enquiry from the Civil Supplies Minister as to the appointment of a committee in regard to ration cards for the bhog of our thakurs, because it was said that two or three days after he would make a statement. That was the assurance given to me. If any committee has been appointed, who are the members thereof and whether a Press note has been issued in this respect? One month is already out and we are in great difficulty. More than 200 applications have been received by the Hindu Mahasabha. I hope this matter will be expedited without any further loss of time.

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: I am not aware of the fact that 200 applications have been received by the Hindu Mahasabha. I have not received any application. It is after all Government's business to make provision. It has been very difficult for me to find representative gentlemen whom I could consult on the question but I have been gathering names and have before me a list of persons whom I cannot say that I have yet made up my mind to invite, but who are gentlemen whom in all probability I may make up my mind to invite. After I have done that, and have had a talk with them, I can assure the House that I shall be able to make satisfactory arrangements.

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: Will the Hon'ble Minister please state if the name of any member of the Legislature is before him in this connection?

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: No, Sir.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, we should like to know whether on the last occasion the Hon'ble Minister said that a committee for this purpose would be formed in a day or two?

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: Yes, that was my intention. But I could not contact those gentlemen who I expected would be able to give me the necessary representative names. After that I was away from Calcutta. But I have now got the names.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Does not the Hon'ble Minister consider this an urgent matter?

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: It is a matter of some importance.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, the Hon'ble Minister does not think——

General Discussion of the Budget.

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: Order, order, the House will now take up further consideration of the Budget. As today is the last day of the Budget discussion and as there are as many as four members of the Government who want to speak and as there is another subject, namely, the consideration of the Excess Demand which we shall have to take up today, I request the honourable members who are willing to take part in the discussion today to be as brief as possible.

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: Sir, why should the Excess Demand be taken up today——

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: Order, order. Mrs. D'Rozario.

Mrs. D'ROZARIO: Mr. Deputy President, the presentation of a Budget is an occasion for both congratulation and commiseration—congratulation to the one who presents it and commiseration for those on whom the burden falls. Under the head of Anglo-Indian education, I would like to say something about the dearth of teachers, both male and female, in our Anglo-Indian schools. This is causing my community the greatest concern and indeed the education of Anglo-Indian children has, I am afraid, received a great set-back. For this reason alone apart from the unsettlement caused by war conditions, and in particular the requisitioning of schools and the dispersal of the pupils, we feel that more consideration should have been shown to the educational needs of this community and an effort should have been made to retain the teachers who have either joined up or have been tempted to accept other employments. Even at the best of times the teaching profession offers no opportunities of lucrative employment, and in the conditions of today with the war services offering so many attractions our young men and women cannot be blamed for diverting their attentions to the latter. We can do little for them when year after year our Budget grant remains unchanged and unchanging, no more than the statutory obligation.

There is another profession that always deserves better but gets the worst. I refer to the nursing profession,—that noble profession which we treat so ignobly,—which has been so largely manned by our women. Today we are reaping the results of a policy the futility of which is evident on all hands. The cry today is for nurses, nurses for the war hospitals and nurses for our civil hospitals. But where are they? There is no response equal to the appeal. This is because there are other more paying and less exacting employments to be found today that offer a greater attraction, and you cannot expect one who is offered Rs. 250 for eight hours work as a typist for five or six days in the week besides other amenities, to slave as a nurse for at least eight hours a day, day in and day out, on a paltry sum of Rs. 15, 25 and Rs. 30 a month with perhaps food and lodging, lodging that is something in the nature of imprisonment, and food that is often uneatable. The shortage of nurses is so great that some of the wards in the Eden and Eye Hospitals have had to be closed recently. The poor nurses have had to suffer silently as any agitation on their part is put down with a heavy hand and rather than lose the certificate they came to earn, have put up with all the hardships and left for a more congenial atmosphere of work that private practice offers, the moment the hard-earned diploma was in their hands. There is no doubt that one has to possess the temperament of an angel and the constitution of an amazon to work as a nurse in the Calcutta hospitals. But what does this possession of such qualities bring in the way of financial gain? Barely a living wage! The standard of education for one aspiring to become a nurse has to be sufficiently high to enable her to follow the lectures and all the reading that is necessary for passing the periodical examinations. The treatment meted out moreover to the nurses under training and working in hospitals is far from being sympathetic and kind. On the other hand, it looks as though the rules and regulations laid down have nothing but harshness and want of sympathy for them. I have been told that their food arrangements that were never what they should be, have now deteriorated to such an extent in quality and quantity, that one wonders where the brain and brawn that is required for such strenuous labour as nursing, is to come from. The rationing appears to have hit them harder than others, as bread and butter are doled out in quantities much lower than what has been fixed by Government.

All this comes very largely from the peculiar policy of leaving this important branch of civic life in the hands of a private association which amounts really to a small coterie of businessmen, while Government contents itself merely by giving a dole. This is a shirking of duty. A thing like this is a state responsibility in every civilized country. Out here we are content to leave it to a band of Europeans who in the past have seen to it that their own class occupy the higher positions, almost wholly to the exclusion of others. This is not intended to be a mere gibe emanating from any racial jealousy, but a fact that goes to show how by killing indigenous ambitions a supply of sufficient number of nurses is not available at this critical juncture. In using the word indigenous, I do not overlook our Indian women as opposed to Anglo-Indians, for I do believe that something could have been done if sincerity existed to draw the right type of Indian women to hospital nursing. We, Anglo-Indian women, do not feel their competition, because apart from there being room for many more women in this profession than can be supplied, efficient Indian men and women demand, and well deserve, the wages that an Anglo-Indian or European would expect.

Mr. K. C. ROY CHOWDHURY: Mr. Deputy President, Sir, I am obliged to cut short my discussion because of the remarks you made that so many people are to speak today. I would only say this. The abnormal Budget proposals placed before us are certainly the outcome of unprecedented economic breakdown of Bengal. The future historians of the terrible famine, which cost many lakhs of human lives of the poor and working classes, may search our speeches for materials to condemn the Government of the famine period—the Central, the Provincial as well as the Whitehall authorities—for negligence and utter lack of foresight without parallel in the annals of the British administration in India. The British and American commentators as well as Labour Members of the British Parliament have pronounced their verdict that the famine was due to the negligence, callousness, inaction and irresponsibility of the Government. I would not dilate on that any more.

As one of the humble organisers of the numerous free kitchens in Calcutta and suburbs, I have reasons to believe that the public had also some share in the responsibility for the famine. I saw sights and heard talks which struck me as if they were episodes of a barbaric age. Scores of infants of famished mothers were dying on footpaths from want of a few ounces of milk. The heart-rending cries of dying babies and their foodless and milkless mothers roaming half-naked in the residential quarters of this so-called City of Palaces, found little response from the residents and yet we indulge in boasting of our high sense of humanity. I speaking from personal knowledge of the behaviour of my own neighbours who could spare enough milk to save each and every child who died in my locality.

Sir, however much we may try to whitewash our misdeeds or the misdeeds of the Government of the day, the future generations would not forgive us and the politicians of all brands,—Congress, Hindu Mahasabha or Liberals who merely protested,—or the League which was in power and simply funkcd. The Viceroy's speech in the Central Legislature on the Socio-economic future of India is indeed encouraging. The intelligentsia of India would appreciate His Excellency's reference to use rightly and to best advantage the economic assets of the war, not to increase the wealth of the few but to raise many from poverty to a decent standard of comfort. That portion of the speech is an eye-opener to the Nationalist politicians. Dreamers from Karl Marx to Wells cannot hope for anything better in regard to the theoretical aspect of the great objective suggested by the Viceroy. We wait in patience to see what part our Provincial Ministry plays in the immediate future to translate that objective into action within the sphere of Provincial Autonomy.

The question of the poverty of the industrial workers engaged directly and indirectly on war productions is a very serious one. The Department of Labour deals with the conditions of approximately a million workers employed in Jute, Tea, Coal-mining, Engineering, Shipping and other organised industries. The Labour Commissioner, a very efficient and worthy member of the I.C.S., and his small staff cannot possibly cope with the excessive burden of work imposed by war conditions with a Budget grant of a little over a lakh of rupees. The preparation of reliable family budgets of our working people is still hanging fire. Dearness allowance which is meagre has to be revised on the basis of family budgets. There is serious complaint from the Jute workers who are paid only Rs. 5 a month as allowance for dearness. The maximum monthly earnings of Jute workers like weavers are Rs. 32 and the minimum Rs. 22 inclusive of wages, dearness allowance and concessions on foodstuffs. The average wage is only Rs. 25 when mills work full 54 hours a week. But the most unfortunate factor in the Jute industry as it functions today is that shortage of coal has reduced working hours in most of the mills with substantial fall in their weekly wages. Casual labourers would not touch work on less than Rs. 1-8 a day, whereas skilled workers in the jute industry with large families to support earn much less. The question of ration is equally important. The unit must be raised as manual workers have to consume more calories than other adults. In Bombay the unit of workers' food has been raised by 50 per cent. Bengal must follow suit. Millhands prefer cash payments to foodstuff concessions granted by the employers and would like to purchase foodgrains from ordinary ration shops. The lot of coal-miners in Burdwan district is indeed miserable, although their efficiency has elicited world-wide admiration. Due to inadequate wages and allowances and lack of amenities, many coal-workers have deserted mines and joined military constructions. Belated steps have been taken by the Central Government but the Provincial Labour Ministry is exerting very little to avert the disaster of coal shortage which is playing havoc on our industries and wage-earners.

Every member of this House welcomes efforts to "Grow More Food" and convert more waste lands into cultivation. In fact, the future health and rehabilitation of our poor people depends largely on increasing crops. Purchase and distribute as much improved seeds as you can, but bear in mind the extreme importance of manures. I have some interest in lands near the Jadavpur railway station and have seen with my own eyes wonderful increase in output of paddy and vegetables from use of water-hyacinth compost. The eradication of this devilish plant is most important. We see thousands of acres lying waste being covered with this pernicious weed. The Minister of Agriculture is our distinguished colleague. I request him to take immediate action to enforce the Water-hyacinth Act as amended in 1941. He must place suitable staff and experts at the disposal of the District Collectors. He should constitute a Central Advisory Board and also local boards with specialists in water-hyacinth problems, its extraction and conversion into compost. The "Grow More Food" campaign must be supplemented by

"Grow and Catch More Fish" campaign. I had a good deal to do with projects of fisheries before the first world war and was unofficially associated with the Bengal Government Fisheries Department with Dr. Southwell in charge. Carps (pona fish) are our staple food. They grow in tanks, rice-fields and rivers but the business of catching, transport and marketing is left in the hands of the poor and illiterate fish people, without any financial solidarity and skill in making nets and gears. The Government should acquire fishing rights from the owners for the benefit of our fishermen who must be supplied with suitable boats, nets and gears. Dr. Southwell estimated that hundred times more hilsa and other fish can be caught in the Bengal rivers and marketed, if transport and cold storage facilities were forthcoming. The Sundarban estuaries abound in edible fish like vetki, bhangan, frawn, etc. I had a motor boat in the Sunderbans in those days and was convinced of the truth of Dr. Southwell's statements. Now that a new department has been created, it is high time that the Government should revive efforts to develop marine fisheries which are almost gold mines, as was proved by the experimental hauls of the Bengal Government trawler or fishing steam-vessel known as the "Golden Crown" before the first world war. Very good fishing banks were located in the Bay of Bengal and should be fully exploited. The mariners of old England were drawn from British fishermen and the British Navy was actually founded on the sea-faring fishermen of the British Isles. I have reasons to believe in the evolution of a Bengal Navy if we take steps to encourage sea-fishing and train Bengali fishermen in sea-fishing. In the Madras and Bombay sea coasts, there are large fleets of small sea-fishing boats. Let us have them by all means on our own sea-coast spreading from Contai to Cox's Bazar. Then, Sir, I would request the Hon'ble Minister for Agriculture to tackle the problem of growing more fatty mustard seed in the province. It is perfectly scandalous that we have to depend on the United Provinces for our mustard seeds and mustard oil which are essential necessities. Steps must also be taken to develop dairies for an increased production of ghee and butter. It is amazing that the United Provinces send us many crores of rupees worth of ghee and butter. Let the Government see that we become self-supporting in milk and milk products within the next 10 years. My remarks should equally apply to the development of the cocoanut industry. We have been hitherto depending on Madras, Ceylon and other overseas countries for our cocoanut oil which is a necessity in every Bengalee house. Salt produced in Bengal is very small in quantity. Private enterprise is slow to come. Government will be well advised to undertake the manufacture of salt on large scale as a State concern. Now that we have an Australian front rank statesman as our Governor, I suggest that our Minister should seek his personal advice on Australian methods of agriculture, dairy and pastoral productions. The yield per acre of Australian wheat and other foodgrains is many times that of Indian produce. Cattle-raising in Australia and export of meat and milk products is enormous. The total population of Australia is only six millions. The Australians are all proud of their very high standard of living from agricultural and pastoral occupation. Australian working man is happier than his

English and European fellows. The International Labour Review gives us comparative figures of wages in 1926. London 100, Stockholm 88, Berlin 70, Rome 44, Brussels 41, Melbourne (Australia) 142, Philadelphia (U.S.A.) 166. The Commonwealth agricultural and unskilled workers receive an average wage of £5 a week equal to Rs. 250 a month in Indian currency. I gathered from Australian Labour Delegates whom I met at Geneva in the International Labour Conference in 1923 and in 1930 that State socialism has achieved wonderful results in Australia. One of them with whom I had correspondence, was Mr. Holloway who rose to the rank of a Cabinet Minister under a Labour Government. The Commonwealth with 6 or 7 States or Provinces enjoying complete autonomy has a Federal Legislature. But provincial autonomy is as good as we have in Bengal, perhaps better. Take for example the State of Victoria with Melbourne as its capital. Its area is a little over 87,000 square miles as compared with 82,000 square miles of Bengal. The population is, of course, less than 2 millions as compared with 60 millions in Bengal.

The State revenue exceeds 30 million pounds—about 40 crores of Indian rupees,—including income from State railways, State water-supply and State coal-mines, State electrical undertakings etc. In fact, the taxation was only 4 million according to an old report—about 5½ crores of rupees from land, stamp and other duties, licenses, etc., whereas 26 millions is derived from State undertakings. The value of agricultural productions exceeds 20 millions, pastoral industry (cattle) and dairy industry over 30 millions, mining industry 2 millions and forest industry 2 millions. The labour party in Australia is most powerful and has formed Ministries in Federal as well as State Legislatures. We are all expecting doles from Delhi. But doles from Delhi will not be forthcoming every year. Central expenditures are mounting very high and there is a big Budget deficit and then post-war undertakings would exhaust central resources. Hence the necessity of State socialism in Bengal to augment the provincial revenues as provincial taxation has almost reached its limit. State socialism is not communism nor Hitler's national socialism. State railways, for example, of the Government of India is an instance of State socialism. What we require is State purchase of coal-mining rights and even of the collieries in Bengal, State purchase of inland navigation vessels and workshops from the India General Steam Navigation and River Steam Navigation Companies and their expansion, State purchase of electrical undertakings like the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation and its expansion throughout Bengal, State undertaking of motor transport, many more canal and irrigation schemes and public works yielding incomes. These seem to me to be the best solutions of our revenue difficulties. The finances should come from State loans and bonds like the United Provinces bonds which financed the great irrigation and hydro-electric works in Northern India. A loan of Rs. 50 crores at 4 per cent. would mean a recurring charge of Rs. 3 crores in interest and sinking charges. If this Rs. 50 crores is judiciously invested on State undertakings and if the management is as sound as the management of the Government of India State railways, we may expect a net revenue of 5 crores to relieve taxation in future.

Rai Sahib JOGENDRA NATH RAY: Mr. Deputy President, Sir, our new Finance Minister, the Hon'ble Mr. Goswami, serves us with tons of words in support of the disbursement of tens of money hitherto unprecedented in Bengal's financial history. While we listened to his saccharine stories of millions of rupees being ear-marked for the famine-ridden populace of Bengal, our mind's eyes visualised only pictures of "skin and bone" still roaming about in the streets of mofussil towns and thousands of Bengal's villages. Soothing promises, jugglery with figures, bombastic and occasionally inaccurate statements, however grandiloquently proclaimed and propagated, fail to appease the hunger of the millions and restore the confidence of the people in the sincerity of the Government. In the Finance Minister's speech we find the smoke-screen of explanations, expostulation, protestation, accusation, acrimony and even threat—all of them put together will be but poor platitudes in the face of the crisis of Bengal that is lurking ahead.

The most important heads dealt with in his speech are extraordinary charges in India, Finance and Agriculture.

As regards the first head, in which the Department of Civil Supplies is included, the estimate of the latter department is raised from 1 crore of the current year to Rs. 1 crore 48 lakhs for the next year. I must say and I think the House will agree with me that this increase of expenditure on this department from Rs. 4 lakhs in 1942-43 to Rs. 1 crore and 48 lakhs in 1944-45 stands in dismal contrast to the manner in which this department is being administered. It is everywhere characterised by bungling, mismanagement and the whole administrative edifice is rotten to the core. It served only to import kicks to the peasants, slaps to the townspeople and at present knocks at the Hindu gods and goddesses in the different temples of Calcutta. The recent Calcutta rationing and the way in which rice, kerosine oil and sugar control is operating throughout the province are a poor testimony to the efficiency of this department. As regards famine, the provision of 261 lakhs for the next year is too meagre for the purpose, including as it does both gratuitous relief and test relief works. The calculation behind the estimate under this head bespeaks the lack of vision of the Finance Minister and the Ministry as a whole and is based on irresponsible unreality, so characteristic of our Ministerial high personages. I do not know how the Finance Minister could see glimpses of recovery of Bengal from the shock of famine; but I think even the most incorrigible optimist will not say that Bengal is out of the woods. Diseases are on the increase and those who crawled out of the hands of famine will succumb to the ravages of disease. The provision of only 62 lakhs for medical relief is too insignificant a sum considering the immensity of the requirements and vastness of the people to be served. I am not propagating alarmism, but I am only presenting a true picture of rural Bengal which is far away from the coloured and spectacled gaze of our popular Finance Minister.

As regards Agriculture and the "Grow More Food" campaign, there are pious wishes in the budget of cultivating existing old lands more intensely and also bringing into cultivation waste lands; but the methods suggested, namely, improved manuring composts, irrigation and improved seeds, are disappointing. What about the poor devitalised human staff that will work out the much-vaunted scheme of "Grow More Food" in the fields? What about the reclamation of thousands of acres of paddy lands where sand has been deposited by the last Damodar flood? Embankment of the Damodar can probably eliminate flood, but not certainly the sand deposit. Then the cattle resources are poor and dwindling and rumours are afloat about the destruction of the cattle of Bengal for meat purposes on a large scale. No provision is made about fodder for the cattle, nothing for housing those rendered houseless, i.e., settling the vagrants in their proper places. The Bengal Destitute Persons (Relief and Repatriation) Bill is a punitive measure to them and the Finance Minister's poor houses, relief measures and work houses can touch but a fringe of the problem when the Finance Minister admits that no separate provision has been made for the economic, and social rehabilitation of the vast masses.

Coming to the income side of the Finance Minister's speech, it is interesting to note that Excise duty is yielding more, which is a sad commentary on the morals of the people of Bengal. He expects to raise 10 crores more for this year and next year and probably this will come, though he does not mention it, from the Sales Tax and Agricultural Income-tax. But even a novice in economics will understand that the incidence of both these taxes will ultimately fall upon the poorer sections of the people. The wholesaler will pass on the increased Sale Tax to the retailer who, in his turn, will pass it on to the ultimate consumer.

The zemindars, patnidars, landholders—who will be hit by the Agricultural Income-tax will similarly pass on the same, in one form or other, to the under-*raiya*ts and bhagchasis. Not only that, the zemindars, already scared by the Flood Commission's Report and the Government's action upon it, will be further struck by this measure and as a result they will squeeze their *raiya*ts and put a stop to all humanitarian works so long undertaken by them in the interests of the people. But these taxation measures upon the dying Bengal, bled white by the ravages of famine and calamities, are to be "engines of social and national policy" of our popular Finance Minister who thinks that we in Bengal have not yet exhausted our taxable resources. But from his own admission, the increase in expenditure under "Jails" is due "to a large extent to the result of desperation on the part of those who found themselves driven nearer and nearer the verge of starvation". They certainly committed offences against the law of the land—the law that could commit them to prisons, but could not feed them and clothe them. Then, the question arises: how the Government will get the money—how it will meet this heavy deficit? To this my first suggestion is that the Government must approach the Central Government for a very substantial financial help—not by way of loan but by way of subvention from the Centre. It is now almost universally admitted that the last famine was purely a man-made thing, a creation of the war for which Bengal is in no way responsible. It is only because Bengal happens to be on the eastern frontier of India that she has been suffering so much. If the promotion of war efforts be the first and foremost concern of the whole of India, is it not an essential and moral obligation on the part of the Central Government to help Bengal substantially with money at this hour? His Excellency the new Governor of Bengal has stated that he will make Bengal a "contented base for the promotion of the war in the East". The term "a contented base" is, of course, very ambiguous and we do not quite understand what His Excellency really means by it. If he means by this that he will make the people of Bengal happy and contented so that the universal country-wide contentment of the people may promote the war efforts to such an extent as has never been dreamt of by any one, we may certainly expect His Excellency to try his utmost to prevail upon the Central Government to grant this subvention at this critical hour of her very existence.

Secondly, Government must curtail all unnecessary expenses. The Civil Supplies Department along with some other departments are spending money quite lavishly for the upkeep of a very costly establishment with princely salaries to all at the top. In fact, there is still sufficient scope for saving a substantial portion of public money from these departments. The expenses under the Head of Parliamentary Secretaries may also be referred to in this connection. At the time of such heavy deficit in the Government's revenue income, is it not desirable that the Ministry should do away with at least a substantial portion of this costly show? For, if you go on taxing the people in this way, the backbone of the people will break down.

To the Finance Minister the State is in the last resort Force; but a truer conception of organised human society is that the State is always Service. But may I finish by asking this question to our popular Finance Minister: does this mean that it is for the Government of which he is an engine to administer new and new taxation measures and apply force for their realisation and it is for the famished humanity of Bengal to serve the Government by dancing at their behests and by meeting demands even to the point of committing suicide?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN:

Mr. Deputy President, Sir, before I take up my subject, the subject of agriculture, I should like to make a few observations regarding some comments in respect of the general aspect of the Budget. Sir, most of the honourable members in the Opposition criticized the Budget saying that it is a dismal Budget, that it does not show any feeling of sympathy for the people, that it has concealed facts and so on and so forth. But, Sir, on a cursory examination of the Budget it will be apparent that it is a bold, courageous and straightforward Budget. We have taken every step to help our starving millions, for which we have been compelled even to tax our people. We have taken the odium of taxation for helping the starving population. There was no jugglery of figures. There was no attempt made to show that we are trying to balance the receipts and the expenditure. It is apparent from the figures in the Budget that we are making earnest and honest attempts and are risking everything in order to save the starving population. Sir, we know how budgets are prepared ordinarily. We know that in 1939 the Finance Minister presented a surplus Budget of one crore of rupees, but he did not think it proper to spend money out of it on any agricultural or industrial scheme, because he thought that the result might be uncertain. But here it is a different story. Here we are going to spend everything we have, and we are also incurring debts up to any amount necessary in order to save our own people from death by starvation.

Sir, it is said that this is a Ministry-saving Budget. How this can be said I do not understand, because the Budget itself shows that the Ministry is risking the odium of taxation. If they were prepared to placate the people, they would not have imposed any taxation at all. They would have merely incurred debts and incurred loans and imposed no taxation. I do not also understand why taxation has been so much criticised, because if taxation is necessary at any time it is necessary now. We must save our people at any cost by taxing all who are able to pay the tax. The two taxation bills which are going to be presented are of such a kind that they will not touch the poor at all. One of these is the Sales Tax of which the rate has been increased from one pice to two pice, although the poor man's cloth has been excluded from this tax. Formerly, cloth was not exempted from this tax but in the present Bill the poor man's cloth has been entirely excluded and it is only the other articles that are going to be taxed. Sir, all civilized countries, whenever they are in difficulty as regards their financial resources, resort to indirect taxation, which is supposed to be the best form of taxation because it comes from the consumers who feel the tax very little and because it is levied at a very low rate. Germany and France after the last war recovered their financial position by resorting to this sort of taxation which is better known as turn-over tax. I do not also understand why, while we claim self-government and expect all sorts of amenities of life and social service for the people, we should not be prepared to tax ourselves. We make ourselves the laughing-stock of the world by saying that we do not want to tax ourselves but at the same time want this thing and that for ourselves. We have our genuine grievances against the Government of India; but in the hope of getting assistance from that Government are we to sit idle and close-fisted in our places and see our people dying by hundreds and thousands without making any attempt to tax ourselves? Are we to go with begging bowls to other people to help us? Is that the policy which should guide us? I think that is not a reasonable or proper attitude which any reasonable politician should take.

Sir, I now come to my special subject, namely, the Agriculture Department. First of all, I must apologise to my esteemed friend,—not only friend, but my guru, as I call him, because it is from him that I learnt my lessons in service and he has always been more than a brother to me and I have nothing but respect and affection for him—, I mean Khan Bahadur Saheb Abdul Momin. It was quite in an unguarded moment that I told him that nothing better could be done by anybody else, to which a reference was made by him yesterday. I had told him so because he had told me of the proverb that whatever goes to a salt mine becomes salty. Sir, it had pained me very much that knowing me as he does for the last 40 years, knowing me as he does that I am a man who would rather break than bend, and knowing that I have been trying my best—he could make such a remark as he did. Sir, I have been trying my best and I explained to him my difficulties, my disadvantages, my disabilities for which I have not been able to do as much as I could wish. But in spite of that he passed that uncharitable remark. I now think that I should not have said what I said at the time and I tender to my friend the Khan Bahadur my sincerest apology.

I now propose to deal with the various items to which attention has been drawn by different members. Sir, no one knows better than I do about the defects of the Agriculture Department. But, Sir, we had our disadvantages. The first disadvantage was inadequacy of staff. We have got one demonstrator for serving $1\frac{1}{2}$ lakhs of agricultural population: that is absurd. Is it possible to expect any substantial—any appreciable—work when one demonstrator is trying to serve an agricultural population of $1\frac{1}{2}$ lakhs, as compared with one per ten thousand in the Punjab? Then, Sir, our staff was not prepared for an abnormal time like this. The gigantic scale at which we had to distribute seeds and other things—they were not used to. There was a country-wide demand for seeds of aman and aus paddy, because on account of the distress the agriculturists had eaten up the seeds. So we had to make the best of a bad job. I say there had been many difficulties. Many of the seeds were probably not of the desired kind; but that could not be prevented when things had to be done in such a hurry and on such a large scale. At the same time, I do not believe that there has been no result out of that. A bumper crop of both aman and aus after the distress of such a magnitude we could not expect without Government help. A large proportion of the seeds distributed must have gone to the poorer section who had none at all. Some portion might have been frittered away—I do not deny that; but a very large portion must have gone to the needy people and was of real help to the cultivators and it contributed to the bumper crop of both aman and aus. I also admit that there have been some defects in the distribution of rabi crop, such as potato. On account of transport difficulty, on account of delay in getting sanction, and on account of the conditions imposed by the Government of India, the scheme partially failed. The Government of India directed that potato should be purchased and distributed to agriculturists at a subsidised rate. But even at the subsidised rate the price was high—Rs. 20 a maund, and the agriculturists would not purchase at that rate. The Agriculture Department could not sell at a lower rate without consulting the Finance Department. They had to refer the matter to the Finance Department. The Finance Department took a lot of time and the result was that some portion of the potato became rotten and a portion had to be sold at a low rate. Similarly with regard to wheat. There were transport difficulties: wagons could not be had and wheat coming from Bihar was delayed by six weeks on account of a railway accident. All these difficulties had to be encountered. This is the first year and we had to encounter difficulties but I think all these difficulties will not exist in future. But there are some deep-rooted difficulties which would require some time to be eradicated. From the experience of this year we have taken lesson and hope to be able to get rid of most of them in future. Then regarding observation of certain members that mere distribution of seeds does not mean actual production of more food. We also never thought that by mere distribution of seeds we would guarantee more crops. We did not lose sight of this point: so not only we distributed seeds but we distributed manure, we distributed fodder as well as seeds for the 'production of fodder. We also considered small irrigation schemes. For this purpose, I am in close touch with the Irrigation Minister and small irrigation schemes will be got through within a short time. We have already taken up compost of water-hyacinth as has been suggested by one honourable member. We are going to tap this source on an extensive scale in East Bengal, where water-hyacinth is available everywhere.

As regards cultivation of waste lands, we have, after long correspondence with the Government of India, just been able to arrange that no land should remain uncultivated. Owners of cultivable waste lands will have to cultivate their lands within a fortnight of the issue of orders by Government in this respect. If the owner does not cultivate the waste land within the time, Government would take charge of the land and allot it to cultivators at a nominal rent. We have also been in correspondence with the Railway Department regarding the lands lying on the sides of railway lines and we are going to take over charge of these lands for getting them cultivated by the agriculturists.

We have a scheme regarding the breeding of cattle. We are going to start cattle-breeding in every subdivision which we had not hitherto done. We want to replenish the stocks of plough-cattle whose want the agriculturists have been feeling very much. We have also a scheme regarding poultry and fish culture before us, and another for manufacture and distribution of sulphate ammonite for manure purpose. We have all these schemes. But you cannot expect that all the schemes would mature in a day. Nobody can expect that. Nobody would be happier than me if they really matured overnight. But that will be asking for the impossible. (DR. KUMUD SANKAR RAY: Have you inherited any scheme from the past Ministry?) I do not think that there was any scheme under the consideration of the previous Agriculture Minister. Then, we have a scheme for the artificial insemination of cattle-breeding. By this method good results have been achieved in Russia. Mr. Kamini Kumar Dutta had referred to the vernalisation of seeds in his Budget speech of last year and even that we are considering. We have asked for contribution from the Imperial Agricultural Research Institute to experiment whether by this method we cannot produce aus crops before the floods come in Bengal. We are doing everything that is humanly possible.

Sir, agriculture is a national cause. I have always been saying that we must not leave the agriculturists to their own fate, because we know that 66·6 per cent. of our peasants hold only 4 acres or less land per family. Is it possible for these poor agriculturists to get proper finance for cattle, seeds and implements for the cultivation of their land? If we want to get proper return from the land, we must treat agriculture as a national concern and not allow the agriculturists to shift for themselves.

Next, I should like to say a few words with regard to the remarks made by my honourable friend Mr. Hamidul Huq Choudhury in respect of the Rural Reconstruction Department. He said that this department is not at all necessary because the Agriculture and Public Health Departments should do this work. I wish to tell him that we met Colonel Brayne only yesterday and we heard from him how villages have been turned into heavens. I would tell my friend that rural reconstruction work can be done without spending money from the Budget but by infusing the spirit of self-help, and we are going to experiment it here. We have one Rural Reconstruction Director with only one Assistant; the staff has not yet been appointed because of war conditions, but if this department is properly organised a lot of work could be done, and we could show wonderful and spectacular results by infusing the spirit of self-help and voluntary labour. I am not sitting idle: I have been trying my level best to develop agriculture and place it on a firmer and sounder basis so that it may serve the agriculturists properly and may show tangible results. We are not satisfied with the present agricultural organisations. We have already decided upon bringing a gentleman of great experience from the Punjab, Khan Bahadur Alfaz Hossain, in order that by following his advice Bengal may become a surplus province like that of the Punjab. If necessary, we would go to other places and even to Egypt for specialists, because, in Egypt paddy is grown at the rate of 80 maunds per acre, as against 18 maunds in Bengal in spite of its proverbial fertility. We are not sparing anything to improve the condition of our agriculturists and we are doing it at any cost and at any risk.

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: Sir, it is very difficult to dovetail discussion on food on to a Budget discussion. References have been made to certain aspects of the Food Department. I shall try and give a general answer without any detailed discussion on our food policy. This is not the time and the opportunity to try to apportion responsibility for what has occurred and for the food crisis; but there can be no doubt about it that much of our disasters was due to war conditions in Bengal,—a position which some vocal people in this province not infrequently are unable to recognise on account of their factious outlook, a position which does not seem to have been appreciated sufficiently by other provinces or even by the Government of India or by the world public who are showing much sympathetic interest in the condition of Bengal. There can be no doubt about it, Sir, that much of our expenditure on food, on famine, on medicines and on schemes of rehabilitation have had to be incurred on account of the special war conditions in Bengal, and there can also be no doubt about it that Bengal is entitled to have these expenses re-imbursed. I do not know which is the Government that will ultimately pay to Bengal the expenses which it has had to incur on account of the incidence of the war near its borders; but certainly the people of Bengal should not be called upon to bear this terrible burden. Sir, a certain honourable member has referred to an inordinate increase in the expenditure on the staff of the Civil Supplies Department and has asserted that there was no valid reason for any increase on the staff. I may tell the House that I consider that the staff attached to my department is wholly inadequate for the work that it has undertaken and is being called upon to perform, and we have requested the Government of India and other provincial governments to send us many more officers in order to be able to cope with the work. This will obviously need further expenditure on staff. While on this subject, I would like to mention a point which was raised by you, Sir, in respect of officers of the Bengal Junior Civil Service. I need hardly tell you that we greatly sympathise with them and that it is a matter which is not outside the scope of our consideration. We have come across many of them. They are fine young men from whom we expect a high standard of duty and a high standard of living and a high standard of honesty; the conditions under which they serve are of such a nature that they obviously find it very difficult in spite of their best endeavours to maintain those standards. I have the greatest sympathy with these conditions and I believe that these officers deserve the greatest encomium from Government, for they do their duty under very difficult circumstances. I have already said that that is not outside the scope of the consideration of this Government. Much has been said regarding the quality of rice which it has been my good or bad fortune to place here in Calcutta for rationing. I am prepared to admit it, and I have seen it not only from rice brought to me from these shops but I have gone round myself and inspected many shops and I found that in some places the rice is bad, and in some shops I found that the rice is inordinately good. My endeavour is to better the quality as time passes and we are taking steps to replace bad rice in these shops. To give you an example, I received from a certain gentlemen a sample of bad rice that was being sold in one of these shops; I had the matter immediately enquired into and all the rice in that shop inspected. It was found on examination that there were only two bags that were of bad quality and the rest were good Dehra Dun rice. It happened unluckily that this unfortunate person appeared in the shop when the bag containing the bad rice was being opened and doled out. The bad rice in that shop was immediately replaced. Now, Sir, most of this rice, as the honourable members know, and as a matter of fact, all the rice has come from outside Bengal. It is unfortunate, but it does happen in such critical periods, that every one takes advantage of his neighbour who is not so fortunately situated; and the rice that we have received from the other Governments does not do credit either to the mentality or to the honesty of those gentlemen who are entrusted with the task of procuring and sending rice to us. At that moment it was not possible for Bengal to create difficulties, or to refuse the rice that came, and we were so hard up at that time for foodgrains that even this bad quality rice was accepted by the people in preference to starvation. Even now when we have started sampling the bags and returning bad quality rice to the Government of India and to the other Governments we have come across bags which when opened have been found to contain at the top and lower layers good rice and in the middle, kankar, stones, sand and all sorts of things. That could only be done by persons deliberately. It is not possible when you are sampling the rice from outside by means of bomas—a sort of instrument for sampling rice to discover this method of cheating, but we are trying our best to detect it and are bringing it to the notice of the Government concerned. But I suppose this will continue for some time. The solution obviously is to have inspection at both ends. The Government of India refused to accept the responsibility of inspecting rice that was being sent out by the various provincial governments to Bengal, saying that the various receiving provincial governments should set up their own inspecting agency. Now, this is something which is pretty nearly impossible and extremely difficult as the Government of India itself found to its cost. For instance, when we tried to set up this inspecting agency in the Punjab in the beginning, we found that we would have to inspect foodgrains in at least 400 different stations, and this mean that we shall have to keep a very large number of inspectors scattered all over India for the purpose of foodgrains to be sent out to Bengal. We have now been able to bring the inspecting agency in the Punjab under control and the quality of rice that we are now getting from the Punjab is good. But, Sir, it is not possible to have extensive agencies for all these areas from where we expect to get rice. So we are now inspecting rice when it arrives here, and when we come across a bad patch we forward samples and reports to the various Governments and to the Government of India. As for our ration godowns, we have taken steps to take out all rice out of the godowns of doubtful quality and which do not come to the accepted standards. Some of them we are reconditioning and some which are not worth reconditioning we are not putting on the market; but we propose to dispose of it either as cattle fodder or for industrial purposes. Added to this, honourable members can realise that it is extremely difficult to be sure whether the rice that is being supplied to the people is exactly the same rice which we have supplied to the ration shops for distribution. We are trying our level best to have a proper system of inspection and to be certain before rice is delivered that the rice is of good quality. It may be a matter of some relief to know that the quality of imported rice is now better than it had been last year and there are very few cases now in which we have to report to the various Governments regarding bad quality. But honourable members should realise that however much we may try to keep rice in perfect condition, its quality must deteriorate after some time. But there is no justification for receiving a bag of rice which has got 90 per cent. broken or 50 per cent. mud or bhusi and so on. In that case there is no doubt that there is a deliberate intention to adulterate on the other side. (Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: What about less weight?) Well, there can be nothing wrong with the weight. Every shop has been supplied with weights and scales. There is a man who sits at the back who goes on weighing in the presence of the public and puts the foodgrains in certain measures. But if any person wants that his foodgrains which he takes out of the measures should be weighed again, that is weighed again in his presence. While we are talking about our ration shops, I must say that the incident referred to by my esteemed friend and Buzurg Khan Bahadur Momin is shocking. There can be no possible justification for the conduct of the officer that I can conceive of. It may be that he was probably overwhelmed with a large number of applications for new ration cards, because in spite of our advertisements and requests to the people to register themselves at these shops they did not do so and rushed to these shops at the very last moment. At the same time there does not seem to be any justification why after all these days my esteemed colleague is still without his cards for his servants. I can only recount what had nearly happened to myself, the Minister of Civil Supplies. I was in a more advantageous position than he was; but I could only get cards for myself, my people and my servants in the very nick of time. I am not certain why Khan Bahadur Saheb did not refer to me; it may be because he did not want to put me to any difficulty or embarrassment, but if he had referred the matter to me I think I could have taken very early steps to have it remedied. When I say so it is not merely because Khan Bahadur Saheb happens to be a friend of mine and because we entertain high regard for him, but as a member of the public. I have had many cases which have been referred to me and have been immediately attended to. Similarly, I think if Khan Bahadur Saheb had done so, I would have treated him in the same manner.

Now I may come back to certain very important suggestions that have been made by Mr. Laidlaw—

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: On a point of information, Sir. While on this subject, may I know whether the Hon'ble Minister is aware of the fact that rice is not weighed in some of the shops but it is served and distributed in tin mugs of one seer, $\frac{1}{2}$ seer, etc.

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: I have already said that instructions have been issued that there shall be one person who will be weighing and going on serving the public with these weighed measures, but if the public desire to have their things weighed in their presence they are entitled to have them weighed. I think that by so doing there will be a certain percentage of loss to Government but Government will have to bear that loss which is made up by traders by the deft manipulation of their little finger, which our people have yet to learn.

Mr. Laidlaw referred to a very important aspect of our problems, namely, that of putting more consumers' goods on the market. That is what we are attempting to do and an officer of the Supply Department of the Government of India has been placed at our disposal to whom we assigned these duties. He has advanced very far in his attempts to provide these consumers' goods, and we are making every effort to obtain them and to put them on the market through trade channels. He also said that there should be a better recovery of loans. This we are certainly looking into, because these recoveries of loan mean more foodgrains coming into the market. But perhaps it has not been realised to the extent that is desirable that the richer agriculturist who made considerable sums of money last year and who this year has also got a good crop is not the person who is in difficulty or in debt. It is the smaller agriculturist who suffered last year and who probably has not been able to get his annual requirements this year that has incurred debts, now and for several years past; and it will be somewhat hard on him particularly after the famine that he has passed through and after all the efforts that we are making to rehabilitate the people, to force him to sell his goods in order to discharge his loans when we find that he has not got a sufficiency. Therefore, although we are most anxious and we have issued instructions to our officers to gather in these agricultural loans—it can be only up to a certain point, namely, without oppression of the agriculturist. I agree with Mr. Laidlaw when he says that our trading operations should be on strictly business lines. That is, so far as procurement is concerned they are being conducted on strictly business lines and those trading operations are under the supervision of the best-known merchants that we have in this province. At the same time, I may say that the trading operations of Government as such cannot be on strictly business lines because we are paying higher prices and we shall have to sell at lower prices. As time passes, we are not slackening in our effort to bring down prices, marking down our stocks and depreciating stocks and in consequence we are incurring loss. We have to do this in order to bring the prices down to a level which we think will be fair both to the agriculturist and the consumer. As I said on the first occasion, in our opinion we have not reached that level yet. Before I sit down, Sir, I want to say one thing more to which reference has not been made but which perhaps the House ought to know and that is that we feel that the crisis which our people have passed through has left them in an extremely vulnerable position. The poorer section of our people are now in a much more dangerous situation than they were before the crisis overtook them. Many of them have disposed of whatever resources they possessed. The ornaments of their families, their thalis and batis and even the corrugated tins off their sheds. We have been trying to re-establish them as much as possible, particularly those who had to sell their lands in order to maintain themselves. But as a general proposition, in order to put these people on their feet we shall have to go in for extensive schemes of rehabilitation. Government have been examining these schemes and they are nearly ready. The cost of these schemes is likely to be tremendous but I believe that the House will support us in any measure that we may adopt for the rehabilitation of these people, however, costly it may be.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi JALALUDDIN AHMAD:

Mr. Deputy President, Sir, I am sorry I was not present yesterday when some criticisms and complaints were made by Dr. K. S. Ray against Budget provision relating to my department. But the Parliamentary Secretary kept notes. Now, Sir, his first complaint is that he has not found sufficient provision for medical relief in rural areas. According to him, a sum of Rs. 53 lakhs provided for additional beds in the hospitals is meagre. He complained that according to his calculation if the entire provision of Rs. 53 lakhs is spent, the expenditure per bed would be Rs. 30 a month or Re. 1 per day per bed and he was at a loss to find how it would be sufficient for maintaining the whole establishment. I think he is under some misconception, because the provision of Rs. 53 lakhs is for three months only. So the basis of the calculation of Dr. Ray is not correct, namely, Re. 1 per bed per day. We are not tied up for money for spending on medical relief and money is not our problem in giving sufficient medical relief. The real difficulty is want of sufficient number of doctors and nurses to cover the whole province with a large number of dispensaries, as we desire to do.

Then, there is another complaint made by Dr. Ray and that is that the 80 volunteers sent by the Indian Medical Association who volunteered to do work in connection with medical relief service have not been utilised on the ground of language difficulty. This I am afraid is not correct. We have not refused any doctors on account of the language difficulty. It is also not correct to say that we have refused offers from other provinces on this score. On the other hand, we appealed to the Government of India for doctors as far back as October last and I am glad to say that some doctors have been sent by them. In view of this, I do not know how it could be said that we have not accepted the offer of doctors by the Indian Medical Association or other provinces. The wrong impression is probably based on the fact that one of our officers told the Indian Medical Association on 'phone that so long as we get Bengalee doctors we would not go on recruiting doctors of other provinces. But it is not true that we have refused to take the doctors sent by the Medical Association. On the other hand, we have written to the Association for doctors and although some doctors offered their services they have not joined the service.

Dr. KUMUD SANKAR RAY: May I put a question to the Hon'ble Minister? Is it a fact that out of 50 doctors who know the Bengalee language only 33 have been absolved?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi JALALUDDIN AHMAD: I do not think it is correct.

Dr. KUMUD SANKAR RAY: Is it a fact that the Government took one month to reply to the offer of the Indian Medical Association?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi JALALUDDIN AHMAD: I am afraid, this also is not correct. On the other hand, we approached the Indian Medical Association for more doctors, because we have gone on recruiting not only doctors but also medical students for our services.

Now, Sir, another complaint has been made by Dr. Ray that we have made scanty provision for quinine. He himself admitted that there is a provision of Rs. 60 lakhs for quinine. We have got sufficient stocks of quinine this year. We have procured quinine from the Government of India and we have in the Budget estimates 18 lakhs for free distribution of quinine. As a matter of fact, we have made provision for over 13 lakhs. All told, we have got a stock of 60 lakhs rupees worth of quinine at the rate of Rs. 35 per lb. So far as this year's Budget is concerned, we will not feel any difficulty. We have arranged with the India Government for supplies as well as from other provinces. Now, the question has been raised as to whether we have any long-term or short-term policy regarding the increase of quinine output in Bengal which is necessary on account of the fall of Java. The Hon'ble Minister for Forests and Excise explained the position fully in reply to a question in the other House. But I may only say that the output of quinine in the Mungpoo plantation has been increased from 45,000 lbs. to 70,000 lbs. The Hon'ble Minister for Forests has explored other avenues for increased production by bringing more land under cultivation for quinine.

In order to accelerate the recruitment of doctors to make up for acute shortage of doctors for running so many hospitals, I may say that we are offering very attractive emoluments to the doctors. I hope patriotic doctors will come forward for this relief work. We are also thinking of conscripting doctors throughout the whole province, if the doctors do not come forward in spite of our attractive emoluments.

Then as regards nurses, I admit there is an acute shortage not only here in Bengal, but throughout India. When I was in Delhi, I discussed the matter in proper quarter, but the difficulty pointed out to me was that Indian nurses did not want to move from their localities. As regards Indian ladies and girls, we all know their number is very small in this profession. In spite of our best attempts in the past sufficient number of Indian ladies and girls have not joined in this profession. However, we will try our best to give them all facilities and attractive pay and other emoluments. We have arranged for more emergency hospitals and relief centres and we have added 500 hospitals of 20 emergency beds each. There are already extra beds attached to several charitable dispensaries in several thanas and union boards.

Sir, another honourable member raised the question of health visitors and increase in the number of maternity centres. Already there is a provision in the Budget for all these things. There is a grant for maternity centres and we propose to start more maternity centres.

With regard to increase in the number of Lady Health Visitors, I may say that we are considering how we can do it. Then as regards the criticism of Dr. Ray that there is no plan for Public Health or for medical service, I say that Dr. Ray has said this through lack of information. Because, already the question of post-war reconstruction is engaging our serious attention, and we are aware that there is need of medical service in the rural areas. For that reason we have started emergency hospitals in places where needed and at some places the service is being rendered by the military. So far as the military help is concerned, I certainly acknowledge their service with gratitude, but the extent of service which our department is rendering is much more. It is true that the quality of the military service is much better than ours and this is because we have not paid sufficient attention to our medical service in the past. Indeed, the speed and dexterity with which the military medical units work are certainly admirable. They have done one very good thing by showing to our medical profession how promptly and expeditiously emergency medical service can be rendered.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, I want to put some questions to the Hon'ble Minister in charge of Public Health—

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: Order, order. I am very sorry to say that the time at our disposal is too short to afford the facility asked for by the honourable member.

The Hon'ble Mr. TULSI CHANDRA GOSWAMI: Mr. Deputy President, the remainder of the time at the disposal of the House is very short. But the fact that three of my honourable colleagues have spoken on their respective subjects makes my task very easy.

With your permission, I shall first refer to the assistance from the Government of India. I must thank the honourable members for supporting my contention that we are entitled to assistance in a very ample measure from the Centre in view of the fact that the present dilapidated financial position of Bengal is largely due to the impact of war conditions. Between my Budget speech and the Budget speech of the Hon'ble Finance Member of India yesterday, I received intimation from New Delhi indicating the way the Government of India's mind was working on this question. Sir, yesterday the Hon'ble Sir Jeremy Raisman made his Budget speech, and I take the opportunity of quoting a passage from his speech which bears on the question of relief to Bengal. The Hon'ble Sir Jeremy Raisman said—

“The Revised Estimates include provision for a grant up to 3 crores by way of Central assistance to Bengal in meeting the heavy expenditure the Province of Bengal has been called upon to bear on famine relief. Without attempting to assign causes or to impinge on the strict constitutional allocation of financial responsibility, we feel that the calamity which has overtaken large areas of the Presidency is so unique and of such magnitude as to justify substantial contribution from Central resources both this year and the next. The actual amount of the grant in each year will be a proportion of the booked expenditure under certain famine heads.”

Sir, I am extremely grateful to the Hon'ble Finance Member of India for a recognition of our claim, but I hope I shall have the continued support of the House in pressing my claim further. For I find that his present proposals are entirely inadequate to meet the situation. To my mind what should be settled with the Government of India is a fair principle by which, say, at the close of the hostilities or at some specified date, Bengal will be free from all unproductive debts. I am grateful to the honourable members for their support. I hope I shall have their support in my contention that it would be inappropriate for me to argue my case with the Government of India on the floor of the House. It is a delicate matter but I repeat that the Finance Member of India has recognised the basis of our claim and the justice of our contention.

It would be unnecessary for me after my three preceding colleagues to deal with any other specific points. There is one point to which I would like to refer although it does not relate strictly to finance. It is the question of security prisoners. As regards our policy with regard to the release of the political prisoners, I think our policy is symbolised by the attendance registers in another House. Honourable members of this House have access to the galleries in the Bengal Legislative Assembly and they will find how much during the last ten months we have loaded the Opposition lists with members against us, how many honourable members of that House who had been in detention and whom we knew would vote against us, have been released. It is true that the pace of release of these political prisoners could not be accelerated. After all, there is the question of security. I hope, Mr. Deputy President, you will not suspect in me a budding bureaucrat when I say that; but there are many considerations which have to be taken into account efore people who belong to various categories can be released. The security prisoners do not form one category. Beyond that I hope you will not expect me to say anything. As regards allowances to families of security prisoners, we have within our financial resources tried to be as generous as possible. I myself say this as Finance Minister that I am not satisfied that this scale of allowance is adequate; but I see no means by which I can augment the allowance beyond a certain limit. By this I do not wish to imply that I shall not pay attention to the question of the revision of scales of the family allowances of the security prisoners.

I shall now, Sir, tread on somewhat delicate ground. It has been said that I have provided a smaller amount than some honourable members wished I should, for famine relief next year. I can emphatically say that my budget for 1944-45 is not a famine budget: it is an after-famine budget. I wish to declare here, notwithstanding what rumours may be spread, that there shall be no famine in Bengal in 1944. Sir, I feel very strongly on this point because responsible public men have been trying to circulate the idea through whispering galleries in the country that there shall be a famine in 1944. I can understand Dr. Syamaprasad Mookerjee and pseudo-patriots like him, because they might think that if there is no famine their occupation will be gone—because with the end of famine their political occupation is almost gone. I say their occupation is gone and they look forward to the recurrence of famine: but that famine will never come for their benefit and rehabilitation. I wish to say this—that our Budget for 1944-45 seeks to lay down the basis of a permanent rehabilitation of Bengal and for the economic regeneration of our people, and I feel that by the care and caution with which we are moving we shall soon be in sight of the promised land.

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: The House stands adjourned till 1 p.m. on Thursday, the 2nd March.

Adjournment.

The Council then adjourned till 1 p.m. on Thursday, the 2nd March, 1944.

BENGAL LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL DEBATES

First Session, 1944—No. 16.

THE COUNCIL met in the Legislative Chamber of the Legislative Building, Calcutta, on Thursday, the 2nd March, 1944, at 1 p.m., being the sixteenth day of the First Session of 1944, pursuant to section 62 (2) (a) of the Government of India Act, 1935.

Mr. President (the Hon'ble Sir BIJOY PRASAD SINGH ROY, K.C.I.E.) was in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Cases stayed under Bengal Non-Agricultural Tenancy (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1940.

73. Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR (on behalf of Mr. Nagendra Nath Mahalanobis): Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Judicial Department be pleased to state—

- (a) how many suits, execution cases and other proceedings have been stayed owing to the operation of the Bengal Non-Agricultural Tenancy (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1940, since its enactment up to September, 1943, in the different districts of Bengal; and
- (b) how long more Government propose to keep those cases stayed?

MINISTER in charge of the JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Nawab Musharruff Hossain, Khan Bahadur): (a) A statement is laid in the Library.

(b) The cases will be stayed till the expiry of the term of the Bengal Non-Agricultural Tenancy (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1940.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Will it be convenient for the Hon'ble Minister to place all those things in the Council instead of in the Library? It is better that the custom of laying on the Library table is discontinued.

The Hon'ble Nawab MUSHARRUFF HOSSAIN, Khan Bahadur: As is the usual practice, I have laid the statement in the Library; but if the honourable member wants the information here it is: number of suits that came to the court is 477 and other cases are 67.

Discussion of Excess Demands, 1941-42.

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: The House will now take up the further discussion of Excess Demands, 1941-42.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, Excess over grants and appropriation for the year 1941-42 which is before this House for discussion contains five grants, namely—

- (1) Forest,
- (2) Ports and Pilotage,
- (3) Interest Free advances,
- (4) Superannuation allowance and pensions, etc.,
- (5) Extraordinary charges.

Sir, the explanation given under that head does not appear to me to be satisfactory. The Finance Minister states that Government of Bengal expected the sum recovered in the year 1941-42, if such recoveries could not be made within the year and recoveries so expected for the year 1941-42 was actually recovered in the year 1942-43. If that is so, it means that money now being required by way of excess for the year 1941-42 actually came into the coffers of the Government in the following year, and I do not see any reason why by way of book adjustment that particular sum recovered under that particular head could not be shown by way of book adjustment against the year under review, instead of showing the amount as an asset for the following year, i.e., 1942-43. Had such adjustment been made then Budget would have shown deficit by that amount and it was up to the Government to ask by way of supplementary statement the amount required for the year 1942-43 instead of crediting the year 1942-43 with the amount which was actual dues recovered for the previous year, i.e., 1941-42.

This is only what I have said by way of suggestion of the book adjustment of accounts, as I am neither an accounts expert nor a trained audit officer; but from ordinary commonsense point of view I do not see any reason why the procedure suggested by me would not be possible.

I have only another remark to make under the head Superannuation allowance and Pensions—grants No. 31.

Here is an excess of Rs. 73,767. In the explanation given by the Finance Minister it has been stated that excess under this head is due to a larger number of cases of obligatory commutation of pensions towards the close of the year than could be anticipated.

Now, in this connection I would like the following points to be clarified by the Hon'ble Finance Minister. Sir, obligatory pensions and obligatory commutation of pensions seem to me to be two quite different things. I can understand that it is an obligation on the part of the Government to pay pension whenever persons are made to retire either on the completion of their services from Government or due to their superannuation; but I cannot understand how there can be cases of obligatory commutation of pensions, as commutation of pensions cannot be made obligatory.

It is the option of the man concerned to have commutation or not and it is also the option of the Government to allow such commutation or not. I would further like to know how many cases of such obligatory commutation of pensions arose during the year under review and towards the close of the year, as stated by the Hon'ble Finance Minister.

I would also ask the Finance Minister to inform this House as to the reason for each of such cases of obligatory pensions and commutation of pensions as the case may be and the amount involved for such cases. I would also like to know the amount involved by obligatory commutation of pensions for such cases and to know also how much of such amount was paid to Pensioners belonging to each of the following communities, namely—

(1) Caste Hindu, (2) Muslim, and (3) Scheduled Castes.

With these words, Sir, I close my discussion on this Excess Demands Statement.

The Hon'ble Mr. TULSI CHANDRA GOSWAMI: Sir, this is a matter of accounting and regularisation of expenditure relating to a period covered by the year 1941-42, and a detailed information is not readily available. I submit, Sir, that it is quite unnecessary. These have been regularised under the advice of the Public Accounts Committee.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: But we have no Public Accounts Committee. Therefore, these details are necessary for discussion.

The Hon'ble Mr. TULSI CHANDRA GOSWAMI: It is merely a recommendation of the Public Accounts Committee and is a post-mortem examination.

Mr. BIREN ROY: Sir, may I point out that the expenditure was incurred in the year 1941-42? Mr. Mazumdar was pointing out that the Budget should not have been affected but he did not mention which Budget. These Excess demands would have affected only the year 1942-43 and not the year 1943-44, because this Ministry came into office in 1943-44.

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: Order, order. The House will now take up Supplementary Demands of 1943-44.

Supplementary Demands.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, before taking up the details of the Supplementary Estimate, I should take up the broad question of famine which should influence all our activities at present. The Finance Minister said yesterday that the budget was not a famine budget but an after-famine budget and he further declared "there shall be no famine in Bengal in 1944". No one—

Mr. BIREN ROY: Sir, that was with reference to the budget of the year 1944-45. But here we are now discussing supplementary demands for the year 1943-44.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: I think, Sir, I am entitled to discuss the future, the present as well as the past year also in this connection, as "famine" forms a big item in the Supplementary Budget. No one will be more glad than we if his words come true and if our fears be falsified—we, who, bound by a hundred ties of the great Hindu joint family system, have had to incur heavy expenses to keep relatives going in this scarcity and who in this splendour of the second city of the Empire have been unable to forget the tiny villages of our birth where everyone, be he a Hindu, a Muhammadan, a Bagdi or a Namasudra, is either a khura, chacha, jatha, or dada who could not be left to starve. While famine is of academic interest to some, it is a vital question to many who have to forego many things themselves and deprive the succeeding generation of many advantages when scarcity occurs. But can we put an end to famine only by wishing? If there be danger in undue alarm, is there not greater danger in undue complacency? Could not millions of deaths be avoided if the Ministry took due precautionary measures in a businesslike manner? Soon after the formation of the present Ministry the Hon'ble Mr. Suhrawardy said on the 8th May "There was a sufficiency of foodgrains in Bengal".

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: Why do you discuss all this?

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, it is only by way of preliminary remarks. I am coming to the point later on. The result of the statement was that the rest of India, as was recently stated by a Punjab Minister, could not form an idea of Bengal's peril and there was delay in the arrival of charity from outside. If outside charity mainly at the inspiration of Dr. Shyamaprosad Mukherjee who did spade work in this respect at Bombay did not come, famine would remain at the overdramatised stage right through and Government would not have bestirred themselves at all or would have done so even later than the late hour in which they began to work. If Shyamaprosad Mukherjee were not born, then at least 70 lakhs of persons would have died in this famine instead of 35 lakhs.

“কুলং পবিত্রং জননী কৃতার্থ।।” (Blessed is the family and blessed is the mother that has given birth to such a son)—This saying of the Sanskrit poet was never spoken of any person with greater truth than of this great son of a great father of whose achievements India rings from side to side.

Mr. BIREN ROY: On a point of order, Sir. Is the honourable member discussing the general budget? Sir, is a member entitled to discuss the budget generally when the supplementary budget is discussed?

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: I think, Sir, the honourable member is in order.

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: Sir, I think Mr. Roy's point of order is not correct because an honourable member is entitled to criticise the general administration in this connection.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, Merchant princes of Bombay entrusted him with lakhs of rupees and Karachi wanted to charter ships loaded with foodgrain in his name. In the words of Bankim Chandra “যে জাতির মধ্যে এমন লোক জন্মগ্রহণ করে, এখনও তাহার আশা আছে,” (A race so long as it produces such men has still a future). It is a matter of the greatest sorrow not that such a man was vilified in this House yesterday in his absence but that there should be born any Bengalee to do so. The measure of a race is not only its greatest but its worst member too.

Today's statesman with unmeant but grim irony publishes this news of vilification side by side with the following, and Sir, I think I may be permitted to read the portion—"Despite the bumper aman crops and a decrease during late November and December of destitution, there has been a marked increase of begging in villages and a movement to the town (Chandpur) of people seeking relief," says the Rev. B. W. Eade, of the New Zealand Baptist Mission—

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: I am sorry Mr. Mazumdar I am interrupting you, but I would request you to confine your observations to the subject under discussion.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: All right, Sir. This is reflected in the admissions to the Chandpur Destitutes Ashram and Orphanage where the number of inmates has increased from about 100 in December to nearly 700 now. The applicants have increased appreciably in the last fortnight—

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: Sir, he is still discussing the general policy underlying the budget which is out of place here—

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Yes, I am discussing the supplementary demands which are before the House—famine forming a major item.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: May I submit, Sir, that the point of order which was raised by Mr. Roy that in discussing the supplementary estimates my friend Mr. Mazumdar could not bring in the general policy, is not relevant, because we have got under the supplementary budget grants for famine and Mr. Mazumdar was quite in order to mention about famine. Similarly, there is also voted charges on account of agriculture which form the main item in the supplementary estimates and if he is not allowed to mention these points, it is not understood why Government has placed the supplementary budget before the House at all.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, these servants of Jesus, ambassadors of peace and harmony in a strife-ridden world are worth thousands of our Ministers. Are they also talking famine into existence? Smugly entrenched in this cosy and costly Chamber built at the cost of poor Ram, Sham and Abdul, we may assume the faces of cherubs and pass off as decent Ministers and legislators but history will record that this man-made famine has only been made possible by the poor human material of which the present Bengal legislature is composed. These are the veritable paradise of job-hunters, benami contract-hunters, wards of courts and men whose only achievement in life is wasting of fortunes built by generations of thrifty, hard working, beneficent forefathers. During the last great war German newspapers stated with ridicule that the British War Secretary did not know how to ride a horse. People of this province may be pardoned if they think that men who have been unable to manage their own affairs are not the right persons to be entrusted with the finances of a great province.

Sir, with these preliminary remarks, I now come to the specific items of the supplementary estimates.

Grant No. 1 on salt.—I find from the explanatory memorandum that the original provision was made in the budget grant of the year for expanding the period of operation of the last year's experimental scheme for the development of salt manufacture as a cottage industry only for 4 months in the current year. I do not find any statement or remarks to show whether the experimental scheme that was launched in 1942-43 and extended to 4 months of the current financial year has produced any success for developing salt manufacture as a cottage industry. I would like the Hon'ble Finance Minister to enlighten this House as to how far the experimental scheme extended for 4 months of this year has been successful and if it was found to be a great success, why sufficient provision is not being made to extend the scheme not up to June 1944 but for whole of the next financial year, i.e., 1944-45? I cannot understand why the experimental scheme launched in 1941-42 is being extended only up to June 1944 and not throughout the whole of the next financial year. In the absence of any explanation coming from the Hon'ble Finance Minister, I think, either the experiment carried on for these two years has not been at all successful and, if so, I do not see any reason why the experiment should be extended. On the other hand, it may be that the experiment has proved very successful but as usual with Government they are not prepared to take a bold measure for developing salt manufacture in the province of Bengal which ultimately may be developed with the help of the Government to such an extent that such a system of cottage industry if developed properly with the aid of Government fund may make the province self-sufficient in the supply of salt. Sir, even at the present moment Bengal is not self-sufficient and though there is such a wide expanse of sea-board in the province, yet for want of development of this industry Bengal is to depend for salt on other provinces for her supplies with the result that during this year people of Bengal had to pass weeks and months with less salt than is normally consumed.

Under grant "Land Revenue".—I find in the explanatory memorandum under head "Charges of Administration" as follows:—

The increase is due mainly to the survey of land acquisition work on behalf of the Government of India for which recoveries will be eventually effected from the Centre. Sir, here is an item where Government admits that they have done works as an agent of the Government of India for which they have some credit against expenses already incurred under this head. I cannot understand why this sum has been invested by the Provincial Government on behalf of the Government of India and why it cannot be recouped from the Government of India during the year under review. I want to know whether Government had asked the Government of India to refund the sum so spent on their behalf under this head.

Under head "Police".—Grant No. 60.—Sir, I have got a few remarks to make under this sub-head (a) Presidency Police, paragraph (J)—Civic Guards. I find the total expense of about Rs. 3 lakhs being incurred by the Government of Bengal on the organisation of the Civic Guards. Sir, this organisation is required purely for the emergency of war thrown on the province not by its own choice but because the Government of India as a whole being a subordinate administration of the United Kingdom was forced to declare war. And it is nothing but pure justice which demands that the whole sum should be recovered from either the Central Government or from the Government of the United Kingdom. I find that only recovery to the extent of about Rs. 93,000 under this head has been made against the total expenditure of about Rs. 3 lakhs. I do not see any reason why the Hon'ble Finance Minister is not forcing the Central Government to give back the whole sum of 3 lakhs which has been spent on this Civic Guard Force.

Under sub-head "Criminal Investigation Department".—I find item "Secret Service" money voted in which provision have been made for Rs. 50,000. I would like to know whether there is any audit about this sum just like the audit of any other expense on any other heads of expenses.

Grant No. 23—Charges on account of head "Agriculture".—I find in the experimental memorandum as follows: The increase under other charges—cost for the Jute Regulation is to continue and costs of the extra staff originally sanctioned up to December, 1943, in connection with the anti-hoarding drive and other works. Anti-hoarding drive of food campaign was completed long before the end of the year 1943 and I do not understand why such a staff is still being maintained during the months of January and February, 1944, at the cost of the rate-payers. Sir, whenever we find there is a deficit, Government comes out with a proposal of taxation and as soon as those sums are sanctioned by the Legislature, administration comes out immediately with a long list of appointment of staff and spend the same on unremunerative services. Sir, Government always justifies such an increase of expenditure on staff as being required temporarily for some particular purpose like Jute Regulation and other things. Once the staff is sanctioned by Legislature, Government will always try to retain that staff because they find that already money has been sanctioned by the Legislature.

Then I come to the explanatory memorandum under the same head—increased costs for "Grow More Food" campaign—cost of seeds is due to certain item of expenditure mentioned therein.

Sir, in the statement what do we find? We find only purchase of seeds and distribution of seeds. Sir, distribution of seeds irrespective of the fact whether cultivator has got sufficient bullock or other equipments for the purposes of helping Government in the "Grow More Food" campaign is of vital necessity. Sir, if this "Grow More Food" campaign is to be successful at all, it is not by distribution of seeds alone but by bringing more lands under cultivation of food crops, those lands lying uncultivated, forthwith. We would suggest that each District Magistrate, each District Board and each Municipality and each thana should find out within their respective jurisdiction quantity of such land available which can be brought under the cultivation of food crops. As soon as such survey of land is finished, Government would come forward with capital amount for being lent to all the owners of such waste land if they want any such help from the Government for purposes of the development of land and changing them into plantation for more food crops.

Then, Sir, another suggestion which I can make is that in all civilized countries we find co-operative farming and not individual farming. Here in India I do not see any steps being taken for the purpose of educating the people on the line of co-operative farming. Sir, in co-operative farms, scientific equipment that is required for the purpose of better cultivation is utilised by certain number of cultivators; such equipment is used by each one for the purpose of having improved methods of cultivation and growing more food. Sir, the same facility can never be obtained by anti-diluvian way of ploughing the field by bullocks.

Therefore, if we want to develop this province which is mainly an agricultural lands we must try to obtain help from Russia and therefore I agree with the suggestion made by my friend Professor Humayun Kabir during the Budget discussion that we must make provision of a lump sum of money, say Rs. 10, Rs. 15 or Rs. 20 lakhs, to be set apart for the purpose of sending young boys, not graduates, but ordinary young boys with some education who are sons of the agriculturists, to Russia for the purpose of gaining first-hand knowledge as to how co-operative farming is run and how and what methods Russia adopted in getting better yield from their lands.

With these words, Sir, I close my speech.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Mr. Deputy President, I would at the outset refer once again to the standing grievance from which this Council has been suffering for the last 6 or 7 years. This is a matter, Sir, in which you also took considerable interest. I refer to the absence of a Public Accounts Committee which can go through the accounts and audit the Budget and present a report before this House. This has been promised again and again to this House by various Finance Ministers. In spite of promises by one Finance Minister after another, we are still without a Public Accounts Committee. The result is that very often we are not able to apply that amount of attention or go into the details of the Budget with that degree of accuracy which is necessary if we want to do proper justice to the accounts—

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: Sir, I may inform my honourable friend that on the 6th March we were going to sit for the Public Accounts Committee.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Mr. Deputy President, Sir, I do not know since when my friend has been commissioned to speak on behalf of the Government and announce that the Public Accounts Committee was going to sit on the 6th March. Through you, Sir, I can certainly ventilate the grievances of this House. This House cannot do proper justice to budget accounts and discuss it properly without its Public Accounts Committee. By depriving this House of a Public Accounts Committee, we have been deprived of one of our fundamental rights. I would request the Hon'ble Finance Minister to expedite the matter and see that a Public Accounts Committee is appointed in time.

This is all the more necessary, Sir, on account of a fact to which I had occasion to refer on the last occasion. The convention which has unfortunately been established brings before us only statements about expenditure which have already been incurred during the past year. Now, Sir, this procedure has no precedent anywhere else. Elsewhere, moneys are sanctioned before they are actually spent. Here they are first spent and then the Legislature is asked to sanction what has already happened. Besides, in free countries, and even in the Central Government of India, the supplies have to be voted along with the demands. Here, the Assembly votes on demands, but neither the Assembly nor the Council is asked to vote on supplies. As for the Council, it has no voting even on demands. It is true that there is no provision in the Government of India Act for any Supply Bill; but we find that everywhere else where the Statute does not say anything definitely to the contrary, there is such a convention. This convention is followed in practice even at the Centre by bringing in a Supply Bill. Unless we know what are the funds at the disposal of the Government, unless we have some say over the distribution of supplies, our discussions are very often merely academic. It is all the more so in the Upper House, for in this House the different demands are not presented before us. We have no vote on the actual allocation of the Provincial Revenues, and our criticisms do not have behind them that sanction which the criticisms in another place have. My honourable friend, Khan Bahadur Momin pointed out last time that we do not have any control over the actual disbursement of the funds. It is all the more necessary that we should have a say in suggesting policies, if our criticisms is to be of any value at all.

I would suggest to the House that the convention of supply bills be built up. It is a convention which obtains even today in the Central Legislature where the actual amounts which the Government expect to obtain year after year are brought forward in the form of a Finance Bill. The different measures of taxation through which these amounts are collected are also mentioned in the schedule to the Supply Bill. If this procedure is followed in this House as well, we could have control over the disbursements through our influence on the items of income that Government placed before the House. It is true that even then we shall not have any direct control over actual disbursements; but we shall have control over the supply. The Government of India Act does not debar us from having control over supplies: it only debars us from voting on demands. We cannot discuss how the money is to be spent, but there is nothing in the Government of India Act to prevent us from voting on a Supply Bill.

This will also have another salutary effect. More than one member of this House has commented that we find that Government introduces a taxation bill as a temporary measure but once that taxation bill has been passed as a temporary measure, it has a habit of being automatically renewed from year to year. Even measures which are brought in for temporary relief to the provincial revenue are kept permanently on the statute book. And not only so; we also often find that Government bring in a measure or a finance bill in which they say that the proceeds of that particular tax will be used for a particular purpose. I may here refer to the tax obtained from the sale of jute products. A definite assurance was given to the Legislature that the money obtained from jute sales would be used to improve the conditions of the jute agriculturists and give them certain amenities. We, however, find that the Honourable Finance Minister has himself admitted that the money was not spent in that way. If we had an annual Supply Bill, we could control the Government and say "This is a particular tax introduced by Government for a particular purpose and must be used for that purpose alone". We would have control over supply and also over the manner in which Government spend the money obtained from taxation.

Sir, once Government somehow manage to pilot a Bill through the Legislature, they are absolutely immune from all criticisms and charges. This is so though the money is not spent in the way in which it was proposed to be spent. We have no remedy in the matter. The Lower House has no doubt some remedy in the form of voting on demand; but if, in addition, we had votes on supplies, this would provide us with a salutary check over the administration and the general policy of Government. If this House had before it a Finance Bill, I suggest that it would then not only improve the administration but would also keep the Ministers up to the mark. I confess with regret that the Ministers do not always keep to the mark. I do not blame them very much for this, because after all it is human nature to take the line of least resistance. Very often Ministers, once they are installed in comfortable seats on the treasury bench, forget the promises they made before and go on in the usual manner. If this House had any control over the Supply, then it could from year to year discuss all the proposals of Government as embodied in the Finance Bill. If the items proposed together with the financial policy of Government came under our control, then not only would it do great good to the province as a whole but would help the Ministry as well. Sir, there is a proverb that friends warn and enemies strike. Therefore, anything which is done to guide the Ministers along the proper lines is not an unfriendly act. I would suggest on the contrary that it is a very friendly act, because it is only by accepting such friendly criticisms and warnings that the ministry can hope to do some good to the province. If they have no intention of doing good, then they have no business to occupy the seats which they actually do occupy today. These are the two general points I would like to make, viz., that this House has been deprived of a Public Accounts Committee and also that this House has been deprived of any opportunity of controlling the finances of the Province through an annual Finance bill. I think members of this House, whether on this side or that, will agree with me that if we have a Supply Bill, we can exercise control over Government and make the administration better than what it is today. I would go further and say that on this subject, both sides of the House should unite. We all want to have control over the actual supplies which the Government want to disburse. If on this point, we can present a united demand, I would say that he must be a very bold Finance Minister who could refuse the demand of the whole House. I would appeal to the members opposite to unite with us and demand control of the supplies—demand a salutary legislative control over the finances of the province. After all, no one knows which party will be in power and which will be in the Opposition. About this time last year, my honourable friends opposite never dreamt that they would be occupying the benches they are now occupying. And after the incident of yesterday in another place, possibilities are perhaps not very distant when the tables may be turned. I think it is desirable that we should unite in cases where by our action we could increase the general powers of the House and exercise control over the supplies. Once such convention is established, not only the present Finance Minister but whoever may be the Finance Minister—whether from this side or from the other side—whoever he may be—will have to be cautious about the disbursements as well.

Now, Sir, I should like to discuss one or two items in the supplementary estimates which have been placed before the House. I find that one of the main items in the supplementary budget refers to famine and charges on agriculture. With regard to famine, I do not want to repeat what I have said on the previous occasion. I have said then that it is my conviction that this Ministry must take the responsibility for the famine. They must be held responsible for the huge loss of life as a result of the famine. Their delay in forming their schemes prevented importation of foodstuffs from other provinces and from other countries. Thousands of lives could have been saved if they had been alive to the seriousness of the situation. Their refusal to admit that there was shortage was not only foolish and short-sighted: it was criminal folly of the most serious type. With regard to this matter I said what I had to say clearly and I do not want to repeat all that I have said. I leave them to judge whether they could have done better to save the lives of thousands, whether they have done all that could be done in order to allay famine and prevent this huge loss of life. Let them think in their own minds and see if their conscience is satisfied. Let them feel if they can say with a clear conscience that they have done all that could be done in the circumstances. I leave it to their own judgment.

With regard to agriculture, I would repeat the suggestions which I have made on various occasions. Attempts should be made to increase the actual productivity of the land in manifold directions. Here, Sir, England is an instance in point. Formerly, she was not producing perhaps more than five or six weeks' foodstuffs, but now I believe she is producing for five or six months within England herself. Is there a corresponding increase in Bengal? The conditions in India are analogous to those in Russia. The Russians have increased the productivity of the soil not one fold, not two fold but as much as five fold within a short time. When the Germans broke through Russian frontiers, Russians had to evacuate from the most fertile areas to some undeveloped and unfertile territories. They were yet able to effect a great reorganisation in agriculture in spite of great hardships, and they stand stronger today in spite of all these hardships and disabilities. Russia has set up an example before the world. She has proved that improved food production can be effected not only by long-time policy but also that production can be increased within a short time. We should follow the example of Russia and thereby secure increased production within a year or two. I would suggest to the Government of Bengal, that they should grant scholarships to young men to go to Russia. Young men from Bengal should be sent to see the conditions in Russia. Let them get training there and come back. We shall see whether increase in production cannot be secured. This is certainly not a far-fetched plan. There is nothing unpractical about it. Russia is one of the most important members of the United Nations. This Government should not fight shy of sending young men to Russia so that they may see there the process of increasing the productivity of the soil. If the Government really want to increase the food production in this province, they must do this. This is essential for both a short term policy and a long term policy, if we want to improve the conditions of life in the rural areas.

In this connection, I may remind the House that the Government of India have, as a matter of fact, invited the help of Soviet Russia for fighting the locusts. The scientists from Soviet Russia have actually come and their aeroplanes are actually on the borders of India. If the Government of India can ask help from the Soviet Government in the matter of fighting locusts, I do not see any reason why the Government of Bengal should not go a step further and invite their help in increasing the productivity of the soil.

Then, Sir, we come to the "Extraordinary Charges". Government have undertaken the development of the huge Civil Supplies Department. Some evidence of its efficiency and serviceableness was offered in this House by my honourable friend Khan Bahadur Abdul Momin. He told us how this Department has been carrying on its duties to the discomfort and disadvantage of the public. But, Sir, I do not want to be carping in my criticism. After all, this is a new Department. It is inevitable that a new Department will have defects here and there. I am mentioning this matter only to draw the attention of the Cabinet as a whole to this aspect. The resentment of the public is growing. Unless the Hon'ble Ministers see that this Department is run properly, efficiently and its serviceableness is increased, the public discontent may reach a point which may be beyond the control of the Hon'ble Ministers.

The "Extraordinary Charges" also cover Capital outlay on purchase schemes. Huge amounts of money are locked up on account of purchase of foodgrains. I must say that I cannot agree that the Government have behaved either in a wise or an economic manner. If the Government had used the normal trade channels, this vast amount of capital expenditure would not have been necessary. Heavy amounts would not have been frozen in this manner. Companies which purchased rice had no experience of the trade. Unnecessary expenditure and unnecessary loss has thus been incurred by the Government. As for the Government shops which have been started in Calcutta, they have been placed in charge of people who have no experience of the trade. I cannot help feeling that there were perhaps an ulterior motive in the mind of the Hon'ble Minister in giving out these shops. Whether consciously or unconsciously, the shops have been used as avenues of patronage to keep the party in power. The Ministers are sustaining and supporting these shops out of the public revenues. I submit, Sir, this is a sorry state of affairs. The Finance Minister must be held responsible for such inefficiency, and in some cases corruption, at the cost of the public exchequer. The Ministers are supporting and maintaining people who do not deserve it. This aspect of the matter was discussed at great length elsewhere and I do not want to go very deep into the matter. I would only like the House to exercise more vigilance. This brings me back to the remarks with which I started, namely, that the House should have control over the accounts. That is the best instrument whereby the Ministry might be compelled to behave like good boys. This compulsion by the House is not only desirable but absolutely necessary.

I come to the next item, namely, expenditure on Police and General Administration for maintaining Law and Order. Now, Sir, I was very sorry to hear the speech of the Hon'ble the Finance Minister when he said yesterday that though the detenus ought to get more allowance, it could not be managed.

The Hon'ble Mr. TULSI CHANDRA COSWAMI: I did not say that it could not be enhanced, but I was experiencing difficulty owing to lack of resources.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: I am glad that as yet there is an inkling of hope in the Hon'ble Minister's mind that the amount may be increased—

The Hon'ble Mr. TULSI CHANDRA COSWAMI: Sir, I may be permitted to interrupt my friend Mr. Kabir and tell him for his information that the allowances have been nearly doubled than that of last year and that that increase in allowances has been given retrospective effect from April last.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: That may be true, but the Hon'ble Finance Minister should know better than any body else that prices have increased, not by two-fold or three-fold but many-fold. In any case, I am not concerned with two-fold, three-fold or four-fold increase but what I am concerned with is the amount which has been actually granted. Does the Hon'ble Finance Minister care to know what amounts Government have granted to these political sufferers? In some cases the magnificent sum of Rs. 20 has been granted for a family of eight members and Rs. 15 for a family of five. These too are for persons who are respectably placed in society and were earning a quite decent income from honourable profession. If the Hon'ble Finance Minister can find the financial resources for additional grants in other directions, if crores of rupees can be spent or misspent on the Civil Supplies Department, if crores of rupees can be spent for stocking foodgrains when the Government should have utilised the foodgrains available in the market and in the country through control over the traders, if crores of rupees can be spent for various other purposes, why can he not find sufficient funds for these poor political sufferers? I refuse to accept his plea that in place of Rs. 20 or Rs. 15, he cannot find at least Rs. 40 or Rs. 50 for the detenus and other political prisoners. The Hon'ble Finance Minister himself knows that these detenus and political sufferers were detained without any trial. We must regard them as innocent. Till a man is not actually tried, he must be held innocent. They are persons whom Government have deprived of their liberty and all the amenities of life by shutting them behind the prison bars for five, ten or fifteen years. I refuse to be satisfied with his statement when the Finance Minister says that he has doubled their former pittance. It may be that he has doubled it, but I am not content unless the amount is actually adequate. I have a resolution before this House that a person who is under detention without any trial should be granted allowance at the very minimum at the rate of Rs. 20 per member of his family. Rs. 20 should be the absolute minimum, for one cannot now a days live for less. I would also suggest that many of these political sufferers are persons who are held in as much respect as members of this House and whose position in society is much higher than that of the members of the Cabinet.

I find the Hon'ble Finance Minister is smiling, but I will recall to him an incident which occurred in this very legislature about a year ago, or it may be one and a half years ago. A particular party singled him out specifically as an agent and spokesman of the Fascist Party of Bengal. If at that time a certain change had not taken place, he might have found himself included with the unfortunate persons who have been thrown behind the prison bars without a trial. He would then have seen that there is no justification for giving the pittance which political prisoners are getting. He would then have admitted that rupees twenty is not sufficient as an allowance to the political sufferers. Perhaps that experience would have done him good. If after detention without trial and an allowance of fifteen rupees per month, he came and said that the grant was adequate, I would listen to him, but till he does so, I think it does not lie with him to smile or take up an attitude of complacency, to sport a vein of superiority and simply to nod his head and say that he will see what can be done. He must do at least the little I have suggested if he is to justify his retention of the position which he is actually holding today.

I now come to the question of the price of jute. At one time, Government held that prices could not be fixed. We pressed the Government till they were forced to yield and some years ago a minimum price was fixed. That price was not enough, but still it marked a step in the right direction. But what is the position today? Prices which now obtain for jute are so low and so unsatisfactory and uneconomic that today the jute cultivator is faced, if not with ruin, at least with financial crisis of a very grave magnitude. When prices of all commodities have gone up, we find that jute is the only commodity of which the price has not gone up. And not only that, Sir; in the case of jute, a maximum price has been fixed. This is a strange procedure. I do not understand why this Government has seen fit to bless this idea of the European Jute Mills Association and fix a maximum price for jute. Formerly, when we tried to lay down a minimum price of jute which would enable the cultivator to carry on, there was opposition, and it was often suggested that prices were not subject to political control but must be left to the free play of economic factors: all that has gone today. We are at least going to get one good out of the sufferings of these three years. All loose and vague and indefinite talk about the forces of economics being allowed a free play has gone for good. In future it shall be the duty of every Government to see that prices of all articles are controlled, not from the point of view of only economic interests, not the profits of merchants and capitalists and employers nor even the wages of the employed alone but from the point of view of the greatest social good. Today everybody recognises them. In such circumstances, I fail to understand why this Government have given their blessing to the idea of a maximum price for jute at a time when the price of rice has already overshot the maximum price of jute. In normal times, one maund of jute fetches one and half maunds of rice. That is the basis upon which the economy of Bengal has been built up. By disturbing that ratio, the Government are undermining the economy of the province. I would warn the Government and ask them to remember that those who sow the wind must be prepared to reap the harvest of whirlwind and destruction and death.

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: Sir, Mr. Kabir's very able speech has provoked me to say a few words in this debate. Mr. Kabir started very well but ended by being abusive. He started by mentioning his grievance about a Public Accounts Committee of this House. I should say that it is the duty of this House itself to have its rights recognised and not to appeal to Government. My friends were in the Government for 18 months but they never thought it fit to see the rights of the House established. It is for this House to set up such a Committee. The House can do so by a resolution. All that the Government of India Act, 1935, says is that the report of the Auditor-General shall be placed before the legislature. And the Legislature has got to do its duty and agree to set up a machinery for the purpose of examining those accounts. Therefore, the House must set up its own committee. This House has to move a resolution for this purpose and—

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Well, a committee was set up and nominated by the Chair some 2 or 3 years ago, but the Government refused to co-operate with this House in this matter.

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: If a committee had been set up and the Government refused to co-operate with this House in the examination of provincial accounts and if this House has been flouted to this extent, then that has been a breach of its privileges of a serious nature. I am informed that the question is being closely examined by the Government and we hope that some solution will be arrived at soon. So far as the second point made by Mr. Humayun Kabir is concerned, namely that there should be a supply bill; that is, of course, desirable and it is in vogue in most of the Legislatures. There are certain items of taxation which are annual in such legislatures. They are renewable every year and it is renewed annually so that the Legislature may get better control over the Government expenditure and over taxation measures. This House can very well add a clause in every Bill of taxation saying that this Bill shall come to an end by the end of the current financial year. But has the House done it?—

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: We have tried to do it without effect.

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: If the House do not do so whose fault it is? When these measures come from time to time you do not take much interest and do not vote for it and allow them to be passed. If you wanted a particular Bill to be renewed, you could have done so.—
(Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: You were one of the members why did you not do it?) The House did not protect its own right.

Coming to the criticisms made by my friend Mr. Humayun Kabir of the Government policy we find that he has condemned the policy of Government for not relying on the private shops only for the distribution of ration. If I understood him aright, he said that in the matter of allotting shops for ration party politics and patronage came into play. I must say that his experience in this respect is limited to what they themselves have done. We are all aware of the doings of the last Ministry—as a matter of fact members of all sections know that if they were in power now there would have been scandal throughout the length and breadth of the country: every one knows about the scandals that were perpetrated by their leaders and they are now talking with their tongues in their cheek. During their time what did these private shops do when prices were rising by leaps and bounds? In spite of there being millions of maunds of rice in these shops, the day price was controlled all food-grains disappeared in a few hours as if by magic. Who was made to suffer? Not the members sitting on this side of the House only, but the citizens of Calcutta: citizens whose names are often paraded and whose sufferings are exploited not to help them but to derive some political advantage. For this purpose there was a conspiracy hatched up in the house of a prominent member of the Opposition. One of the members of the Viceroy's Executive Council was in that meeting. The whole plan was to devise a means whereby the food situation could be made more difficult so that the position of the ministry might become more insecure. That is the genesis of the propaganda against opening of state-managed shops. The demand was made that the very people who out of their tremendous greed starved out hundreds of thousands of people should be entrusted with the distribution of government-acquired food-grains, irrespective of what may happen to the consumers. Sir, I plead for some honesty on the part of the members of the Opposition.

Government are doing whatever is possible. They have not rejected the directions of the Government of India. They could say "we do not agree with your policy; we shall be responsible for feeding the people of this province and set up our own machinery and no dual control we shall have". The Government did not try to bring political consideration into it. They accepted the direction and are trying honestly to give effect to Government of India's policy. The Opposition now becomes the advocates of the black-marketeers and profiteers, those persons who had denied us food at a time we were starving and they had plenty.

With regard to the Agricultural policy, I agree with all that has been said by the Opposition members. There cannot be two opinions about this question. Government also fully realise that the problem of agriculture is not merely bringing potato or wheat seeds from outside and distribute them amongst the cultivators. That is not the problem. The real problem is to increase the production, to grow two maunds where one maund is growing now. For that we must have a programme. First of all, we must have Research Institutes. This is one of the most fundamental things. We must get more scientific staff to bring about improvement in the field of agriculture. We must start research stations wherein experiments can be carried on continually and continuous improvement maintained. We must also have seed-multiplying stations where large-scale multiplication can be had. These are essential if the Agriculture Department has to do any good for the agriculturists of Bengal. This Department had been neglected for over 30 years. The Budget grant under this head never exceeded Rs. 29 lakhs during the last 20 years, in a province where the agricultural population of the province was 5 crores. In the Punjab with half the population of Bengal they have been spending Rs. 60 lakhs for the last 20 years. Therefore, it is not the fault of the Opposition nor is it the fault of the present Government but the fault of the past. The present government is employing every possible means and taking necessary steps to implement their schemes; but now-a-days properly trained scientists are very difficult to get and we are in dire need of specialists. The Government is prepared to go as far as Egypt which is also an agricultural country to bring specialists from there. Government policy in regard to agriculture has to a great extent been hampered on account of war and their policy cannot be given that impetus which the Party behind this Government desire.

So far as jute is concerned, my friend Mr. Humayun Kabir has for some time past been urging Government to fix the minimum price of jute. At present the order of the day is to control prices in the interest of all classes of people, of agricultural products as well as factory products, so that the prices of commodities do not go beyond the reach of people. Those who had agricultural products sold them and got money, but a section of the people were starving because they had nothing to sell and not the necessary money to buy even a maund of paddy or a maund of rice. Control of prices had to be accepted as a general policy. Section 102 of the Government of India Act, 1935, is in operation, and Bengal is being ruled by the Government of India. So long as Bengal will continue to be ruled partly by the provincial government and partly by the Government of India in the name of war and for war interests, the responsibilities will be divided.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: What did they do in the year 1937-38?

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: What has happened in the past has been forgotten.

Several members from the Opposition Benches: What is the achievement of the present Ministry? Everything negative and everything minus.

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: Order, order. I would appeal to the Hon'ble members not to indulge in unnecessary interruptions which do no good to anybody. I would request the Hon'ble members to allow discussion under cooler and calmer atmosphere. If any Hon'ble member is willing to ventilate his views or offer his comment on the points raised here, I shall be very glad to allow him full facilities.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: But, Sir, cross-interrogation and cross-questions are allowed, as they are quite parliamentary.

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: So far as fixation of the maximum price of jute is concerned, the decision was taken by the Government of India. The Government of India wanted to fix a lower maximum. The Government of Bengal successfully fought and raised the price at a proper economic height, and that was no mean achievement. A minimum price has also been fixed not only on paper but with a sanction behind it, namely, that if the agriculturists do not find anybody ready to buy the jute at that minimum price, then the Government of India has undertaken to buy the whole lot. And further, the Government of India has agreed in this difficult time to finance this province for setting up in the interest of the jute-growers a machinery, an organisation for the marketing of jute. That, again, is no mean achievement, and this Government is proud of that.

The Hon'ble Mr. TULSI CHANDRA COSWAMI: Sir, I must first of all thank Mr. Hamidul Huq Chowdhury for the very able manner in which he has met most of the points of the Opposition.

As regards the speech of the honourable member, Mr. Haridas Majumdar, so far as the part of his speech which was at all relevant is concerned, I find that he was practically reading out some of the Explanatory Memoranda and asking questions which show that he did not understand what he was reading out. The best way in which he can be answered is by asking him to apply his mind a little more closely to the explanatory memoranda.

With regard to my honourable friend, Mr. Kabir, I hope he will not ask me to think aloud on the floor of this House on the question of the Public Accounts Committee today, because the Honourable President has summoned a conference which will be held on the 6th of March and I hope some arrangement satisfactory to everybody will be arrived at. It would not be to anybody's interest therefore, for my part to express my own opinion or anyone else's today. I quite realise that the House is keen on being associated with the examination of public accounts.

As regards Mr. Kabir's suggestion about a Supply Bill, I suppose he meant a Bill analogous to the annual Finance Bill of the Government of India. Well, Sir, I may say that as early as 1937 when this legislature was first constituted under the Constitution Act of 1935, it did occur to me—for I was then for the first time a member of a provincial assembly—a little odd that there was no Finance Bill here analogous to the Finance Bill in the Centre. Of course, I did apply my mind a little to the question but I thought that even if I did come to any conclusion about it I had no voice or authority to give effect to it. Later on, about the end of April, 1943, when it became possible for me to effect improvements in the budget system, I considered this question. I must confess I did not consider it as assiduously as I ought to have done. I realised at once that there were some difficulties. I shall not discuss these difficulties here because unless the matter is brought forward in a concrete form, it is no use having an academic discussion here. Perhaps Mr. Humayun Kabir will be content with this reply—namely, that I was perhaps too lazy to create an innovation. But it would have been a startling innovation as many other questions would have been involved. I may say that constitutional difficulties were also pointed out to me.

I thank the House for having taken into consideration the Supplementary Estimates.

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: The House stands adjourned till 2-15 p.m. tomorrow.

Adjournment.

The Council then adjourned till 2-15 p.m. on Friday, the 3rd March, 1944.

BENGAL LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL DEBATES

First Session, 1944—No. 17.

THE COUNCIL met in the Legislative Chamber of the Legislative Building, Calcutta, on Friday, the 3rd March, 1944, at 2-15 p.m., being the seventeenth day of the First Session of 1944, pursuant to section 62(2)(a) of the Government of India Act, 1935.

Mr. Deputy President (Khan Bahadur ABDUL HAMID CHOWDHURY, J.P.) was in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Islamic History and Culture.

74. Mr. NUR AHMED: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Education Department be pleased to state if it is a fact that the University of Calcutta has made provisions for teaching of Islamic History and Culture in the University Post-graduate classes?

(b) Is it a fact that no provision has been made for the teaching of Islamic History and Culture in the high schools and colleges of Bengal?

(c) If so, do the Government of Bengal propose to make Islamic History and Culture a subject for teaching in the high schools and colleges of Bengal? If not, why not?

MINISTER in charge of the EDUCATION DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Mr. Tamizuddin Khan): (a) Yes.

(b) and (c) No provision has yet been made in the high schools; but it is proposed to make provision for teaching the subject in the Islamia and Lady Brabourne Colleges in the I.A. classes from July, 1944.

Destitute girls.

75. Mr. NUR AHMED: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Home Department be pleased to state if it is a fact that taking advantage of the acute food distress in Bengal, some evil-minded people are carrying on trade of gathering helpless destitute girls and widows and of selling them to prostitutes?

(b) If so, what measures have been taken by the Government of Bengal to protect such helpless girls and women from such unscrupulous persons?

(c) Do the Government propose to extend the provisions of the Bengal Suppression of Immoral Traffic Act to such places where such bargaining in girls and women is going on? If not, why not?

Mr. BIREN ROY, PARLIAMENTARY SECRETARY (on behalf of the Hon'ble Khwaja Sir Nazimuddin): (a) Enquiry shows that some such cases have occurred. It is impossible to estimate the extent of the evil.

(b) Where possible, prosecutions are launched against the procurers.

(c) No. There are no well-defined areas in which this traffic can be said to be flourishing and it is impossible, for financial reasons, to apply the Act to the whole Province. The provisions of the Indian Penal Code are sufficient for dealing with the sale of young girls.

Mrs. LABANYAPROBHA DUTT: Arising out of (b), will the Hon'ble Minister-in-charge be pleased to state whether the Government intend to form a committee for the establishment of Homes for the protection of young destitute girls?

Mr. BIREN ROY: Actually such Homes have been established; and as regards (b), Government has in view the formation of a committee.

Mrs. LABANYAPROBHA DUTT: Arising out of (c), will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state whether Government intend to take in such committees women representatives?

Mr. BIREN ROY: Certainly Government would like to have many women representatives on such committees to look for the protection of destitute girls.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: When are these committees likely to be constituted?

Mr. BIREN ROY: Very soon.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Arising out of (b), may I know how many prosecutions have been launched against procurers up till now?

Mr. BIREN ROY: Actually a number of prosecutions have been made, and I may cite some cases which have come to our notice and prosecutions have been launched against some procurers of Khulna—

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: What is the total number of prosecutions made?

Mr. BIREN ROY: I was going to give the number but the honourable member stopped me. However, prosecutions have been started against 4 in Khulna, 2 in Kurseong, Darjeeling 3, Midnapore 2 and in Netrokona 25.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: How many prosecutions have been started in the district of Dacca?

Mr. BIREN ROY: I want notice.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Is the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Department aware that such cases have occurred in Dacca district?

Mr. BIREN ROY: I have already asked for notice. Before me there is no such report from Dacca.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Arising out of (a), what measures the Government have taken to make an accurate survey of the extent of this evil?

Mr. BIREN ROY: Reply has already been given that some such cases have occurred, and that it is impossible to estimate the whole extent of this evil; but enquiry is being proceeded with and we have no reports, district by district, and I have already stated the cases in respect of some districts.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: With reference to answer (c), will the Parliamentary Secretary please state in what way finances are involved in connection with the launching of prosecution under the Bengal Suppression of Immoral Traffic Act?

Mr. BIREN ROY: It is not launching of prosecution. The question was to extend the provision of the Bengal Suppression of Immoral Traffic Act throughout the whole of Bengal, and in that respect answer (c) is quite clear.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: What are the financial implications? How the finances of the Province are affected?

Mr. BIREN ROY: I want notice in that respect.

Registration of sale-deeds.

76. Mr. NUR AHMED: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Education Department be pleased to state—

- (a) if it is a fact that the volume of work in the registration offices in the various districts of Bengal have considerably increased on account of registration of overwhelming numbers of sale-deeds, especially of sale-deeds relating to transfer of agricultural holdings by cultivators;
- (b) if so, what was the total number of sale-deeds relating to transfer of agricultural holdings by cultivators in each district of Bengal which were registered in all registration offices in Bengal, during the year 1942 and up to 30th November, 1943; and
- (c) if the Government propose to take steps to enact legislation to give relief to such cultivators who have been compelled to sell their holdings owing to extreme food distress?

The Hon'ble Mr. TAMIZUDDIN KHAN: (a) Yes.

(b) The figures are not readily available nor is it possible to obtain them within a short time.

(c) The honourable member is referred to the Bengal Alienation of Agricultural Land (Temporary Provisions) Ordinance, 1943 (Bengal Ordinance No. IV of 1943), and to the complementary Bill now before the Legislature.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: In view of the importance of the question, will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to have an enquiry made in order to ascertain the total number of such registrations?

The Hon'ble Mr. TAMIZUDDIN KHAN: I shall see, Sir, if that can be done.

Point of privilege.

Mr. HARIDAS MAJUMDAR: Sir, may I rise to a point of privilege? I hope in doing so I am going to voice the feeling of the entire House. I understand that the Civil List is not going to be supplied to us from now. As a matter of fact, we have got a Circular to that effect. This I consider to be an infringement of the privileges of the members of the House. Therefore, I move that this matter may be referred to the Committee of Privileges for consideration and recommendation.

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: May I request the Honourable the Leader of the House to make a statement on this point of privilege?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Sir, if I remember aright, on a previous occasion also this matter came up before the House. We made an enquiry and were told that in view of the shortage of paper it was decided by Government that Civil List would not be distributed among the members of the Legislature, as hitherto. Sir, the shortage of paper is so great that it has become impossible now to supply this List to honourable members of the Legislature.

Mr. AMULYADHONE ROY: Is the Bengal Weekly being published regularly?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: I think so.

Mr. AMULYADHONE ROY: Is the publication of the Bengal Weekly absolutely essential?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: I think in the opinion of the Publicity Department it is essential.

Mr. AMULYADHONE ROY: More essential than the Civil List?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Certainly. The Civil List does not do what the Bengal Weekly does.

Raj Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Is it not a fact that the Bengal Weekly serves only a propaganda purpose and no other?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: I do not think so, Sir.

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: Does Mr. Majumdar want to say anything further?

Mr. HARIDAS MAJUMDAR: I feel, Sir, that this matter should be referred to the Committee of Privileges of this House and be considered by them. The House can take action on their report afterwards and their recommendation may be sent out to Government for consideration.

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: Is it the pleasure of the House that this matter should be referred to the Committee of Privileges of this House?

Several members: Yes, Sir.

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: All right, the matter will be referred to the Committee of Privileges.

Motions under Rule 112.

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: The House will now take into consideration motions under Rule 112 of the Bengal Legislative Council Procedure Rules.

Mr. NUR AHMED: Sir, I beg to move that an Address be presented to His Excellency the Governor of Bengal through the Hon'ble the President of the Bengal Legislative Council, requesting His Excellency to make a strong representation through the Government of India to His Majesty's Government in England to arrange for immediate shipping of cereals and other foodgrains and milk powder to Bengal from North and South America, Australia, South Africa and such other places in view of acute food shortage in Bengal.

Sir, I come before this House with a simple request, viz., a request to His Excellency for importation of foodgrains to Bengal and I do not think I need not take much time of this House over a motion of this nature. Bengal was once self-sufficient in its production of foodgrains but since then the time has changed with its ever-increasing population, and there has been deficit in this province. Bengal underwent a terrible ordeal of famine last year from the effects of which we are still suffering and we do not still know whether we are out of the woods and whether there will be no recurrence of famine this year. Sir, at one time even in this House the reply was given that Bengal was self-sufficient but then gradually it was given out that there was a deficit of 5 per cent., 10 per cent. and so on. Sir Azizul Haque, a distinguished son of Bengal, ex-Speaker of the Bengal Legislative Assembly, ex-Vice-Chancellor of the Calcutta University, and a prominent figure in the public life of India published a book entitled "Man Behind the Plough". In that book published in 1939, he gave a warning. In his book he quoted figures for the last ten years from 1927 to 1937, of the production of foodgrains in Bengal, and its requirements, taking the population at that time as 5 crores only. According to his estimate Bengal's annual requirement at that time was 500 millions maunds of paddy and Bengal's average production then was 340 millions maunds of paddy. So according to his estimate there was an average shortage of 160 million maunds of paddy every year. He also quoted figures from the Government Annual Report on the acreage of yield of crops to show that Bengal was suffering a chronic deficit. He sounded a warning and asked Bengal to take time by the forelock and make up the deficit: if it did not do it there would be a major calamity. He proves himself to be a prophet. The Agricultural Marketing Adviser to the Government of India published his report in October, 1941. In that report he stated that India's rice production is not sufficient. According to him Bengal used to import rice—15 to 25 millions of tons—from Burma, Siam, Indo-China and other places. Taking the basis of Sir Azizul Haque's estimate, what will be the present quota of Bengal's requirements of the chief foodgrains, that is rice? Sir Azizul Haque's estimate of population at that time was 5 crores. Now, Sir, according to the census of 1941 the population of Bengal is 6 crores. According to that estimate now Bengal's requirements would be 600 million maunds of paddy and if I take into consideration the increased yield, its production would be 400 million maunds of paddy: there will thus be still a deficit of 200 million maunds of paddy. After a bumper crop still Government has been compelled to incur the huge loss of 5 to 7 crores in selling rice at reduced price. We do not know how long Bengal will be able to bear this sort of loss. It may be said that Bengal should try its utmost to be self-sufficient by increasing its yield per acre and by bringing under cultivation more land for paddy. It will require time—it will require money. But we must utilise all fallow lands for cultivation. Vast tracts of land require water for cultivation. So this will be a long-drawn affair on the part of the Government and it is a question of time and money. In the matter of irrigation Bengal is lagging behind as compared with other provinces.

Bengal's percentage of acreage of irrigated land is 6, whereas it is 86 in Sind, 32 in Madras, and 46 in the Punjab. Bengal has a meagre amount of capital outlay on irrigation. Madras has invested about Rs. 260 lakhs on irrigation and its price of crops from the irrigated land comes to Rs. 217 lakhs; Bombay about Rs. 1,075 lakhs whereas Bengal has invested only Rs. 531 lakhs and the price of crop from irrigated land comes to Rs. 111 lakhs. The Punjab has invested Rs. 3,492 lakhs and the price of crop comes to Rs. 4,721 lakhs. So in order to make up the lee-way Bengal should have well-planned scheme for irrigation and that is a question of time, because there are so many things as manuring, fertilising, giving up-to-date information and making them known to the cultivators, by means of demonstration farms and so on and so forth. We shall have to take up all these things in order to save Bengal from the recurrence of a second famine. Sir, the last year's famine was due to the non-fulfilment of promise by certain provinces and by Government of India in regard to the sending of foodgrains to Bengal. We shall have to arrange for shipping in order to get wheat from Australia, rice from America and rice and wheat from South Africa. These countries are willing to send us the foodgrains.

So, I hope my motion will be whole-heartedly accepted by the House.

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: Motion moved: that an Address be presented to His Excellency the Governor of Bengal through the Hon'ble the President of the Bengal Legislative Council requesting His Excellency to make a strong representation through the Government of India to His Majesty's Government in England to arrange for immediate shipping of cereals and other foodgrains and milk powder to Bengal from North and South America, Australia, South Africa and such other places in view of the acute food shortage in Bengal.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Sir, in addressing the Joint Houses of the Central Legislature, His Excellency the Viceroy struck an optimistic note with regard to the food situation in Bengal, although at the same time His Excellency said that we were not out of the woods yet. A consistent and steady supply of foodgrains will be necessary in order to meet the situation. This is a very important motion which my friend Mr. Nur Ahmed has moved, and I whole-heartedly support it. Sir, in connection with my Budget speech the other day I explained the food position in England and the provision that the British people had made to meet the situation by keeping in reserve sufficient quantities of foodstuffs for the use of the people of the British Isles in case of an emergency. Sir, I do not know how far the food procurement scheme in Bengal has been progressing and what quantity the Government have now actually in stock. I am not here to make any forecast as to what the position will be next year, but I think the Government would do well to take time by the forelock and make ample provision beforehand, so that like last year the people of this Province may not have to suffer and die of starvation. Sir, it is very unfortunate that some time ago the Secretary of State for India Mr. Amery said that there was no need for sending foodstuffs from Canada because in his opinion arrangements had been made for the import of foodgrains from other countries. We want not only the Bengal Government or the Central Government but also the British Government in England to realise that it is not only necessary in the interests of the people of Bengal to make ample provision of foodstuffs for next year's consumption, but that it is also in the interest of the British Government to keep the people of Bengal well-fed, for the simple reason that any recurrence of famine next year is bound to react on the war efforts which the country is putting forth at the present moment. Sir, it may be said by that Government that there is a dearth of shipping. We have read in the newspapers that both the United States and Britain have built sufficient number of ships not only for the purpose of convoys but also for the purpose of carrying foodstuffs to the Allied countries for civilian consumption. Sir, I do not think that there would be any difficulty in providing Bengal with the necessary shipping for the purpose of importing foodgrains from outside if Government so desire. With these words, Sir, I support the motion.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: Sir, in rising to support the motion I should like to speak a few words. I am glad that my honourable friend Mr. Nur Ahmed who is a member of the Government party has brought this motion before the House. The motion admits that there is an acute food shortage in Bengal. I do not know what attitude the Government, I mean the present Ministry, will take with regard to this motion. But if the Ministry supports the statement in the motion that there is an acute food shortage in Bengal and therefore His Excellency the Governor should be requested through the Hon'ble President of this House to make a strong representation to the Government of India to import foodstuffs from foreign countries like North and South America, etc.—it would be that the statement issued by Mr. Hutchings that there will be no question of any food shortage in Bengal in the coming year and that the present Government of Bengal think that the situation is well under control is not accepted even by some members who are supporters of the present Government. If that is so, then I submit that Government should immediately issue a statement that the statement issued by Mr. Hutchings is based on information which is not quite accurate and that it is time that the present Ministry should take the situation under their consideration and decide what should be their policy with regard to the food shortage in Bengal which is likely to happen if the present policy of the Government is continued. It is also necessary that the question of food shortage in Bengal should be considered in all its aspects by the present Ministry. With these few words, I support the motion which has been moved by my honourable friend, Mr. Nur Ahmed.

Mr. K. C. ROY CHOWDHURY: I also support the motion for more than one reason. In Australia the price of wheat is 7 s. 6 d. per bushel, as I have seen in the papers. I fancy two bushels are equal to one maund. In that case, wheat from Australia would be much cheaper than wheat from the Punjab. Therefore, there is a good deal of force in this motion. If Australia can spare wheat for us, I shall certainly welcome it.

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: I welcome the motion on behalf of Government and will be very glad to forward the proposals to the Government of India. We have always pressed the Government of India for importation of foodgrains from outside and although compared with the previous year's crop this year's crop has been very satisfactory, still it is very difficult to state, in view of the psychological crisis which exists in this country, that there is a sufficiency which can help us to tide over the crisis. It must not be forgotten that there has been a tremendous influx of labour from outside, that portions of our lands have had to be evacuated and also that the additional food, which the people used to supplement their foodgrains, is being absorbed for other purposes. I think, therefore, that the Government of Bengal has a very good claim for foodgrains from outside. As a matter of fact, the Government of India have recognised it and are sending the cereals.

At the same time, I think it is opportune that the claim of Bengal is further pressed.

Mr. K. C. ROY CHOWDHURY: On a point of information, Sir. May I request the Hon'ble Minister to say what would be the price of Australian wheat when landed in Calcutta?

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: The price of Australian wheat is certainly much less than the price of the Punjab or the United Provinces wheat and is somewhat in the region of Rs. 7-8 per maund.

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTY: May I have your leave to put a question to the Hon'ble Minister in charge of Civil Supplies?

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: Is it on this matter?

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: On an allied question.

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: Order, order. The question before the House is the special motion under Rule 112 of the Bengal Legislative Council Procedure Rules, "that an address be presented to His Excellency the Governor of Bengal through the Hon'ble the President of the Bengal Legislative Council, requesting His Excellency to make a strong representation through the Government of India to His Majesty's Government in England to arrange for immediate shipping of cereals and other foodgrains and milk powder to Bengal from North and South America, Australia, South Africa and such other places in view of acute food shortage in Bengal".

(The motion was agreed to.)

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: The House will now take up the special motion of Mr. Nur Ahmed under rule 96 of the Bengal Legislative Council Procedure Rules. Before Mr. Nur Ahmed moves his motion will the Hon'ble Minister concerned be pleased to state if Mr. Ahmed has his consent to move the motion?

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: Yes, Sir.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: May I submit, Sir, that the motion of Mr. Nur Ahmed under Rule 96 of the Bengal Legislative Council Procedure Rules appears to be a paraphrase of resolution No. 4 of which I have given notice with only this difference that he asks for a "type of Royal Commission" whereas I ask for the appointment of a Committee of Enquiry by the Government of Bengal. (The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: It is an improvement on your motion.) At the same time, I may say that the amendment given notice of by Mr. Nur Ahmed to my resolution No. 4 is practically identical—the wordings are practically the same.

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: Sir, in explaining the position, I may say that I gave my consent to the special motion of Mr. Nur Ahmed because the resolution of Rai Bahadur Keshab Chandra Banerjee is so worded that I will have no other alternative but to oppose it. Mr. Nur Ahmed's motion is an improvement on that resolution and that is why I have accepted it.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Are we to take it then, Sir, that it is a clever move on the part of Mr. Nur Ahmed to move his special motion under Rule 96 in order to secure precedence over my resolution No. 4?

Mr. NUR AHMED: Sir, my motion is quite in order as according to the Bengal Legislative Council Procedure Rules the special motion under Rule 96 has always precedence over a resolution.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: On a point of order, Sir. I should like to have your ruling as to whether the honourable member is justified in giving notice of a motion when a similar motion has already been given notice of, in order to take advantage of Rule 96?

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: Having compared Rai Bahadur's resolution with Mr. Nur Ahmed's special motion, I find that the two are not exactly identical. So, Rai Bahadur's point of order cannot be upheld.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: On a point of order, Sir. I think, Sir, Mr. Nur Ahmed wants to send this motion through the Government of Bengal, then through the Government of India to His Majesty's Government in England. Because the motion says "That this Council is of opinion that the Government of Bengal be strongly urged upon to convey through the proper authority in India to His Majesty's Government in England the opinion of this House that at a suitable time an enquiry should be held by an appropriate body....., etc."

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: Will you please state what is your point of order?

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: My point of order is this that Rule 96 of the Bengal Legislative Council Procedure Rules never contemplates a motion like this. Such a motion can only be brought under Rule 112. That is the only conceivable section under which this can be brought. Because this motion is a sort of prayer for the appointment of a Royal Commission, and not the appointment of a committee by this Government. Now, who is to give consent, who is the Minister concerned with this motion? Rule 96 contemplates only motions which are within the purview and the jurisdiction of the Ministers themselves. The mover wants that Government of Bengal to send it to the Government of India and through them to the proper authorities. I again say, Sir, that motions under Rule 96 must be connected with subjects which are administered by the Ministers themselves. There is nothing in this motion to indicate to which Minister this motion relates. This motion ought to have been a prayer for an Address to be presented to His Excellency to move the proper authorities to send it to the British Cabinet for the appointment of a Royal Commission and that could be done only under Rule 112. Moreover the consent has not been obtained from the Government of Bengal.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: On a point of order, Sir. Is the honourable member competent to go behind the decision of the Hon'ble President who has already admitted this motion? Can he go against the President's decision? When the motion has actually been admitted under Rule 96, can any member question the decision of the Hon'ble President?

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, I am asking for a ruling from the Chair as to whether this matter can be admitted under section 96. When the motion is first formally admitted by the President and it comes before the House for discussion, then certainly a point of order can be raised to ask the President to give his ruling before the whole House.

Mr. NUR AHMED: Sir, I gave notice of this matter with a request that it may be admitted under Rule 112. The Hon'ble President wrote to me saying that it could not be admitted under Rule 112, but that it could be admitted under Rule 96. Accordingly, I sent the motion back to the Hon'ble President and it was admitted under Rule 96.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: Sir, so far as the motion is concerned, I understand that it has been admitted under Rule 96. If you look to Rule 96, you will see that it runs as follows: "Save in so far as is otherwise provided by the Act or by these rules, no discussion of a matter of general public interest shall take place otherwise than on a resolution". Sir, I lay stress on the word "resolution" "moved in accordance with these rules, except with the consent of the President and of the Minister to whose Department the motion relates." Now, Sir, I find that the word "resolution" has been defined in Rule 88 of the same Part, i.e., Part IV. Rule 88 says: "Every resolution shall be in the form of a declaration of opinion by the Council". Therefore, I submit that the motion is not in order, because what can be done as a special motion under Rule 96 is by way of a resolution which has to be put in the form of "a declaration of opinion by the Council", and I submit that the point of order raised by my friend Mr. Das holds good, because what the motion says is this:—

".....that the Government of Bengal be strongly urged upon to convey through proper authority in India to His Majesty's Government in England the opinion of this House that at a suitable time an enquiry should be held by an appropriate body of the type of a Royal Commission to examine the whole question of the food shortage in Bengal, its terms of reference covering a thorough examination of the present food shortage in Bengal, and making of recommendations with a view to the prevention of the recurrence of the existing distress in Bengal."

Now, Sir, that can only be done by a proper authority by way of an Address under Rule 112. This cannot come in by way of a special motion under Rule 96, and I would submit that this is not in order.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Sir, the point that has to be decided first is: whether the members are at all entitled to go into the question as to whether it has been properly admitted or not by the President, and then and then only a discussion of this matter can arise. The President not only admitted the motion but before he admitted it he asked the member to put his motion not under Rule 112 but under Rule 96.

Mr. KAMINI KUMAR DUTTA: As to the point raised by my honourable friend the Leader of the House that the President has admitted the motion and that as such the point of order cannot be raised in the House at all, Sir, it absolutely ignores the principle that when any resolution or any motion is admitted by the President not in the presence of the members of this House but in accordance with the view he takes himself in his office, that does not preclude consideration by the President of the views that may later on be placed before him by members of the House and listening to what other views may there be different from his own view. Every member of the House has a right to raise a point of order and the President is quite competent to consider the matter in view of the submissions made by us on the floor of the House. I maintain, Sir, that this point can be raised as a point of order in the House and that that right has not been curtailed by any action that the President may have taken not on the floor of this House but in his office without giving us an opportunity to place our views before him. Then, as to whether this motion can at all be admitted under section 96, I may say that that section is not an unfettered section at all. It occurs in Part VI of our Rules which deals with resolutions. There is some general principle enunciated as to the restriction on the form and contents of resolutions in Rule 89. In Rule 89 it has been distinctly laid down that a resolution shall not relate to a matter which is not primarily the concern of the Provincial Government. So this Rule 96 cannot be a rule which is absolutely unfettered in its working. Anything and everything can be moved under it, the only thing required being the consent of the President and the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the department to which the motion relates. And this part of Rule 96 says that resolutions must be confined to subjects relating to the department of the Hon'ble Ministers. That recognises by implication the limitation which has been put in Rule 89 and that is the only reasonable interpretation of section 96. The only advantage which is conferred by Rule 96 is that with the consent of the President and the Hon'ble Minister in charge it may be considered on any day, even when non-official business is not put down for consideration. I think another matter which should be considered seriously in this connection is as to whether there is or is not a general rule about the priority of resolutions on non-official days. And if this sort of things is allowed, then one may be inclined to say that on a non-official day anybody may resort to the device of giving notice of a motion under Rule 96 and anyhow he can get the consent of the Minister to whose Department the motion relates and also of the President. A motion under Rule 96 should relate to a matter of general public interest and the consent of the Minister to whose department the matter relates must be obtained; but here who is the Minister whose consent is required? It is, I think, negating our right by giving priority to the special motion over the resolution as arranged in the ballot. If the Government is agreeable to a subject being discussed under Rule 96, I should think that the special motion may be considered on a day fixed for Government business and not on a day fixed for the consideration of non-official resolution. So far as the non-official business is concerned, it has been distinctly laid down that it shall be taken for discussion in the order of priority as determined by the ballot. I do not think that special preference should be given to the motion under Rule 96 and I do not find any reason for doing so. I think it would be taking away the right of the members of the House.

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: May I point out that the consent of Government does not necessarily imply that the Government accepts the resolution or the special motion? The consent of Government is only for a discussion of motion that may be moved and my view will depend on the discussion and will be made apparent to the House when I reply. But when Government gives consent to a resolution it means that Government is prepared to have a discussion on the subject and considers it of sufficient importance.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Sir, there is another aspect of the question. If I remember aright, a similar resolution for the appointment of a Royal Commission has already been accepted by the Central Legislative Assembly and in view of that I do not think any necessity arises at all for moving a special motion in a Provincial Legislature for the appointment of a Royal Commission. I draw the attention of the House to the wording of the motion "at a suitable time an enquiry should be held by an appropriate body of the type of a Royal Commission". He does not ask for "a Royal Commission" but "a committee of the type of a Royal Commission". It may or may not be a Royal Commission and when this Commission will be appointed I do not know. As I have said, that is a clever move on the part of the honourable member to secure precedence over my resolution No 4 of which I had given notice.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, may I say a few words about what the Hon'ble Mr. Suhrawardy has suggested? He said "consent of the Government". But our rule does not say anything about "consent of the Government": it says "consent of the Minister to whose Department the motion relates": so I submit he is not correct in what he said. The motion says "type of a Royal Commission": is it going to be appointed by the Hon'ble Minister's Department? Will he appoint the Royal Commission? Then Sir, why does he say "consent of the Government"? The subject matter does not relate to his Department. It is a matter to be referred to the Government of India through the Governor. The motion prays that a Royal Commission should be appointed: this prayer must be referred through the Government of India and the appointment would be made by the British Cabinet. The British Government is to appoint the Commission of the type of a Royal Commission—that is the prayer. It certainly does not relate to the Hon'ble Mr. Suhrawardy's Department. Had the resolution been to the effect that an enquiry committee be appointed by the Government of Bengal to enquire into the causes of famine, that would have been all right and in that case we would not have stood in the way of Mr. Suhrawardy saying that as he was satisfied he gave his consent to it. But, as I have said, the motion asks for the appointment of a Commission of the type of Royal Commission which means a prayer to the British Government through the Government of India, because the appointing authority is the British Cabinet itself. I am surprised that a lawyer of the standing of the Hon'ble Mr. Suhrawardy could have said what he has said. The motion does not relate to the departments under any of the Hon'ble Ministers. As far as can be understood from the motion itself, let me repeat, it is a prayer to the British Government for a Royal Commission. Rule 96 does not apply.

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: Sir, if the honourable members of the Opposition accept the proposition that they are not going to move any resolution for which this Government is not directly responsible, I can assure on behalf of Government that we shall have no occasion to object to the proposition that has been put forward by them. So far as we know, it has been the practice of this House to move resolutions which request for action by authorities other than this Government.

In this particular case, this motion has already been admitted by the Hon'ble the President and so, I think there can be no objection now to the motion being moved. That will be something like going behind the decision of the Hon'ble the President who has already given his permission to move this motion.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, it is like threatening the Chair.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Sir, I also submit that if objection is taken to the moving of this motion, that will be going behind the decision of the Hon'ble the President. Never before it was allowed to question the decision of the Chair. The Chair always held that its decision cannot be questioned by anybody.

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: Order, order. I have given my anxious consideration to the point of order raised by Mr. Lalit Chandra Das. In the ordinary course, the Hon'ble President himself can revise his views and even after admitting a resolution he may allow any honourable member to raise a point of order. But having gone through the file, I find that the Hon'ble the President has considered this question carefully. It appears from the file that the notice was first given under Rule 112 and then on the suggestion of the Hon'ble President himself Mr. Nur Ahmed again gave notice to bring this motion under rule 96. But whatever it may be, in going to decide this point of order, I do not feel called upon to decide whether I can go behind the decision of the Hon'ble President or not, if I find that on other ground I may decide this question. I have very carefully considered the points raised by several honourable members in connection with the discussion of this motion under Rule 96, and I am not convinced that I can rule this motion out of order, as suggested by the Opposition.

Mr. Nur Ahmed, you move your motion.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Sir, in view of what has fallen from the Chair, I would request you to keep this resolution in abeyance until the next day fixed for the discussion of resolutions so that the Hon'ble the President may consider it afresh after hearing the honourable members of this House and then give his ruling.

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: I am afraid, I cannot do that unless the member himself decides not to move it.

Mr. NUR AHMED: Sir, I beg to move—

“That this Council is of opinion that the Government of Bengal be strongly urged upon to convey through proper authority in India

to His Majesty's Government in England the opinion of this House that at a suitable time an enquiry should be held by an appropriate body of the type of a Royal Commission to examine the whole question of the food shortage in Bengal, its terms of reference covering a thorough examination of the present food shortage in Bengal, and making of recommendations with a view to the prevention of the recurrence of the existing distress in Bengal."

Sir, with your permission I want to make certain verbal alterations and additions to my motion with a view to making it more clear. This is that after the word "Bengal" on the sixth line of the motion the figures "1942 and 1943" should be added and the word "existing" be omitted from the penultimate line of the motion.

MR. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: Order, order. If you want to make certain alteration and addition in the motion, then please let me have a copy of your motion as amended.

MR. NUR AHMED: All right, Sir, I am handing you a copy of my amended motion.

Sir, I fail to understand why so much opposition was made in this House to moving this motion which is a simple and at the same time important motion relating to the future of Bengal. Sir, the motion is a request to the Government of Bengal to convey to His Majesty's Government in England through the Government of India the opinion of this House that an enquiry should be held by a Royal Commission to go into the whole question of the food shortage in Bengal and also to make recommendations as regards the prevention of such famine or distress in Bengal. Sir, many opinions have been expressed both in this House and outside that it was a terrible crisis through which Bengal passed in 1942-43. Sir, this terrible crisis is due to many causes. According to His Majesty's Government and the Secretary of State for India, it was due to the Provincial Autonomy and also to failure on the part of the Provincial Government to do their duty at the time of such crisis. According to others, it is due to the bungling on the part of the Central Government that this famine could not be prevented; and there are others who think that the present Government, i.e., the present Ministry of Bengal is responsible for it; and there are still others who say that the past Ministry was to blame for the situation.

It is desirable that a body of persons unconnected with any party in India should enquire into the causes of the famine and also the cause of food shortage in Bengal and that they should make recommendations. This is a simple proposition and why so much opposition should be raised against the moving of such a simple proposition, I do not know. Is it not desirable that Bengal should avert such a famine in future? Is it not the duty of everybody to save Bengal and to see that this province should be saved from any such recurrence of famine in future and that every possible step should be taken by every patriotic Bengali to prevent such terrible sufferings to humanity? Therefore, all this opposition is quite unnecessary and it has many times from the platform and in the newspaper editorials we find that the present Government has been unjustly accused for being the authors of this famine. If an enquiry is made it will be seen that this Government has only done its duty and somebody else, namely, the past Government was responsible for this or the Central Government. So this opposition on their part when I was moving my motion raised this suspicion in my mind that perhaps they do not want to hold an enquiry after all, lest their assumption may be found untrue. But, Sir, is it not desirable that we should ascertain the causes of the famine and also devise means in due time to prevent the recurrence of such a famine? There is also another reason why such an enquiry should be made. Nobody knows Bengal's food requirements and its shortage. A body of people like the Royal Commission should go into this question from a broader point of view. That Commission will enquire into the causes and ascertain Bengal's requirements and suggest means as to how to meet those requirements. I think I should not make a long speech on the necessity and importance of a motion like this. It is a very necessary one. I do not go into the question of apportioning blame to this Ministry or that, to this Government or to that Government or to some other person; but my intention is to ascertain the real cause of the famine. I do not want to pass any judgment beforehand. It should be the duty of the Royal Commission to ascertain who are the persons who are responsible or the agents who are responsible for it. I hope, therefore, that there will be no difference of opinion over this motion and that it will be accepted by the House without any dissension.

MR. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: Motion moved—

“That this Council is of opinion that the Government of Bengal be strongly urged upon to convey through proper authority in India to His Majesty's Government in England the opinion of this House that at a suitable time an enquiry should be held by an appropriate body of the type of a Royal Commission to examine the whole question of the food shortage in Bengal in 1942 and 1943, its terms of reference covering a thorough examination of such food shortage in Bengal, and making of recommendations with a view to the prevention of the recurrence of such distress in Bengal.”

MR. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: The honourable member has since made a verbal addition, namely, figures “1942-43” after the word “Bengal”.

MR. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: To this motion I desire to move the amendment that stands in my name. I should like to read the whole amendments with your permission—

MR. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: Are you taking all the amendments together?

MR. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Yes, Sir, because they are inter-connected. I beg to move—

- (1) That the words “at suitable time” occurring in lines 3 and 4 of the motion be omitted.

- (2) That the words "an appropriate body of the type of" occurring in lines 4 and 5 of the motion be omitted.
- (3) That for the words "whole question" occurring in line 5 of the motion, the word "causes" be substituted.
- (4) That for the words "food shortage" appearing in lines 5, 6 and 7 of the motion the word "famine" be substituted.
- (5) That for the word "distress" occurring in line 8 of the motion, the word "famine" be substituted.

Now, Sir, if my amendment is accepted, the motion would read like this:—

"That this Council is of opinion that the Government of Bengal be strongly urged upon to convey through proper authority in India to His Majesty's Government in England the opinion of this House that an enquiry should be held by a Royal Commission to examine the causes of the famine in Bengal, its terms of reference covering a thorough examination of the present famine in Bengal, and making recommendations with a view to the prevention of the recurrence of the existing famine in Bengal."

That is my amendment. My friend Mr. Nur Ahmed like a coy lady who does not take the name of her husband's elder brother avoided all through his motion mentioning the word "famine". He says "food shortage" and "distress". It is not only food shortage or distress—it is famine. Why then does he fight shy in uttering the word "famine"? It is not merely distress of the sort to which we are accustomed every year for which we want a Royal Commission. My friend wants a Royal Commission not for ordinary distress or food shortage but for a regular famine which devastated Bengal. You want it to enquire into the causes of the famine—you want that it should go into the investigation of the question and make its recommendations so as to make famine impossible in future. Then, Sir, it appears that, as my friend Mr. Kamini Kumar Dutta has said, it has been a pre-arranged business to take up this special motion, which is really an official business, today suppressing our non-official business. This motion ought to have been taken up not on a non-official day but on an official day. Sir, the wording in the motion is "at a suitable time". When that suitable time would arrive? No one knows. It may be said "let this matter be held over till the termination of the war"—let it take place after the war. If it is after the war, no one can say when it will take place. The war started in September, 1939, and no one knows when that suitable time after the war will arrive. We do not know even if it would arrive in 10 years. All that we want is that the enquiry should proceed immediately. The war may end in 1945, 1946 or in 1947; but there is no definite date when it will end. So the words "at a suitable time" be dropped. Sir, the very importance of a matter is forgotten by lapse of time—the urgency of the matter is forgotten and the interest in the matter fades away. So my suggestion is that the words "at a suitable time" be dropped.

Sir, my next amendment is that the words "an appropriate body of the type of" be omitted. As a matter of fact, the mover does not want a Royal Commission or an independent body consisting of men prominent for their intelligence. He wants to avoid the whole thing. He wants only a white-washing body to go into the whole question and submit a report which would also be white-washing the misdeeds of the Governments concerned. Now, Sir, we do not want "an appropriate body of the type of" to remain there in the motion. We demand a Royal Commission. Our recommendation should be explicit, clear and emphatic.

The next amendment is that for the words "whole question", the word "causes" be substituted. The reason for my amendment is that the words "whole question" are rather vague.

Now, as regards the next amendment in which I have moved that for the words "food shortage" the word "famine" should be substituted, I think the reason is very clear. We have seen food shortage in Bengal in the course of the last several years and that food shortage used to be compensated by imports of rice from Burma and elsewhere. Food shortage, I submit, Sir, cannot be the proper word here. As a result of this famine a huge toll of human lives has been taken away. And that is not a matter of joke. It will be the business of the Royal Commission to enquire into the causes of the famine.

The word "distress" is also not a very definite expression and so I have moved to substitute the word "famine" in place of "distress". The reason which I have given in the case of my previous amendment holds good here.

Sir, our object is that a Royal Commission should be appointed to consider the causes of the famine and apportion blame between the different Provincial Governments, the Government of India and the Secretary of State and state definitely who is primarily responsible for this famine, who is responsible for such a serious catastrophe and also to state definitely whether that is a man-made famine or a God-made famine. Sir, the words in this motion are very mild. A Royal Commission should be appointed to go into a thorough examination of the present famine in Bengal and they should recommend improvement following which there shall not be any more famine in Bengal. If my honourable friend, Mr. Nur Ahmed, has really his heart behind this motion, he should accept the amendments which I have moved with a clean heart.

With these words, Sir, I move my amendments.

MR. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: Amendment moved:—

- (1) That the words "at a suitable time" occurring in lines 3 and 4 of the motion be omitted.
- (2) That the words "an appropriate body of the type of" occurring in lines 4 and 5 of the motion be omitted.
- (3) That for the words "whole question" occurring in line 5 of the motion, the word "causes" be substituted.

- (4) That for the words "food shortage" appearing in lines 5, 6 and 7 of the motion, the word "famine" be substituted.
- (5) That for the word "distress" occurring in line 8 of the motion, the word "famine" be substituted.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: In rising to support the amendments which have been moved by my friend Mr. Lalit Chandra Das, I would like to speak a few words. I support all the amendments moved by him. If we are at all serious and if we want that some action should be taken on the motion moved by my honourable friend Mr. Nur Ahmed, then it is essentially necessary that the vague words which have been used in his motion itself should be deleted and the resolution should be made more clear. In this view, I submit that the words "at a suitable time" should be deleted as proposed in the first amendment of Mr. Das. Sir, the words "at a suitable time" import a certain amount of vagueness and they imply that the time may never come when the proposed enquiry is to be started. We want that the Commission should immediately enquire into the causes of the disaster that Bengal witnessed during the last season of 1942-43, so that there may not be a recurrence of it in the coming year, and it is for this reason that the words "at a suitable time" should be deleted and if the resolution is to be of any use, the Royal Commission should be requested to be appointed forthwith. Then, Sir, with regard to the next amendment which has been moved by my honourable friend that the words "an appropriate body of the type of" should also be omitted, I find that here again they introduce an amount of vagueness which would make the resolution absolutely nugatory and meaningless: and it is very difficult to understand what the honourable member means by the words "an appropriate body of the type of a Royal Commission". He requests "that the Government of Bengal be strongly urged upon to convey through proper authority in India to His Majesty's Government in England——", that is to say, he requests that a representation should be made to His Majesty's Government in England for the appointment of a Commission. Then why does he introduce these vague words "an appropriate body of the type of a Royal Commission"? He should make it clear and definite. Therefore, Sir, I support the amendment of my friend Mr. Das. Then, Sir, the next amendment which Mr. Das proposes is that the words "whole question" should be substituted by the word "causes". Now, here again I submit that by the word "causes" we mean the causes of the particular famine or the distress that prevailed during the season 1942-43 which is necessary for the purpose of determining what led to the famine. The words "whole question" would introduce a generality which may mislead the Commission and the real cause of the famine of the last year may not be determined at all. We want the Royal Commission to consider the question as to the causes that led to the distress or to the famine which was prevailing in Bengal during the last season. It is not a question of the food shortage. The question of the food shortage, as my honourable friend has pointed out, has got to be considered with reference to other matters and that by way of the "Grow More Food" campaign and other things. What we want to know is what was the particular cause that led to the distress during the last year. Therefore, the words "whole question" should be substituted by the word "causes".

Then, Sir, the next amendment which has been proposed is that instead of the words "food shortage", the word "famine" should be used. I do not understand why Mr. Nur Ahmed fought shy of the word "famine". Even the present Ministry have used this word in their Budget estimates. Everybody admits that Bengal was in a condition of famine during the last year, and therefore we should not introduce these vague words "food shortage" but we should replace it by the word "famine", so that the Royal Commission may direct its mind to the question of famine and famine alone which prevailed in Bengal during the year 1942-43 and may make recommendations for preventing the recurrence of famine conditions that prevailed here last year. As a matter of fact, in order to determine the causes that led to the famine during the last year, other factors too have got to be considered—factors other than the policy pursued by the Government of Bengal, the last Government as well as the present Government, whether it was not a mistake in their policy, their bungling and mishandling of the situation which caused the disaster that was noticed and which caused the deaths of so many people of Bengal. With these words, I support the amendments moved by Mr. Das.

Dr. KUMUD SANKAR RAY: Sir, while I have every sympathy with both the mover of the original motion as well as with the mover of the amendments, I do not feel convinced that any useful purpose would be served either by the motion or by the amendments. In the first place, we all know more or less some of the causes which led to the famine of the last year. One is the war. Bengal being the frontier, transport facilities have been dislocated and a large amount of food was also withdrawn for Army purposes and some was also exported. Therefore, we know to some extent what is the cause of the famine. And I suppose the object of the mover in asking for an enquiry is to ensure that a similar thing may not recur in future. And, therefore, what he has suggested is a Royal Commission. I do not think that the British Government would agree to send down a Royal Commission when they are so busy with other matters concerning the war and probably that is why the mover of the motion has used the words "at a suitable time and date". That, however, practically defeats the purpose of the original motion and my friend Mr. Lalit Chandra Das wants to fix a time by putting in a certain date. But even if we fix a time, can we enforce a Royal Commission to come here by that time? I submit that they would not listen to this, for they are absorbed in other things. Simply because this House has passed a motion asking for the appointment of a Royal Commission, I do not think a Royal Commission is going to come. Then, again, I have my own misgivings about Royal Commissions. We have experience in the past of several Royal Commissions, for example, the Royal Commission on Agriculture, the Royal Commission on Labour and the Royal Commission on Education. What guarantee is there that their recommendations will be accepted? All sorts of Commissions have some and reported and made their recommendations but those reports are all lying in the corners of the secretariat pigeon-holes. I would like to know how many of recommendations of these several Commissions have been given effect to.

The next question is that even if there is a sincere attempt and desire to give effect to the recommendations of the Royal Commission, it will probably take a considerable time for the Commission to arrive in this country and submit a report and in the meantime a thousand and other things may happen. The war may end and the situation may change and we may not have the same condition as now. Therefore, I submit that no useful purpose would be served by asking for a Royal Commission, as suggested by the mover or in the amendments. On the other hand, I would welcome a proposal to appoint a local committee of people in whom all parties in the country have confidence, so that they can go over the situation quickly and submit a report to the best of their ability. Their report would be available within a reasonably short time. We can wait till then and see whether we can accept their recommendations and prevent the recurrence of a famine in future.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Sir, I do not know whether the honourable mover of the motion drew his inspiration from the Hon'ble Minister-in-charge of the Department concerned in giving notice of his motion under section 96 of the Bengal Legislative Council Procedure Rules. For, I feel that while the resolution which stands in my name, lays down certain specific issues on which the enquiry should, in my opinion, be conducted by the committee, in the motion now under discussion asks for the appointment of "an appropriate body of the type of a Royal Commission" for the purpose of carrying on the proposed investigation. Besides, the motion does not mention any time by which the Royal Commission is to be appointed, nor any terms of reference. It may be during or after the war. It should never be after the war, because if the war prolongs—and no one knows when it will end—the appointment of a Royal Commission may be delayed. If the appointment of the Royal Commission is deferred, our purpose will be frustrated. Strike while the iron is hot. It is a famine, Sir, which is unprecedented in the history of India—a famine before which the famine of 1770 commonly known in Bengal as ছিয়াত্তরের মনুষ্যপাল, into insignificance. There is no reason why there should be any delay in having an enquiry made into last year's famine. It is not my intention to blame this Ministry or that Ministry who may be responsible for the state of things last year but what we do want to know is: why should such a famine occur in the land of our birth which was স্বজালাং স্বফলাং and শস্য শাশ্বতাং in days gone by, where people lived for centuries without any difficulty whatsoever regarding food—why should the people now witness calamities of such magnitude which were unknown in the past? My friend, Mr. Lalit Chandra Das, has moved certain amendments. I intended to move exactly similar amendments but as I could not give notice of them in time, I have no other alternative than to support the amendments moved by him. In the first place, I think, the expression "at a suitable time" in the original motion should be expunged. It means nothing. Secondly, the expression "appropriate body of the type of a Royal Commission" is equally vague. It is not the Provincial Government that will make the appointment. We do not know whether a Royal Commission will be appointed at all to enquire and report on last year's famine. We cannot, Sir, agree to a proposal regarding the sincerity of which we have grave doubts. So, I think it would be better to delete these words altogether.

With regard to the other question, namely, the substitution of the word "causes" for the words "whole question", I have nothing to say for it practically means the same thing with this difference that the word "causes" implies a more definite meaning. With regard to "food shortage" and the word "famine", the latter is certainly happier. Even the Hon'ble the Finance Minister has himself used the word "famine" several times in his Budget Statement. There is a good deal of difference between the words "food shortage" and "famine". Sir, the dictionary meaning of the word "food shortage" is quite different from that of the word "famine". Mere shortage of food would not have brought about such an unprecedented situation in Bengal. There is no denying the fact that there was real famine, man-made or God-made; it may be that the famine was brought by circumstances over which we had no control. In this view of the matter, the word "famine" would, I think, be more suitable.

With these few words, I support the amendments moved by Mr. Lalit Chandra Das.

Mr. KAMINI KUMAR DUTTA: Sir, first of all, I should explain the position of my party particularly in view of the astonishment expressed by the mover of the resolution that some sort of opposition was offered to his resolution by raising points of order by this party. As the leader of my Party, I participated in discussion on the point of order and I must explain the position of my Party. It was far from the intention of my Party or of myself, as the leader of the Party, to avoid any enquiry into the causes of the famine. We are very anxious to have an enquiry into the matter, but we want a real enquiry to be made and not a sabotaging enquiry. It was a resolution which was calculated to sabotage the real enquiry into the causes of the famine. The point of order was raised because in the list of non-official resolutions we found that there was a resolution, number 4, standing in the name of my friend Rai Keshab Chandra Banerjee Bahadur and there was every chance of its being taken up today. Now a suspicion did arise in our mind that anticipating the discussion which would arise out of this resolution, the special motion of my honourable friend Mr. Nur Ahmed has been brought to sabotage the real discussion of the matter. The wording of the special motion is magnificently indefinite and vague and does not ask for anything particularly. That shows really the mind of the mover. This is the only reason which prompted my Party to raise the point of order. We want a real discussion. Dr. Kumud Sankar Ray has appropriately expressed the view of my Party. Sir, it is said that out of the fullness of the heart the mouth speaketh, but here out of emptiness of heart, mouth was speaking. Really, there is no sincere desire behind this special motion. There is no desire to ask for an enquiry. The mover is asking for an enquiry to be made. If the mover is sincere he might suggest that the Commission suggested by him should come by air and hold the enquiry. I submit, Sir, that this is necessary in order to get a speedy enquiry. An enquiry should be held immediately to ascertain the causes of the famine and find out the remedy to remove the causes. Sir, it was hinted by the mover that we had a desire to say something about the present Ministry and to save the past Ministry by a discussion about their default.

I say on behalf of my Party that we are not anxious to allocate the liability or the default of the past or of the present Ministry. We must say here that both the past and the present Ministry, if they are placed before the bar of the public, will be found guilty. Therefore, with the object of this motion we have every sympathy. We do desire that an enquiry be held to find out the causes of the famine and to suggest the remedies. But we think that this special motion is only an attempt to avoid it. So it is very difficult for us to support the motion which has been placed before us. This motion is absolutely vague and it is crying for the moon.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, I want to associate myself with what has fallen from the mover of the amendments, Mr. Lalit Chandra Das. I whole-heartedly support the amendments. Sir, with one suggestion I shall finish my speech, because we have talked about the effects of the famine and other things on this floor repeatedly. The only suggestion that I can make is the appointment of a special Tribunal under the Royal Charter, if necessary, to bring the criminals—these famine-criminals to be hanged, and if necessary, to be hanged by the neck till death.

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: Sir, I have every sympathy with the motion as moved. I find, Sir, that I cannot support the amendments. There is, Sir, a general opinion in the country that at a suitable time an enquiry should be held. The matter was mooted in the Central Assembly by the Muslim League Party, and at that moment, so far as my recollection goes, the Hon'ble Member for Food on behalf of the Government of India could not see his way to accepting the resolution; but thereafter in the Council of State overwhelmed presumably by the mass of opinion on the subject he agreed that there should be an enquiry by a body of the type of a Royal Commission. Now, Sir, it is not for us to suggest when would be the best time to have that enquiry and what should be the personnel. His Majesty's Government will, when it suits them or when it is feasible, appoint such a body. I hope at any rate that it will do so and that it will choose the requisite personnel which we all trust will have nothing whatsoever to do directly or obliquely with the political parties in this country. Now, Sir, it would appear from certain forcible statements made by the gentlemen opposite that unless the word "famine" is used liberally throughout the resolution, we cannot be serious in our demand for an enquiry. I do not think, Sir, that the honourable members mean it at all seriously when they make their statements. I think it is only for the purpose of introducing a factious spirit into the debate that the honourable members repeatedly utter the word.

I do not know whether famine has got any technical significance. But if it has a technical significance, then it has to be studied technically before we accept the word "famine". And this word should not be used by the honourable member in a resolution without having given to it the attention which it demands. That there has been acute distress and in those places at any rate where there was acute distress it could be called famine, is undoubted and I too have on several occasions referred to the conditions in Bengal as famine conditions. Speaking ordinarily, one could say that there was a famine in certain parts of Bengal but whether that is technically equivalent to a famine or not is not for me to say and I would far rather accept the words "food shortage" and "distress" which we find are embodied in this motion.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: On a point of information, Sir.

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: I would, therefore, accept the special motion as it stands—

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: On a point of order, Sir—

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: Sir, the honourable member first rose on a point of information and he rises now on a point of order—

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: What is your point of order?

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Is the Hon'ble Minister entitled to use the words "acute distress" when the Hon'ble Finance Member of the Government of India declared that he was going to make provision of crores of rupees as a contribution to Bengal for the "famine" there? So, how can the Hon'ble Minister object to the word "famine"?

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: I am entitled to use any word I like and I think my expression of it is much nearer the mark than the liberal use of the word "famine". I am not fighting shy of the word "famine"; only I have not examined the word technically and do not quite understand when a famine can be declared and when not. As a matter of fact, we have demonstrably proved to the House that the Government of Bengal have undertaken those steps for the relief of distress which even the Famine Code did not contemplate. The Famine Code has placed certain responsibilities on the shoulders of Government and certain responsibilities on the shoulders of non-official organisations and of the public. The Government of Bengal have, however, accepted even those responsibilities which under the Famine Code are not placed upon Government but upon the public. Therefore, Sir, I think that the conditions in Bengal can very well be expressed by the words "acute food shortage" or "distress" which express the situation just as well as the word "famine". I, therefore, see no reason why I should accept the amendments of Mr. Das. I think the resolution as moved and as altered by the mover gives the correct lead to the House. It asks that when feasible an enquiry should be held. It leaves to His Majesty's Government the choice of the personnel and it calls upon that Government to examine the situation in Bengal and make recommendations so that those conditions do not recur in future.

From our point of view, Sir, the recommendations to avoid a recurrence of such conditions would be of the greatest value and would also help to a great extent in restoring confidence. For that reason, I would welcome the appointment of such a body and an enquiry at as early a stage as would be convenient to His Majesty's Government. I would, therefore, accept the motion that has been moved by Mr. Nur Ahmed.

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that the words "at a suitable time" occurring in lines 3 and 4 of the motion of Mr. Nur Ahmed be omitted.

(The amendment was negatived.)

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that the words "an appropriate body of the type of" occurring in lines 4 and 5 of the motion be omitted.

(The amendment was negatived.)

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that for the words "whole question" occurring in line 5 of the motion the words "causes" be substituted.

(The amendment was negatived.)

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that for the words "food shortage" appearing in lines 5, 6 and 7 of the motion, the word "famine" be substituted.

(The amendment was negatived.)

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that for the word "distress" occurring in line 8 of the motion, the word "famine" be substituted.

(The amendment was negatived.)

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: the original motion of Mr. Nur Ahmed, as slightly amended—that this Council be of opinion that the Government of Bengal be strongly urged upon to convey through proper authority in India to His Majesty's Government in England the opinion of this House that at a suitable time an enquiry should be held by an appropriate body of the type of a Royal Commission to examine the whole question of the food shortage in Bengal in 1942 and 1943, its terms of reference covering a thorough examination of the food shortage in Bengal, and making of recommendations with a view to the prevention of the recurrence of such distress in Bengal.

(The motion was agreed to.)

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: The House stands adjourned till 1 p.m. on Monday, the 6th March.

Adjournment.

The Council then adjourned till 1 p.m. on Monday, the 6th March, 1944.

BENGAL LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL DEBATES

First Session, 1944—No. 18.

THE COUNCIL met in the Legislative Chamber of the Legislative Building, Calcutta, on Monday, the 6th March, 1944, at 1 p.m., being the eighteenth day of the First Session of 1944, pursuant to section 62(2)(a) of the Government of India Act, 1935.

Mr. President (the Hon'ble Sir BIJOY PRASAD SINGH ROY, K.C.I.E.) was in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Detenu Srijut Birendra Chandra Saha.

77. Mr. KAMINI KUMAR DUTTA: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Home Department be pleased to state—

- (a) if it is a fact that Srijut Birendra Chandra Saha of Daulatganj, Tippera, is a detenu; if so, how long he has been in detention;
- (b) if the Government are aware of the fact that this detenu lost his father and mother while in detention, and has two brothers, one aged 12, another aged 8, and a wife with none to look after them and without any means of subsistence; and
- (c) whether the Government propose to consider the question of providing a suitable allowance for the maintenance of the family of this detenu and give necessary direction in the matter?

Mr. BIREN ROY, PARLIAMENTARY SECRETARY (on behalf of the Hon'ble Khwaja Sir Nazimuddin): (a) Yes, since the 5th February, 1943.

(b) Yes.

(c) A family allowance of Rs. 40 per mensem has been granted.

Assistance to the families of air raid victims.

78. Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS (on behalf of Mr. Birendra Kishore Roy Chowdhury): (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Commerce, Labour and Industries Department be pleased to state the nature of assistance, if any, which has been extended to the families of the male workers, who died or were fatally injured at Kidderpore as a result of last Japanese bombing?

(b) Do the Government propose to bring any pressure upon the employers of such persons who were injured or killed while on duty, to pay adequate compensation to their dependants? If so, what is likely to be the measure of the compensation? If not, why not?

MINISTER in charge of the COMMERCE, LABOUR and INDUSTRIES DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja Shahabuddin): (a) Family pension and/or children's allowance has been awarded in some cases under the War Injuries Scheme, 1942. Certain applications are pending with the Claims Officers and will be disposed of as soon as the verification of dependants of the deceased persons, most of whom live outside the Province, is completed.

(b) No. The families of such deceased persons as come under the War Injuries (Compensation Insurance) Act, 1943, will also have compensation admissible under that Act.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state how many applications are under consideration and how many cases have already been dealt with?

The Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja SHAHABUDDIN: Sir, it is very difficult to give figures as to how many cases are actually pending. I would refer the honourable member to my answer in which I have stated that some such petitions are pending.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state what is the amount of allowance that has already been awarded to each case?

Mr. PRESIDENT: I do not think that question arises.

The Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja SHAHABUDDIN: It depends on the person as to how much he is entitled to under the War Injuries Scheme and if the amount falls short of a certain amount, then his case is again considered under Women's Compensation Act.

SHORT-NOTICE QUESTION.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, I have a short-notice question which runs as follows:

Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Communications and Works Department be pleased to state whether at dawn yesterday—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Das, where is the short-notice question? I have not seen it. I find one question which has just been received by me, but how can you expect the answer today?

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Then, Sir, may I mention it tomorrow?

Mr. PRESIDENT: There is no question of your mentioning the short-notice question tomorrow in the House. First of all, I shall have to examine the question and decide whether I shall admit it or not. It is not the practice to mention about short-notice questions on the floor of the House.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Then, Sir, when I can mention that?

Mr. PRESIDENT: First of all, I shall examine the question for deciding whether it can be admitted or not. If it is admitted, then the short-notice question will be sent to the department concerned, and you can mention the question only when the department does not reply to it.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Then, Sir, it will be a matter for 3 or 4 days, by which time the importance of the short-notice question will be gone. If a short-notice question is not accepted at short-notice, there is no meaning in putting the same.

Mr. PRESIDENT: As regards the date, I cannot give you a guarantee when the short-notice question will be replied to. I think short-notice questions are being answered regularly after they have been admitted. So, why should there be an exception in your case? If you were so very anxious to obtain information, you should have sent the notice in time. It has been received just now. If you had sent it on Saturday, probably it would have been admitted.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, how could I send it on Saturday? The accident happened only yesterday, and so I have mentioned it today.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Mr. President, Sir, with regard to the bhog-ration—that oft-repeated and vexed question—the Hon'ble Minister in charge of Civil Supplies has done nothing as yet. I have got copy of a letter addressed to me by the General Secretary, Hindu Mahasabha, in which he states that he has received 115 applications. Sir, this matter is very urgent, and it is essential that arrangements should be made without any further delay.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Are Government in a position to make any statement?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Sir, since the Minister for Civil Supplies is engaged in very urgent work and is not in the Chamber just now, I do not think anything can be done now. The matter may be mentioned as soon as he comes to the Chamber.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Mazumdar, please mention the matter again towards the end of the meeting today.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: On a matter of information, Sir, may I mention one thing? A list has been circulated to us regarding the number of questions that had been held over. It will appear that in the first session of 1942, the Home Department did not answer two questions. In 1943, first session, there are 7 questions; second session, 9 questions; third session, 3 questions—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Das, will you kindly mention it tomorrow immediately after the questions?

The Bengal Alienation of Agricultural Land (Temporary Provisions) Bill, 1944.

The next item is consideration, clause by clause, of the Bengal Alienation of Agricultural Land (Temporary Provisions) Bill, 1944. Here is a list of amendments. We have received notice of two amendments standing in the name of Khan Bahadur M. A. Momin. Unfortunately, they were received in the office of the Council after the appointed time. I am, however, prepared to relax the rule and admit the short-notice amendments. But these amendments require previous sanction of the Governor. So, the Preamble and the long title must stand over as usual till the end and the moving of this amendment which comes after clause 8 cannot be done till tomorrow. I hope in the meantime we shall obtain the Governor's previous sanction.

Order, order. Let us now proceed with the consideration of the clauses.

Clause 1.

The question that clause 1 stand part of the Bill was put and agreed to.

Clause 2.

MR. PRESIDENT: Clause 2 stand part of the Bill.

MR. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: I beg to move that in sub-clause (1) of clause 2 of the Bill, for all the words beginning with "or any other officer" to the end of the sub-clause, the following be substituted, namely:—

" 'and Subdivisional Officer' means the Subdivisional Officer of a division, and 'Court of a Munsiff' and 'Munsiff' have same meaning as in Bengal, Agra and Assam Civil Courts Act'".

Sir, the purpose of my amendment is to provide that the Subdivisional Officers and Munsiffs should be empowered under the Act itself to exercise jurisdiction under the Act. So far as the Munsiff is concerned, I think it will be admitted on all hands that a Munsiff's court has got all the staff and other paraphernalia for carrying out the objects of the Act and is situated practically within a radius of 5 miles of 90 per cent. of the population of Bengal. Only in very rare instances it is that a Munsiff's court is situated beyond a radius of 5 miles. A Munsiff's court is also a Civil Court and a Munsiff has the necessary training to decide cases under this Act. For the litigants also it will be very easy to go to the Munsiff's court to present petitions under the Act for relief. The primary object of the amendment is to make the procedure as easy, as expeditious and as inexpensive as possible. So far as the Collector is concerned, his office is situated far away in the district headquarters and as the Collector has got multifarious duties to perform, it will not be possible for him to deal with these applications even if he has a mind to. I want to add the Subdivisional Officer because his office sometimes is situated nearer than the Munsiff's court. I have kept the Collector but have also added the Subdivisional Officer and the Munsiff as officers who too should have the power to exercise jurisdiction under the Act. I, therefore, submit for the consideration of the House that the clause be amended so that the Subdivisional Officer and the Munsiff too may have the power. The power taken by the Provincial Government to make any other appointment to discharge the functions of the Collector in this respect is rather vague and we do not know what class of officers they intend to authorise under this Act to perform this duty. It would be better if there is a clear-cut provision in the Act so that these applications could be dealt with more expeditiously. If presidents of the debt settlement boards are authorised or intended to be authorised by the Provincial Government to deal with these cases, then I think the lot of the applicants would be very hard. We all know that these presidents of the debt settlement boards generally take six months, eight months and even one year to decide a simple case. Therefore, I submit that instead of leaving it vague as in the clause the words "Subdivisional Officer" and "Munsiff" may also be added as suggested in the amendment. It may be left to the applicant to approach whichever officer the applicant thinks fit, as it will make for more expedition and will be less expensive. With these words, I commend my amendment to the acceptance of the House.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Amendment moved: that in sub-clause (1) of clause 2 of the Bill, for all the words beginning with "or any other officer" to the end of the sub-clause, the following be substituted, namely:—

"and Subdivisional Officer" means the Subdivisional Officer of a division, and 'Court of a Munsiff' and 'Munsiff' have same meaning as in Bengal, Agra and Assam Civil Courts Act".

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, I support the amendment moved by my friend Mr. Mukherjee. I hope Government will accept it in view of the fact that in many places Subdivisional Officers and Munsiffs discharge the functions of a Collector.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, I support the amendment moved by my friend Mr. Mukherjee. This question has been raised in the definition clause and it will have an intimate bearing on the subsequent amendments which have been proposed by myself and another member. There are several transfers which have taken place in Bengal and we know that transfer of land has been so innumerable that it is not possible for the Collector to deal with all these cases. It appears from the definition that it is contemplated that several persons will be appointed by the Government to do this work. "Collector" means the Collector of a district or any other officer appointed by the Provincial Government to discharge the functions of a Collector under this Act. So it is the function of the Collector under this Act. Now, Sir, Munsiffs have not much work to do. Several Munsiffs may be requisitioned for this purpose. The services of the Subdivisional Officers should also be utilised because the number of transfers is so many and various that it will not be possible for the Collector of a district to dispose all of them. Besides, it will mean expediting the whole business if these officers are utilised to deal with these cases. Sir, these matters should be decided as expeditiously as possible. I have my suspicion that Government do not like that the matter should go into the hands of the Civil Court. Under section 9, Government is taking power in their own hands for carrying out the purposes of the Act. Then, Sir, clause 9 says "the manner in which the Collector is to determine the amount of any consideration allowed under clause (c) of section 4", the manner in which these officers will finish expeditiously all these things will be laid down by rules which the Government will formulate. There is no question really of any delay in the matter, as the Civil Courts if empowered to decide the cases will act according to the rules framed by the Government. We are anxious that these things are done justly and promptly, and I do not think that by going to the Civil Court there would be any delay in the disposal of cases: there should be no apprehension that the matter will be delayed in the Civil Court.

Sir, it should be the effort of Government to see whether cost of the administration cannot be lowered. And this can be made by appointing some Munsiffs who have not got sufficient work to do now. They should be appointed to try these cases.

Therefore, I strongly urge upon Government to accept this amendment.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN:

Sir, it appears from the two amendments of Khan Bahadur Abdul Momin that clause 2 of the Bill cannot be taken up today.

Mr. PRESIDENT: That is the danger of admitting short-notice amendments, as you now realise. Neither had I any time to go through the amendments nor the department could do it. I also find that sub-clauses (3) and (4) of clause 2 will be affected by Khan Bahadur Abdul Momin's amendments. So, what I propose to do is that these sub-clauses should stand over till tomorrow. I shall not put the entire clause to vote today.

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: Sir, I stand to oppose the amendment. The explanation that has been offered in support of this amendment is that officers who are available near at hand should be given these duties to discharge and therefore my friend has included the Sub-divisional Officer and the Munsiffs. So far as that is concerned, there is no restriction in the Bill; but by the introduction of these words my friend has restricted the scope to only three classes of persons, namely, the District Magistrate, Subdivisional Officer and the Munsiff. Only these three persons are competent to discharge these duties according to his amendment. But the most important thing is that the Revenue Deputy Magistrates will be excluded if this particular amendment is accepted. The best thing would be to leave the matter as it is. Government would be able to name any person to discharge the functions who may be a Collector within the meaning of this Bill, he may be a Munsiff, a Deputy Magistrate or even a Sub-divisional Magistrate. That would give the greatest latitude to Government in selecting persons who might be available in the locality, thereby affording the greatest convenience also to the parties who will be approaching for relief.

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Sir, I have nothing further to add to what has already been said by my friend Mr. Hamidul Huq Chowdhury. I oppose the amendment.

(The amendment was negatived.)

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Mesbahuddin Ahmed.

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Will you take it today or leave it for tomorrow?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Then amendments up to 16 and 17 also may stand over.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Why, Sir, we can go on with 17, because it deals with the main clause 3 and not sub-clause (3).

Mr. PRESIDENT: All right; we may take up 17.

Clause 3.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Nur Ahmed.

Mr. NUR AHMED: Sir, I do not move the amendment standing in my name.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is that clause 3 stand part of the Bill.

(The motion was agreed to.)

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: On a point of information, Sir. What about our other amendments?

Mr. PRESIDENT: They stand over.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: If they stand over, I am afraid some of our amendments will go by default. No more there will be any necessity for moving them. They will be sabotaged. Supposing, the amendment of Mr. Mesbahuddin Ahmed in clause 4 is accepted, where shall I put my words "or a proprietor his nij-jote" which I want to be inserted after the words "any holding" in line 2 in clause 4 of the Bill. The difficulty is this that we sent in our amendments to the main Bill, but here Government have recast the whole Bill thereby bringing in, in fact, a new Bill. Therefore, I ask Government to withdraw this Bill and bring in a new Bill altogether. Amendment No. 18 shows that the clause 4 which is the main clause of the Bill has been wholly recast.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I quite appreciate your difficulties.

As I said before, I had no opportunity of examining the amendments which have taken me by surprise. In view of the fact that they propose to widen the scope of the Bill, I suggest that they stand over till tomorrow. In the meantime, office will examine and I shall also examine them, and after examination they will be sent for the Governor's sanction. That is the proposal I make.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Sir, may I make one suggestion? In case of this nature, when the Government themselves have not quite made up their minds and they have to change their course in mid-stream, it would have been better if the Bill had been referred to a Select Committee. Since that has not been done, may I suggest that it be referred to a Committee of the whole House? That Committee will practically function as a Select Committee where we can consider the whole Bill. We cannot, I think proceed with the clauses unless we know exactly where we stand. Till the definitions in the Bill are determined, how can we go on with the clauses? If it is referred to a Select Committee of the whole House, these difficulties will be obviated.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: That is why there is a rule that definitions have got to be taken up after the whole Bill is gone through, because there may be additions and alterations.

Mr. PRESIDENT: It would be simpler, if Government are really keen on having this amendment made, to take it up elsewhere instead of trying to move it here at this eleventh hour.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: I do not know, Sir. It is the Khan Bahadur's amendment that is responsible for all this.

Mr. PRESIDENT: It is these short-notice amendments that have upset the whole arrangement.

Khan Bahadur M. A. MOMIN: I am afraid, Sir, my amendment has not been rightly understood and perhaps much more is being made of it than it deserves. What is aimed at in my amendment is, as you too have said, Sir, that the Bill as at present drafted only covers the case of rai-yats and under-rai-yats. But in this connection, not only some of the Government party members but the Opposition also, I mean Mr. Lalit Chandra Das and Mr. Bankim Chandra Mukherjee and Shrish Chandra Chakraverty seem to have thought on the same lines, namely, that the tenure-holders and proprietors who are also in the same unfavourable position should also be protected by the Bill. And it is in accordance with almost unanimous opinion of the House that I thought that it would be desirable to table an omnibus motion brought in instead of separate amendments—

Mr. PRESIDENT: That is quite all right. But the point is this: Your amendments admittedly seek to widen the scope of the Bill. Amendments which were received in time were in respect of the Bill as it stands. So, there may be drafting difficulty at least. Suppose, your amendments are accepted and other amendments also are moved and accepted; they may be in conflict with each other, because the amendments of which notices were received were on the basis of the Bill as it originally stood. You no doubt now realise the difficulty, Khan Bahadur?

Khan Bahadur M. A. MOMIN: If my amendment is regarded as going beyond the scope of the Bill, for the same reasons most of the amendments shall go out—

Mr. PRESIDENT: No, no. I do not say that your amendments are outside the scope of the Bill. I have allowed your amendments and they may be moved with the sanction of the Governor. For the House has a right to widen the scope of a Bill if it chooses; so that question does not arise.

Khan Bahadur M. A. MOMIN: Let me submit, Sir, that my amendment is quite simple. Wherever the words "raiyats" and "under-raiyats" occur in the Bill, we simply add the words "proprietors" and "tenure-holders"—

Mr. PRESIDENT: But amendments will have to be moved formally to that effect.

Khan Bahadur M. A. MOMIN: Another point of information. If my amendments require the Governor's sanction, then why the amendments proposed by Mr. Das and others should not equally require his sanction, I mean the amendments which have already been admitted by you?

Mr. PRESIDENT: We sent those amendments for the Governor's sanction and sanction had been obtained with regard to them.

Khan Bahadur M. A. MOMIN: Does not that sanction cover my amendments also, Sir?

Mr. PRESIDENT: No, they have also to be submitted separately for the Governor's sanction.

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: If the Governor has given his consent to extend the provisions of the Bill by including the proprietors and tenure-holders—

Mr. PRESIDENT: In any case, we have got to submit the amendments separately for sanction. May I enquire from the Hon'ble Minister in charge what are his proposals?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: If possible, we would prefer to go on with the Bill.

Mr. PRESIDENT: What do you mean by "if it is possible"? How do you mean to proceed?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: I mean that we are quite ready to proceed with the discussion of the Bill today. I do not see any objection to taking up amendment No. 18 today.

Mr. PRESIDENT: What is your proposal by way of reply to Mr. Das's objection?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: So far as that is concerned, sub-clauses (3) and (4) of clause 2 and clause 8 may be held over pending the Governor's sanction.

Mr. PRESIDENT: But does that exhaust all clauses that might be affected by the amendments of Khan Bahadur Abdul Momin?

I cannot take any responsibility without examining the matter. So I suggest that further consideration of the Bill should stand over till tomorrow.

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: But, Sir, in that view—

Mr. PRESIDENT: If Government are keen on having the amendments of Khan Bahadur Abdul Momin to which I have given my consent and which are going to be submitted to His Excellency for his previous sanction, then I suggest that the matter should stand over. But if Government do not support the amendments of Khan Bahadur Momin, then we can proceed with the Bill as it is.

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Sir, Government support the amendments of Khan Bahadur Momin.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Then let us adjourn the House till tomorrow. The House stands adjourned till 1 p.m. tomorrow.

Adjournment.

The Council then adjourned till 1 p.m. on Tuesday, the 7th March, 1944.

Members Absent.

The following members were absent from the meeting held on the 6th March, 1944:—

BENGAL LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL DEBATES

First Session, 1944.—No. 19.

THE COUNCIL met in the Legislative Chamber of the Legislative Building, Calcutta, on Tuesday, the 7th March, 1944, at 1 p.m., being the nineteenth day of the First Session of 1944, pursuant to section 62(2)(a) of the Government of India Act, 1935.

Mr. President (the Hon'ble Sir BIJOY PRASAD SINGH ROY, K.C.I.E.) was in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Destitute families.

79. Mr. BIRENDRA KISHORE ROY CHOWDHURY: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Revenue Department be pleased to state whether he is aware of the fact that a large number of destitute families which came during 1943 to Calcutta and other towns in search of food have been disintegrated due to some member or members thereof, who could not be traced at the time, being taken either to hospitals or rescue centres to the exclusion of others?

(b) What arrangements have been made by the Government to trace such cases and assist the family members to reunite?

MINISTER in charge of the REVENUE DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Mr. Tarak Nath Mukerjee): (a) Yes.

(b) All destitutes separated from families were at first collected in the Relief Centre at 110, Lansdowne Road, and later on at 10, Nalin Sarkar Street, and the Superintendents of all Relief Centres and Relief Camps in and outside Calcutta were asked to trace out the relations of the destitutes on the basis of information supplied. Notices were published in the newspapers requesting the public coming across separated destitutes to send them to the nearest police-station or to the centre of collection and necessary instructions were issued to all police-stations in Calcutta.

In many cases, separated destitutes, particularly children, were sent out to their villages with escorts to find out if their relations had gone there previously.

As regards other towns, Government have provided [vide section 7 of the Bengal Destitute Persons (Repatriation and Relief) Ordinance, 1943] for repatriation of the destitutes at Government expense to their own villages to enable the separated members of the families to reunite.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Is the Hon'ble Minister in a position to cite one or two instances of sending some children to the villages with escorts?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Sir, I do not understand what the honourable member means by asking me to cite one or two instances. I can tell him that hundreds of cases there have been in which children have been sent to their villages.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Can the Hon'ble Minister name one or two such cases?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: I cannot name the destitutes. How can I name them? There were hundreds of cases.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, the Hon'ble Minister has said that "as regards other towns, Government have provided for repatriation of the destitutes——". May I ask him how many cases have been dealt with under this section 7 of the Bengal Destitute Persons (Repatriation and Relief) Ordinance, 1943?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Sir, it is rather difficult to give the exact number. But I can say, there were hundreds of cases.

Allegations against Jessore District Board.

80. Mr. K. C. ROY CHOWDHURY: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Public Health and Local Self-Government Department be pleased to state whether it is a fact that the villagers of the Chandibarpur Union Board, police-station Narail, Jessore, submitted a memorial to him through the District Magistrate, Jessore, and Subdivisional Officer of Narail on the 12th October, 1943, containing the following allegations against the authority of the Jessore District Board, viz. :—

(i) the alleged unconstitutional removal of the President of the Chandibarpur Union; and

(ii) the removal of the Health Centre from Sakarpur which is situated at the central place of the said Union even when malaria broke out in an epidemic form?

(b) If the answer to (a) be in the affirmative, will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state what action has been taken or is intended to be taken in the matter? If not, why not?

Mr. BIREN ROY, Parliamentary Secretary, (on behalf of the Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi Jalaluddin Ahmad): (a) No.

(b) Does not arise.

Mr. K. C. ROY CHOWDHURY: Will the Hon'ble Minister please state if it is a fact or not that the President of the Chandibarpur Union was removed?

Mr. BIREN ROY: That is a fact.

Mr. K. C. ROY CHOWDHURY: If so, what steps have been taken to enquire as to whether unconstitutional methods were adopted for such removal?

Mr. BIREN ROY: That does not arise.

Adjournment motion.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, I have got an adjournment motion.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Yes, what is the ground of your adjournment motion?

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: I beg to move that this Council do adjourn to discuss a definite matter of urgent public importance, namely, the situation that has arisen in various places of Bengal—

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: On a point of order, Sir. I do not know whether the honourable member is in order in reading out his motion before it is admitted; but I wish to bring to your notice that the motion contains matters which are rather prejudicial. They are not based on facts and they are likely to cause unnecessary alarm.

Mr. PRESIDENT: What is your ground, Mr. Mazumdar?

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: I am coming to that, Sir. It appears from the Calcutta Gazette, dated the 2nd March, that in various districts of Bengal rice can scarcely be had in the open market at controlled rates.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Have you got any other ground?

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: The all-important ground is that rice is not available in various districts, and on that basis I have tabled my motion.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I am sorry I cannot agree with your point, Mr. Mazumdar, because here you refer to certain districts specifically, and also to certain subdivisional towns, but none of these places appear in the Gazette notification.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Yes, Sir, they do appear in the Gazette notification. Here is a copy of the Calcutta Gazette in my hand—

Mr. PRESIDENT: I too have a copy with me.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Here is a copy of the Supplement to the Calcutta Gazette, dated the 2nd March, and it runs thus—A,—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Just a minute, Mr. Mazumdar: Just look at the footnote where you will see the following.—Rice can scarcely be had in the open market at controlled rates—there is no cross mark here. There is a cross against a particular place but none against Chittagong. In fact, against none of the places mentioned in your adjournment motion I find any cross mark.

I also find that in the same Gazette there are two different statements. I am informed Government will enquire into the matter and find out what has led to this discrepancy. This matter will be taken up after it is enquired into by the Government and I waive the point of urgency if it is brought up later. But I do not promise that I shall admit the adjournment motion. I shall consider the matter on its merits. In the meantime, let Government enquire and find out what has led to this discrepancy.

Point of information regarding "bhog"-rationing.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, there is another very important matter, that is, what arrangement he has made about the bhog. Fortunately, the Hon'ble Minister in charge of Civil Supplies is present today and we shall be glad to hear from him what arrangement he has made with regard to this matter. It has been repeatedly promised by him on the floor of this House that something will be done very soon. The Hindu Mahasabha has received hundreds of petitions and representations—

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: Sir, the position is that if I have got to attend to the legislative work along with my other important work I must take some time to come to a decision—

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: But, Sir, the Hon'ble Minister from time to time—

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: In spite of my preoccupation with other very important work I am trying my best to expedite the matter. I dare say it is not humanly possible for any one to do more—

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: It is humanly possible: it is also a very urgent matter. Sir, if he cannot cope with the work let him—

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, the point is that the Hon'ble Minister has promised the appointment of a committee so often here; but actually up to this time he has not done anything in the matter.

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: I must consider whether it is necessary to have a committee. I propose to call a conference in order to gather information whether it is necessary to set up a permanent committee for this purpose. If after consultation it is found that it is necessary to have a permanent committee for this purpose, I shall do it.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to say when he is likely to finish these preliminaries? May I know when? This week—next week?

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: Sometimes I have to do work other than legislative work and then I find it extremely difficult to attend the meeting of the Council, and in this way work goes on. Honourable members also know that the Ministers have got other duties besides legislative work and when the House is sitting, legislative work is given the first preference.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: This matter is of great urgency and if this is put off day after day, it will lose its importance. If the Hon'ble Minister for Civil Supplies is hard up for time, let him give this matter to some other Minister.

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: I did that but the Hon'ble Ministers did not do it.

Outstanding Questions.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, may I mention about the outstanding questions today as suggested by you when yesterday I mentioned this? A large number of questions remain unanswered and there is a list of such questions circulated to all the members. From the list I find that there are outstanding questions of as far back as 1941, of which one question belongs to the Education Department and in 1942, first session two questions, 1943, first session 13, second session 20, third session 41. Now, we are in 1944. Therefore, the questions are more than one year old and we do not know where we stand as regards these questions.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The list that has been circulated to honourable members has been sent also to Government. May I know Government's reply to the point raised.

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: Sir, some of the questions have become wholly out of date and are without interest to the present generation of members. Now, the question arises whether it is worthwhile to answer these questions and whether it is at all necessary. I think that it would mere waste of time of the House if these questions are answered. It has been suggested that these ante-diluvian questions might be placed before the Hon'ble President who might go through them and reject such questions as have lost topical interest.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: On a point of privilege, Sir——

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: Sir, can he interrupt me?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Yes; he has risen on a point of privilege.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Sir, the remark that has just now been made by the Minister for Civil Supplies has no sense because in many instances Government have tried deliberately not to answer questions——

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order, order, Mr. Kabir, you better allow the Hon'ble Minister to finish the statement. Then, I have got my observations to make and after that if necessary you may raise your point of privilege.

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: Therefore, it is desirable not to waste the time of the House which could be better utilised than by answering such questions which have lost all interest and which I think might be withdrawn. The Hon'ble President might use the good office of the Secretary or the Government might get most of these questions withdrawn which are of no interest at the present moment. If you think that the questions ought to be answered however ante-diluvian they may be, we shall make every effort to answer them. As a matter of fact, I had to answer some questions on these lines, dated the 8th June, 1943, and today is 7th March, 1944, when nobody cares what actually was the position on the 8th June, 1943. We have no objection whatsoever to answering the questions, some of which are probably of 1941 and which were put to the Ministers now out of office.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I think the objection raised by the Hon'ble Mr. Suhrawardy cannot be accepted by the House. Because in that case Government may make questions ante-diluvian by deferring the replies. But there may be some questions which could not be answered for want of information which could not be obtained in time from the District Officers or from other authorities responsible for supplying information. Now, if the Government departments find that some of the questions have become out of date are not of much importance to the House, the attention of the Secretary to the Legislative Council should be drawn to these questions. If that is done, I promise to examine the list of such questions and then request the honourable members to withdraw those questions in view of the fact that they have lost all importance. But otherwise I am not prepared to accept the general principle that because questions have not been answered, so they need not be replied to. If Government are prepared to agree to my suggestion, then I am prepared to examine the list.

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: I shall send a list of such questions to the Secretary of the Council for examination by you, Sir.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Sir, in the suggestion which you have made and which is in the nature of a compromise one very valued right of this House is taken away. But I hope, Sir, you will not follow up the suggestion, for it will then always lie with the Government to delay answering questions—

Mr. PRESIDENT: I have touched that point.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: So I shall submit, Sir, that if the Government pursue this dilatory tactics any more on the plea of pre-occupation—formerly we have sometimes prevented Government business being carried on—it will be the duty of the members of this House whether they belong to this side or that side to see that Government business is not carried on till Government are in a proper mood to answer any such questions which are raised here; otherwise this very valued right will be lost entirely to the members of this House—

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: There is a large number of questions which have been hanging up in my department owing to my pre-occupations and I confess—(Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Pre-occupations are only an excuse.) Today you may say that pre-occupations are only an excuse but at the time when I was working hard, at that moment I could have satisfied every single member of the House except perhaps certain members of the Opposition, that my pre-occupations were of such a nature that it was vital that I should carry on that work rather than answer certain questions. I do wish to state here that for a long time I did consider that the work on which I was engaged was of vital importance and that although I realise and I very well value the high position which the Legislature occupies in the Constitution, yet I could not find either the time or the opportunity of answering certain questions. Now that the tension has diminished to a considerable extent, I am working on all the files and answering all the questions as rapidly as possible. No dilatory tactics has ever been pursued by me, I can assure the House.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I presume that there is no wilful negligence on the part of Government to reply to questions. It may be, as Mr. Suhrawardy has said, that some questions could not be answered for lack of information or for lack of time on the part of some Hon'ble Ministers. Let us at least proceed on that basis. I am on my part quite prepared to go through the list of old questions if they are sent to me by the Hon'ble Ministers. I can go through them and if I find that some of the questions have really become out of date, then I should be prepared to make a reference to the honourable members concerned and find out whether they still insist on the questions being answered or not. That I think would be the best solution. I do not certainly subscribe to the view that Government have the right to make questions ante-diluvian; neither do I presume that Government have been non-co-operating with the House or are wilfully deferring replies to questions and are thereby making them ante-diluvian. That is my view and I hope the House agrees with me.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: I agree that the suggestion made by you, Sir, is the best in the circumstances; but I want to record our protest because we are not satisfied that Government are not pursuing dilatory tactics. As for the statement made by Mr. Suhrawardy, you, Sir, know better than any member of the Government that the Hon'ble Mr. Suhrawardy does not run about Bengal collecting information in order to answer questions. It is the department which prepares the draft answers and gathers materials. It is only in their final form that answers reach the Hon'ble Ministers. And that is why the Ministers have often appeared in this House without knowing what the answers are—

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: Not this Minister.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: I am not referring to Mr. Suhrawardy personally.

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: Yes, you are referring to me personally. I go through every paper in every file.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: The Chair knows that I am referring to the Ministers and not to Mr. Suhrawardy personally. We have seen Ministers appearing with files but not knowing what was contained in those files. I challenge the Hon'ble Mr. Suhrawardy to say if he has to go about the whole of Bengal for information for answering questions relating to his department. The Minister in charge only exercises general control over the preparation of answers to questions. When questions are not answered for two or three years, the House cannot but feel that dilatory tactics are employed by the Government to take away the urgency of the questions.

Therefore, though we quite agree that the suggestion you have made, Sir, is the best and is the only course open to us to adopt, but nevertheless we record our protest against the way in which Government have been dealing with us—

Mr. PRESIDENT: I think that is the best solution and let us leave the matter there for the present.

Dr. KUMUD SANKAR RAY: It may be, Sir, that the Hon'ble Mr. Suhrawardy was busy with other work of an administrative nature but does his remark apply to all the other Ministers also?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Will the Hon'ble the Leader of the House make any statement?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: I would request my colleagues to see that the questions concerning their departments are promptly answered.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I hope you will do it.

Mr. AMULYADHONE ROY: Sir, apart from our constitutional right, the statement of the Hon'ble Mr. Suhrawardy is not correct. There are questions which relate to corruption amongst responsible officers of Government—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Roy, we are not going into specific questions; we are discussing the general principle.

Mr. AMULYADHONE ROY: But, Sir, Mr. Suhrawardy remarked that the questions lost their importance—

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: Yes, there are some questions which may have lost their importance.

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: Sir, I want to make a submission with regard to the point raised by Mr. Suhrawardy in his statement just now. He has said that owing to certain pre-occupation at some time he could not answer the questions. Thereby he wanted to make out the point that while certain Ministers are pre-occupied otherwise, they would not answer questions. I submit, Sir, that it is the right of the Legislature to get answer of a question—a very important right which every member of this House has got, and if on the excuse that he has many other duties to perform at a particular moment he does not answer the questions can you, Sir, take this excuse as proper and justifiable for not answering it? I want a ruling from the Chair on this point if the Hon'ble Minister is entitled to do so.

Mr. PRESIDENT: So far as the statement of Mr. Suhrawardy is concerned, what he wants to convey to the House is that the province has been passing through an abnormal situation, and that his is one of the departments which has been dealing with the problems arising out of this situation; so he was behind-hand in answering the questions: that is the point which he wanted to make. But as to the general principle whether Hon'ble Ministers when too busy with their administrative work can avoid answering questions, my opinion is that they cannot.

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: Sir, we have got to perform our duties to our constituencies. Mr. Suhrawardy arrogates to himself the right of not answering questions owing to his pre-occupation with other pressing and urgent duties; but we also have got the right to put urgent and important questions concerning our constituencies and we have a duty to perform to our constituencies and put these questions in their interest. So it is equally important that the Hon'ble Ministers should answer the questions, although it may be inconvenient for them to do so. We have got our duties to perform and if the Hon'ble Ministers obstruct us you are to protect our rights.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Let us not again go back to the discussion of the general principle of the Hon'ble Ministers deferring answers to questions on the ground of their pre-occupations with administrative duties. What Mr. Suhrawardy said was that he had to deal with a very abnormal situation. Hence he could not reply to some of the questions in time.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, may I say one thing—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Das, haven't we had a sufficient discussion on this point?

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: It is a personal explanation that has been given by Mr. Suhrawardy. So far as it relates to his department 46 questions are outstanding. But what about the Home Department—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Das, all those points have been discussed and the Leader of the House has promised to convey the views of the House to his colleagues. Let us wait for the reply.

The Bengal Alienation of Agricultural Land (Temporary Provisions) Bill, 1944.

The House will now proceed to consider the Bengal Alienation of Agricultural Land (Temporary Provisions) Bill, 1944. The House will remember that yesterday we had to adjourn for examining the amendments of Khan Bahadur M. A. Momin of which he gave notice. Now, it has been found by the Legislative Department that a large number of consequential amendments will be necessary if Khan Bahadur Abdul Momin's amendments are accepted by the House. In that view of the matter, Government have proposed an adjournment of this item. So, the business which is shown in the Order Paper of today will be taken up on the 15th and 16th March.

Therefore, I adjourn the House till 2-15 p.m. on Friday, the 10th March.

Adjournment.

The Council then adjourned till 2-15 p.m. on Friday, the 10th March, 1944.

Members Absent.

The following members were absent from the meeting held on the 7th March, 1944:—

- (1) Khan Bahadur Naziruddin Ahmad.
- (2) Khan Sahib Nurul Amin.
- (3) Mr. Hamidul Huq Chowdhury.
- (4) Khan Bahadur Abdul Hamid Chowdhury.
- (5) Mr. R. W. N. Ferguson.
- (6) Mr. Mohamed Hossain.
- (7) Maulana Mohd. Akrum Khan
- (8) Mr. J. McFarlane.
- (9) Mr. N. N. Moholanabish.
- (10) Mr. N. N. Mookerjee.
- (11) Mr. R. S. Purssell.
- (12) Khan Bahadur Kazi Abdur Rashid.
- (13) Mr. B. K. Roy Chowdhury.

BENGAL LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL DEBATES

First Session, 1944—No. 20.

THE COUNCIL met in the Legislative Chamber of the Legislative Building, Calcutta, on Friday, the 10th March, 1944, at 2-15 p.m., being the twentieth day of the First Session of 1944, pursuant to section 62(2)(a) of the Government of India Act, 1935.

Mr. President (the Hon'ble Sir BIJOY PRASAD SINGH ROY, K.C.I.E.) was in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Security prisoner Dr. Nripendranath Bose.

81. Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Home Department be pleased to state when Dr. Nripendranath Bose of Comilla was taken a security prisoner?

(b) Are the Government aware that he is a physician of great repute and of much charitable disposition, ready to help the sick and the poor?

(c) Do Government propose to release him? If not, what are the grounds for refusal?

Mr. BIREN ROY, PARLIAMENTARY SECRETARY (on behalf of the Hon'ble Khwaja Sir Nazimuddin): (a) He was arrested on 28th July, 1943, under rule 129 of the Defence of India Rules. An order of detention under rule 26, Defence of India Rules, was issued on the 17th September, 1943.

(b) That is a matter of opinion.

(c) His case is now under review. He will be released when the further detention is no longer necessary in the interests of public security.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Arising out of (c), is his case still under review?

Mr. BIREN ROY: Yes. I think orders will be passed within a very short time.

Grievances of tramcar passengers.

82. Mr. HARIDAS MAJUMDAR: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Communications and Works Department be pleased to state if he is aware of the grievances of the tramcar passengers regarding—

(i) non-issue of transfer tickets;

(ii) overcrowding and want of sitting accommodation in tramcars;

(iii) insufficiency of the number of ladies' seats;

(iv) increase of monthly fare; and

(v) incivility and rashness on the part of the ticket collectors and conductors particularly in connection with the stopping and starting of the car?

(b) If so, do the Government propose to take immediate and urgent steps to remedy these grievances of the tramcar passengers? If not, why not?

MINISTER in charge of the COMMUNICATIONS and WORKS DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Mr. Barada Prasanna Pain): (a) (i) I am informed that issue of transfer tickets was suspended to minimise difficulties in collection of fares, and that their reintroduction in some form is now under consideration.

(ii) Overcrowding in tramcars is due to shrinkage in other forms of transport vehicles, mainly caused by petrol rationing, in face of growing demand of public traffic.

(iii) In view of the number of passengers of both sexes travelling by the tramcar, the number of ladies' seats in a car is not out of proportion with the general requirements. Reservation of additional seats for ladies without an increase in the total number of seats would further add to congestion.

(iv) In order to adjust the additional operating cost due to opening up of three new lines which have opened extra facilities in tramway travelling to the holder of an all-section monthly ticket, the Tramway Company have increased the fare of all-section monthly ticket by not more than 25 per cent.

(v) I am assured by the Tramway Company that they do not condone incivility and rashness on the part of their employees and that they would take every possible precaution that no friction between their staff and the public is unnecessarily created.

(b) The Government have already taken up with the Company the question of remedying the grievances of the public as far as practicable in the present emergent circumstances created by the war.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Can the Government fix some approximate time-limit when the grievances of the public are going to be removed?

The Hon'ble Mr. BARADA PRASANNA PAIN: It is not possible to fix time-limit.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Is the Hon'ble Minister aware that coins and changes are not given by the conductors even when they are in possession of such coins?

The Hon'ble Mr. BARADA PRASANNA PAIN: Does not arise.

Town near Kanchrapara.

83. Alhadj Khan Bahadur SHAIKH MUHAMMAD JAN: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Revenue Department be pleased to state—

- (a) whether he is aware that near Kanchrapara, a suburb of Calcutta, a big industrial town is being planned by the American industrialists, with a network of wide roads on both sides of which palatial buildings are being constructed, for the development of post-war American industry in India on the most gigantic scale; and
- (b) if so, whether any permission was obtained from the Government of Bengal for laying out plans of a separate new town near Calcutta, the Provincial capital of Bengal?

MINISTER in charge of the REVENUE DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Mr. Tarak Nath Mukerjee): (a) It is not in the public interest to disclose information regarding this matter.

(b) Does not arise.

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: Arising out of (a) are not the public interested in this matter?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: It is a matter of opinion.

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: Will the Hon'ble Minister please state whether it is a fact that the public are not concerned in the matter at all?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: May be.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Is it a fact that the new town which is now being built up at Kanchrapara is proposed to be named after the name of the President of the United States of America, Mr. Roosevelt?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Government are not aware of that.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Is the Hon'ble Minister aware that another town is under construction, and it is proposed to be named as Washington Town?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: I am not aware.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Is the Government aware of the fact that thousands of passengers are passing every day in both directions through the town which is being erected?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Certainly there are some constructions going on but whether they are for erecting a town or for any other purpose, Government have no information.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Is the Government aware that in view of the construction which the people actually see before their eyes speculations and rumours are rife?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: May be.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Does the Hon'ble Minister consider that the spread of such rumours is desirable in the public interest?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: I could not follow the honourable member, Sir.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Will Mr. Kabir please repeat his question?

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Sir, I asked a supplementary question as to whether there were rumours regarding this construction and the answer was "may be". My supplementary question now is whether the Hon'ble Minister considers that the circulation of such rumours, founded or ill-founded, is desirable in the public interest?

Mr. PRESIDENT: It is a hypothetical question.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Is the Hon'ble Minister aware whether the town is being constructed by an American industrialist or by the U. S. Government?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: As I have already stated, in the public interest Government do not think it proper to disclose the facts.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Questions over.

Adjournment motion.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: May I mention that I have an adjournment motion in my name? And may I move it?

Mr. PRESIDENT: But I have disallowed the motion.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, is it permissible for me to point out with regard to my motion that you have disallowed—

Mr. PRESIDENT: No, as I have disallowed it, nothing can be mentioned in that behalf on the floor of the House.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Is the Hon'ble Minister for Civil Supplies now ready to answer the point raised by in connection with my adjournment motion?

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: Sir, I have looked into the paper and find that that discrepancy is no discrepancy at all. One list refers to the prices of the week and of the previous week and the other list to the prices prevailing at the end of the first half and the second half of January. So, from that point of view there is no discrepancy. I submit further that the motion does not raise any matter of urgent public importance or any matter which is definite or any matter which is not known to honourable members of this House. Why then should the adjournment motion be allowed? Is it because of the publication in the papers, or because it is only now that rice can scarcely be had in the open market at controlled price in certain places? So far as the publication in the papers is concerned, that is nothing new. Take Barrackpur for instance, where rice was selling at $2\frac{1}{8}$ thrs of seers at a rupee: it has got an "A" mark, meaning that rice was not available there at controlled rates. But for the previous week similarly the position was the same, namely, $2\frac{1}{8}$ th seers with the same "A" mark. Therefore, this is nothing new; it is not something which has happened this week and did not happen in the previous week. Similarly with regard to others. Prices for this week were also there as well as of the previous week. So, it is not a recent occurrence to which the honourable member may refer.

In the previous week also there was a similar publication—I have not examined the records previous to that; but I take it there must have been a similar publication the previous week and so on. The statement that rice can scarcely be had in the open market at controlled price is in itself causing the difficulty. There is nothing very terrible in the situation. The fact is that at certain places round about towns the cultivators are holding back their stocks waiting for higher prices, because from time to time factious resolutions are moved and factious speeches are made in this House that prices are bound to rise and the agriculturist falls a prey to these fears. Unfortunately, Sir, the cultivators and the people are not allowed to rest in peace even for a little while. I am certain that if this sort of cry that rice is not available in the open market is stopped for a while, prices will go down. These gentlemen by this sort of meaningless discussion induce the cultivators to hold back their stocks and push up prices. I think, Sir, such speeches in the House are definitely mischievous.

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: Sir, is the word "mischievous" parliamentary?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Yes.

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: Yes, it is parliamentary. Now, Sir, my submission in regard to the question as to whether this subject should be discussed is that there is no need of any discussion about it. So far as these points are concerned, I have already stated in this House and in another place that it is the policy of Government—and instructions have already been issued—to ration all the municipalities within the province and to ensure the people residing within the municipalities their supplies. So the question whether rice can scarcely be had in the open market at controlled price is of no significance at all if ration is introduced. Such a state affairs causes little inconvenience to the people. These places are set in rural surroundings where most persons have contacts with the country side and have their own paddy and rice, and they do not care whether rice is available or not in the open market. As an example, I may cite the case of Jhenida, round which is a surplus area full of rice, but where rice is not freely available.

Mr. PRESIDENT: On a careful consideration of the matter and after listening to the statement made by the Hon'ble Minister, I feel that it is not a matter of urgent public importance and so I refuse my consent.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, before you take up the business of the day, may I mention one thing? I gave notice of a short-notice question on the 6th March and I understand that you admitted it. The Hon'ble Minister in charge of Communications is here: may I know whether he is willing to answer it? It is in connection with the Dacca Mail accident.

The Hon'ble Mr. BARADA PRASANNA PAIN: I have also given my consent. I have not got the file with me here now. I shall answer it on Monday next.

Non-official resolutions.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The House will now take up Non-official resolutions. On the last non-official day we were discussing the resolution of Mr. Haridas Mazumdar. Mr. Humayun Kabir was then in possession of the House.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Sir, I have nothing much to add to what I said on the last non-official day. I was then pointing out to the House that since Government declare that they intend to do something for the relief of the destitutes, they must realise that it cannot be done unless a proper census is taken. I pointed out that the objections of my friend Mr. Nur Ahmed were absolutely unjustified. In view of the fact that on both sides there is a desire that relief measures should be expedited and should be based on as scientific a basis as possible, I hope the motion will be accepted by Government.

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: Sir, on behalf of the party which I have the honour to represent here, I whole-heartedly support the resolution moved by my friend Mr. Haridas Mazumdar. It is a proper request and in the fitness of things the Government should take census of the destitutes before they start on any relief measure. By this census they would be able to know the actual number of people who should get relief. I think, Sir, the resolution does not need much eloquence or arguments to be accepted. I hope the Government would accept the resolution.

Mr. W. B. C. LAIDLAW: Mr. President, Sir, I too would like to express very briefly our sympathy with this resolution. It does seem desirable that the scheme of rehabilitation should be based on the facts such as would be revealed in a census of destitutes and persons who have been ruined and dispossessed by the famine. I am not so sure of the word "unemployed" in the resolution. In point of fact, there is a shortage of labour, as the House must know.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, may I, on behalf of my party, support the resolution which has been moved by my friend Mr. Haridas Mazumdar. Practically it runs almost on a similar line with the resolution which I have tabled on the subject. I refer to resolution No. 19 in the list which runs as follows: "That this Council is of opinion that effective, ample and immediate measures should be taken by the Government of Bengal to rehabilitate the famine-stricken people of Bengal."

Now, I think that for this purpose it is very necessary that a census should be taken of the destitutes and the unemployed. Sir, I would not be surprised if the Hon'ble Minister opposes the resolution saying that he has already got a census of the destitutes as well as that of the unemployed taken. If that is so, we would be glad to hear about the number of the destitutes and the unemployed, as that would be helpful in moving our subsequent resolutions on the subject of rehabilitation of the destitutes.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Sir, on behalf of Government I may point out that—

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Sir, is the Hon'ble Minister replying on behalf of Government? I believe he has already spoken on the resolution.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: I have not yet spoken, it was Mr. Nur Ahmed who spoke on this resolution.

As I was saying, Sir, we are already collecting statistics of destitutes and the unemployed through the food committees. And not only that: we are collecting the names of the destitutes and the unemployed and preparing a priority list to find out as to how many persons require help immediately and how many persons may wait for some time. As a matter of fact, we are doing more than the resolution asks for. In view of this, I would request my friend to withdraw the resolution. We are already doing what the acceptance of this resolution would have required us to do. We cannot accept the resolution.

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: On a point of information, Sir. May I know from the Hon'ble Minister how long the Government would take to complete the census?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: I believe it has already been completed in the mofussil areas. It was about two months ago that I saw the priority lists being prepared. (Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Can you give us the figures?) The list is being prepared in every union board and by the food committees.

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: Sir, the honourable members here are so divorced from realities that they do not know at all what is going on in the villages. In every union, in every food committee, even in every village such lists have been and are being prepared and consolidated. Three kinds of lists have been prepared "(A)", "(B)" and "(C)". "A" class is most needy, "B" class is better off and "C" class does not deserve any help at all. All these things are there. Apparently, Mr. Haridas Mazumdar wants certain "kudos" for himself as if he is responsible for these steps and for bringing this to the notice of Government. Let him have it.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, I am very glad to know that Government are doing all these things. But I do not find any reason why they should have objection to the acceptance of this resolution.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Is that your reply? Mr. Mazumdar do you not want to exercise your right of reply?

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: That is all, Sir.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that this Council is of opinion that a census of the destitutes and unemployed particularly of the rural areas of Bengal should be taken in time to tackle the urgent problem of rehabilitation and future emergency.

(The motion was agreed to.)

Mr. PRESIDENT: The next resolution stands in the name of Rai Bahadur Keshab Chandra Banerjee. But the House has already given its verdict on a motion moved by Mr. Nur Ahmed this session, so this resolution cannot be moved under Rule 40.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: May I make my submission, Sir? The point is: that under Rule 96 Mr. Nur Ahmed gave notice of a special motion which was for the appointment of a Royal Commission and the recommendation was made to the Home Government—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Rai Bahadur, I would draw your attention to Rule 40.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Sir, it raises two distinct issues, according to the ruling given by the Deputy President the other day on the point of order raised in connection with the Special motion of Mr. Nur Ahmed. The Deputy President after due consideration ruled that as these two resolutions raise two distinct issues, so Mr. Nur Ahmed was quite in order in moving his Special motion. Therefore, I think my resolution stands on a different footing altogether.

Mr. PRESIDENT: What was the point of order raised by you?

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: My resolution asks for the appointment of an enquiry committee. So I submitted that Mr. Nur Ahmed could not possibly move his Special motion. The Deputy President on hearing different speakers ruled that as the two resolutions raised two distinct issues—the Hon'ble Minister in charge also supported that contention—

Mr. PRESIDENT: The point of order raised by you was this that Mr. Nur Ahmed's Special motion was not admissible in view of the fact that there was already a motion tabled by you on the same subject. So you yourself felt that the motions were identical.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: That is why, Sir—

Mr. PRESIDENT: I have ruled that under Rule 40 your resolution cannot be moved.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: May I point out, Sir, as I understand Rule 40—

Mr. PRESIDENT: I have given my decision.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: I may point out how this resolution is in order. You may hear us—

Mr. PRESIDENT: I have already given my decision. So there is no more room for argument. You could have done it a few minutes earlier.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Humayun Kabir.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Sir, I beg to move: that this Council is of opinion that the Government should immediately take the following steps for meeting the grievances of persons detained without any trial either under section 26 of the Defence of India Rules or Regulation III of 1818, viz:—

- (a) Provision of study and examination allowances to those who are desirous of continuing their studies;
- (b) transfer to one of the Calcutta jails of persons suffering from serious diseases;
- (c) improvement in the terms of payment of family allowances providing a minimum of at least Rs. 20 for each dependent of the detenu;
- (d) expedition in the despatch of applications for family allowances or increment thereof;
- (e) arrangement for the rapid payment of such allowances once the allowances are sanctioned.

Sir, you will notice that this resolution is pitched in a very low key. I have not, in this resolution, raised the question of the release of the political prisoners or detenus. This is for the simple reason that the Government in their wisdom,—without any reason whatsoever, without any justification whatsoever, without any legal defence whatsoever for the action they have taken,—have seen fit to detain these people. I think it is in a way humiliating to us in India to go on continually appealing against a decision which is not a legal decision but is as good an illustration of Fascist methods as are to be found anywhere in the world. I know that my friends opposite will say that the Bengal Government is not primarily responsible for these arrests. They are largely correct. That is also another reason why I have not raised the question of their release. After all, we all know that in this matter the Provincial Government are not even in the position of agents; they are merely subordinates and carry out the orders of their Imperial masters who in their wisdom have seen fit to detain these persons. Therefore, till the actual political issue between India and England is settled, I do not think any useful purpose will be served by asking for their release and so. I have not raised that question. The day the political issue between India and England is solved, the position of these men—not of all of them perhaps but of some of them at least—will be recognised as one of national honour. Till such time comes, the least that we can do for them is to remain silent on the point and abstain from petitioning continuously for their release as some persons are doing today.

Sir, once the fact is granted that these prisoners are detained today without trial, it follows that the position of these persons is in a sense analogous to that of the prisoners of war. This country has been engaged in a struggle for Independence for many years and these persons have been detained by Government, because the Government which function today in India think that the freedom or liberty of these people is incompatible with the maintenance of British rule in this country. Therefore, the position of these detenus is really the position of prisoners of war. Sir, there is everywhere the civilized convention that prisoners of war are given certain privileges. They are accorded a certain standard of treatment. People who have not been convicted in a trial can rightly claim similar treatment. It will be noted that these prisoners have not been convicted after trial. They are now in detention, not because of any moral offence, nor because they wanted anything for themselves but because they thought it their duty to struggle for the Independence of their country. This is true also of those who have been convicted of some political offence. Even then, I have left out their case and concentrated only on the cases of those who without any trial whatsoever have been detained either under the Defence of India Act or under Regulation III of 1818.

It will also be noticed that the demands which I make are not demands which this Government cannot satisfy. In the past it has been the convention for the Government of Bengal to grant allowances for study and examination fees to persons who have been detained in such manner. They have done so in order to enable the detenus to qualify themselves for earning their livelihood after release. I have received letters from persons from different jails. Some of them, as they put the fact pathetically, say "After all, the war is going to end some day. Government cannot keep us prisoners for an indefinite period or for the whole of our lives. Let Government then give us the opportunity of using our time profitably, so that we can play our parts in society with credit when we come out". I ask Government to consider this question deeply and with sympathy and understanding. When they come out, will these young men become useful members of society? Will they be able to find a livelihood and occupy an honourable place or shall they come out of the jail without any qualification whatsoever, without any means of improving themselves by education or in any other manner? In the past, Government sanctioned study and examination allowances in order to enable these detenus and political sufferers to qualify themselves for honourable avocations when they came out. This was done even by the bureaucratic government of the past. Will the so-called popular Ministry do even less than the old bureaucracy?

I do not understand why this time Government have refused this privilege. It is after all the minimum that Government can do to the persons they have detained without any trial—without any justification. I can mention many cases in which petitions of persons who wanted to sit for examinations have been virtually refused. They have been given formal permission but refused the fees and without the sanction of examination fees, permission to sit for the examination is merely an empty formality. I shall cite a few instances of the way in which petitions and representations of persons who want to sit for examinations are treated. There is the case of Mr. Dwijendra Nath Sen Gupta, who wanted to sit for the M. A. Examination, and who is under detention at the Alipore Central Jail. Then, Sir, there is another case of Mr. Jotirindra Nath Das Gupta of Faridpur. He also is a candidate for the M. A. Examination. There are many other similar cases. These persons are not being given any examination fees though their petitions to sit for the examination were approved. The public contributed to a fund for payment of their fees and out of that fund their fees were met. The public had done what the Government ought to have done, because it is the Government who have deprived them of their liberty. The Government should at least provide these unfortunate men with amenities by which they can become more useful members of society.

The second item of the resolution refers to the transfer to one of the Calcutta jails of persons suffering from serious diseases. I would again refer the Hon'ble Minister to the cases of persons suffering from grievous diseases. In some of these cases, although transfers have been recommended by the local authorities—actual transfers did not take place. I would like to draw the attention of the Hon'ble Home Minister to one particular such case—the case of Mr. Miafaruddin who is detained in the Mymensingh jail. This person has been recommended by the jail authorities for transfer to Calcutta. He is suffering from a serious disease and proper treatment could not be had at Mymensingh. Government have not even then moved at all in this direction. I do not understand why this attitude has been taken up by Government. In passing, I would like to draw the attention of the Hon'ble Home Minister to the fact that this time there has been a special discrimination in the case of Muslim prisoners. They have to suffer special hardships, it seems. Muslims detained since 1942 have been singled out for preferential, or shall I say, non-preferential treatment. I do not know whether it is intentional or not. Sometimes it may be oversight; or perhaps it may be that the British authorities do not like that in the movement that is going on, Muslims should have taken any part. Muslims, however, are not behindhand in spite of the so-called only Muslim organisation of Mr. Muhammad Ali Jinnah. That is perhaps the reason why Muslims who have been arrested in recent times have not received that consideration which every political prisoner ought to receive. Sir, I would also refer to the case of Mr. Mukbul Hosain Bhuyia who is at the Faridpur jail and who also comes under the same category as those I have cited before. These persons are suffering from diseases that cannot be treated locally. These persons have not been allowed amenities to which every political prisoner in every country is entitled.

Then, Sir, I come to the third item in my resolution. The third item refers to the improvement in the terms of payment of family allowances.

The other day the Hon'ble Finance Minister said that in some cases the allowances had been increased. I do not dispute that. But what is the increased amount they are getting? Mr. Dwijendra Nath Sen Gupta is getting the magnificent sum of Rs. 10! Mr. Jotirindra Nath Das Gupta is getting the magnificent sum of Rs. 10! I find again that Miafaruddin Ahmad in Mymensingh is getting the magnificent sum of Rs. 15. Is this sum enough? If Government think these allowances enough for the families of these detenus and political prisoners, I would ask them to consider what they would do if they were paid an identical amount per month for their families.

After all, Government know very well that Rs. 10 is not the price of even one maund of rice today. In many cases, these detenus and political prisoners have families to support. The person who has been arrested is often the only earning member of the family. After they have been imprisoned, the difficulties of their families can be easily imagined. I am sure no Government, however unimaginative it might be, would for a moment take such steps if it once considered the implications of these arrests. Very often it happens that these decisions are taken as a routine matter. It may even be that these matters do not come up to the Hon'ble the Home Minister or his associates at all but are done by his subordinates. Sir, the cost of living has gone up by 4 or 5 times. In view of the enormous increase in the cost of living, Government should examine the cases of detenus and other political prisoners and sanction an allowance at the rate of at least Rs. 20 per head. I have put the figure at Rs. 20 deliberately. Every honourable member knows that the cost of living per head is not less than Rs. 20 today. It is difficult even to have a servant on a lesser amount. These prisoners have often occupied responsible positions in society. Many of them are the flowers of our society. Many of them have given their all and devoted the best years of their life to the national cause and their only crime is their love for the country. It was bad politics to arrest them. They could be arrested only under the present lawless laws. It is up to a Government which claims to be a popular Government, composed of Indians, at least to alleviate their distress. Ministers have no power to release them, but let them at least raise their family allowance to Rs. 20 per head. Let the Ministers at least bring the allowances to a level which may enable their families to live in a decent human standard.

Then I come to the question of "Expedition in the despatch of applications for family allowances or increments thereof". I will not dilate on this point. The Hon'ble Minister himself knows that the Secretariat is proverbially slow. Files once started go on indefinitely. One can never know when they will end. You, Sir, with your long experience know very well that the bureaucracy love their formalities. Like snow-balls, papers go on accumulating till in the end the original point is altogether lost in the collected heaps. In the case of a file, it goes on and on and at last it reaches a point when it is found that the issue on which the file was started has ceased to exist. I would ask the Government to take steps to see that the political prisoners or detenus who have been kept under detention without any trial whatsoever, do not suffer on that account. They would not have been detained thus by any civilized Government. Here they have been put in prison only to suit the political convenience of an alien Government who rule by force and not by willing consent. It is in the interest of such alien Government to put them behind the prison bars and to see that they do not come out till the International difficulties of the Government are over.

I now come to the last item "arrangement for the rapid payment of such allowances once the allowances are sanctioned." I think the Hon'ble the Home Minister will not be able to deny that there have been cases where even after the Government had sanctioned certain allowances, the allowances did not reach in proper time. The families of the detenus did not get the allowance in due course. In some cases, months elapsed between the grant of allowance and the actual payment of the allowances to the family of the detenus. In most cases, the sum was very meagre and inadequate. In many cases the prisoners who have been detained were the only earning members of the families concerned. The sufferings of the families can, therefore, be easily imagined. I would ask the Government to treat these prisoners in the only way possible to a Government claiming to be popular. Their only crime is their patriotism, their love of their country. Not one of them has been convicted, not one has any Government action against him. They have all been arrested on mere suspicion. And the suspicion is based on their patriotism. I hope the Home Minister will not forget the spirit of sacrifice, devotion and selflessness with which many of these prisoners have carried on their political activities so long as they were free.

In these circumstances, I would expect the Hon'ble the Home Minister to take an independent attitude towards this question and to tell us on the floor of this House that he would see that the grievances which I have pointed out to him are actually removed. I expect he will assure us that the families of these detenus who are, in effect, prisoners of war will be given the facilities which any civilized Government would have given them.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order, order. Resolution moved: that this Council is of opinion that the Government should immediately take the following steps for meeting the grievances of persons detained without any trial either under section 26 of the Defence of India Rules or Regulation III of 1818, viz:—

- (a) Provision of study and examination allowances to those who are desirous of continuing their studies;
- (b) transfer to one of the Calcutta jails of persons suffering from serious diseases;
- (c) improvement in the terms of payment of family allowances providing a minimum of at least Rs. 20 for each dependent of the detenu;

- (d) expedition in the despatch of applications for family allowances or increment thereof;
- (e) arrangement for the rapid payment of such allowances once the allowances are sanctioned.

Alhadj Khan Bahadur SHAIKH MUHAMMAD JAN: Mr. President, Sir, I whole-heartedly support the resolution moved by my friend, Mr. Humayun Kabir, and I do not know how any member of this House can oppose it on any reasonable ground. The resolution asks for making provision for those persons who have been detained without any crime that the Government could charge them with openly and who have been detained only on suspicion. We do not understand how these people can be treated in such a callous manner as we find them treated to-day.

We know how the prisoners of war who were fighting for the Fascist cause in order to enslave the whole world have been brought over to India and are being treated as so many princes. They are being given better clothing and better food than they were actually enjoying when they were fighting against the united nations. But, here our own countrymen who were also advocating the cause of their own country, are being detained and treated quite differently. These persons did not commit any crime but they have been arrested and put behind the prison bars only on suspicion. This resolution only asks the Government to make provision for better treatment of these unfortunate persons and their wretched families. Therefore, I hope all members of this House will support it on humanitarian grounds and the popular Government, I think, will agree to remove their grievances, as far as possible. With these words, I support the resolution.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Mr. President, Sir, I rise to support the resolution which has been moved by my friend, Professor Kabir. Sir, this resolution is worded in very moderate terms. The persons who are security prisoners are the victims of suspicion. They have never been tried and they have never been convicted. My friend has pleaded for some conciliatory treatment of these persons. Sir, I would just like to remind the Hon'ble Home Minister in this connection that on the eve of his assumption of office he made a promise to make a very liberal treatment of the question not only of the release of the political prisoners but also of the allowances to be given to the family of these persons. Now, what is urged in the resolution is that a provision for study and examination allowances should be made to those who are desirous of continuing their study. Government have made arrangements so that these political prisoners whenever they desire may appear in the University examinations. When Government have conceded this much right to them, it follows quite logically that they should also provide them with books necessary for appearing in these examinations and also with examination fees to be paid to the University. They are now within jails and so His Majesty's guests. Therefore, they ought to be allowed all facilities for appearing in the examinations.

Sir one thing must be remembered in connection with the treatment of these political prisoners. Political prisoners everywhere in this world, whether in the West or in the East, after the cessation of hostilities become the political leaders of the country; that one central fact must be remembered by those who are in power today. They must also remember that the very flower of the youths of the country is in jail, and that nothing should be done to exacerbate their feelings in any way by those who are in possession of the reins of government. The second point urged by Mr. Humayun Kabir relates to the transfer of persons who are suffering from serious illness to Calcutta jails; it is also a very moderate demand. Instances have been cited where political prisoners suffering in the mofussil are not getting proper treatment. Many applications have been made by such persons but they are all pending still and the requests have not been acceded to. But that is a very easy question to deal with and specially so when they themselves express a desire to be transferred from one jail to a Calcutta jail in order to get the benefit of better treatment. We know of the case, Sir, where the leader of the Fascist party in England was actually released and we also know what trouble was created over the question of his release: I mean the release of Sir Oswald Mosley, who was suffering from serious illness. Questions were asked in the House of Commons as to why Sir Oswald Mosley who was actually leading a party of rebels should be released. The Home Minister of England took courage in both hands and defended his policy as best as he could. But here it is not the question of release but only a question of transfer of security prisoners suffering from serious illness to Calcutta jails for better treatment. As I observed in the beginning, the resolution has been couched in most moderate terms and I fail to understand why this request should be refused. The third point in the resolution is about family allowances to be granted to these prisoners. A demand of Rs. 20 has been made for each dependent of the detenus. This is not too much, if the surrounding circumstances are taken into consideration,—the rise in the prices of all the necessities of life and all that as well as the stress through which the country has passed and is passing—all these things have got to be taken into consideration. If the Hon'ble the Home Minister coolly thinks of this matter and does not allow himself to be influenced by the Additional Secretary who is in charge of Political Affairs, then he is sure to realise that this recommendation is not at all over-much.

The next thing urged in the resolution is expedition in the despatch of applications for family allowance. I know that applications made for family allowances are lying unanswered and in spite of repeated reminders no final orders have yet been passed with regard to them. Therefore, this request for expeditious grant of family allowances is also very moderate, and I am sure the Hon'ble Minister will find no difficulty in agreeing to this portion of the resolution.

Lastly, comes the request for arrangement for the rapid payment of such allowances once the allowances are sanctioned. This also is a very easy thing. Nothing should stand in the way, once allowances are granted, of payment of allowances expeditiously. As I observed in the beginning, the resolution is very moderate; I support it and think that it should be acceptable to Government also.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Sir, as a non-official visitor of the Dacca Central Jail and as one who has been entrusted with the duty of looking after the security prisoners, I feel inclined to make a few observations for the consideration of Government. Generally, the terms of the resolution have my whole-hearted support. I would, however, like to confine my remarks to two or three points contained in the resolution, namely, to (c), (d) and (e).

The first is the improvement in the terms of payment of family allowances, providing at least for Rs. 20 a month for each detenu. During my visits to the Dacca Central Jail, I felt that some increase was desirable, although no specific demand was made by the detenus regarding the rate of increase of their allowances. Rs. 20 is, I think, a reasonable sum. Having regard to the fact that Government are spending money in various ways, it should not grudge this small amount. Then, Sir, there is real difficulty in regard to the actual payment of allowances to the families of detenus. Many complaints have been made: petitions after petitions have been submitted by them through the proper channel but there has been no response from Government. These representations and petitions urged prompt payment of allowances already sanctioned. In some cases, it was found that for four or five months no allowances had been paid to the detenus in spite of repeated reminders. Same is the case with regard to the payment of family allowances of the political prisoners. Applications made by the persons concerned find their comfortable resting place in the rusty archives of the Bengal Secretariat. These are the more important points to which I would draw the attention of the Hon'ble the Home Minister. The Superintendent of the Jail was also with me on some occasions but he could not explain the reasons for the delay in the payment of these allowances. Then, Sir, regarding expedition in the despatch of applications for family allowances, if such applications are made through the proper channel, they take long time to reach the authorities in Calcutta. I do not now whether these petitions are delayed in the offices of the local authorities or in Calcutta; any way the feeling is there that abnormal delay occurs in the disposal of the petitions. I think the Hon'ble Minister will note these important points and see that delay does not take place in future: otherwise, members of the families of these prisoners will suffer very much, particularly in these days of soaring prices and economic hardship.

Mr. KAMINI KUMAR DUTTA: Mr. President, Sir, I rise to give my full support to the resolution of my friend Mr. Humayun Kabir. The resolution, it must be said, is a very modest one. All the clauses contain terms which are extremely reasonable. The number of detenus under section 26 of the Defence of India Rules is certainly much larger than the number under Regulation III of 1818. In Regulation III of 1818 there is some provision for grant of allowances and other facilities. But as regards the large number of detenus under section 26 of the Defence of India Rules, they are absolutely at the mercy of the Government. My friend, indeed, reminded me that there has been some change in respect prisoners under Regulation III of 1818. Though, I doubt, Sir, in respect of detenus under rule 26 of the Defence of India Rules there has been some recent amendment, but those who are now in custody almost all of them were placed under detention before this amendment was made and at the time when they were arrested no notice was given to them as regards the charges against them. So these detenus are in custody without knowing what the charges against them are. Fortunately or unfortunately, I know several of them. I know many of them in their private life and considering their present attitude and their present mentality as to the situation in the country, I cannot reconcile myself to the position taken by the Government in the matter of their detention. But, of course, it is crying in the wilderness. The present resolution is not asking for their release but is only asking for some amenities to them and to their dependants who have been practically left uncared for. I myself put some questions to the Hon'ble the Home Minister in respect of some of the detenus, their family members, of whom I am personally aware. Really, even now when I think of the family members of some of them, it is very difficult for me to restrain my tears. It is no exaggeration at all when I say that the families of some of these detenus, who are bright young men, are absolutely living on starvation diet: they are living on the charity of their neighbours—their old father, their sisters and the wife of some of them—they have no means of livelihood. Sir, it is only human, not to speak of any other thing, that some provision ought to be made for the families of these detenus, and the sum asked for in the resolution is the minimum which one can think of now-a-days considering the high prices of foodstuffs. Only Rs. 20 has been asked for for each dependant of the detenu. If we go to a hotel, we cannot pay less than Rs. 30 per head. So Rs. 20 per head is the bare minimum.

As to the next provision (a)—the mover has suggested that "Provision of study and examination allowances to those who are desirous of continuing their studies". Sir, it is the elementary need for those who are prosecuting their studies and for whom it is not possible to continue unless the State makes some provision.

The next suggestion is "Transfer to one of the Calcutta jails of persons suffering from serious diseases". Sir, this requires no comment. The mover wants that persons suffering from serious diseases should be transferred to one of the Calcutta jails where it may be possible to get adequate and efficient medical help.

The next suggestion is with regard to "expedition in the despatch of applications for family allowances or increment thereof". Sir, we know of several instances where applications have been made, assurance has been given of a favourable consideration of the applications. Mothers, sisters or wives have been waiting for the final decision in the matter but though long time has elapsed there is no reply yet.....(Khan Bahadur ABDUL GOFAN: Can you give one particular instance?) I can give you not one or two but fifty instances. The Additional Secretary to the Political Department,

Mr. Bapat, told me that favourable replies were being sent; but months have passed by since then, and yet no reply has been received by the families of the detenus. Ask your own conscience and ask those who are in charge of the administration. I have not got by heart all those names. If my honourable friend wants them, I accept his challenge and I give him the assurance that I will give him all the names. I equally hope that when he has accepted my challenge he will try his best really so that they may get their grievances redressed. Merely having the names will be useless. But I may also say why my friend asks for the names from me. I have put questions in this House not about one detenu but about a dozen of these detenus and only about two of them I have got reply up till now. I have not got any reply from the Hon'ble Minister about others. I put questions that no provision has been made for the families of these prisoners and about two of them I have got a belated reply, about one—a curt “No”, and about another a small pittance. So the names are there in the record of the Minister himself. My question contained the names, the place of residence and all the details, and when putting my questions I have been careful to put the number of dependants of these people and the station in life occupied by them before they were put into custody and I also said that there was no other earning member in the family at all. It has really pained me to have that question from my honourable friend on the other side. I know that my friend is a lawyer and the spirit of a lawyer to cross-examine must have prompted him; but I really ask all those who live in this country with their eyes wide open to consider whether it is not a fact that there are a large number of these detenus still in custody and that no provision has at all been made for the maintenance of their dependants. It is a fact known to all that those who have been in custody—I mean the largest percentage of them—are not affluent but rather poor. They come from the poor bhadralok class. They were anyhow earning their livelihood by some means or other and if they had been free now-a-days, certainly they would have found some means to earn their livelihood and their families would not have been deprived of the means of subsistence. Therefore, it is only natural and human that any civilized administration should make provision for the maintenance of the dependants of these prisoners who have been placed in custody without any trial but only on information received by the State. I am not questioning the principle that some people ought to be detained during this emergency. At the same time there is the other side of the picture that if people are to be detained without any trial and without any chance being given to them to defend themselves openly in Court and if people are to be detained for the safety of the Empire and for reasons of the war, then it is only human that provision must be made for the payment of family allowances to these detenus and the dependants of these unfortunate people should not be allowed to die.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: Sir, in rising to support the resolution I would like to mention certain salient facts for the consideration of the Hon'ble the Home Minister. Sir, it is well-known that persons who were detained originally under section 26 of the Defence of India Rules, and who had the courage and audacity to challenge their detention in the High Court, with regard to most of them their detention was declared illegal. But the Government of Bengal immediately re-arrested them in the precincts of the High Court building under Regulation III of 1818. And they have been detained without any trial and without being informed by the Government of the charges that they wanted to bring against them. Now, Sir, the resolution provides that there should be study and examination allowances for those who are desirous of continuing their studies. It is well known that among those persons who were arrested there were many students who had brilliant careers in the University and who want, therefore, to further prosecute their studies. We also know of instances in which detenus who appeared at the examinations from inside the jail have shown very good results even though they were without much opportunity of studying which other students who were outside the jails had. I, therefore, submit that if you want to keep these men inside the jail, you ought to give them sufficient allowances to pursue their studies. Government consider that these men have been placed in a safe place and can do no harm as they are likely to do if they are outside the jail. In this view, Government is bound to provide amenities for continuing further studies to these people. Therefore, Sir, Professor Kabir's request should be a liability on the Government.

The next item refers to the transfer of security prisoners to a Calcutta jail on account of serious illness. We all know that in the mofussil there are not sufficient facilities for examination and treatment of serious diseases and we have been told that in many cases where even the jail authorities have recommended that persons under detention should be transferred to Calcutta that recommendation has not been complied with. It is therefore necessary that this Council should request the Government that persons who are suffering from serious diseases should be immediately transferred to a Calcutta jail. The third item requires that payment of family allowances should be increased at least to Rs. 20 for each dependant of a detenu. I need not dilate on this point because it has been dealt with by many of my colleagues. Clauses (d) and (e) also have been dealt with and I need not dilate upon them. I say that the facts disclosed by my friend Mr. Kamini Kumar Dutta, if true, would cast a serious aspersion on the present Government and it would be a shame on any Administration whether civilised or barbarous. If the statement made by Mr. Dutta that there are detenus whose allowance in the jail is not sufficient for their maintenance and that they have to depend for their maintenance inside the jail upon the charity of their relations is true, it is then very difficult to see how Government can justify this action on their part. I would, in this connection, refer to a provision in the Regulation III of 1818 which imposes a statutory liability upon the Government regarding the persons detained under Regulation III of 1818. I refer to clause 6 of Regulation III—it runs thus: "Every officer in whose custody any State prisoner may be placed, shall as soon after taking such prisoner into his custody as may be practicable, report to the Governor-General in Council whether the degree of confinement to which he may be subjected appears liable to injure his health" (I draw particular attention of the Hon'ble Home Minister to these words) "and whether the allowance fixed for his support be adequate to the supply of his own wants and those of his family, according to their rank in life."

May I ask the Hon'ble Home Minister whether he has considered the above provisions of Regulation III when he granted the allowances to those detenues who are detained under Regulation III? I admit that these provisions would not apply to persons detained under the Defence of India Rules. It has been held that these detenues have been detained illegally. But as they have no means to go up to the High Court and challenge their illegal detention, they are not as of right entitled to get the benefit of Regulation III prisoners. It is not any favour that the resolution asks for from the Hon'ble Home Minister. It is a statutory liability of Government that these persons should receive allowance to which they are entitled under Regulation III.

Mr. KRISHNA CHANDRA ROY CHOWDHURY: Sir, I shall be very brief. I am only concerned with the proposal relating to the family allowances of the detenues. I know of one particular case about which I wrote to Sir Nazimuddin more than once. I am referring to the case of Nobojati Barman, a labour leader, who was at one time a lieutenant of Mr. Suhrawardy in his quondam labour organisation in Calcutta. This man is now under detention. He was the only earning member of his family and is a Calcutta man. The family of this person is practically starving. I wrote to Sir Nazimuddin about this family but have not got any reply. It may be argued that Government have no money. My reply to that is—have not you thrown thousands and thousands of maunds of rice in the district of Jessore rotting there for want of transport facilities? And here the bona fide dependants of the only earning member who is under detention are starving and the question of money is raised. This is my concrete suggestion on the floor of this House—and it will please everybody to hear my suggestion. Let any member of the Council and a Parliamentary Secretary go and interview the applicants and their dependants and record their opinions as to whether the applications are bona fide and genuine and whether the families are really dependent on the persons under detention and then report the matter to Government regarding proper allowances.

Then, Sir, there is another case—one Chakraverti, son of a poor priest, who was a poor clerk in the office of the Bengal Telephone Corporation. He had no connection with revolutionary movements and was detained on mere suspicion. His father is a priest in Barisal. This man was under detention and after six months' petitioning and praying he was allowed an allowance of Rs. 20. Thank God, that he was released: I do not know through whom he was released. It may be Mr. Blair to whom I appealed. Let an independent man and not a police officer be sent to hold enquiry regarding the question of family allowance. Let him be given travelling allowance to go to mofussil districts and let that gentleman report as to the financial condition of the detenues' families and I will be satisfied.

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: Sir, one cannot accuse Mr. Humayun Kabir of being modest in his demand in this House; but today he himself admits having pitched his demand very low though the speech with which he moved his motion was in a very high key. But, Sir, I would ask the honourable members to consider why Mr. Kabir has pitched his demand so low. The reason is that all reasonable grievances of the security prisoners have been met and Mr. Kabir has therefore found very little to demand for them. Sir, recently I had been to two jails where these prisoners are detained and met the representatives of the security prisoners and heard what their grievances were. In the two jails—the Dacca Central Jail and the Rajshahi Central Jail—the security prisoners have demanded practically nothing. I shall mention the grievances which they themselves considered to be their maximum; but before I do so, I shall deal with the points that have been raised in the resolution.

The first is the question of study and examination allowances to those who are desirous of continuing their studies. This is the only question on which Government have not so far come to a decision. We have given permission to those who want to sit for the examinations. To give one instance: I may say that recently in the case of a convicted prisoner even—which is most unusual—I decided that permission should be given to him to sit for the examination. I think it is important from the point of view of the province that these people should be in a position to occupy a legitimate place in society when they come out of the jails and not again join the subversive organisations, to enable them to earn a living and become useful citizens of the province. I may mention here that before these people were released under the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Act in 1937-38, the then Government went in for various schemes for the training of the detenus so that the detenus may be enabled to earn a living when they are released and made free. (MR. HUMAYUN KABIR: What is the decision about fees?) Well, if the Government are satisfied, they may agree to pay examination fees.

Next, I come to the question of transfer to one of the Calcutta jails of persons suffering from serious diseases. Sir, this has been our practice. There is nothing new that Mr. Kabir has brought forward. Our practice is that whenever a doctor of any jail writes to us that in his opinion it is necessary for the security prisoner to be detained in a Calcutta Hospital, we always effect the transfer.

The unfortunate part of the thing is: that sometimes the persons whom we sent to hospitals in Calcutta for treatment took advantage of this opportunity and abused the privilege that was accorded to them. There have been several such cases. I have learnt of one security prisoner who has absconded from the hospital, and so it makes it very difficult for us to send to the hospital persons whom we consider to be really seriously ill but whom we cannot afford to let loose. Whenever we have been advised by the medical authority that it is a fit case for treatment in outside hospital, we have always sent such cases to such hospital. But if this privilege is abused, naturally we will have to be very cautious in making this allowance.

Most of the honourable members who have taken part in today's debate have harped on the question of allowances to the security prisoners. One of them reminded me of the promise I made at the time when I took office. May I remind these honourable members and those who have taken part in today's debate that this Government have been increasing the allowance of the security prisoners in certain cases by 100 per cent. and in certain other cases by 50 per cent., subject only to two conditions. I believe—I am speaking from memory—that allowances sanctioned prior to January, 1943, were increased by 100 per cent. and those sanctioned between January and March, 1943, have been increased by 50 per cent. Since then we have taken into account the standard of life and income of these persons and their allowances have been fixed on that scale. But as I said, these increases have been subject to two conditions and when these people break these conditions, then it causes all the trouble and all these complaints in the House. These two conditions are: firstly that if a person who is detained was earning less, or let me put it like this, that in no case the allowance will be more than what the man was earning at the time when he was taken into custody. If he was earning Rs. 20, then although he is entitled to a 100 per cent. increase he will not get more than Rs. 20; and in the case of those who were not earning anything at the time when they were detained we do not give any allowance at all, because the family of that person or the dependant of that person has not been deprived of anything by the action of Government. The person was not helping the family at all; on the other hand he was just a burden to it. (Interruptions.) I am surprised, Sir, that honourable members do not understand this simple point.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Das, your running comments must not continue.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, certain information is necessary from the Hon'ble the Home Minister and therefore it is necessary that I should ask for some information.

Mr. PRESIDENT: If that is so, then you may rise on a point of information, provided the Hon'ble Minister gives way. Running comments do not add to the dignity of the debate.

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: May I know what Mr. Das wants to know?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Yes, what is your point of information, Mr. Das?

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Is it the Hon'ble Minister's policy that nothing should be allowed to a detenu if at the time of his arrest he was not earning anything?

Mr. PRESIDENT: That is not a point of information; that is another comment.

Khan Bahadur Alhadj SHAIKH MUHAMMAD JAN: May I rise on a point of information, Sir? Is it the policy of the Hon'ble Minister that a detenu's allowance should not be increased to anything beyond what he was earning at the time of his arrest? In that case, how can that sum of Rs. 20 be at all sufficient in view of the fact that prices have gone up several times?

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: I do not know, Sir, what the honourable members mean. Do they mean to say that the employers in the shops and elsewhere have increased the wages of their assistants to the extent of the rise in the prices? It is extremely doubtful if they have done so. But I maintain that not to give any allowance to a detenu is a perfectly legitimate proposal as thereby we do not deprive the dependants of the detenu or security prisoner of any assistance which he was getting from the detenu and therefore there is no moral responsibility on the part of Government to provide anything for such a person, I mean, the dependants of such a person, because he was not helping the family and because his family was maintaining itself without his assistance. Actually the man was a burden on the family. But in extremely hard cases where we are satisfied that dependants are really suffering in spite of the fact that the man was not contributing anything towards the family income, we have gone out of our way and given small allowances of Rs. 10 or Rs. 15 as compassionate allowances under certain circumstances. When honourable members find that a person is getting one of these allowances of Rs. 10, or Rs. 15, I can assure them that the case comes under one of the categories—either he was not earning anything, or he was earning something like Rs. 10 or Rs. 15 at the time of his arrest.

Khan Bahadur Alhadj SHAIKH MUHAMMAD JAN: Sir, my point of information has not been answered.

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: If it is possible to reply to the Khan Bahadur, I will do so when I shall be replying to another point raised by Mr. Kabir's demand that the allowance to a dependant should be Rs. 20 per head. Sir, on this basis, a family containing 8 dependants would require Rs. 160 and a family containing 6 dependants Rs. 120. May I ask Mr. Kabir and Khan Bahadur Muhammad Jan as to how many men in Bengal earn Rs. 160 to Rs. 120 a month? What is the average income of a clerk in a municipal office and what is the average income of a shop assistant in Calcutta? Can it be maintained on that basis that we should provide an allowance on the scale recommended for those who are the dependants of security prisoners? There is another question, Sir. While Government are of opinion that when these persons are detained without trial their family should be assisted where there is really necessity for it, at the same time they feel that this facility should not be of such a nature as to do away with the deterrent character of the detention. One thing that makes a man on whom a certain number of persons depend for their living—a person whose earning maintains a family—one thing that keeps him away from these subversive activities is the realisation that his detention will cause his family to suffer and to starve. If he, on the other hand, thinks that his detention as a security prisoner will make no difference to the comfort and the standard of living of his family, then the deterrent factor is gone and there is nothing to prevent him from carrying on with his subversive activities. Therefore, I feel that while fixing the allowance, regard should be had to the fact that the dependants do not suffer or starve but that it should not be as comfortable as the person desires. I maintain that calculating the average earning capacity of the people of Bengal, I do not think there is any necessity for giving further increase. Taking the average income of a poor bhadralog class the allowance granted is 100 per cent. above that average income. Mr. Humayun Kabir shakes his head, but I can give him the statistics to show that it is hundred times better than the average income of the poor bhadralog class and the percentage of people getting Rs. 120 is very small—I am excluding professors and successful lawyers (Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: And not briefless barristers?) also bhadralog pleaders and advocates with faded chapkans and shabby coats. I am excluding them from that category.

Then, Sir, about arrangements for payment of these allowances. I have from time to time impressed upon our offices the necessity of remitting the allowances regularly. At one time in one of the districts I came to know that there was delay in the payment of allowances for several reasons which caused hardship. But as far as my present information goes, that hardship is no longer there. I have not received any complaint recently. It may be possible that when increased allowances are sanctioned there is some delay in getting the payment. Our instructions are that these allowances should be paid as quickly as possible and there should not be any undue delay.

Now, Sir, I would like to assure the honourable members of the Opposition and the honourable members of the House that the policy of the present Government is to remove all the legitimate grievances of the security prisoners. We realise that these people are detained without trial and as such they are entitled to certain considerations and our policy is to meet their demands as far as possible. But it is unfortunate that these people are detained for a long period with practically having nothing to do and naturally a very simple thing appears to them to be a serious matter. For example, when I visited the Dacca Jail, the chief grievance which was revealed after 70 days' correspondence was about clothes. Sir, the procedure which obtains is: that at the time of the delivery of new clothes the old ones should be surrendered to the jail authorities; but these prisoners claim that they should retain the old ones with them. That was their main and the most important grievance, as far as I could see. I came to know from the jail authorities that these people have accumulated large stocks of old clothes. However, I decided that the old clothes of the security prisoners would be kept in their account and at the time of their release the jail authorities would hand over those clothes to them. Since then it has been further settled that they can send those clothes to their houses to be kept there.

The demand of the security prisoners in the Rajshahi Central Jail was as regards the date of delivery of new clothes and the subsequent delivery dates. Sometimes there is delay in the supply of new clothes, and the prisoners claim that the date of delivery should be calculated not from the actual date of delivery but from the date on which the articles actually became due. Suppose, a pair of dhoties will be due after six months and if a pair be supplied to a prisoner on the 1st of March, the next pair would be due after six months, say, in September; but if the supply is not available in September but is actually delivered in October, then the next delivery would be according to them in February and not in March and so on. Now, Sir, this is the kind of grievances which the security prisoners put forward.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: On a point of information, Sir. May I know from the Hon'ble Minister whether this sort of security prisoners make the defence of India insecure? If that is so, why not release them?

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: I am afraid this kind of questions can only be expected from Mr. Das and nobody else.

However, Sir, we are trying our level best to see that the legitimate grievances are removed and they get a fair deal while they are under detention. At the same time, I would like to tell them through this House that the security prisoners must realise that as long as they are detained they are subject to the discipline under the Jail Code; if they do not observe the discipline we have got to take disciplinary action and drastic steps against them. Therefore, I am prepared to go to the utmost limit to meet the reasonable grievances of these persons, but I also expect from them observance of rules laid down by Government while they are under detention—

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: On a point of information, Sir. When the Hon'ble the Chief Minister visited the Dacca Central Jail, was it not brought to his notice by certain security prisoners that they were kept under detention in spite of the fact that they were definitely anti-fascist and that they were for the war effort? Do the Government contemplate the necessity of releasing such persons?

The Hon'ble Khawaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: Sir, I think the Rai Bahadur has missed an opportunity to move a resolution on the subject, so I ask him that if he does so, he will get his reply.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: I will never do it again.

Mr. HAMAYUN KABIR: Sir, in spite of the Hon'ble Sir Nazimuddin's assertion that I have pitched my speech in a high key, I maintain that I kept my tone as studiously moderate as I could. But I must confess, Sir, that some of the remarks which he has made do make one impatient, and it is with a good deal of effort, Sir, that I have to speak in the same studied and moderate tone. I do so because I want that these questions should be considered purely on merits without bringing in the element of passion which may easily come into a subject like this.

I will take up the last comments of the Hon'ble Home Minister first. He referred to the trivial demands, as he put it, of the security prisoners in Dacca and Rajshahi, and dilated upon the triviality of the character of these demands. I am afraid, Sir, that he missed the tragic implication of their seemingly trivial demands. Of course, there are reasons why they did not put forward their other serious grievances. It is because they have been disappointed in their hopes. They felt that the Hon'ble Home Minister, as the custodian of the law that is in being today, would pay no attention to their more serious grievances. They felt also that the Hon'ble Home Minister, even if he had the desire, had not the power to do anything for them. Since they were quite conscious that he did not have the power to do anything even if he wished, they did not trouble him by raising questions which would only prick his conscience without in any way allowing him to meet their demands. Therefore, when the security prisoners demanded that their old clothes should be sent to their families and not returned to the Government, I could see what the implication of their demand was. Any man with the slightest imagination could have seen the real reason why these political prisoners wanted that their old and torn clothes should be kept apart for their families. It is the simple fact that these prisoners knew that their families, their brothers and their sisters, their parents and their children were practically half naked. They knew very well that if their tattered clothes which had already been used in the jail for six months or more could be sent to their families, it would be a great relief.

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: On a point of personal explanation, Sir. It is not the security prisoners who wanted that their clothes should be sent to their families, but it is we who made this arrangement.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: In any case, the position is that they wanted their torn clothes for their families. They thought that there would at least be some clothes for dependants who were with tattered clothes only or with no clothes at all. I do not think, Sir, that the demand was quite as trivial or insignificant as the Hon'ble Home Minister has tried to suggest.

Then, Sir, with regard to the demand from the Rajshahi prisoners. Their contention was that the supply of their clothings should date not from the date of the delivery but from the date on which they were actually due. I can only say that they are standing on their rights. They are insisting on the few privileges still left to them. I would like to ask the Hon'ble the Home Minister what he would do if a sum that is due to him on a particular day is not delivered on that day but after a considerably long period. Would he volunteer to give up the interest and the accumulated sums that might accrue? Whatever is due, whether it be clothes or money, it is due on a definite date. Members of the House who have dealings in such matters will perhaps agree that in doing so the Rajshahi prisoners were simply standing on their rights.

If these prisoners did not discuss with the Home Minister any serious grievances of theirs it is because—as I have suggested a moment ago—they thought that the Home Minister would not consider their point of view or because they took pity on the Home Minister in his task,—Home Minister under a regime where after all he is not a free agent, where very often he has to carry out orders from elsewhere, where if he wanted to exhibit any independence, that independence would not be tolerated,—and they therefore spared him. It is presumably for this reason that they did not place their serious problems before him. And I would submit that the Home Minister should not build up his case on this. He should rather build up his case from the human point of view.

Sir, at the very outset I would point out one thing. I have not claimed their release, for I hold that they are prisoners of war. As long as the issue between England and India is not settled, the question of their release is premature. From that point of view, I have not pressed for their release for a single moment. But I do hold that when they are detained without any trial whatsoever, it is the duty of a Government which pretends to call itself civilised, to see that they are maintained in a proper standard of life. The Hon'ble the Home Minister refers to two general principles which he has followed in the matter of granting or enhancing the allowances of these detenus or political prisoners. He has probably missed what I said at the very outset. At the outset I admitted that the present Government had made certain increases in the rates of allowances. But what I wanted to know was what was the actual net amount. If a man is getting one rupee and you give him five or ten, it is a 500 per cent. or 1,000 per cent. increase, but can a man live on five rupees per month? It is no use whatsoever to say that I have given a 100 per cent., a 500 per cent., a 1,000 per cent. increase. That is not the point. The point is the actual amount. Is that amount sufficient in the conditions obtaining in Bengal at the present moment? Is that adequate? That is the only test which I want him to keep in mind—not the percentage of increase but what is the actual amount. I have given him more than one case where I know that the allowance sanctioned is not sufficient for the purpose. The allowance they have given is considerably less than the price of one maund of rice in the open market. Even now in many parts of Bengal rice is scarce except at Rs. 20 a maund.

Sir, the Hon'ble Minister has raised other points, viz., that the allowance paid should not be more than the amount that the detenu was earning at the time when he was taken in; and secondly, that in no case should an allowance be given to a detenu if at the time of his arrest he was not earning anything. I will take his first point first. At the outset, I made it quite clear to the Hon'ble Minister that prices of articles have increased by 300 to 400 per cent. The cost of living has increased at least fourfold. I do not know if the Hon'ble the Home Minister of the Government of Bengal has not yet found any difficulty with his domestic servants. Of course, the Home Minister can compel their attendance but apart from the Home Minister and a few other privileged persons of that type, every normal person in Bengal today finds that any sort of service has to be paid for at rates which are considerably more than what they were a year ago. The Home Minister has also referred to the pay of shop assistants and clerks. Sir, I for one have never defended low wages. It will probably be remembered that in a Bill I brought in, I sought to provide that no domestic servant would be paid a wage of less than Rs. 10 after his food has been provided. I suggested Rs. 10 and food in the case of juveniles and Rs. 18 plus food in the case of adults. We have also attempted to the best of our abilities to increase the minimum pay and allowance of shop assistants. If the Hon'ble Minister agrees, it would be a great pleasure to me to find that nobody in the employment of the public receives less than Rs. 50 per month. With regard to menials, I hope the Hon'ble Minister will remember that for the menials, the inferior servants of Government, we have tried to increase the monthly pay to Rs. 30. We hold that it should be Rs. 30, if not more.

The suggestion that because the clerks get less, the detenus should also get less is palpably untenable. To say that they would not get more than what they used to get at the time of detention is also unjustified and cannot be maintained. You cannot justify one wrong by another wrong. The menials and the inferior clerks of the bhadrolog class are suffering great hardships today. Because they are so ill-paid, corruption obtains in the different departments. In the commercial world and in the different avocations of life, these poor people are compelled to resort to unfair means in order to supplement their meagre income. All corruption is thus finally due to the meagre income which is prevailing in these hard days. But, Sir, consideration of this point would take me too far wide of today's subject. I will come back to the particular issues raised by the Government. The Hon'ble Minister said that a person is given what he was drawing at the time of his detention. But what guarantee is there that he would not have earned more now? Many are earning more—why not the detenus? What guarantee is there that a detenu would not have in the present conditions earned more? Government have taken him away from his normal avocation of life and shut him away from all these opportunities and without any legal justification. I maintain, Sir, in spite of what Government may say, so far as these detenus are concerned, apart from the persons who were convicted by law after having been found guilty, they are persons whom the Government have illegally detained. Reference has rightly been made by one of the speakers that these detenus could not appeal against their detention under rule 26 of the Defence of India Rules and have the same declared invalid by the High Court for want of money. They are too poor to meet the cost. For want of money they could not come up to the High Court in order to get the benefit of Regulation III of 1818. If they had come under Regulation III, the rate of their allowance would have been somewhat higher. The position is that the income of persons outside detention is not directly the concern of Government. Persons outside can augment their income to meet the colossal increase in the cost of living. In the case of detenus and political prisoners, they have been denied the right of earning their livelihood. Therefore, the onus is on the Government to increase the allowances proportionately to the increase in the cost of living. If they do not do so, the implication would be that Government's policy is to starve the families of these persons detained without trial. Government should make their position in this respect clear once for all. The Hon'ble Home Minister cannot have it both ways. He cannot say that he sympathises with the sufferings of these political prisoners and also say that he wants detention to be punitive and not merely preventive. He said he would limit the allowance to the minimum and not provide for luxury. It is known to everybody and even to the Ministers that Rs. 20 would not allow of any luxury to an individual in the year 1944. Many of the members and Hon'ble Ministers of this House spend Rs. 20 or more a day on cigarettes. If the Hon'ble Minister thinks that Rs. 20 would give luxury to the families of the detenus, I think he is living in a world of his own phantasy.

The second point the Hon'ble Minister raised was that the man who did not earn anything at the time of his arrest should not be given any allowance. The Hon'ble the Home Minister was pleased in certain cases to depart from that principle. Here, I would remind the Hon'ble Minister of cases where people who did not earn anything before but are now earning considerable sums. I would ask the Home Minister to remember the position about, say, 17 or 18 years ago, before 1926 or 1927, and the position thereafter. Perhaps the members of the family of the Home Minister himself gave up his case—

MR. PRESIDENT: Mr. Kabir, I would request you to avoid personal references.

MR. HUMAYUN KABIR: All right, Sir, I will speak generally. There have been briefless barristers or briefless pleaders who have earned nothing whatever up to a particular time and afterwards, they have earned large sums and even become leaders of the Bar. There have been persons who were hopeless beckars (unemployed), who were the never-do-weels and could not therefore contribute anything to thier family, but afterwards developed to be leaders in trades and professions. There are instances of this in the history of other countries as well. How then can the Hon'ble the Home Minister arrogate to himself the power of the Almighty and predict that because a person or persons were never-do-weels at the time of arrest, they would not be able to earn anything afterwards? The boys of whom the Home Minister is speaking might have been earning a lot in trade, commerce or industries today. They might have been successful businessmen in different spheres of life. I think, Sir, the Hon'ble the Home Minister is not justified when he says that simply because at the time of arrest some persons were not earning, they would be earning nothing now.

MR. PRESIDENT: Mr. Kabir, how long will you take to finish your speech?

MR. HUMAYUN KABIR: I shall take at least 10 minutes more.

MR. PRESIDENT: You spoke for 30 minutes at the time of moving the resolution, and you have already spoken for 15 minutes now. Please try to finish as quickly as possible.

MR. HUMAYUN KABIR: All right, Sir, I shall try to finish as quickly as possible. I want to ask the Hon'ble the Home Minister why he does not accept this resolution on the floor of this House. I ask why does he want to make a discrimination between one class of prisoners and another. He wants to give allowances to persons who have been earning something but he does not want to give anything to the persons who had not been earning anything before. It is dangerous to introduce discrimination of this type. I find, Sir, the Hon'ble the Home Minister is having a conversation in which the Leader of the House is taking part. The Leader of the House is neither attending to his own duties nor allowing the Hon'ble the Home Minister to attend to his.

As I was saying, if the Hon'ble Minister wants to introduce this sort of discrimination it would be dangerous. There would be suspicion in the public mind that Government is making a distinction between one class of political prisoners and another, between one group of prisoners and another group. These people have different political affiliations, different political traditions and different political bias, and it would be dangerous not only for the Government itself but also for the future political life of the province to discriminate between them.

The Hon'ble the Home Minister has spoken a great deal as to what he would do with regard to the study and examination allowances. He benefited us by his opinion that it is desirable that such prisoners should be helped to become useful members of society by getting higher education. I entirely agree with him. He also told us that the Government of 1937 went to great lengths in order to provide them with opportunities of becoming useful members of society. Now, Sir, I only ask that what the Government of 1937 did should serve as an example to him in this respect at least. The 1937 Government were prepared to consider the cases of the detenus and political prisoners and give them study and examination allowances and also to try to absorb them in different types of productive industrialism. It is up to the present Government to do at least as much. In fact, they should do more than the previous Government and prove that the present Government is really a popular Government. Instead of doing so, the Hon'ble Home Minister simply tells us that the matter is under consideration. If after his admission that such prisoners should be given every possible opportunity of being re-absorbed in society as useful members he is still not prepared to give them even these slight concessions, then how can he expect that the process of their re-absorption in society will be facilitated?

Then, Sir, there was one other point to which the Hon'ble Home Minister referred towards the end of his speech. He threatened that drastic action should be taken against the detenus if they did not observe the Jail Code. I submit, Sir, that this threat was quite unnecessary. These prisoners know quite well that they are under the Jail Code and that all the might of the British Empire is behind the Home Minister. [Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: (Whispered.) Sir, he is not finishing yet.]

Mr. PRESIDENT: I hope you will conclude now.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: I have almost finished. May I also submit, Sir, that it breaks up one's trend of thought if one is interrupted too often.

Mr. Hamidul Huq Chowdhury has not taken upon himself the task of reminding on your behalf. You are quite able to take care of yourself.

Now, Sir, as I was saying, the threat on the part of Government was quite unnecessary. These people know quite well that Government can take any action, if they desire, against them. I do not know, Sir, if it was an unfortunate coincidence that when Sir Nazimuddin assumed office, there was a lathi charge in one of the jails in Calcutta. It may be a mere coincidence but it may also have something to do with the attitude of the Home Minister revealed today. When the Hon'ble Home Minister threatens drastic action against prisoners, I may tell him that these political prisoners are either persons whom the Government suspected of actual political action—they have no definite proof against them—or they are persons whom Government thought capable of such political action. Since Government are not infallible, I think that there are at least some persons who do not come under either of these categories. These are persons who have neither taken any political action nor are they desirous of any such political action. On any calculation, a large percentage of those who have been arrested are bound to be quite innocent of the charges which Government have seen fit to level against them.

Mr. MESBAHUDDIN AHMED: Sir, the time is up.

Mr. PRESIDENT: There is no such thing as time today.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: I quite understand the discomfort of Mr. Mesbahuddin Ahmed and I also understand the discomfort of the honourable members opposite. If Mr. Mesbahuddin Ahmed would pay a visit to a jail as His Majesty's guest there for six months or more, then only will he feel a little more sympathy towards these political prisoners.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Does the Home Minister wish to reply to the speech of Mr. Kabir?

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: No, Sir.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is:—

That this Council is of opinion that the Government should immediately take the following steps for meeting the grievances of persons detained without any trial either under section 26 of the Defence of India Rules or Regulation III of 1818, viz.:—

- (a) provision of study and examination allowances to those who are desirous of continuing their studies;
- (b) transfer to one of the Calcutta jails of persons suffering from serious diseases;
- (c) improvement in the terms of payment of family allowances providing a minimum of at least Rs. 20 for each dependant of the detenu;
- (d) expedition in the despatch of applications for family allowances or increment thereof;

(e) arrangement for the rapid payment of such allowances once the allowances are sanctioned.

BENGAL LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL DEBATES

First Session, 1944—No. 21.

THE COUNCIL met in the Legislative Chamber of the Legislative Building, Calcutta, on Monday, the 13th March, 1944, at 1 p.m., being the twenty-first sitting of the First Session of 1944, pursuant to section 62(2)(a) of the Government of India Act, 1935.

Mr. President (the Hon'ble Sir BHOY PRASAD SINGH ROY, K.C.I.E.) was in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Debt Settlement Board.

87. Mr. NAGENDRA NATH MOHOLANABISH: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Co-operative Credit and Rural Indebtedness Department be pleased to state—

- (a) whether the Government propose to dissolve the Debt Settlement Boards which are still functioning in view of the relief that the debtors may have under the Bengal Money-Lenders Act;
- (b) if not, how long more the Government intend the Debt Settlement Boards to function?

Mr. BIREN ROY, PARLIAMENTARY SECRETARY (on behalf of the Minister in charge of the Co-operative Credit and Rural Indebtedness Department): (a) No, as agriculturist debtors are likely to get more relief under the Bengal Agricultural Debtors Act than under the Bengal Money-Lenders Act.

(b) The Debt Settlement Boards will continue to function till the disposal of the applications made to them.

Mr. NAGENDRA NATH MOHOLANABISH: Was not the original Act intended to function for only 5 years?

Mr. BIREN ROY: That was so, but unless and until all the cases are disposed of and the utility of the Debt Settlement Board ceases, the boards are not going to be dissolved.

Mr. NAGENDRA NATH MOHOLANABISH: Does that relate only to pending cases or for future applications also?

Mr. BIREN ROY: For future applications also.

Railway Accident in Dacca Mail.

87A. Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Communications and Works Department be pleased to state whether it is a fact that at dawn on the 5th March, 1944, there was an accident in the Dacca Mail between Bagoola and Aranghata stations on the Bengal and Assam Railway about 58 miles from Calcutta resulting in injuries to several persons?

(b) In this accident how many were injured? Of them, how many are women? Was there any death so far? Are the injuries serious? What were the injuries due to?

(c) Do the Government propose to move proper authorities to cause a sifting inquiry into the whole affair as speedily as possible and publish the report thereof?

MINISTER in charge of the COMMUNICATIONS and WORKS DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Mr. BARADA PROSANNA PAIN): (a) Yes.

(b) Eighteen persons are reported to have been injured, of whom 9 are women. One of the injured persons died in the Campbell Medical Hospital. Six persons are said to have sustained serious injuries, including the person who died in the Campbell Medical Hospital. The passengers are said to have received the injuries by jumping in a panicky state out of the coaches which caught fire and which then unfortunately stood on a culvert at the point where the train was brought to a stand. The cause of the accident is under investigation.

(c) A railway departmental enquiry which will also be attended by the Government Inspector of Railways has been already arranged by the Bengal and Assam Railway administration.

Mr. NAGENDRA NATH MOHOLANABISH: Is it not a fact that this accident was mainly due to want of light in the train?

The Hon'ble Mr. BARADA PROSANNA PAIN: That is more than I can say.

Point of privilege.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, before I seek your permission to move the adjournment motion that stands in my name I rise on a point of privilege and a point of order too. Sir, on the last occasion, i.e., on Monday last I sought leave to move an adjournment motion regarding the non-availability of rice in the open market in various parts of Bengal at controlled rates. The Minister for Civil Supplies, the Hon'ble Mr. Suhrawardy, stood up saying that the motion was not based on facts and that it was prejudicial—

Mr. PRESIDENT: What is your point of order? You should come to it at once. You are not expected to make a speech on your point of order.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, this report has already been published in various newspapers of Calcutta, it is bound to create a prejudicial impression against me. When the Hon'ble Supply Minister was confronted with the original copy of the Calcutta Gazette—

Mr. PRESIDENT: That is not a point of order.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, the Hon'ble Supply Minister said that my motion was not based on facts, but I showed to you the supplementary gazette and the very language which I quoted in my motion but yet I was not allowed to move my motion on the 10th. The Hon'ble Minister said something in favour of his contention——

Mr. PRESIDENT: It is no use discussing the matter in the absence of the Hon'ble Minister, because no one can reply on his behalf.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Then when he comes will you please allow me to raise the question at that time?

Mr. PRESIDENT: But what is your point of privilege?

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, the point is that the Hon'ble Minister should withdraw his statement that my motion was prejudicial and that it is not based on facts and all that. As a matter of fact, Sir, my motion was based on facts supported by the official document, and my motive was not to do any injury to the Government. This is my point, Sir.

Mr. PRESIDENT: But I must go through the Hon'ble Mr. Suhrawardy's speech of that day before I express any opinion on the subject. What he actually said I must go through, and if I find there was anything which affected your privilege as a member of this House, then you can make your motion, and not otherwise.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Thank you, Sir.

Adjournment motion.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, I ask the leave of the Chair to move the following adjournment motion that stands in my name:—

“That this Council do adjourn its business to discuss a definite matter of urgent public importance, namely, the failure of the Government of Bengal to requisition wagons from the Central Government to remove paddy from the various railway stations of Jessore, such as Gadkhali, Navaran, Banapole, etc., in time as stated by the Railway Member of His Excellency the Governor-General in the Central Assembly in reply to a question.”

Sir, this motion is based on——

Mr. PRESIDENT: What is your ground in support of this motion?

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: The matter relates to the accumulation of a huge quantity of paddy in certain stations in the district of Jessore, which was not removed in time for distribution to the people of the locality where during the last famine thousands of men were dying for want of rice. We have been told in season and out of season that paddy could not be removed for want of wagons and with regard to this particular matter fault was definitely found with the Central Government. Sir, in reply to a question of Mr. Khitish Chandra Neogy in the Central Assembly the Railway Member of the Government of India stated that the movement of foodgrains in Bengal was arranged in accordance with the programme prepared by the Bengal Government and this paddy was not included in these programmes.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Mazumdar, will you kindly make out how the motion is urgent and also how it is a definite matter of public importance?

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: All right, Sir. The removal of paddy from certain stations is involved here; therefore it is definite: there is no doubt about it. As regards the urgency, owing to famine the removal of paddy and distribution thereof among the people is certainly an urgent matter.

Mr. PRESIDENT: But when did it happen? So far as I can make out it happened a long time ago.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: It happened some time ago, Sir, but its results are still continuing.

Mr. PRESIDENT: When did it happen? The reply of the Hon'ble Railway Member that you have quoted refers to an incident that happened several months back.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: May be, Sir; but it shows the failure of the Bengal Government to requisition wagons for removal of paddy which was useful for the protection of the lives of the people.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Mazumdar, please take your seat. I have understood your point. I do not consider that it is a definite matter or a matter of urgent public importance. I therefore refuse my consent to your motion.

The Bengal Finance (Sales Tax) Amendment Bill, 1944, as passed by the Assembly.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The next item on the Order Paper is the Bengal Finance Sales Tax Bill, Hon'ble Mr. Goswami.

The Hon'ble Mr. TULSI CHANDRA GOSWAMI: Mr. President, I beg to move that the Bengal Finance (Sales Tax) Amendment Bill, 1944, as passed by the Bengal Legislative Assembly, be taken into consideration.

Sir, it is less than a month ago since I presented the budget estimates for 1944-45. In those estimates I anticipated a deficit of $7\frac{1}{2}$ crores on revenue account and I have told the House that our indebtedness on the 31st March, 1945, would be $17\frac{1}{2}$ crores. Since I presented the budget estimates we have been told that the Government of India will grant a subvention of Rs. 3 crores and Rs. $1\frac{1}{2}$ crores towards the cost of our expenditure on famine relief in the years, 1943-44 and 1944-45 respectively.

The receipt of subventions will reduce the anticipated deficit in 1944-45 to 6 crores and our indebtedness on 31st March, 1945, by $4\frac{1}{2}$ crores, thus bringing it to 13 crores. Against this background it will, I feel, not be necessary for me to labour our need for additional revenue. #

I shall now turn to the Bill itself. The provisions of the Bill are briefly—

- (1) to double the rate of the tax;
- (2) to make a consequential increase in the deduction admissible under clause (b) of sub-section (2) of section 5; and
- (3) to make an important addition to the Schedule of tax-free goods.

I shall deal with the last of these provisions first. In the Statement of Objects and Reasons I have claimed that the only necessity of life not already included in the Schedule of tax-free goods is "the poor man's cloth". It is true that handloom woven cloth is already exempt, but the bulk of the cloth used by the poorest sections of the community is the cheapest kind of machine-made cloth. In order that the proposed enhancement of the rate may not throw any additional burden on the poorer classes, it is proposed to substitute for the existing item 16 of the Schedule an entry by virtue of which all dhutis, lungis and sarees, whether handloom woven or machine-made, the price of which does not exceed amounts to be fixed by the Provincial Government, shall be exempt. Even when doubled, the rate of tax will amount to only 3 per cent. By comparison with the rate of sales-tax in force elsewhere, this is most moderate; and, taken in conjunction with the very comprehensive exemptions, will not, I am satisfied, cause hardship. The provisions in (b) of clause 2 of the Bill require a word of explanation. Most dealers exhibit the tax separately in their bills: but this is not obligatory and whether the tax is shown separately or included in the price quoted by the dealer, in law the total of a dealer's bill is the "sale-price" or the price which the dealer charges for the article. The tax payable by a dealer to Government is calculated on his turnover—the aggregate of the sale-prices received by him—and if we are to avoid taxing the dealer on that portion of his takings that represent his collection of the tax, it is clear that in determining his taxable turnover we have to allow him some deduction. When the rate of tax is one quarter anna in the rupee, a deduction of one per cent. is really insufficient for this purpose and dealers are in fact required to find 1·6 pices out of the Rs. 1-8-9 that Government collect from him on every Rs. 100 of his turnover. If the tax is raised to one-half anna in the rupee, it will be necessary to raise the deduction admissible under clause (b) of section 5(2) to 3 per cent. Even with this deduction, the dealer will still be required to find ·18 of a pie of the Rs. 3-0-6 that Government will collect on every Rs. 100 of his turnover.

At this stage, Sir, I do not propose to make general observations on the principle of the Bill itself.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Motion moved: that the Bengal Finance (Sales Tax) Amendment Bill, 1944, as passed by the Bengal Legislative Assembly, be taken into consideration.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, I beg to move that the Bengal Finance (Sales Tax) Amendment Bill, 1944, be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinion thereon by the 31st December, 1944.

Sir, when the Bengal Finance Sales Tax Bill was originally passed at the rate of one pice per rupee on the sales turnover, Government on the basis of the existing prices then prevailing expected certain amount of revenue which would enable them to spend more liberally on the nation-building departments such as the spread of compulsory primary education, enlargement and improvement of village sanitation, establishment of dispensaries and a net work of hospitals all over the province and the alike. But, Sir, just after the Finance Sales Tax was passed, prices of commodities went up by 300 to 400 per cent. which means that Government instead of getting the estimated revenue got out of that tax about 3 or 4 times more. Sir, so far as that point is concerned, Government has not given us any very good explanation as to what they have done with the unexpectedly increased revenue which they derived from this taxation owing to circumstances due to war. Therefore, Sir, I feel that before we agree to give to the Government a free hand in the matter of doubling this tax—which means 6 to 8 times more than what it would have been in normal times—as proposed in this Bill, it must be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinion thereon, so that both consumers and the businessmen who are concerned vitally, may be able to give their verdict on its provisions one way or the other. I do not say for a moment that Government should not raise the revenue required for carrying on the administration but certainly those who are asked to pay must be given an opportunity of giving their verdict on the subject. Besides public opinion will also clarify the issue as to how far the sales tax has affected business and the businessmen and how far it has affected the consumer in not getting their necessities of life which owing to the heavy tax they might have had to forego. Further, in this abnormal time an abnormal procedure should have been adopted for raising the revenue, not by levying heavier taxes on the already distressed people of Bengal but by means of loans, subventions and other abnormal methods. It is not possible for any country in the world during the war to make both ends meet simply by raising taxation. For all these reasons, I feel that before we, the representatives of the people, give our consent to such a taxation measure, we must be forearmed by the opinion of the public who are directly and vitally concerned with this tax. In view of the extended life of the Assembly, a taxation proposal of this kind should first go to the people for their consideration and for their opinion before it is passed. This should be the policy of the Government. This Bill, I repeat, should be placed before the public for their careful consideration.

With these remarks, I move my motion that the Bill be circulated for eliciting opinion.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Motion moved: That the Bill be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinion thereon by the 31st December, 1944.

Mr. Das, I would suggest that all the motions be first moved. Because, only the dates are different but the motions are the same. So, you may move your motion.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Mr. President, Sir, I beg to move that the Bill be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinion thereon by the 30th September, 1944.

Sir, my motion is identical with the motion that was moved by Mr. Haridas Mazumdar with a difference in date only in collecting the opinion to be gathered from the public on this Bill. Sir, the Hon'ble Finance Minister in moving for taking this Bill into consideration referred to the fact that the Bengal Government is in great deficit this year and will be so also next year to the extent of 17 crores and 46 lakhs. It is undoubtedly so. I think, Sir, that the Government of Bengal in its anxiety to please the Government of India have undertaken this course of doubling the Bengal Finance Sales Tax so that a handsome subvention may be forthcoming from that source to meet the deficit. But I say, Sir, that instead of taking this course, the Government of Bengal should have advanced other cogent reasons why they urgently stand in need of such subvention and why they want help from the Government of India. In fact, the deficit that has been created has been largely due to Extraordinary Charges in India and Famine. The Extraordinary Charges include expenses under the "Civil Defence". I hardly find any distinction between Military and the Civil Defence, and as "Defence" is a Central subject, the whole cost of the Civil Defence should be borne by the Government of India. With respect to Famine also, I venture to say that the responsibility rests, in a large measure, with the Government of India. If we really look to the facts, we find that if the Government of India would pay all the costs that were necessitated for meeting the Extraordinary Charges in India, and of famine, there would hardly be any deficit and there would hardly be any cause for the Government of Bengal to go to the length of doubling the Bengal Finance Sales Tax. There would hardly be any necessity also of another taxation Bill, namely, the Agricultural Income-tax Bill. In fact, Sir, the famine has so affected the conditions of the vast majority of the people in Bengal that it behoves the popular Minister to see that the public willingly come forward to support this Bill, and for this purpose, the only course left open for the Government would be to circulate the Bill for the purpose of eliciting public opinion thereon; and if they get public support for this Bill, then and then only they should proceed with the Bill and double the tax, otherwise not. There is another reason which I urge and it is that taxation, as the Hon'ble Finance Minister observed on another occasion, is certainly an engine of national and social policy. Whatever is raised by the Sales tax should be utilised for the welfare of the people. But, here whatever would be raised by this tax will go only to grease the administrative machinery and hardly anything will go for advancing the welfare of the people. Therefore, I say that before taking upon himself the responsibility of getting on with this Bill the popular Minister should arm himself with the opinion of the people. With these words, Sir, I move that this Bill be circulated for the purpose of eliciting public opinion thereon.

Mr. M. R. JAIPURIA spoke in Hindi.

Alhadj Khan Bahadur SHAIKH MUHAMMAD JAN: Sir, I support the amendment moved by my friend Mr. Haridas Mazumdar, that the Bill be circulated for eliciting opinion thereon by the 31st December, 1944. Sir, in my humble opinion this Finance Sales Tax Bill is illegal. The original Bill was passed on the understanding that money accruing therefrom would be used for the nation-building departments, namely, Education, Sanitation and other nation-building schemes; but this amending Bill has been introduced for the purpose of meeting a deficit. I do not know what is the Government's reaction to the different amendments moved by my friends for circulation; but if they accept any one of them, they would be able to understand the opinion of the public and public bodies on their proposal to increase the tax on sales of commodities. As this is a matter which concerns all the people, therefore the opinion of the people is very necessary.

*An authorised English translation of this Hindi speech will be found incorporated as Appendix to the debates of this session.

In my humble opinion the Government should on no account oppose this or the other amendment asking for circulation of the Bill, if their Bill is based on strong unassailable grounds. Their refusal will only mean that they are afraid of hostile public opinion and therefore want to pass this Bill here and now.

I hope Government will refrain from taking this unwise step. They should either accept this simple amendment or drop the Bill if they are afraid that public opinion is not in favour of the Bill.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: May I move my amendment, Sir?

Mr. PRESIDENT: No. I called your name but you were not here then. But you can speak on the amendment that has been moved.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: All right, Sir. I beg to support the amendment moved by my friend Mr. Lalit Chandra Das that the Bill be circulated for the purpose of eliciting public opinion thereon by 30th September, 1944. The motion of which I gave notice also aimed that the Bill should be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinion thereon; but I had suggested a shorter period than 30th September, namely, 31st March, so that it would give Government an opportunity of proceeding with the Bill, if they so desired, even during the current session. I am, however, convinced in view of the argument advanced that this Bill should not be hurried through this House without taking public opinion on it. It is a taxation measure. In order to understand this taxation measure, we must take into consideration the background against which this taxation proposal has been brought forward. We had it from the Hon'ble Finance Minister, and also from the original statement of Objects and Reasons for the Bill when it was moved in another place, that this Bill was necessary in order to make up the deficit from which the province is suffering, and that it is for this purpose and this purpose alone that Government intend to carry through this Bill during the current session. In considering this deficit, I would ask the Hon'ble Finance Minister and others to consider two factors—(1) the magnitude and causes of this deficit and (2) the conditions which obtain today in this province.

Now, Sir, let us consider the magnitude and causes of this deficit. I think every member in this House will agree that the magnitude is so vast that mere tinkering measures like this Bill will not meet this deficit. They will not make up a fraction of the huge deficit with which the province is faced today. In reply to this it may be said that if it lightens the amount of deficit, well, that also is all to the good. But I would ask the Hon'ble Finance Minister to consider that if the actual burden of the debt is not met, what is the purpose in merely irritating the people by fresh burdens of taxation? Then, Sir, there is the consideration of the reasons on account of which this deficit has been caused. I will not here go into the question of extravagance and undue expenditure—though this charge has been made here and elsewhere—in dealing with the situation. I will not go into the question whether the money has been ill or well spent—I will not go into that question at all. I will take it that this amount has been spent. But what are the main causes? Why has it been spent? Every one will agree that it is due to the fact that war conditions are obtaining in this province. As a matter of fact, most of the deficit of the province arises out of war conditions. The famine is directly the result of the war which has almost destroyed the economy of the province. I will not go into this question in detail now because this question was discussed many times last year. After all other causes have been considered, one fundamental fact remains that but for the war and but for the effects of the war, this famine could not have taken either the shape or the magnitude which it has actually taken.

Many of the other items in the expenditure of the province are also due to this war emergency. Many of the services which have been created are due to war conditions. Sir, expenditure due to the war is not the primary concern of the Provincial Exchequer, nor even the primary concern of the India Government. Therefore, Sir, I would submit to the Hon'ble the Finance Minister that instead of imposing this fresh tax upon the already-harassed people, he should direct his attention to a different direction or to a different quarter. We have been told that an appeal for subvention has been made to the Centre but that the response from that quarter is not sufficient or adequate. The Centre has promised something to the extent of Rs. 3 crores, if I am not mistaken (the Hon'ble Mr. TULSI CHANDRA GOSWAMI: Rs. 4½ crores) Rs. 4½ crores, to the help of the Provincial revenue. But I would like the Hon'ble the Finance Minister to press that the entire amount which has been incurred as expenditure in connection with the war and its after-effects should be obtained either from the Centre or from the Government of the United Kingdom. If the Government is prepared to take up that step, namely, to ask for this amount from the Centre and the Government of the United Kingdom, then the whole House will be behind the Hon'ble the Finance Minister. The Opposition as well as the supporters of Government are agreed on this matter. Even for that purpose, I would think that it is desirable that this Bill should be circulated for eliciting public opinion thereon. It is certain that public opinion would declare itself emphatically that this amount should be obtained from the Centre or from the Government of the United Kingdom. The different responsible bodies of Bengal, if they are consulted, would also suggest to the Hon'ble the Finance Minister that instead of imposing this fresh tax upon the people of the land, he should ask for subvention from the Centre or from the resources of the United Kingdom. Sir, I have deliberately not entered upon the question whether the deficit incurred has been well-used or ill-used. For the money incurred in connection with war expenditure, expenses which are directly attributable to the war, the Hon'ble Minister should persuade the Government to make an appeal not to the harassed people of Bengal, but to the Centre or to the authorities of the United Kingdom.

There is a second consideration for which the Bill must be circulated. The poorer people would be affected by this Bill generally. No doubt the Hon'ble the Finance Minister and his supporters would say that this Bill is not going to touch the poor at all. He would no doubt give an assurance to that effect, but we have heard many assurances in the past. There is no doubt that a large proportion of the population is going to be hard hit. This new tax which is spread in its incidence over practically the whole of the population of the Province cannot be so arranged that it will affect only the pockets of the rich and not the pockets of the poor. Sir, this sort of assurance was given on the occasion when the Bill was first introduced, when also we were told that it would be the shop-keepers and shop-owners, the traders who would bear the burden of the tax. At that time also we were told that the public would not be required to pay anything, and that even if the public were required to pay anything, that would be very small. But we all know what actually happened, namely, that the tradesmen passed on the tax to us entirely. The consumers and the customers were taxed as was evident from the cash memos, and other receipts issued by the shops. So the entire burden has fallen upon the people. I submit that people are far less able to bear the burden of the tax today than they were at the time of the first introduction of this tax. At that time also, we were opposed to this Bill and said that unless the money was ear-marked—

(The Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja Shahabuddin was crossing the floor.)

MR. PRESIDENT: Order, order. The Hon'ble Minister must not cross the floor.

MR. HUMAYUN KABIR:—for beneficent purposes, we would not pass the Bill. The then Hon'ble Finance Minister assured that the money would be spent for nation-building purposes. But today there is no such assurance even. On the contrary, at a time when the people are afflicted with misery the like of which they have perhaps never experienced in the course of remembered history, at such a time we are asked to impose this fresh taxation with a degree of incidence which is double that of the original tax. It has also to be remembered that though the tax has been increased two-fold, in fact the tax will be increased not two-fold but many-fold. The price of an article which was one rupee formerly, is perhaps today in the region of four or five rupees. If we take rice as the index, prices have gone up at least 3 or 4 times if not more, so that although the tax is ostensibly doubled, in fact it would be increased by 8 times. For, what cost one rupee before, we would pay a tax on half-anna today; but an article which cost one rupee before costs four rupees today: so that the tax would be 2 annas and not half-an-anna. The tax which would actually be paid by the consumer would be therefore 8 times what it was under the original Bill. In view of the economic distress which is prevailing in the province today, I would ask the Hon'ble Finance Minister to consider very seriously before he proposes a Bill of this nature. If he is confident that the people are behind him, if he is confident that the public will support a measure of this type, if he is confident that the public will bear this burden with the recognition that these burdens are burdens which must be borne by the people in order to save the economic plight of the province, then he will be justified in proposing such a Bill. In that case nobody will have any ground for objecting to this Bill. But how can he have that confidence till he has sounded public opinion? Till he takes the public into his confidence and he claims to be here as a representative of the people, I would submit to him through you, Sir, that he is not right in thus placing an imposition upon the people of this Province. It is almost, like stabbing them in the back when they are just struggling to their feet after the terrible calamity from which they suffered in the course of the last 15 months. Therefore, I propose to support the motion for circulation of this Bill, so that the public of Bengal may have an opportunity of expressing their categorical and undivided opinion that all the expenditure which has been incurred in this province either directly or indirectly as a consequence of this war should be borne not by the people of this province but by the Central Exchequer or by the Government of the United Kingdom whose primary concern this war has been.

Mr. K. C. ROY CHOWDHURY: Sir, I only point out one aspect of this Bill which is very pressing on the poor. The proposed tax is two pice in the rupee. But when articles are sold in the market worth a few annas at a time, the shopkeepers will charge sales tax on them and realise more, because the present system of our coinage is unsuitable. Therefore, I would ask the Government to denominate the currency by introducing the old cowrie system, so that things will be sold not for so many annas and pies only but for so many annas, pies and cowries. But as it is not practicable to introduce this cowrie system in our currency, I would request Government to place pie coins in the market; otherwise the shopkeepers will go on collecting more half annas, quarter anna coins being unavailable, and therefore, from that point of view I think that this Bill will have to be recast.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: Sir, in rising to support the motion for circulation, I would like to point out to the honourable members of this House a few facts which will go to show the real nature of the present Bill. I understand he expects revenue to the extent of one crore and a half by doubling the tax proposed in the new Bill. Now, Sir, as has been pointed out by other honourable members before, the deficit which has got to be faced is in the region of 14 crores of rupees, out of which, as the Hon'ble Finance Minister has already stated, he has got a promise from the Centre of a sum of $4\frac{1}{2}$ crores of rupees by way of subvention for helping the provincial revenues. Thus, with one crore or one crore and a half from this tax, the total amount that he will get would be about 6 crores of rupees. But, we do not know what will happen to the larger deficit of 8 crores of rupees which he will have to meet yet in order to balance the budget. Therefore, it is necessary to consider whether seeing that the people of the province are already burdened with taxation and admittedly unable to bear any further burden, any taxation of this nature should be introduced here. The main purpose of the Bill, namely, to meet the deficit will not be served and the Hon'ble Finance Minister will have to find out other sources of revenue in order to meet the deficiency. This leads me to enquire into the causes of the deficiency which Bengal has to meet today. Sir, what led to this deficiency? It is practically admitted in the budget speech of the Finance Minister that the principal reasons for deficit are two: the prime reason for the deficit is the war and the fact that Bengal is now practically very near the war zone. Now Bengal is within the war zone. The war is being fought practically within the North-Eastern Frontier, somewhere in Bengal and Assam. Now, Sir, in order to determine what are the causes of this huge deficit in this province we have to see what led to this famine during the last year. It is admitted on all hands that the principal reason for the famine was not the failure of crops in a particular part of the province or the other cause, namely, the cyclone, in some parts of the province. It has been found that the deficit which we had to meet last year was due largely for meeting the expenses in connection with the war and that is divided into various phases. In the first place, we found that a very large number of people evacuated from Burma came to this province and to feed them the Bengal Government had to incur a very large expenditure. We know that huge quantities of stocks worth several crores were purchased by the Bengal Government for the purpose of giving relief to these evacuees. This was done at a time when we never expected that there would be a famine in this province or that the people would have to encounter a state which we noticed during the last season. If a substantial portion of these stocks had been released in time we would not have noticed the distress which we witnessed during the last season. These stocks were not released, may be, due to a bona fide belief that it would be required for some other purpose or they may not have been released due to a mistake on the part of Government or to a bungling in some department of Government for not passing the necessary orders in time. Ultimately, we found that a huge portion of these stocks became quite useless. I know it as a fact that in one district, namely, Burdwan, after the Damodar flood it was found that chura, that is, fried paddy, a huge stock of which had been kept in reserve for evacuee relief, was brought out and it was found that it was absolutely unfit for human consumption and had to be thrown away and could not be used at all, due perhaps to some bungling in some Government department and thus a large quantity of these stocks could not be used to relieve distress.

Next, Sir, although it was denied to the people of this province in some quarters, we know huge stocks of foodgrains were exported to Africa for the purpose of maintaining the Indian regiment there in order to win the Allied cause. That is one of the causes of the famine that we witnessed during last year. In this way, by illustration we will be able to show that practically the entire reason is based on war conditions. So I request the Hon'ble Finance Minister to press his case to the Central Government so that the entire deficit might be met from the Central Revenues. After all, Bengal if left to itself would have been in a position to meet the entire deficit from the jute tax and income-tax receipts; if the Centre gives up all the revenues derived from income-tax derived from Bengal and all the taxes derived from the export of jute outside Bengal. Bengal would have been able to stand on its own legs for the purpose of meeting this huge deficit and would not have to approach the Centre for the purpose of balancing its budget. It is for this purpose that we think it necessary to circulate this Bill for the purpose of eliciting opinion thereon in order to know what were the causes which led to this huge deficit and why is it that the entire deficit could not be met from the Central Revenues and a portion of the deficit has to be met by taxing the already over-burdened people of this province. It will also be necessary to enquire as to whether there are other sources of revenue which could be utilised for the purpose of meeting this deficit if relief cannot be had from the Centre. As a matter of fact, we know that on account of the war purpose alone something to the tune of Rs. 5 to Rs. 6 crores is spent daily in India. Bengal Government wants only three days expenditure for the purpose of balancing the provincial deficit. I do not know if proper representations were made and I think that it is yet possible to induce the Central Government to provide the entire deficit either from its own exchequer or from the Exchequer of the United Kingdom. With these words, I support the motion for circulation.

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: Mr. President, Sir, I beg to support the motion for circulation moved by my friend Mr. Lalit Chandra Das. My reason for supporting this motion is that the time-limit fixed in this motion is earlier than the other motion and if Government can secure public opinion by that time, they will be able to bring up the Bill for discussion in the next winter session. I have heard the speeches made by the previous speakers, including that of my friend Mr. Humayun Kabir who has conclusively shown that the deficit complained of by the Hon'ble Finance Minister is due mainly to war expenditure. And we all know that this war has been and is being fought out in the interest of the British Imperialism and not in the interest of India and so it is up to the British Government and the United Nations which are out to crush the Axis Powers to have their hegemony in this world and in the world affairs to contribute towards meeting our present deficit. They should, therefore, bear all the expenses. The budget which has shown such a huge deficit is not our own making and the Hon'ble the Finance Member of the Government of India, Sir Jeremy Raisman, said that Bengal with a revenue of Rs. 22 crores and a deficit of Rs. 17½ crores cannot be regarded as a deficit province, especially when this deficit was due to extraordinary expenditure, namely, the famine and the measures of defence. So, it is proper on the part of the Hon'ble the Finance Minister, and if he so chooses, with the help of the whole country including the Legislature to prevail upon the British Government to find out the money necessary for their defence, for the continuation of the war. If he does not do that, then the only epithet that can be applied to him and the Ministry will be that of an agent to the British Imperialism and nothing else. In these circumstances, I think it is not improper for us, the Opposition, to claim that the Bill should be circulated for eliciting opinion of the public at large.

With these words, I support the motion.

Mr. NAGENDRA NATH MOHOLANABISH: Mr. President, Sir, I beg to support the motion for circulation. The Bill, as has been placed by the Hon'ble the Finance Minister, is intended to double the tax which is already in existence. The reasons given by the Hon'ble Minister seem to be the deficit in the Bengal Budget and one of the main reasons for the deficit has been stated to be famine relief and other causes.

Now, Sir, it is really a feature peculiar to this House that it is called upon to vote money by a taxation Bill, but unfortunately this House has not got the right to really control the expenditure of the Government. That is a peculiar situation in which this House finds itself, but anyway that being the result of the Constitution Act, we cannot very much complain. We may say that when under these circumstances the Hon'ble the Finance Minister wants the sanction of this House for additional grant of money by way of taxation Bill, I think he ought to be in a position to satisfy this House as to the necessity for that measure. Merely saying that we are in deficit and you must pass this Bill for the purpose of putting us in possession of more funds, is not sufficient. I think that the Hon'ble Minister should have stated before this House clearly giving facts and figures as to what was the amount that was collected from the sales tax that has been in force for some years and what was done with that money and why more money is necessary and on what ground this tax should be doubled. As has been shown by some of the honourable members, the tax has automatically doubled or more than doubled itself because the prices have gone up and by the tax which is calculated at the rate of one pice in the rupee you are actually getting for two years double or four times of what you expected. Then why do you come forward with another Bill doubling this tax? Having regard to the present economic situation it is unnecessary to bring forward a measure like this, because the incidence of the tax is such that without increasing the rate you are actually having more income from this source. It has been already pointed out by honourable members that this deficit in the Bengal Government Budget is due mainly to causes on account of the war and that if this deficit is due to that cause, then it is not fair that additional taxation should be put upon the people of Bengal, and as has been well said by honourable members, we should look to other directions for help. With regard to famine relief which has been put forward very boldly by the Hon'ble Finance Minister as if to enlist the sympathy of the House, I submit that he did not really inquire into the reasons for the famine. It is not only war but mismanagement on the part of the Government and also various other causes for which Government are responsible which really brought about the famine, and the relief that you granted was nothing in comparison with the magnitude of the distress. I, therefore, submit that the situation does not justify the increase of the incidence of this tax, and that this is a fit case where the Bill should be circulated or else dropped.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Sir, I whole-heartedly support the amendment for circulation of the Bill. Sir, we have had quite a large number of taxation Bills since the introduction of Provincial Autonomy in Bengal, and every year during the Budget Session we are called upon to consider a Bill of this nature. It is proposed to make this additional levy in order to provide more money for the purpose of meeting the budget deficit. Sir, if I remember aright, I raised the same objections on the last occasion when the Finance Bill was on the legislative anvil and I repeated the same arguments during the budget debate this year. I have no hesitation in further reiterating the arguments I adduced against a Bill of this character. Sir, the Ministry would have done well if instead of bringing forward a taxation measure of this kind, they had proposed retrenchment in the current expenditure of Government. The administration of the Government of Bengal has become top-heavy. We have been over-burdened with unjustifiable expenditure—expenditure which no civilised country in the world would have undertaken in similar conditions. Sir, look at the huge amount Government are spending on account of the salaries of the Hon'ble Ministers and their Parliamentary Secretaries. Formerly, there were only eight Ministers carrying on administration for 16 months and now there are thirteen Ministers, thirteen Parliamentary Secretaries and a number of Whips to run the ministerial chariot. I do not think Government will be justified in embarking upon a legislation of this kind before mercilessly cutting down their own expenses. Sir, the problem of Bengal is a very peculiar one. It differs materially from that prevailing in the other provinces. Here in Bengal, millions of people have died of starvation and yet Government have not been able to devise means of rehabilitating the destitute and we do not know what fate awaits us in the near future. In these circumstances, the imposition of an additional burden upon a famished people would, I am afraid, prove to be the last straw on the camel's back. It may be argued that the masses of the population will not be affected by this measure. I join issue with those who hold this view. I am not advocating the cause of the rich. Those who are in affluent circumstances can well provide for their own luxuries. I am against any proposal which will adversely affect the poor. Take for example, the ordinary items which are required in connection with our daily life. For everything that a poor man will have to purchase, he will have to pay the Sales tax at double the rate which they have now been paying. That is a position which I do not think the Ministry will be justified in taking up. In these circumstances, I strongly oppose the Bill and favour its circulation for eliciting opinion thereon so as to enable the outside public and the representative institutions in the country to express their views on the provisions of the Bill. Government should first ascertain the opinion of the public before trying to have the Bill placed permanently on the Statute Book.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question—

Mr. KADER BAKSH: Sir, I would like to speak a word or two—

Mr. PRESIDENT: You should have risen earlier. Now I am on my legs.

Two motions have been moved regarding the circulation of the Bill: one by Mr. Haridas Mazumdar and the other by Mr. Lalit Chandra Das. Mr. Mazumdar's motion refers to a later date and I shall, therefore, put that to vote first. If that motion is carried, the other one falls to the ground.

The question before the House is: that the Bill be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinion thereon by the 31st December, 1944.

(The amendment was negatived.)

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that the Bill be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinion thereon by 30th September, 1944.

The motion being put, a division was challenged and taken with the following result:—

AYES—15.

Mr. Altaf Ali.
Rai Bahadur K. C. Banerjee.
Mr. S. C. Chakravarti.
Mr. L. C. Das.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order, order. The House has divided. Ayes being 15, and Noes being 22, the amendment is negatived.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Mr. President, Sir, I beg to move that the Bill be referred to a Select Committee consisting of—

The Hon'ble Mr. Tulsi Chandra Goswami, Minister in charge of the Finance Department,

Mr. R. W. N. Ferguson,

Mr. Naresh Nath Mookerjee,

Mr. Humayun Kabir,

Mr. Kamini Kumar Dutta,

Mr. Nur Ahmed,

Khan Bahadur M. A. Momin, C.I.E.,

Mr. Hamidul Huq Chowdhury,

Khan Bahadur Abdul Hamid Chowdhury,

Khan Sahib Nurul Amin, and

the mover,

with instructions to submit their report by the month of May, 1944, and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a quorum shall be four.

Sir, so far as my motion for reference of the Bill to a Select Committee is concerned, I think I have nothing more to add than what I stated when I spoke on the motion for circulation of the Bill for the purpose of eliciting public opinion which Government have turned down by means of a solid majority. Sir, I should like to point out that the Hon'ble Finance Minister has stated that this Bill has been brought for the purpose of meeting the deficit. In reply to this I might say, Sir, that it is due to the maladministration of the Ministry or rather the Government that this deficit has been brought about. By way of an illustration I may cite one example. For the procurement of aus crop this Ministry, I mean the Civil Supply Department of the Ministry, purchased through their agents paddy to the extent of 76,000 maunds or more and collected them in different railway stations in Jessore. Sir, this huge quantity of paddy was lying there for months. The Ministry when confronted in the Lower House by Dr. Mookherjee replied that they could not secure wagons. Sir, on the 28th February the Railway Member replied in the Central Assembly to a question of Mr. K. C. Neogy which I am reading in toto, because that will give you the complete story.

Mr. K. C. NEOGY: (a) Has the attention of the Hon'ble Member for Railways been drawn to recent discussions in the Bengal Legislative Assembly in which reference was made to the fact that about two lakh maunds of paddy had been left at different stations of the Sealdah-Khulna section of the Bengal and Assam Railway, for months together, without being transported by the railway, that the paddy was left in most cases on the open platform, and that it had deteriorated very considerably and become unfit for human consumption?

(b) Does the Hon'ble Member propose to make a detailed statement explaining the situation so far as it may be known to the railway authorities for this state of affairs?

(c) Have the transport facilities offered by railways for the movement of foodgrains within the province of Bengal been sufficient for the purpose of coping with the situation, in point of wagon space and promptitude?

(d) Is the Hon'ble Member in a position to state the approximate quantity of foodgrains that has been moved by railways between different stations within the province of Bengal, for the consumption of the civil population, during the year 1943?—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Mazumdar, you cannot indirectly move your adjournment motion in this way.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: No, Sir, I am not doing that. I am only pointing out the maladministration of this Ministry.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The House is not discussing the question of maladministration here. The Finance Sales Tax Bill is now before the House; so you must confine yourself to the proposal for reference of the Bill to a Select Committee.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: I am only pointing out, Sir, how things are done by these irresponsible Ministers.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I cannot argue with you. That is my ruling.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, I am only pointing out that the provision of the Bill requires thorough examination, and the maladministration on the part of Government which has brought on this state of affairs and all such things should be kept in view. That is my position. And in the reply the Railway Member of the Government of India says that the movement of foodgrains in Bengal is arranged in accordance with the programmes prepared by the Bengal Government and this paddy was not included in these programmes. This conclusively shows that—

Mr. PRESIDENT: May I again draw your attention, Mr. Mazumdar, to the motion now under consideration? Will you please take your seat? Your motion is for referring the Bill to a Select Committee. Please, therefore, confine your arguments to that point. You should not travel beyond that.

Mr. AMULYADHONE ROY: Sir, one word. This Bill seeks to raise money. The Hon'ble Minister wants to raise money by this Bill. Mr. Mazumdar's point is that if the Government had not lost so much paddy and incurred a great loss thereby, this particular Bill might not have been necessary.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The explanation is very ingenious, I must say, but not a correct one. (Laughter.)

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: In support of this motion I have only one point to add, namely, that in all the Legislatures of the civilised world taxation proposals are never rushed through, as they are being rushed through by the Bengal Government without giving the people a fair chance of discussing them. The pros and cons of the Bill cannot be discussed on the floor of the House; therefore I want it to be referred to a Select Committee of the whole Chamber or to a Select Committee in the ordinary sense. And the folly of discussing Bills on the floor of the House in haste has been very recently amply demonstrated in connection with the Land Alienation (Temporary Provisions) Bill. It had been all along the practice and convention to refer such taxation proposals to a Select Committee of the Legislature where the representatives of the people could discuss them freely in a freer atmosphere than in an ordinary open sitting of the Legislature. In this connection, I cannot but mention that in the House of Commons even all budget proposals, both for taxation as well as for expenses, are scrutinised by the House sitting as a Committee of the whole House and after discussing the proposals in such a committee the proposals are brought forward as resolutions before the open House at the next stage for being again discussed and voted upon. Here also I have raised that point as to why taxation proposals are brought in in piecemeal fashion and not in the shape of an Annual Finance Bill. The disadvantage of such piecemeal taxation is that it prevents the members from discussing the whole administration. I think that if we discuss the whole administration once again on the motion for the reference of the Bill to a Select Committee, you, Sir, as the custodian of the rights and privileges of the House will preclude us from voicing our grievances on the ground that our discussion must be confined to the—

Mr. PRESIDENT: What is it that you say, Mr. Mazumdar?

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: I was pointing out that questions of administrative efficiency and maladministration on the part of the Government must be also brought in in connection with the discussion of this Bill.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I would suggest that you confine your observations to the provisions of the Bill only. These remarks would have been quite pertinent in connection with your first amendment to the motion, that the Bill be taken into consideration. Now we are discussing a specific proposal, viz., that the Bill be referred to a Select Committee. So I suggest that you should confine your remarks entirely to that point.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: All right, Sir. My argument is that since the Bill is not going to the country for circulation and though the Lower House has got the right—

Mr. PRESIDENT: There is no distinction between this House and the other House in respect of Finance Bills. You have as much right to vote upon them as the other House.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: The entire administrative activity of the Government cannot be criticised in dealing with a Bill of this nature. In the case of a Finance Bill it would have been possible for us to do so: that is my point. To my mind the very valued right of expressing the grievances of the people before the imposition of the taxes is being taken away by this indirect method of bringing such taxation proposals separately. Therefore, Sir, considering all these factors I feel that this House and the Government will be well advised to refer this Bill to a Select Committee with instructions to submit their report by the month of May or if necessary even earlier I do not mind. Unless we are allowed to have a Select Committee in order to go through the Bill, clause by clause, we will not take any responsibility for the passage of this Bill. It affects the consumers—not only rich men but the ordinary people of the street, because even the exemption that was provided for in the Bill will be taken away with regard to the handloom goods. With these words, I appeal to the honourable members of the House to consider these points before they turn down our proposal.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I think all the amendments for reference of the Bill to a Select Committee should be first moved. I would call upon Mr. Lalit Chandra Das to move his amendment.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Will you not put the motion of Mr. Haridas Mazumdar to vote first.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I shall read out all the motions together after all the amendments have been moved.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, I beg to move that the Bengal Finance (Sales Tax) Amendment Bill, 1944, be referred to a Select Committee consisting of—the Hon'ble Mr. Tulsi Chandra Goswami, Minister in charge of the Finance Department,

Mr. Nur Ahmed,

Khan Bahadur M. A. Momin, C.I.E.,
Mr. Hamidul Huq Chowdhury,
Mr. Mangtaram Jaipuria.
Mr. W. B. G. Laidlaw,
Rai Bahadur Keshab Chandra Banerjee,
Mr. Haridas Mazumdar,
Mr. Kamini Kumar Dutta,
Mrs. Labanyaprobha Dutt, and
the mover,

with instructions to submit their report by the 31st March, 1944, and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a quorum shall be four.

Sir, the difference between my motion and that moved by my friend Mr. Haridas Mazumdar is in respect of some of the names of the members and also in respect of the period of time within which the report should be submitted. In the first motion the period of time by which the report should be submitted is May, 1944, and I have laid down 31st March as the date by which the report would have to be submitted. My point is that enough time will be left during the current session for the Government to go through the Bill. If they like they may be able to scrutinise it this session and then bring it before the House. Then, Sir, although the provisions of the Bill apparently are not too many—they are few in number—they contain provisions which require to be thoroughly scrutinised. This cannot be done on the floor of this House: we cannot convince each other by argument on the floor of the House—particularly in the case of a taxation bill. In the cool atmosphere of a Select Committee there is room for argument and for placing one's view-points with the chance of convincing the members of the other side and bringing them to agree to the views expressed by the Opposition. There is every chance of some of the amendments being accepted and in the cool atmosphere of a Select Committee suggestions may be considered just to improve the Bill so that the Bill even though it be a taxation measure may not weigh heavily upon the poor people of Bengal, particularly at a time of stress and difficulty through which the people have passed and are still passing, I mean the famine condition. The people have been very hard hit by famine. The various points of view may be coolly considered by the members and though the Bill proposes to double the tax, a via media can be arrived at. It may well be that Government may agree with the Opposition and fix a rate somewhere between one pice and two pice which would be a great relief to the poor. We might think of excluding tax on handloom and home-spun clothes and other things. All these things could be coolly considered in the Select Committee.

With these words, I move that this Bill be referred to the Select Committee.

The Hon'ble Mr. TULSI CHANDRA COSWAMI: Sir, may I, at this stage, just say a few words? This is a very simple measure. It does not require consideration by a Select Committee. The chief purpose of the Bill is to fix the rate of the tax. Finance Bills usually are not referred to a Select Committee. I repeat the chief and perhaps the only purpose of the Bill is to fix the rate of the tax. That is why I must oppose any motion——

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: On a point of order, Sir. I think the Hon'ble the Finance Minister was not in order to rise up and make a speech before you actually put the motion.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Perhaps he was trying to explain the Government attitude.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Sir, I beg to move that the Bill be referred to a Select Committee consisting of—the Hon'ble Mr. Tulsi Chandra Goswami, Minister in charge of the Finance Department,

Mr. Shrish Chandra Chakravarti,
Mr. Lalit Chandra Das,
Mr. Mangtaram Jaipuria,
Mr. R. W. N. Ferguson,
Khan Bahadur Shaikh Muhammad Jan,
Mr. Abdul Latif,
Khan Bahadur Abdul Gofran,
Mr. Nur Ahmed,
Mrs. Labanyaprobha Dutt, and
the mover,

with instructions to submit their report by the 31st March, 1944, and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a quorum shall be four.

Now, Sir, in a way I am thankful for the intervention which the Hon'ble the Finance Minister made in a somewhat informal manner just after the speech of my honourable friend Mr. Lalit Chandra Das. Because that gave us an inkling into the mind of the Government with regard to this Bill. Government look at this measure from a purely mechanical and administrative point of view. They have failed to recognise the economic background in which the Bill is being brought forward today. They have failed to realise the implications in terms of human suffering, in terms of the burden which this Bill may actually bring upon the poor struggling people. Their attitude, as stated by the Hon'ble the Finance Minister, is simply this: there has been a deficit and here is a machinery for reducing the deficit. They feel no necessity for considering this Bill coolly or deliberating over its implications but desire simply to hurry it through the Legislature as there is a majority behind the Government. That seems to be in short the attitude of the Government. That also perhaps explains why when the motions for circulation were being considered in this House, the Hon'ble Minister did not consider it necessary to meet any of the objections which had been raised.

I was rather surprised, I must confess, that in view of the arguments which were advanced, not a single statement was made on behalf of Government. Perhaps the reason was that Government themselves felt that they had no arguments, they had simply their votes. That was the attitude which led the Government not to reply to the debate in the case of the motions for circulation. That will presumably be the attitude of Government in the case of the motions for Select Committee which are being considered. But we, Sir, have a duty in this matter. It shall be our endeavour to try to force the Government to realise the implications of this Bill. Certain references were made by my honourable friend Mr. Haridas Mazumdar to incidents which happened in the railway stations of Jessore. I am afraid my friend could not probably state his point clearly. The argument which he had in mind was that here is a Government which hurries through measures, and which takes steps precipitately and which does not consider all the implications of a particular issue. Here is a Bill which has been brought but which has neither been circulated for eliciting opinion thereon nor has it been sent to a Select Committee of either House of the Legislature, or in other words, here is a Government trying to force through this Bill at as rapid a pace as possible. Mr. Mazumdar has given another case where also this Government acted precipitately by purchasing a huge amount of aus paddy without making proper arrangements for their distribution or storage or transport and landed the province into a huge deficit on account of the loss incurred in that transaction. The relevancy of that example lies precisely in the fact that the aus crop was also purchased without making any previous preparation. Without making proper arrangements for storage and without making any arrangements for transport, the Government hurriedly purchased the crop and then tried to put forward a lame excuse that the Government of India did not provide transport. This has been refuted by the Government of India who have said that the Provincial Government did not make any requisition for transport. The result is that the whole country and the whole province was landed into a huge deficit. It is the remembrance of this experience which led my honourable friend to move that we should actually consider the Bill on its merits and examine all the implications before we accept the Bill.

I quite admit, Sir, that to move a motion for a Select Committee is to accept the principle of the Bill, and in a way we are constrained to do that. We have tried our best in the circulation motion not to accept the principle of the Bills but here we accept the principle of the Bill, though it is a qualified acceptance and not an absolute acceptance. It is an acceptance subject to the condition that the Select Committee may make in the Bill such changes as will be regarded necessary. We have also through amendments tried to make certain changes in the structure and in the general incidence of the proposed tax. In the former Bill which this new Bill seeks to replace we find that handloom goods were exempted, but the present Bill has included handloom cloths also among other textile commodities which are to be taxed. Now, it is our expectation that in the Select Committee we shall be able to persuade the Hon'ble Finance Minister to exempt all handloom goods. They ought to be excluded from the operation of the Bill for more reasons than one. There is no doubt that handloom cloth is often used by people whose incomes are not very high. There may also be a class who use handloom goods of fine texture. There is a demand for such better type of handloom cloth. Fine cloth is one of the crafts of our country which is going to be destroyed but which can and ought to be revived. During this period of revival, when it has not come back to its former strength, it requires some sort of protection and therefore special consideration in the case of the handloom cloth would be justified on the ground of protecting an industry which employs a very large number of poor persons in the rural areas. It is after all a cottage industry and in addition exemplifies one of the finest crafts that have flourished in this part of the world.

Then, Sir, I come to the actual incidence of the tax, that is, the rate at which the tax will be levied. The Hon'ble Minister says that it is merely a question of fixing a rate. It was formerly a quarter of an anna and now Government seek to make it half an anna. But they take no account of the fact that different rates might be put on different types of articles. Reference of a Bill to a Select Committee gives an opportunity to the Government as well as to the Opposition to come together and discuss and arrive at an agreed settlement. In the House we talk across barriers and this physical fact of talking across barriers sometimes has a psychological repercussion. Suggestions made from one side of the House do not meet with the consideration from the other side which on their merits they deserve. You yourself, Sir, know very well how in Select Committee this sort of psychological barrier between the two sides of the House disappears. In the Select Committee, discussion is much more informal than in the open House; there is an atmosphere of give-and-take and a desire to consider the suggestions on either side. In our experience we have found that in the Select Committee the members of the Opposition as well as Government pull their weight together and co-operate and make a much better Bill than is the case when a Bill is discussed on the floor of the House.

Again, Sir, you will perhaps remember the impasse to which Government were brought simply because they tried to force through this House another Bill without previous consideration. I refer to the Bill pending consideration the day after tomorrow, I mean the Bill for restoring land sold by cultivators during the famine last year. There, the Government proceeded with the Bill and a peculiar situation was created. The position was that even if the Government wanted to refer it to a Select Committee, they could not do so because steps in the matter had been finally taken. Government's supporters also stood helpless. They could not refer it to a Select Committee nor even to a committee of the whole House, with the result that the whole Bill has had to be postponed. This has taken a longer period than would have been the case if the Bill had been first referred to a Select Committee. These are some of the considerations, Sir, for referring the Bill to a Select Committee. There have been cases where in Select Committee we have been able to come to agreed settlements. Once there are agreed settlements, the Bill goes through much more quickly in the House than is the case where there have been no Select Committees and no agreement between the different sides of the House and where the Government simply in virtue of the fact that they have a majority try to rush through the Bill as rapidly as possible. And the Opposition owe a duty to themselves and to their constituencies to prevent such precipitate progress of such measures. It is their duty to see that nothing is done in haste which may compel repentance at leisure. The Opposition will certainly try that the Government simply in virtue of their majority do not override their suggestions and desires. In such cases, they must oppose and fight the Government at every step. Government may remember the way in which they tried to hurry through another measure, when they tried to pilot through the Calcutta Municipal Amendment Bill. We fought at every step for improving the Bill. The Opposition would naturally take up this attitude if Government's attitude does not change. Look at the amendments, Sir, that were moved today, the very relevant and valid arguments that were advanced in connection with the motions for circulation. The Opposition was prepared to support the Government if they made a demand to the Central Government or the Government of the United Kingdom for grants of money whereby the deficit might be met. Presumably, Government had made up their minds that they wanted to tax the people, to extract the last pound of flesh from the poor people of Bengal, to place the last straw on the camel's back. They went on in their own way and in their anxiety to justify themselves before some other authorities, they did not even care to reply to any of the arguments advanced by the Opposition.

That, I submit, is the issue before the House on the Select Committee motion. In spite of the fact that the Bill is unwelcome, in spite of the fact that we do not consider that the Bill is necessary at the present stage, in spite of the fact that we hold that the Government should have gone to the Centre for moneys which they seek to raise from this particular Act; in spite of all these factors, the Opposition has extended its hand of co-operation in the motion for Select Committee. The motion for Select Committee is a conditional acceptance of the principle of the Bill. In spite of the fact that the Opposition dislike the Bill, they have agreed to a conditional acceptance of the Bill and extended their hands of co-operation. It now lies with the Government whether they will accept the hands of co-operation or simply force through the Bill by virtue of the majority that they have in this House. With these words, I commend my motion to the acceptance of the House.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: I beg to move that the Bengal Finance (Sales Tax) Bill, 1944, be referred to a Select Committee consisting of—the Hon'ble Mr. Tulsi Chandra Goswami, Minister in charge of the Finance Department,

Mr. W. B. G. Laidlaw,

Khan Bahadur M. A. Momin, C.I.E.,

Mr. Moazzemali Chowdhury,

Mr. Haridas Mazumdar,

Rai Bahadur Radhica Bhusan Roy,

Khan Bahadur Naziruddin Ahmad,

Khan Sahib Maulvi Wahiduzzaman,

Mr. Lalit Chandra Das,
Mr. Ranajit Pal Chowdhury, and
the mover,

with instructions to submit their report by the 20th March, 1944, and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a quorum shall be five.

Sir, I do not think the Hon'ble the Finance Minister is right when he says that the Finance Bill cannot be referred to a Select Committee. (The Hon'ble Mr. TULSI CHANDRA GOSWAMI: I did not say cannot be referred.) If my memory serves me right—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Rai Bahadur, the Hon'ble Minister did not say "cannot be referred." He said it is not done usually.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Sir, when the original Bengal Finance (Sales Tax) Bill was introduced in 1941, it was referred to a Select Committee to scrutinise its provisions with a view to improvement. Section 2 of the present Bill provides for enhancement of the rate of tax from one-quarter to one-half anna. In the Select Committee some sort of an agreed settlement may be arrived at and Government may yield on certain vital points, namely, reduction of the rate from six pies to 4½ pies in the rupee or even to a lower figure. With regard to clause (b) in which three per centum has been provided in place of one per centum, there may be a via media as a result of deliberations in the Select Committee meetings. It is not my intention to delay the passage of the Bill and so I want the 20th March to be fixed as the last date for the submission of the Select Committee's report. What I want is that the Bill be considered dispassionately by the members of the Select Committee, because it is not possible for a House of 63 members to discuss and come to a decision on the controversial points. I do not think I need further dilate upon the points after what was said by Mr. Humayun Kabir and others who preceded me. As I have already stated, the Government should accept the motion because, as Mr. Humayun Kabir has pointed out, we have conditionally accepted the principle of the Bill: with regard to details, these may be settled by discussion in the Select Committee. Although we hold different views with regard to some of the provisions of the Bill, we are prepared to accept it provided that Government agree to its reference to a Select Committee. I hope, therefore, that the Hon'ble Finance Minister will have no hesitation in accepting the proposition. With these words, I commend my motion to the acceptance of the House.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Motion moved: That the Bill be referred to a Select Committee consisting of—the Hon'ble Mr. Tulsi Chandra Goswami, Minister in charge of the Finance Department,

Mr. R. W. N. Ferguson,
Mr. Naresh Nath Mookerjee,
Mr. Humayun Kabir,

Mr. Kamini Kumar Dutta,
Mr. Nur Ahmed,
Khan Bahadur M. A. Momin, C.I.E.,
Mr. Hamidul Huq Chowdhury,
Khan Bahadur Abdul Hamid Chowdhury,
Khan Sahib Nurul Amin, and
the mover,

with instructions to submit their report by the month of May, 1944, and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a quorum shall be four.

Motion moved: That the Bill be referred to a Select Committee consisting of—

BENGAL LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL DEBATES

First Session, 1944—No. 22.

THE COUNCIL met in the Legislative Chamber of the Legislative Building, Calcutta, on Tuesday, the 14th March, 1944, at 1 p.m., being the twenty-second day of the First Session of 1944, pursuant to section 62(2)(a) of the Government of India Act, 1935.

Mr. President (the Hon'ble Sir BIJOY PRASAD SINGH ROY, K.C.I.E.), was in the Chair.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The questions were held up yesterday on the understanding that they would be answered today.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: I am almost sure that he was expected to come in time, but I am afraid he is detained in the Government House.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, I also rose on a point of privilege yesterday in which the Hon'ble Supply Minister Mr. Suhrawardy is concerned, but he is absent today, also.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Mazumdar, let me finish the questions first. We know that he is absent. It is a physical fact.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: All right, Sir.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Will the Hon'ble Leader of the House kindly request his colleague to attend this House tomorrow? I believe these questions cannot be answered either by the Parliamentary Secretary or by yourself.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: No, Sir, I do not think so.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Then kindly make some arrangements with him so that the questions are answered tomorrow.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, I believe it was to meet the convenience of the Hon'ble Ministers that the time was changed from 2-15 p.m. to 1 p.m. Now, if they cannot come at 1 p.m., then the time may be changed again to 2-15 p.m.

The Hon'ble Mr. TULSI CHANDRA GOSWAMI: Sir, Mr. Suhrawardy will be coming tomorrow. I express regret on his behalf. Under extraordinary circumstances he is detained in the Government House for work with His Excellency the Governor. I hope the House will kindly excuse him.

The Bengal Finance (Sales Tax) Amendment Bill, 1944.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Now we shall take up the amendments to the motion that the Bill be taken into consideration. There are four amendments: one by Mr. Haridas Mazumdar, another by Mr. Lalit Chandra Das, the next by Mr. Humayun Kabir and the last by Rai Bahadur Keshab Chandra Banerjee. They are now open to discussion.

Mr. NUR AHMED: Sir, I rise to oppose the amendments and support the motion for consideration. This is a very simple Bill containing only two clauses. The honourable members have already tabled amendments to the clauses of the Bill and no useful purpose will be served by referring the Bill to a Select Committee. It will be only waste of time and waste of money if we refer it to a Select Committee. The honourable members can move their amendments when the Bill will be considered, clause by clause.

As regards the bigger question which has been raised in the House that instead of imposing additional burden on the already over-burdened people of Bengal, Government should have approached the Central Government for funds, I say that we have all read in the papers what the Hon'ble Finance Member's reply to Bengal Government's demand for subvention is. And we know that Bengal has tried her utmost in the past to get full justice for her claims. But if the Centre is callous and refuses to help Bengal to the extent that she requires, what is the remedy left to her? Is it not, therefore, the duty of Bengal to put her house in order to prepare herself for the next stage: I mean, rehabilitating those who have survived this terrible famine? A scheme is under preparation and it will require a great deal of money; that is why money is so badly needed. I think the money which has been spent by Government has been spent on saving the nation. Money is required for the rehabilitation of those unfortunate people to their former callings and professions. Taking that view I think that this taxation is a very very desirable thing at this time in Bengal. I think, therefore, that we will have to swallow this pill however bitter and adjust our house. Sir, nothing is so much repugnant to the oriental mind as taxation or an increase of taxation by even a single pie. From my experience as Chairman of a Bengal Municipality for more than a decade, I can say that if you impose additional taxation even to the extent of a single pie, there will be a hue and cry. So, Sir, it is natural that there will be opposition to a taxation measure like this; but in consideration of the imperative necessity for more money I think Government is justified in bringing this Bill and asking for more money. With these few words, I support the motion for consideration of the Bill and oppose all the motions for referring the Bill to a Select Committee.

Mr. KADER BAKSH: Mr. President, Sir, I beg to oppose the motions for referring the Bill to a Select Committee, and that for several reasons. After the motions for circulation have been lost, I think these motions have got absolutely no legs to stand upon. There would have been some meaning in the motions for circulation with a view to elicit public opinion; but after those motions have fallen through, I do not think these Select Committee motions have any justification for support at all. My friends of the Opposition admit that Bengal has been passing through a most critical time of it,—and why Bengal alone? The entire world has been passing through a most critical period on account of the devastating global war. There can be no denying this, Sir, and I think this simple fact is understood very well by every section of the people,—whether politicians, non-politicians, maharajas, or rajas or prajas. That being so, it would be readily agreed to by them that recourse has got to be had to taxation measures not only to run the administration but to maintain the people in the very difficult situation through which they are passing. There has been a famine, and the aftermath of that famine is still lingering in Bengal; there have been other vicissitudes and freaks of Nature, viz., floods, cyclone, epidemics, etc. Government, be it said to their credit, have done everything possible under the circumstances. Now, Sir, one question was raised yesterday and that is that when the province is practically in the thick of the war, the Central Government should take the responsibility for meeting the abnormal expenses it is being called upon to incur incidental thereto. But, Sir, is not Bengal a part of the Indian Empire? Is Bengal outside the scope—

Mr. PRESIDENT: You may now discuss the question generally as to whether the Bill should be sent to the Select Committee or not and try to confine your argument to that point.

Mr. KADER BAKSH: All right, Sir. By sending the Bill to Select Committee no useful purpose will be served, because it will cause delay. If you want to do some good to the people in their present plight, some sort of taxation must be borne by the people. If you want to relieve the distress of the people, you will have to face some taxation—it is inevitable. The entire burden cannot be borne by the Central Government, certain portion of the burden must be borne by Bengal. So this taxation measure is necessary and when it is necessary what is the use of causing delay by sending it to a Select Committee—that is my point. The argument was put forward that in the Select Committee better decision could be arrived at. Why not treat the whole House as a committee and consider the question? We can as representatives of the entire population of Bengal—the elected representatives of the people—come to a decision in this matter on the floor of the House. Then why go to a Select Committee? There is nothing illegal or illogical in it. What prevents you from considering the question on the floor of the House?

I again submit that this taxation measure is meant to relieve the distress of the people of the province. This tax will not hit the poor people: it is for their relief. It may touch men like my friend Mr. Chakraverti and big people who come here with costly dhotis and costly suits—it is men like them, who are well able to pay, who will be touched by this tax. If Mr. Chakraverti wants a suit or two, he will have to pay extra tax: that is the position. If I can afford to purchase a pair of sandal for Rs. 5, I think I can as well pay 10 pice more towards the relief of distress—not for my own purpose—not for rich people but for relieving those who are in need of it.

Sir, everybody, Mr. Jaipuria and other Purias, have made huge profits. Whenever people gather near the Stock Exchange you will hear them speaking in terms of lakhs and crores of rupees. They have earned these profits either as Paddy Purchasing Agents or through some other contracts—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order, order. Mr. Kader Baksh, I would request you to avoid personal references. Why can't you confine your arguments to the question before the House. As an old member of this House you should realise that such references should be avoided.

Mr. KADER BAKSH: I beg your pardon, Sir. All right, I shall speak generally. Sir, majority of the people who are in the business line have earned profits which were beyond their expectation. Sir, if the country is now not in a position to bear the burden, the country will not be able to bear it after the war. (Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: Sir, how long will he be allowed to go on rambling in this way?) (Mr. RANAJIT PAL CHOWDHURY: Is he consistent, Sir?) It may not appear to be consistent because my remarks are pinching you. This Bill has been designed to provide funds for helping the poor people who are in need of it today. Government has come with this generous taxation measure which is only 2 pice in the rupee. We have been subjected to various sorts of taxes, directly or indirectly, and we have borne them ungrudgingly. I support the motion for the consideration of the Bill.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Sir, it was not with little surprise that I listened to the speeches of the members of the Opposition. Almost all the members opposed the very idea of taxation (Mr. HUMAYUN KAMIR: At this time) yes, at this time. They consider the time inopportune for a taxation measure; but, Sir, I should say if this is not the time for taxation, there cannot be a better time for taxation. The people are dying for want of succour and this tax is being raised to save their lives.

I say, Sir, that we are following the principle of democracy—

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: On a point of order, Sir. Is the Hon'ble Minister speaking on the motion before the House or on the general principle of democracy?

Mr. PRESIDENT: He has just started, and he is developing his argument. Go on Khan Bahadur.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: What is the principle of democracy? In a democratic country, they tax people who are capable of paying it and at the same time they reduce the burden of those who are incapable of paying any tax. We are also following the same principle here. Hitherto the Act which is in existence, I mean the existing Act, had imposed burden even on the shoulders of the poor people by not exempting from the tax the poor men's cloth. I myself had pressed very hard for excluding the coarse cloth from the operation of the Act but failed to prevail upon the then authorities. But in this Bill exemption has been given to poor men's cloth, whereas the richer people who can afford to pay and who wear finer cloths will have to pay the tax at a doubled rate. The principle of reducing the burden on the shoulders of the poorer people and placing it on the shoulders of the people who are better able to bear it has been applied. So here the principle of democracy has been applied in the true sense of the word. Therefore, how can any responsible member of this House oppose a taxation measure of this kind at this moment when our people are dying for succour? We cannot understand it. Sir, I most emphatically say that this is the time when we must take up a taxation measure in order to realise money from the richer class of people for helping the poorer classes who are crying for succour.

Then, Sir, there is another point. It is said that this measure is harsh.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: On a point of order, Sir. He has advanced his principle of democracy too long, I should think.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Khan Bahadur, you better come back to the point.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Sir, it is urged by the Opposition that if this Bill is sent to a Select Committee, its harsh provisions may be smoothed down. But I say that it is not a harsh measure at all, because indirect tax is the best form of taxation.

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: Sir, I rise on a point of order. The Hon'ble Minister is again dilating on the principle of taxation.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Let us hear him.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Sir, if I am interrupted in this way, I think I should not make any speech at all.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The Opposition members by moving their amendments for referring the Bill to a Select Committee, have accepted the principle of the Bill indirectly. They want you to smooth down the provision of the Bill by referring it to a Select Committee. That is their point, and you should try to reply to their proposal.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: I think my speech will be quite relevant if I touch only the point in regard to the reference of the Bill to a Select Committee. Sir, the honourable members opposite are of the opinion that the measure is harsh and so they want it to be referred to a Select Committee for the purpose of smoothing down its harshness. But, I say that the Bill as it stands at present does not require to be smoothed down, as it seeks to remove the burden from the poorer people and place it on the shoulders of the richer people. This is the best form of taxation, and such taxation is also prevalent in European countries. As I said before, the present Bill is a definite improvement in the Bill. I do not know what improvement can be effected in the Select Committee. There are only two points in the Bill, namely, that the tax is going to be doubled, and the other point is that the poor man's cloth is going to be excluded from taxation. Well, if the Opposition does not want to exclude poor man's cloth from the scope of the Bill, they can easily make that suggestion on the floor of the House—

Alhadj Khan Bahadur SHAIKH MUHAMMAD JAN: On a point of information, Sir. Does the poor man require cloth only, or dal, bhat also? Does the poor man not require medicines for his life?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Not only the poor man's cloth is going to be exempted, but all articles of food which he requires have also been excluded.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Khan Bahadur, you need not necessarily yield to these points of information.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Thank you, Sir. All absolute necessities of life have been exempted; practically all the food articles have been exempted.

Alhadj Khan Bahadur SHAIKH MUHAMMAD JAN: Medicines at this time are also one of the principal necessities of life.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: I think, therefore, that there is no room for any improvement even if the Bill goes to a Select Committee. If the Opposition want to put in one or two amendments, they can do so on the floor of the House. We may discuss them here and put them to vote and finally decide the matter. I may also say that this is a taxation measure which the richer people can well afford to pay. It also takes the burden off the shoulders of the poor on account of their cloth. In this view of the matter, I think there is no necessity at all for sending the Bill to a Select Committee; all these matters can be settled here on the floor of the House. With these words, I oppose the motions for referring the Bill to a Select Committee.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: With reference to the motions that have been moved for referring the Bill to a Select Committee, I would like to say a few words. As I was listening to the honourable member who spoke immediately before me, I mean the Honourable the Leader of the House, and also Mr. Kader Baksh, I thought that they were not opposing the motion for a Select Committee but that they were rather speaking in support of the motion. What is it they were saying? As a matter of fact, they did not know their brief and they were speaking in a tone which unwittingly led them to speak in support of the motion rather than oppose the motions before the House. (Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Certainly, not I.) Sir, the Honourable the Leader of the House is whispering out that he was not supporting the motion for Select Committee, but I will show how he was actually doing so.

He spoke in a strain which I think was sincere when he was speaking that he really wanted that the poor should have relief from the burden of taxation and that the tax should fall only on the rich who are well able to bear it. It is for the purpose of seeing that the poor are relieved of the burden of this taxation and that it may fall only on the rich that this side of the House has moved the Select Committee motions. Now, Sir, we have a bitter experience of rushing through Bills in this House during the last few days. I need not remind honourable members as to what difficulty we had in dealing with the Land Alienation Bill. It has had to be brought up and sent back several times in order that the defects might be improved. And yet Government would not agree to a Select Committee. As a matter of fact, if Government had agreed to a Select Committee in respect of that Bill on the first occasion, then possibly all difficulty would have been removed and the Bill would have been passed by the House by now. They have, therefore, wasted the valuable time of the House by two or three adjournments in order that the Bill might come out again in a more presentable shape for the consideration of the House. The motions for sending the Bill to a Select Committee have no other object in view except to frame the Bill in such a way as would really achieve the objects enunciated by the Honourable the Leader of the House, I mean the Minister in charge of Agriculture, and Mr. Kader Baksh, who spoke on behalf of Government.

Sir, in considering this motion for Select Committee, I would refer to a particular fact for the consideration of the members of the House, especially of the members who are sitting to my left—I mean the European members. What is the object of sending a Bill to the Select Committee? In the Select Committee, across the table we can discuss various matters and in the course of discussion many things could be set right and many defects could be removed which it is not possible to do on the floor of the House, as certain formalities have to be observed here in dealing with our amendments. After Select Committee the Bill could be placed before the House in a more presentable form and it could then be passed without any controversy. In support of this contention, I will illustrate one or two points which show how the object of the Bill has not been attained. In the Schedule the Hon'ble Minister has provided that dhotis, lungis and saris be exempted and the Provincial Government has been authorised to fix the price-limit. But if we look to the main Act itself, we find that in one important item, I mean item 16—handloom-woven cloth has been exempted. So far as the Schedule to the main Act is concerned, handloom cloths have been exempted when sold by a dealer who does not sell any other kind of cloth. But I think most of the members are not aware that there are very fine counts of handloom cloths, counts 80, 90, 100 and 150, and the cloths woven with those counts are sold for Rs. 100, 200 and even Rs. 1,500. Under that provision these cloths which can only be purchased by the rich people, are exempt from taxation; so there is the loophole. The High Court was moved to see as to whether these articles could be exempted and they are of the opinion that under the provision of the Act they should be exempted. You are exempting those who are able to pay in respect of one article and including the poor people in respect of certain other articles. All these defects could be remedied in the Select Committee. After all, what does the motion for reference to Select Committee want? It wants that their report be placed before the House by the 20th March; it only asks for 8 days for deliberation in the Select Committee of the various clauses. If we can come to a settlement in these eight days, the Bill will be passed in much less time than if it is considered clause by clause on the floor of the House. So I appeal to the members of the House and to the Government not to oppose this motion for Select Committee. I hope they will support Rai Bahadur's motion for sending the Bill to a Select Committee to submit a report by the 20th March, 1944.

MR. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: Mr. President, Sir, the honourable members have not adduced any evidence or any arguments in support of the motion for Select Committee. They have not said why this Bill should go to the Select Committee. This Bill is practically a one-clause Bill and the only controversy is whether the existing tax of quarter of an-anna in one case and certain percentage in another case shall be increased or not. They have not put forward any arguments whatsoever. They gave long and learned lectures over this. Mr. Mazumdar, Mr. Mukherjee and Mr. Humayun Kabir, every one of them has in fact referred for their argument to another Bill which is of a more complicated nature. Mr. Humayun Kabir was lamenting over his proposal to refer that Bill to the Select Committee,—but that is dead now. In fact, most of his speech was the lamentation for this lost child of his. He says the poor men require protection and we are also saying that because we want to help the poor men, this Bill has to be passed. Government's proposal is to help these poor men to the tune of Rs. 10 crores a year. We are only taxing the rich and helping the poor who require money immediately. The honourable members of the Opposition are trying to withhold the money. They are standing in the way of Government to help the poor. Government have a deficit. They must meet the deficit and at the same time feed the poor, hungry and starving people. They must give medicine to the poor people who are dying for want of medicine and doctors. The honourable members of the Opposition say there is no money. But they won't help us to find it.

Then as regards the handloom industry. They say that this Bill will kill it. But that is not so. I submit, Sir, that one of the well recognised way of helping an industry and to protect it is to give it direct help. Government have got a scheme whereby they want to give substantial help to the handloom industry directly. And for this also the Government needs money,—a large amount of money is necessary—and therefore if this money is prevented from being raised, how can the Government help the industry? It had been provided in the existing Act that a dealer or a trader who deals exclusively with handloom-made cloths and other handloom-made articles shall be exempted from this tax. But, Sir, there are very few shops which deal exclusively with these handloom-made cloths. Only, I think, some co-operative societies deal with such cloths and there are very few societies of that nature. (Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Considerable number of shops.) My friend says that there are considerable number of such shops: I think his knowledge is limited only to the city of Dacca, but I also know something of Dacca and I can say that out of 30 shops you will perhaps get only one shop which can be said to sell exclusively handloom products. The Hon'ble Finance Minister will be able to say whether there has been an extensive list of excluded shops from the operation of the present tax and the Government also will be able to say whether there have been many. (Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE. Have you seen Madhabdih?). Therefore, Sir, the handloom industry will receive very substantial help if the Bill is passed into law and enough money is put in the hands of Government.

Sir, another point has been raised by my friends opposite, namely, that the Opposition should have been taken into the confidence by Government; and if they had been taken into the confidence, they would have agreed to demand jointly on behalf of the people of Bengal that the Government of India should come to the assistance of the Province of Bengal. If that confidence is not generated in the minds of my friends opposite, they are not going to do that. The Government of India told us that if we want help from them, then the province must show that it has done all that lies in its power to do to help itself. Having done so if it is not able to meet the large deficit that has accrued on account of the various relief measures, then a good case will be made out and the Government of India will be compelled to come very generously to the assistance of the province. This is the reason why at a time like this Government are going to tax the rich and the poor for giving more money to the Province of Bengal so that they may successfully operate all the schemes that they have for the rehabilitation of the Province. Now, so far as the Government of Bengal is concerned, it has fulfilled its duties by doing everything that lies in its power to do in order to assist the people in their distress, and it is for the Government of India now to come to the assistance of the province more liberally than they have shown in their Budget of 1944-45.

Mr. MUNCTURAM JAIPURIA: Spoke in Hindi.

Mr. AMULYADHON ROY: Sir, I have been told that Mr. Hamidul Huq Chowdhury has said that the Opposition gives only a conditional support to the Bill, namely, that if the Bill is sent to a Select Committee, then the opposition will join in demanding from the Government of India a subvention to meet her extraordinary expenditure on account of the war and famine. Unfortunately, I was not in the House and I had not the opportunity of hearing Mr. Hamidul Huq Chowdhury. However, Sir, it is not at all true that members of the Opposition are giving only a qualified support on this matter. The Opposition will give their full support to any demand that may be made by the Treasury bench for subvention from the Government of India. I would now like to say a word or two regarding the point raised by my friend Mr. Haridas Mazumdar yesterday. His case yesterday was that there would have been no necessity for this Bill if Government had not lost so much paddy and rice which was kept unprotected and uncared-for on the various railway station platforms. I have no doubt in my mind that the Ministry is liable to be impeached for sheer wastage of so much paddy, and I hope the Hon'ble Ministers who are now occupying such responsible positions in the country will prefer conviction on their own admission for this wastage to the denial of this charge. I am the last man to support this measure, namely, to tax the poor people of this country. No taxation measure should have been brought by the Hon'ble Finance Minister if he had been able to retrench a large sum of money which was being spent for nothing in the various departments.

Mr. BIREN ROY: Sir, the honourable member is still making observations of a general nature.

Mr. AMULYADHONE ROY: You sit down, Mr. Parliamentary Secretary. You have got no business to interrupt me in this way.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order, order. I think it is very undignified to speak in that tone Mr. Roy. You forget yourself.

Mr. AMULYADHONE ROY: I do not know if I deserve the angry eye on the part of the Chair, but I submit—

Mr. PRESIDENT: You forget yourself, Mr. Roy. You have no right to speak in that way.

Mr. AMULYADHONE ROY: But, Sir, the Parliamentary Secretary interrupted me.

Mr. PRESIDENT: That is a different question; but you must not speak in that way.

Mr. AMULYADHONE ROY: I am prepared to bow down to the ruling of the Chair, but not to the angry eye of anybody else.

Mr. PRESIDENT: You must not forget your position or the position of any other member of this House: I must stress that point.

Mr. AMULYADHONE ROY: But, Sir, what have I said?

Mr. PRESIDENT: About that, you may ask your colleagues after the meeting. They will tell you what you have said. Your tone was very objectionable.

Mr. AMULYADHONE ROY: Sir, may I not enquire what business had Mr. Roy to interrupt me—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Roy, in parliamentary debates it is permissible for one side to interrupt the other side but one should not lose his balance or lose his sense of decorum.

Mr. AMULYADHONE ROY: Sir, I came to learn that interruptions like this are not permissible as pointed out by you the other day in the case of Mr. Lalit Chandra Das.

Mr. BIREN ROY: Sir, I rose on a point of order——

Mr. AMULYADHONE ROY: No, Sir, he interrupted me and did not rise on a point of order.

Mr. PRESIDENT: One thing you forget Mr. Roy that your tone was very objectionable. The way you retorted was certainly very undignified. You ask your friends and colleagues and they will bear me out.

Mr. AMULYADHONE ROY: Did I use any unparliamentary language?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Your language was all right but the tone was very objectionable.

Mr. AMULYADHONE ROY: I am very glad to know that my language was not unparliamentary but the tone went out of order. I shall in future try my best to control my tone also. However, Sir, may I now most politely ask Mr. Biren Roy through you what was the point of order he was trying to raise.

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: Sir, my friend Mr. Roy has forgotten the thread of his speech and is going beside the point.

Mr. AMULYADHONE ROY: I am not going to take lesson from Mr. Hamidul Huq Chowdhury.

Mr. BIREN ROY: Sir, I rose on a point of order and when I just stated whether the honourable member was in order and before I actually came to the point of order he shouted out asking me to sit down. I rose on a point of order as to whether he was in order to make a general observation instead of confining his remarks to the Select Committee.

Mr. AMULYADHONE ROY: Sir, my pointed question to the Hon'ble Finance Minister is what objection he has got to sending the Bill to the Select Committee? Why is he so anxious to tax the people of Bengal without sending the Bill to Select Committee? Nothing will be lost to the Treasury Bench or the Government of Bengal if this Bill is referred to the Select Committee. On the other hand, there is every likelihood that the Bill will be improved if it is sent to the Select Committee. With these words, I support the motion for reference to Select Committee.

The Hon'ble Mr. TULSI CHANDRA COSWAMI: Mr. President, Sir, as my honourable friend Mr. Hamidul Huq Chowdhury has pointed out, this is really a one-clause Bill and there is no point in referring this Bill to a Select Committee. All that could be said on the Bill could be said on the floor of the House. I just wish to make, with your permission and with the permission of the House, one or two observations. Yesterday, Sir,—and I say this partly by way of apology for myself for not having replied to the debate on the first amendment—I did not rise to speak for the simple reason that there was so much bad economics and worse finance talked on the floor of this House that I thought that I might be tempted to become somewhat sarcastic in my reply to the speeches of learned professors and legislators. That is why I refrained from addressing the House.

This Bill is a very simple matter. Sales Tax Bills were adopted by most of the great countries of the world after the last war including some of the Dominions. The United Kingdom, on account of her fiscal traditions, came late in the field. Even before the United Kingdom, Madras introduced a sales tax. After all, it is a tax which ignores the academic controversies about direct and indirect taxation. It has a direct relation to the purchasing power of the people and thus meets the ends of justice and equity. So long as the essential commodities needed by the poorer section of the community are exempt from the sales tax, the tax could be defended in argument. The principle of a sales tax and a purchase tax is the same. In the United Kingdom it is called a purchase tax. The difference in nomenclature means no real difference at all.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: On a point of information, Sir. May I know why then the handloom cloths worn by the poor people have been taxed?

The Hon'ble Mr. TULSI CHANDRA GOSWAMI: As I was saying, the principle underlying this Bill, or the justification for a sales tax or a purchase tax is its productivity, that is its yield. You get a large amount of money for the Exchequer to spend for the object of furthering the social activities of the State without really touching any one very hard. It is this productivity which in India attracted the cupidity of needy Finance Ministers. Here I am before you asking for some assistance for buttressing the finances of Bengal. After all, I have been urged by a section—

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: On a point of order, Sir. I want to know whether this Bill would go to a Select Committee. The speech of the Hon'ble the Finance Minister is actually sabotaging our subsequent amendments. He has already spoken on clauses 2 and 3. So there will be no meaning in our moving the subsequent amendments. I protest against it.

Mr. PRESIDENT: He has every right to make general statement as well as to give reply to the specific points raised in connection with the amendments before the House.

The Hon'ble Mr. TULSI CHANDRA GOSWAMI: I was just saying that I have been pressed from all sides to approach the Government of India cap in hand. In order that I may approach the Government of India with some grace, in order that I may protect the credit of Bengal as the Finance Minister of this Province, I must ask for some measure of protection by way of taxation. That is an essential principle of public finance. I cannot approach the Centre or the public, in case I have to go to the latter at a later date for borrowing, without any conviction unless I am protected by an adequate measure of taxation. Sir, that is the reason why I come before this House with an innocent Bill like this. -I say again that the Bill will not tax the poorer section to any appreciable extent. There are people who have apparently enough purchasing power to buy things in the dear market of the day. As I said before, this taxation measure has direct relation to the purchasing power of the people at any given moment of time. Sir, I will take up no more of the time of the House at this stage.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that the Bill be referred to a Select Committee consisting of—the Hon'ble Mr. Tulsi Chandra Goswami, Minister in charge of the Finance Department,

Mr. R. W. N. Ferguson,
Mr. Naresh Nath Mookerjee,
Mr. Humayun Kabir,

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order, order. The House has divided. For the motion—14; Against the motion—21. The motion is, therefore, negatived. Now, the question before the House is that the Bengal Finance (Sales Tax) Amendment Bill, 1944, be taken into consideration.

(The motion was agreed to.)

Clause 1.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Clause 1 stand part of the Bill.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: I beg to move that in sub-clause (2) of clause 1 of the Bill, after the word "appoint" in line 3, the words, comma and figures "and shall remain in force till the 31st March, 1945," be added.

Sir, you will readily understand the principle underlying this amendment. This is only a logical corollary to a question which was discussed in this House before. The Hon'ble Finance Minister himself said that one of the first acts which he contemplated after he was returned to the Assembly was to provide some machinery by which taxation measures could be annually reviewed by the Legislature. You will remember, Sir, that one of the main difficulties we have felt in discussions concerning the budget in this House has been that since we do not consider the different items separately, we can only offer general remarks. You will also remember that we have found that even if we discussed particular items separately, that did not give this House that control over the functioning of Government which is desirable in the interest of democracy. Today, Sir, I am very glad to learn from my honourable friend Khan Bahadur Saiyed Muazzam-uddin Hosain that he is a great supporter of democracy. It is really a revelation and I have appreciated and welcomed this admission on his behalf. I would put one proposition to him. Since he is such a great supporter of democracy and since he wants that democratic principles should be followed in the administration of the province he ought to be the first person to rise and support my present amendment. This amendment seeks to introduce one of the democratic devices through which the Legislature exercises control over the administration. You will remember that the force of my contention has been admitted by the Hon'ble Finance Minister himself. I pressed before the House that a convention should be established that there should be an annual Finance Bill. Supplies could then be voted, item by item. Also, the measures of taxation through which moneys accrue to the Exchequer of the province can then be annually surveyed and reviewed by the Legislature.

In that connection, the Hon'ble the Finance Minister said that if such a provision could be included in our procedure, or if such convention could be built up here, that would conduce to the better administration of the province. In surveying the different items of supplies, the Legislature could immediately scrutinize and examine the activities of the Government during the past year. At present once a taxation measure is put on the Statute Book, it has a tendency to stay there. It is not a case of a rolling stone gathering no moss. On the contrary, this stone never ceases to roll and gathers all the moss that one can imagine. In fact, taxation bills not only gather moss but become so rusty that very often we hear only the creaking of the machine of administration and fail to feel its smooth functioning in the different aspects of the life of the province. Therefore, Sir, when the Hon'ble the Finance Minister says that he welcomes such an innovation, I take him at his word. I would suggest that this House should make a beginning in that direction. Certainly, it is within the competence of this House to build up such a convention. Whenever any fresh taxation measure is introduced in this House, the life of that tax should be limited to the period of one year. There is nothing astounding or surprising in establishing a convention like this. A similar practice actually exists even under the present regime in the Central Legislature. There the different items of supplies are brought for the consideration of the Legislature annually through a Finance Bill. If we follow the English convention, there, as the Hon'ble the Finance Minister himself knows very well, the Finance Act is an Annual Act. Every tax is from that point of view an annually renewable measure. Even the income-tax is an annually renewable tax. They are brought up every year to meet the necessities of the situation. It is only by making these taxation measures annual that we can exercise proper control over the functioning of Government.

You, Sir, with your large administrative experience and with your knowledge of constitutional affairs know very well that this was a right which the Parliament did not get in a single day. The British Parliament had to fight over a very long period to get this right. It was resisted on behalf of the bureaucracy, on behalf of the oligarchy which at one time ruled, on behalf of the monarchy—on behalf of the king by persons who got the odious title of King's men. I would ask this House to consider if we cannot build up a similar convention here. The Houses of Parliament took several centuries to get this right. To recognise it and give final shape to it took a longer period. Today every Finance Bill or every financial matter is brought for the scrutiny of the Legislature, with the result that the Government of the day can never get away without giving an explanation to the Parliament. Therefore, it is all the more necessary in a country like this and with a Legislature like ours that we should have a similar convention.

It has been our experience during the last 6 or 7 years in this Legislature that Government, whenever they introduced any fresh taxation measure, were profuse in their promises. They said that the money so collected would be spent on the nation-building departments. Their promises were very large but unfortunately up till now, the performance has generally been very small. There has been no correspondence whatever between the promise and the performance. One of the main grounds for building up a convention lies here. We cannot immediately by legislation create the procedure of a Finance Bill. We cannot build up a convention in a day; but we can certainly, consistent with our powers, build up the convention by which fresh taxation measures would be made annually renewable. I submit, Sir, it is desirable to have this control over the finances of the province in the interest of good administration.

My honourable friend, the Leader of the House, has made what I would call an astounding proposition today. He said on the floor of the House today that it is the proper time for taxation. He laid down a general principle that at a time when the country is suffering from famine, at a time when the economic life of a very large proportion of the people has been deranged almost beyond recovery, the moment was opportune when fresh burdens of taxation should be imposed. I do not deny that today there is a section of the people who are well off and who are getting richer and richer. In fact, some of the symptoms which Karl Marx described as the essence of a decaying Capitalism seem to be exhibited in our country. After the onset of the war, we find that a situation has been created in which fewer and fewer people are getting richer and richer. The Hon'ble Finance Minister has come forward with a legislation which, he says, seeks to tax the rich in order to relieve the sufferings of the poor. If this were really so, he would meet the unanimous support of all sections of the House. He no doubt claims that it is a measure of taxation in which the poor will be spared but at the same time he also says that unfortunately some section of the poor will be touched. He also claims that he has tried to mollify the rigour of this tax by later on qualifying it and excluding the essential cloths and the essential articles of food from its operation. But he has forgotten to tell us that other amenities of life of the poor will be taxed. There is no provision in the Bill for exempting medicine which the poorer section of the community will also require. He forgot to tell us why he did not consider it necessary to exempt text-books for the children of the poorer class. Of course, he did not say that the poorer class can dispense with education, or that education should be the monopoly of those who can afford. I have no quarrel with him for any attitude he may have; but I would suggest that his professions of democracy are strangely inconsistent with an attitude like this. Education is just as necessary for the poorer classes as it is for the richer section of the people. He should have excluded from the operation of the Bill text-books and similar other things connected with the education of the children of the poorer section of the people. But he has not done so. The fact that he has not done so proves that all his talk about democracy is merely a talk and not an actual faith.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN:

Sir, is it all relevant when we are not discussing the Bill, clause by clause?

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: I submit, Sir, that I am perfectly relevant. My contention is: that a Bill like this should be renewed annually. The main reason for renewing a Bill of this type annually is to give the Legislature a control over the activities of the Ministry. I have to refer to some of the activities in which the Ministry indulged. I would put it to him, through you, Sir, whether it is relevant or irrelevant to discuss the provisions of the Bill when it is going to be a permanent fixture. Instead of giving such large and wide powers to the Government, I am suggesting that we may have some control over their activities so that every year the Legislature can take stock of the situation.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: I rise on a point of order, Sir. Is this all relevant to the amendment?

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Sir, the point of order is absolutely frivolous. I am saying all this in order to develop my argument.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Kabir, certainly you are on the border line.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: I submit to your ruling, Sir. But since you say that I am only on the border line, it follows I have not yet crossed the boundary. On that admission I maintain that I was relevant. And I repeat that this frivolous point of order comes with ill grace from a person of the position of the Leader of the House. A person who arrogates to himself the position of the Leader of the House should not rise on a frivolous point of order.

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: On a point of order, Sir. My friend Mr. Kabir has used the expression "arrogates to himself the position of the Leader of the House". Is that in order?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Kabir, what is it that you said about "arrogating," etc.?

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: I said "the honourable member who is arrogating to himself the position of the Leader of the House". But I would now qualify it by saying "who is elevated into the position of the leader of the House" if that will satisfy my honourable friend on the other side, who I may point out is also out of order in speaking from a position which he does not occupy. His point of order therefore should be ruled out. Therefore, Sir, I may repeat what I said—with this qualification—that I am prepared to elevate my honourable friend to a position of dignity instead of his waiting to arrogate to himself that position—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Kabir, it is not proper to use the expression "arrogate".

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Sir, I have already qualified it.

Mr. PRESIDENT: You should not use the expressions "arrogate" and "frivolous". It would be unbecoming on your part.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: If you rule that the word "frivolous" is an unparliamentary expression—a term which, however, I have not applied to the Honourable the Leader of the House but to his point of order only, I would submit to your ruling and will not use the term in future. But, Sir, I have thought that such terms are not only a perfectly parliamentary way of speaking but I should have also thought that such description very often adds force to the argument instead of detracting from it. However, Sir, to pursue the point that I was developing and which an honourable supporter of Government did not obviously like, and did not like to such an extent that he wanted to disturb me in my argument at any cost, I was suggesting to my friends on the other side that limitation of taxation measures to a year is a convention which should be built up in this House.

Mr. KADER BAKSH: On a point of order, Sir. Was not Mr. Kabir outside the scope of his amendment? A moment ago he was talking about education which has nothing to do with the clauses of the Bill, at least nothing to do with clause 1 of the Bill. I think he should not be allowed to do so.

Mr. PRESIDENT: That point of order has been already disposed of, and I pointed out that he was dangerously on the border line.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: You have now, Sir, qualified your own ruling by the word "dangerously". I wonder if this be due to an infection of the adjectives and adverbs we have used!

However, Sir, let me proceed with the argument that I was developing. I was referring to a convention which we have not yet built up, namely, that taxation measures should be annual, a practice which obtains in all the democratic countries of the world. If my honourable friend opposite says he would like to have a new type of democracy under which powers should be delegated to Government and that, once delegated, the Legislature should never survey or review them, then I for one do not want that type of democracy. As I was saying, Sir, all democratic countries in the world provide that taxation measures are to be annual. The amendment that I want to incorporate in this Bill also seeks the same end, namely, that this taxation measure should be an annual measure. It is all the more necessary in the case of this particular Bill. When originally this Bill was piloted through the two Houses of the Legislature, the then Finance Minister of the Government of Bengal, Mr. H. S. Suhrawardy, gave a definite promise on the floor of the House that the money that would accrue to the Exchequer from this particular tax would be spent on the nation-building departments. The Hon'ble Finance Minister of the day has admitted that this has not been done. This has been our experience not only with regard to this particular taxation measure. I would submit that it is all the more necessary and desirable that my amendment should be included in the Bill. If next year, the money from this tax is found to have been well spent, we are even now prepared to give an assurance in advance that we shall renew this taxation measure without any discussion or comment. If, however, the money is not well spent, then it will be the duty of the Legislature to scrutinise the manner in which the money has been actually spent and disposed of.

In view of this fact, I would ask the honourable members of the other side to support this amendment. They should also remember that this is something that increases the power of the Legislature as a whole and not only the power of the Opposition, nor does it mean taking away any power from the Government party. No party will remain in power in perpetuity: they would be continually interchanging their positions—the Opposition and the Government Party—as the democratic see-saw continues. Sir, I suggest that in the interest of the House as a whole, and also in the interest of the poorer section of the people of Bengal, it is desirable that we should make all money measures annual measures. We should pass this particular Bill which is before us as an annual measure. I ask for the co-operation of every section of the House to make it an annual Bill, so that we can survey the position annually and have control over the administrative machinery of the Government.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Motion moved: that in sub-clause (2) of clause 1 of the Bill, after the word “appoint” in line 3, the words, comma and figures “and shall remain in force till the 31st March, 1945,” be added.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Mr. President, Sir, I do not think I can add to or improve upon the arguments already advanced by my friend, Mr. Humayun Kabir, in moving his amendment. The only thing that strikes me as important is the necessity for making it an annual measure. This House has every right to see and know what use has been made of the revenue derived from the Bengal Finance (Sales Tax) Act since 1941. It was argued by the Hon'ble the Finance Minister in the course of the debate that the money would be wholly spent for the improvement of the nation-building departments. If the object of this taxation measure is to meet the increasing expenses in the shape of the travelling and other allowances of the Hon'ble Ministers, their Parliamentary Secretaries and the officers of Government, then certainly this House has every right to turn down the Bill now before us. I would like to know from the Hon'ble the Finance Minister as to how the amount so far collected under the Bengal Finance (Sales Tax) Act of 1941 has been expended. I think it is well-known that when the Income-Tax Act of the Central Legislature was placed on the Statute Book, it was considered to be a temporary measure. It was described only as a famine measure to meet a certain emergency. But since then it has been permanently placed on the Statute Book. So our objection is that as it is an emergent measure intended to meet an abnormal situation, it should not be the permanent law of the land. It should be a temporary measure. Government are handicapped, we are told, by a deficit Budget and with a view to meeting part of that deficit by taxation and in order to show the Central Government that the Provincial Government has done something for which they can legitimately claim subvention, the sales tax is sought to be doubled. As I have already said, this Bill should not be placed on the Statute Book as a permanent measure.

Sir, the House is certainly entitled to know the position and revise its decision in the light of subsequent developments. If we find that the necessity for the renewal of this measure no longer exists, we will come to a decision accordingly. So it is certainly undesirable to place it permanently on the Statute Book. With these words, I support the amendment of my friend Mr. Humayun Kabir.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Mr. President, Sir, the Hon'ble the Finance Minister was telling the House that this Finance Sales Tax measure is not a new thing in Bengal. He cited instances of other countries. We do not dispute it. The Hon'ble Minister refers to the case of Madras and states that in Madras this tax was imposed. True, but he did not mention one very important fact in this connection and that important fact is: why Madras imposed this tax? Sir, Madras was going in for the Prohibition scheme, and how could they get money to meet the deficit due to the abolition of excise revenue? That was the problem before the Madras Government. So, they resorted to this taxation measure. They were determined to forego the excise revenue. Mr. Rajagopalachariar was then the Finance Minister and he piloted that measure to meet the deficit that was brought about by adoption of the policy of Prohibition. But that is not at all the case here. At the time of his budget speech, the Hon'ble the Finance Minister told us about the most interesting increase in excise revenue in Bengal. Sir, this increase is certainly a feather to the cap of the Muslim League Government. Sir, this sale tax should be made a temporary one. I do not agree with Mr. Humayun Kabir that this measure should be made an annual one. I do not go to that length. This tax should be a temporary one. In the Statement of Objects and Reasons, the then Finance Minister, the Hon'ble Mr. H. S. Suhrawardy, told us in 1941, "that the resources of the Government of Bengal are not sufficient to enable them to maintain the natural development of the programme of nation-building activities that are in progress". He further said that "for the purpose of financing the further beneficent measures for the economic improvement of the province this Bill was being introduced". But in the present Bill there is no such reason and that is all the more reason why this Bill should be made a temporary measure and not a permanent one. The object of doubling the tax has been clearly stated by the Hon'ble the Finance Minister. The Hon'ble Mr. Goswami observed that a case must be made out before the Government of India before he could go "with a cap in hand" for subvention. That is the reason why he resorts to this new taxation measure. But, Sir, why does he not tax the luxuries of the rich and raise this amount of Rs. 1½ crores, which he expects to raise by this taxation measure? He did not follow that course. Why this should be borne by the rich and the poor alike? Sir, the incidence will weigh 20 per cent. heavier upon the poor because of their poverty than upon the rich and that is the greater reason why this measure should be a temporary one and not a permanent one.

Sir, if all these things be considered, I think the Hon'ble Finance Minister will agree to the amendment of Mr. Humayun Kabir that it should be continued till 31st March, 1945.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: I think, Sir, the House is going to close now. I suggest that instead of taking the Land Alienation Bill, tomorrow this Bill be continued.

MR. PRESIDENT: If it is the desire of the House, I have no objection. The House stands adjourned till 1 p.m. tomorrow.

Adjournment.

The Council then adjourned till 1 p.m. on Wednesday, the 15th March, 1944.

BENGAL LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL DEBATES

First Session, 1944--No. 23.

THE COUNCIL met in the Legislative Chamber of the Legislative Building, Calcutta, on Wednesday, the 15th March, 1944, at 1 p.m., being the twenty-third day of the First Session of 1944, pursuant to section 62(2)(a) of the Government of India Act, 1935.

Mr. President (the Hon'ble Sir BIJOY PRASAD SINGH ROY, K.C.I.E.) was in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Oath.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order, order. Mr. Steven will take the oath.

Mr. J. W. R. Steven accordingly took the oath.

Bengal Non-Agricultural Tenancy Bill.

89. Mr. BIRENDRA KISHORE ROY CHOWDHURY: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Revenue Department be pleased to state how many representations have been received by the Government of Bengal since 1941 from the different Bar Associations of the Province with regard to the proposed "Bengal Non-Agricultural Tenancy Bill"?

(b) Is it a fact that most of the Bar Associations are opposed to the Bill in its present form?

MINISTER in charge of the REVENUE DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Mr. Tarak Nath Mukerjee): (a) Three.

(b) No. They have only suggested a few amendments to the Bill.

Mr. PRESIDENT: What about the other questions that were held up yesterday?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: They may be answered tomorrow, Sir.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Very well, they will be answered tomorrow.

Adjournment motion regarding shortage of salt supply in Bengal districts.

Mr. NAGENDRA NATH MOHOLANOBISH: Sir, I beg leave to move the adjournment motion of which I gave notice yesterday. The motion runs thus:

"That this Council do adjourn its business to discuss a definite matter of urgent public importance, namely, the failure of the Government to supply salt to the people in the mofussil districts of Bengal particularly in the districts of Northern Bengal, where acute distress prevails for want of supply of salt."

Mr. PRESIDENT: What is your source of information?

Mr. NAGENDRA NATH MOHOLANOBISH: My course of information is my personal knowledge so far as Jalpaiguri is concerned and so far as other places are concerned the information received from very respectable persons including members of this House that similar distress is prevailing in the districts of Dinajpur, Rangpur, Bogra and other places.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Should you not have information from Government before moving the adjournment motion? Don't you like to have information with regard to the position from Government?

Mr. NAGENDRA NATH MOHOLANOBISH: Sir, so far as the actual distress is concerned, there is no doubt about it, because I have got my personal knowledge and I do not think any further information is required.

Mr. PRESIDENT: You want to move a censure motion against Government, but would you not like to have full information on the whole question before you do so?

Mr. NAGENDRA NATH MOHOLANOBISH: I would rather have a discussion on this subject in the House in order to emphasise this failure.

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: Sir, the position as regards salt has been ventilated in the press and in other papers for a considerable time past and the actual difficulties have also been made known. The honourable gentleman who has brought forward the motion cannot say that he has only just come to know that there is shortage of salt in the various districts of Bengal or in Northern Bengal. So the position is known to this House and the public for some considerable time. Government is trying its best to send salt to all these areas from the reserve that it has built up, and quite a satisfactory account has been given of that. About 10 days ago the position regarding the despatch of salt was announced in the papers and in that statement Government admitted that owing to certain transport difficulties, owing to the fact that the Government of India had stopped rail-borne salt traffic across India from Karachi, owing to the fact that the promise of sending 30,000 tons of salt every month failed for two months, there is shortage of salt. Government made out a programme for sending salt to selected places in Bengal; but there was a break-down in movement on account of railway transport getting jammed. All these facts are well-known to the public for a long time. So, Sir, this matter is not of recent occurrence.

Mr. PRESIDENT: What do you say to this, Mr. Moholanobish?

Mr. NAGENDRA NATH MOHOLANOBISH: Sir, my submission in reply to the statement of the Hon'ble Minister that Government have been trying their best to supply salt where there is deficit and that discussions were made and explanations given in the past with regard to the situation, is that the situation is gradually getting from bad to worse. The position with regard to Jalpaiguri district is that people in the mofussil are not having their meals for days together for want of salt and the situation is so bad today that it requires immediate attention and therefore the matter should be discussed in this Council to draw the pointed attention of the Government. The explanation of the Hon'ble Minister, as just now given or attempted to be given, is not at all satisfactory. Sir, I want to establish the shortage of salt by discussion. It is certainly a definite matter of urgent public importance. If this is not so, I do not think there can be any other more urgent matter of public importance for discussion.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Are Government going to say anything on this subject?

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: Sir, I may say that we have got 26 trucks for carrying salt to the different parts of Bengal. We have been moving in the matter since a long time, even long before the public was aware that there was likelihood of shortage of salt. For the last two months or more, I have been trying to solve the problem of salt shortage. We had the programme ready for despatch but due to railway difficulties, over which this Government have no control, we were unable to act according to our programme. Now, the Railways have placed at our disposal 26 trucks and we have been sending salt to various parts of Bengal. We have been also sending salt by steamers and boats, but as there is no arrangement for the delivery of salt at Jalpaiguri by boat, I have not been able to send it in this manner. North Bengal as a whole has been suffering from this shortage because boats or steamers cannot go there. I would submit to you, Sir, to consider whether the motion is admissible or not because one of the points to be taken into consideration in admitting an adjournment motion is to see whether the subject-matter is of recent occurrence. Here the question is not of recent occurrence.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The point is: that though this is not a matter of recent occurrence, it is a continuing grievance; and probably, if the honourable member has correctly ascertained the facts, the situation is growing more acute. So, I would suggest that Government should make a fuller statement on the subject to satisfy the House. If the Government are prepared to do so, I would request the honourable member not to press his adjournment motion today. I would suggest to you to make the statement tomorrow.

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: Sir, make it day after tomorrow.

Mr. PRESIDENT: All right. As the Hon'ble Minister is prepared to make a fuller statement day after tomorrow, I would suggest, Mr. Moholambish, that you do not press your motion today. After hearing the statement if you are not satisfied, you may move your motion. I will waive the question of urgency and would then consider whether your motion should be admitted for discussion or not.

Mr. NACENDRA NATH MOHOLANOBISH: As you please, Sir.

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: Sir, may I say a few words in regard to this motion?

Mr. PRESIDENT: It is all over now.

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: If you want to shut out the discussion, Sir, then I have nothing to say.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Certainly not. That is far from my mind. I am not shutting out the discussion. I am, if I may say so, encouraging discussion. Mr. Moholanobish made a statement before the House which I think is of sufficient importance. The Hon'ble Minister is prepared to satisfy the House with fuller information. So, how I am shutting out discussion?

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: Sir, the statement just made by the Hon'ble Minister strengthens case for the motion instead of weakening it.

Mr. PRESIDENT: So much the better for you. I do not understand why you are objecting to postponement of the discussion till day after tomorrow when the mover himself has agreed to do that.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, may I add one word in the matter of the admissibility of this adjournment motion? You have said that this motion will come up after a full statement has been made by the Hon'ble Minister concerned. But the first condition to allow an adjournment motion is that 13 members should rise up in support of an adjournment motion being taken.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Das, have not I made the point clear? The Hon'ble Minister is going to make a fuller statement day after tomorrow. If the honourable member who has given notice of this adjournment motion thinks that he is not satisfied with the statement, he may move the motion and then I shall consider whether in view of the statement made and in view of the situation then prevailing the motion would be admitted or not. I waive the question of urgency, because it is a continuing grievance and it will remain an urgent matter even then.

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: Suppose, Sir, there occurs a vacuum and nobody draws attention to it when it occurs but draws attention after a considerable time to the fact that the vacuum is continuing, will the honourable member be justified in bringing up an adjournment motion?

Mr. PRESIDENT: That is a hypothetical case, Mr. Suhrawardy. Mr. Moholanobish's contention is that there is shortage of salt in several districts in Northern Bengal.

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: The shortage has been in existence for a considerable time.

Mr. PRESIDENT: It may exist for a considerable time; but if he assures that the situation has now become far more acute, then certainly he will be justified in claiming an adjournment of the business of the House. Its admissibility would depend on the facts you state and the facts that Mr. Moholanobish can make out in support of his motion.

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: Sir, the Hon'ble Minister does not seem to agree with you and he is not in favour of admitting this motion.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The admissibility of the adjournment motion does not lie with him but with the Chair.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: And also with the House. If day after tomorrow the requisite number of members do not turn up, then the motion may not be taken up, if the Hon'ble Minister objects.

Mr. PRESIDENT: If it is a matter of such great importance, then the 13 members ought to be present in the House.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, may I mention the point of privilege raised by me the other day when you said that you would look into the language which the Hon'ble Minister for Civil Supplies used in his speech?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Kindly mention it again tomorrow. I have not been able to go through the speech as yet.

The Bengal Finance (Sales Tax) Amendment Bill, 1944.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, I rise to support the amendment moved by Mr. Humayun Kabir, and in doing so I must at the very outset tell my honourable friends through you that mere acceptance of the amendment will not serve the purpose. My suggestion is that a machinery must be created consisting of the members of the Legislature and other experts—it may be called a Committee of Caution—whose function will be to help the administration in the making of important estimates and also in considering other matters in connection with a scheme or a programme that may be taken up by them in course of the year. Sir, I have already pointed out in my budget speech that Sales Tax should not be a permanent feature of the administration and the amendment also suggests that it should be a temporary measure for one year only and that it should be brought before the House next year and opportunities must be given to the Legislature to go through its pros and cons and then renew it next time, if necessary. Therefore, I suggest that a machinery like the Committee of Caution should be set up which will work and supervise from day to day or month to month the activities of the Government so that it can be reviewed at the end of the year usefully in the light of the criticism and report submitted by the said Committee of Caution.

With this suggestion, I commend the amendment to the acceptance of the House.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order, order. The question before the House is: that in sub-clause (2) of clause 1 of the Bill, after the word "appoint" in line 3, the words, comma and figures "and shall remain in force till the 31st March, 1945" be added.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order, order. The House has divided. Ayes—18; Noes—21. Therefore, the amendment is negatived.

Clause 1.

The question before the House is that clause 1 stand part of the Bill.
(The motion was agreed to.)

Clause 2.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Clause 2 stand part of the Bill.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: I beg to move that clause 2 of the Bill be deleted.

Sir, clause 2 provides for enhancement of the rate of tax from one quarter to half an anna in the rupee. I have already given my arguments while moving other amendments that this Bill is absolutely unnecessary. It will operate harshly on the poor people whom the Hon'ble the Leader of the House wanted yesterday to exempt from the operation of this tax.

As a matter of fact, it will deal a severe blow upon the poorer classes who will be the worst sufferers. I had no intention of moving this amendment but the refusal of the Government to yield even on minor points such as the question of making this Bill renewable from year to year has impelled me to move the amendment. Government want to carry their proposals by sheer weight of numbers. But that is no proof of the fact that public opinion is behind them in regard to the provisions of the Bill. As the last voting has shown, if the European Group had not voted with the Government, the Opposition would have had a clear majority. I may repeat, Sir, that popular opinion is against the Bill and the time is hardly opportune for the introduction of a measure like this. (The Hon'ble Mr. TULSI CHANDRA GOSWAMI: Question.) You may shout "question," but the public are definitely against further taxation. They are already over-taxed and they have reached the maximum limit of taxation and I have no doubt that this Bill, if carried, will prove to be the last straw on the camel's back. We cried in vain yesterday and the day before. Not even the Select Committee motion sponsored by the Opposition was accepted by the Government. My amendment regarding reference to a Select Committee was a very modest one, because I wanted 20th March to be fixed as the last date for the submission of the Select Committee's report. Even this simple concession has not been granted by the Government. If the Government had been actuated by a sincere desire to do good to the public, I mean the poorer sections of the people, they would not have opposed the motion for reference of the Bill to a Select Committee. In fact, we are prepared to accept the principle of the Bill. But it must be a qualified acceptance. The Hon'ble Minister in his Statement of Objects and Reasons attached to the Bill mentioned that "the Bill seeks to increase the revenue of the Province by raising the rate of the tax leviable under the Bengal Finance (Sales Tax) Act, 1941, from one quarter to one half of an anna in the rupee". Nowhere in the speech of the Hon'ble the Finance Minister yesterday there was any indication as to the approximate amount that would be available from this tax. We do not know how much was realised last year and the year before after the passing of the original Act and how the money was spent. Our suspicion is that the amount was not spent for the purpose for which it was intended; nor will the increased income be so utilised. In other words, the poor people will not be benefited even though the tax is proposed to be doubled in the course of three years. So, it appears that the taxation measure is going to be permanently placed on the Statute Book. Who knows that the Finance Minister will not again come forward with another Bill of this nature next year and ask for further enhancement of the rate of the tax? I do not think the Government has any justification for embarking upon a legislation of this kind before retrenching the current expenditure of Government. I have no hesitation in repeating what I said yesterday. Government has become top-heavy and there is absolutely no reason why it should seek to impose additional taxation without curtailing its day-to-day expenditure.

Sir, I may remind the House that two Retrenchment Committees were appointed in the course of ten years? The first was the Mukherji Committee and then the Swan Committee. If I remember aright, only partial effect was given to the recommendations of these Retrenchment Committees by Government. If all the recommendations or at any rate a substantial portion of their recommendations had been carried out, then sufficient money would have been available for expenditure on the nation-building departments. It is high time that another Retrenchment Committee were appointed to explore the avenues of curtailment of expenditure. Sir, committees are formed for the purpose of solving problems. So far as our Government is concerned, these committees are meant only for shelving problems. Though these two Retrenchment Committees consisted of members who had experience of administration and were conversant with the affairs of Government, and though there were officials, business men, lawyers and other able men on these committees, yet their recommendations were not accepted simply because it did not suit the purpose of Government to reduce expense on the lines suggested. I think Government will be laying down a bad principle in bringing forward a taxation measure of this kind every year without effecting economy in the current expenditure of the Government.

Sir, with these words, I move my amendment.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order, order. Amendment moved: that clause 2 of the Bill be deleted.

Mr. MUNCTURAM JAIPURIA: Spoke in Hindi.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: Sir, in rising to support the amendment moved by my friend Rai Bahadur Keshab Chandra Banerjee I would like to say a few words. It may seem strange why the Opposition which has accepted the principle of the Bill should support the amendment which practically seeks to do away with the entire tax that is proposed to be levied under this Act. Now, Sir, in supporting the principle of the Bill the Opposition made it clear that they wanted to refer the Bill to a Select Committee for the purpose of improving the provisions of the Bill so as to make it less harsh to the poorer section of the people by throwing the burden more on the richer section of the people. Even though Government member supported that view, they opposed the reference of the Bill to a Select Committee and I do not know why. With the comfortable majority that they have they defeated all the motions for circulation. The next amendment moved by Mr. Kabir suggested that the Bill might be made a temporary measure lasting only till the 31st March, 1945, and it should have been accepted by the House. With regard to that my friend Mr. Kabir pointed out that the present amending Bill was contemplated by the Government as a temporary measure. In the Statement of Objects and Reasons of the Bill and in his statement with regard to the budget the Hon'ble Finance Minister stated that he was presenting an extraordinary budget with deficit of 10 crores and in order that he might have some support from the Central Government—

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: On a point of order, Sir. I confess I ought to have raised this point of order earlier and am doing so rather late. My point of order is that amendments Nos. 12 and 13 do not seem to be in accordance with the rules, because the amendment seeks to negative the whole clause. The whole clause will have to be put before the House. Therefore an amendment cannot be moved which negatives the whole of a clause.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The point is that an amendment of this nature which negatives a whole clause should not be allowed. I quite appreciate your point. But I find from past precedents that it has been the practice in this House to allow such amendments. In fact, before you drew my attention to this point, my attention had already been drawn to this fact.

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: Well, if only for the purpose of allowing a discussion, this is put in, then it is a different matter; but so far as it is considered as an amendment, it is contrary to the principle of all amendments.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Admittedly, this is a negative amendment.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: So far as the quota is concerned——

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: If this amendment is carried, then the other clauses of the Bill will be of no effect and the whole Bill will be killed.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: I will show that the whole Bill will not be killed even if this amendment is passed. My friend Mr. Hamidul Huq Chowdhury was rather hasty in rising to his point of order which he ought to have done before the amendment had been moved. However, Sir, I will show that the entire Bill will not be killed even if this amendment is allowed to be passed. And I am developing this part of my argument. If you will look at clause 3 of the Bill, you will find that the Legislature proposes that in respect of columns 1 and 2 of the Schedule—item 16 of the Schedule—the following entry be substituted. Therefore, if you look to column 16 of the Schedule, you will find that that clause is proposed to be deleted altogether and a new clause substituted by which the Government will have some additional revenue. Clause 16 of the Bill runs——

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: Sir, the honourable member——

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: Sir, I do not yield to the interruptions of Mr. Hamidul Huq Chowdhury.

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: Sir, I am not interrupting; but I rose on a point of order.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Have you risen on a point of order?

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: Yes, Sir. I have never contended before this House——

Mr. PRESIDENT: That is not a point of order: that is personal explanation.

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: Sir, the honourable member is discussing a point which has not been raised.

Mr. PRESIDENT: That is not a point of order. Go on, Mr. Mukherjee.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: As I was saying, if you look to item 16 of the Schedule, you will find that item 16 has been deleted and a new clause has been inserted exempting lungis, dhooties and sarees: that was an exception and no tax was leviable on the handloom woven cloth. By clause 3 the Legislature is going to introduce an additional revenue from handloom cloth which even the members of Government who spoke yesterday said that they are not going to tax. So the provision of clause 3 is against the intention of the Legislature and against the intention of the framers of the Bill. But that is not my point. My point is that even if you delete clause 2, you will get some revenue if clause 3 remains. Therefore, the entire provision which the Hon'ble Finance Minister wants is not being negatived. So I say that the amendment is in order. Now, to resume the argument which I was going to make—Government having seen that they have a comfortable majority want to go on with this Bill even though there are defects in it—they want that the Bill should be passed as it stands without a single alteration by sheer weight of votes; as we have seen in connection with the last amendment, Government won against 18 votes to 21 which include 5 or 6 members of the European Group who voted with them although if I am not mistaken they were in sympathy with the object of amendment No. 11. So far as this amendment is concerned, I support it mainly because the Bill seeks to impose an additional burden on the poor tax-payers and it is admitted that the poor tax-payer is unable to bear the tax imposed on him. I support it also because the Government thought it fit to abolish altogether the protection which was given to handloom woven cloth under the main Act.

Mr. NAGENDRA NATH MOHOLANOBISH: Sir, I beg to support the amendment for the simple reason that after hearing the Hon'ble the Finance Minister I have not been able to satisfy myself why this enhancement of tax is really considered necessary. The only ground that was sought to be made out was that there was a deficit in the budget and that the Government want to balance the budget to a certain, I should say very small or insignificant, extent, with this additional tax. My submission would be that this deficit budget is due not to the ordinary expenses of Government, but to some extraordinary causes due to war, and that, therefore, it is proper that we should look elsewhere for balancing the budget and not tax the people of Bengal for balancing the budget.

Now, it is said that unless we tax ourselves we cannot ask for subvention from the Government of India. Why this delicacy, I cannot understand. Why can you not place your case before the Government of India with the statement that we, the Bengal administrators, are not really responsible for this huge expenditure, this is not due to the ordinary costs of administration, but due to war and therefore we do not propose to tax the people of Bengal to balance the budget. We only want help from you. It is certainly a clearer way and a candid way of approaching the Government of India. It is no use hoodwinking ourselves saying, look here we have taxed ourselves, but still we have not been able to meet our expenditure. You cannot meet this huge deficit by taxation alone. It is no use tinkering with the question. The reasons given by the Hon'ble the Finance Minister for imposing this additional burden of taxation are quite unconvincing. I hope the honourable members of this House will appreciate that the taxation that is proposed to be levied is not really justifiable. It has been very well said, Sir, that the only thing progressive in this world is tax. Once you get a tax anyhow imposed, you will find it will have a natural tendency of increasing. This Sales Tax Act which was enacted three years ago, is being amended today with a view to increase the tax to what extent—to a cent. per cent. increase. It has also been said that this is a very opportune time to impose a fresh taxation and that people have got very rich owing to causes related to war. Of course, there are few—very few—very limited few, who are earning more money due to war. But what is the percentage of these people, not even 5 per cent. of the total population of Bengal. The rest 95 per cent. of the population, I am afraid, are really groaning under taxation, the high price and what not. Is it, I ask, Sir, a proper time for taxation? If so, tax those people, invent a method of taxing all those people who are getting rich due to war. By introducing fresh taxation you not only make the rich pay but also make the humblest of the humble of this country pay while obviously they are unable to bear any fresh burden.

Now, Sir, why don't you tax at a very high rate motor-cars and other items of luxury? Why don't you tax high class cigarettes? Why don't you tax costly liquors and also those who earn lots of money due to war? Why don't you charge 50 per cent. of the income of the Turf Club? Well, you cannot do so, and for reasons obvious! You can only touch the pocket of the poor, the dumb millions, who cannot protest and whose protest does not reach your ears. I submit, Sir, that this is a most inequitable proposal that the Hon'ble Finance Minister could possibly have brought forward before this House.

With these remarks, I whole-heartedly support the amendment proposed by Rai Bahadur Keshab Chandra Banerjee.

The Hon'ble Mr. TULSI CHANDRA GOSWAMI: Sir, this is an amendment which is intended to defeat the purpose of the Bill. I have already spoken—

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Sir, we cannot follow the Hon'ble Minister. If the Hon'ble Minister comes to the microphone he will be audible.

The Hon'ble Mr. TULSI CHANDRA GOSWAMI: Sir, this is an amendment which is calculated to defeat the purpose of the Bill. Yesterday I spoke at some length on the principle of the Bill, and I think I was able to justify to any honourable member, who was in a mood to listen to my argument, the imposition of this fresh tax. It is absolutely not true to say that we must view this proposal, in the words of Mr. Humayun Kabir, against the background of famine and distress. We should rather view it against the background of the excess purchasing power that has been created by the war and against the background of inflation. As I said, this is a measure which has a direct relation to the purchasing power of the people and as such I think this is a just measure of taxation.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that clause 2 of the Bill be deleted.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order, order. The House has divided. Ayes—16; Noes—25. Therefore, the amendment is negatived.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: I beg to move that in paragraph (a) of clause 2 of the Bill, for the words "one-half" in line 2, the word "one-third" be substituted.

This, Sir, is only a palliative. I find from the remarks of the Hon'ble the Finance Minister that he is determined that as Bengal is suffering today from the evils of inflation, he will, like Sir Galahad, protect the province from the ravages of inflation. That there is inflation today no one denies. But I would ask the Hon'ble Minister to consider in this connection two questions: firstly, who is responsible for this inflation and secondly what are the conditions which led to the inflation? Is not inflation the direct result of war, since every service which Government want for war purposes has to be paid for at higher than the usual market rate? Thus, the inflation, Sir, is due to lack of voluntary co-operation on the part of the people. Will he consider this point? He said that no intelligent member in this House who is prepared to hear him can differ from him. I would reply by asking him, whether as an intelligent person himself he can get up and say that this inflation is due to the fact that people are not giving any voluntary co-operation as in other countries. In other countries, there is inflation to the same extent. But there in spite of a very great inflation, the same evil results as here have not followed, for with expansion in the financial position of the Government, there has been corresponding increase in production. That is due to the fact that the extent of production has kept pace with the actual increase of the quantity of money. The second factor is that in other countries this increased production of commodities and services was not being paid at higher rates. It is common knowledge that in India, war contractors have to be paid a much higher rate than in normal peace time; also services have to be paid for at higher rates than in normal peace time. Every service has to be purchased at a higher cost. Therefore, if the Hon'ble the Finance Minister wants to cure the inflation in the province he should direct his attention to the political question. With the present political background, this problem of inflation in our country cannot be solved. The second consideration that should be kept in mind is that this inflation is the result of the inequitable distribution of the resources of the country. As has been said by many members, there are a few persons who are rich today as a result of the war conditions. They are getting richer every day, specially as a result of their participation in war contracts. But this enrichment of a very few has been the cause of impoverishment of the very many.

I would also ask him to bear in mind that this inflation has in its background famine and destitution. It is true that there are a few persons who have become rich and are getting richer but the vast majority of the population have become poor and are becoming poorer every day. Against this background I would ask him to consider the implications of this Bill. It is in view of this and as a palliative that I have suggested in my amendment a reduction in the amount of the proposed taxation. He suggested that the tax should be $\frac{1}{2}$ anna in the rupee and we have suggested a small reduction. The Hon'ble Minister says, "How can I go to the Government of India and ask for subvention unless I can first tell the Government of India that we have taxed the province and we have raised new revenues and after raising as much revenue as possible, we have come to you."

If that is his purpose, if he wants to make a gesture, if he wants to justify himself to the Government of India, he can very well accept my amendment. This will to some extent relieve the distress of the poor. This will to some extent relieve the distress of those who have been afflicted by the recent conditions. At the same time, he will also get his tax, he will have his Bill passed. He can also tell the Government of India that we have taxed ourselves as far as is compatible with the conditions obtaining in the province today. If, of course, he thinks that the province is in a prosperous condition, I leave him to his own imagination. But I think and every honourable member will admit that the province is not in a prosperous condition. I think he can very well go to the Government of India and say, "we have taxed to the limit of our capacity". I submit, Sir, this existing tax of a quarter of an anna is already too much. I think we have gone to the utmost limit to which we can go. Do not put the last straw on the camel's back with the plea that if the Hon'ble the Finance Minister does not impose this tax, he will not be able to make out a good case to the Government of India. I think he can make out a good case even without this tax, and in that case he will have the general support of the people of this province. I will appeal to him to extend to the afflicted people of the province this little mercy even at this late stage.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Motion moved: that in paragraph (a) of clause 2 of the Bill, for the words "one-half" in line 2, the word "one-third" be substituted.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, this amendment moved by my honourable friend Mr. Humayun Kabir also stands in my name. Sir, when the original Bill was passed into law in 1941, promises were made that something would be done for the poor. I quote the words of the then Finance Minister who is now the Civil Supplies Minister of the present Cabinet. He said "In order to compensate the poorer section of our people for the amount of tax that they may have to pay on account of the purchase of cloth, we do propose to set apart at any rate some portion of the tax in order to encourage the establishment of a poor fund in every union so that out of that fund the necessities and requirements of the needy can be met." Sir, may I enquire what has been the fate of this promised poor fund? I am afraid after meeting the travelling allowance and other allowances of the cultured poor Ministers this unimportant and unnecessary fund for the uncultured poor of the country never materialised. Sir, this amendment does not seek to take away everything from the Bill. Only a modest attempt has been made to reduce the tax from $\frac{1}{2}$ anna to $\frac{1}{3}$ anna. I think this time the Hon'ble the Finance Minister will see his way to accept this humble amendment and will redeem the promises that were made by the then Finance Minister and I hope and trust an honest attempt will be made by the honourable members who support the Ministry to see that the poor people are saved and their burden is lessened.

With these words, I support the amendment moved by my honourable friend Mr. Humayun Kabir.

Mr. NAGENDRA NATH MOHOLANOBISH: Sir, I beg to support the amendment and I beg to draw the attention of the House to the queer situation that has been created by the Government by introducing a Bill called the Bengal Alienation of Agricultural Land (Temporary Provisions) Bill on the one hand and this enactment on the other. Now, the implication of this Bill that has yet to be passed, I mean the Bengal Alienation of Agricultural Land (Temporary Provisions) Bill, is so clear that it does not require any further argument from me to convince the House that the Government are really conscious of the fact that a certain section, I mean the poorer section of the country, is really entitled to relief for the simple purpose of restoring them to their holdings or their lands which they had to sell in the course of the year 1943-44 for the purpose of saving their lives and procuring food. It is well known that a very large number of the poor agriculturists had to sell their lands—

Mr. KADER BAKSH: On a point of order, Sir. Is my honourable friend in order in introducing an element which is foreign to the present amendment?

Mr. NACENDRA NATH MOHOLANOBISH: The honourable member rising to interrupt me will easily follow the relevancy when he will consider that the Government which is trying to give relief to a large section of the people on the ground which they themselves believe to be true, namely, that these people had to sell their lands, their hearths and homes to procure food in order to live so recently as a few months ago, is now bringing a taxation Bill affecting these very people. Nothing could be more absurd than this. Therefore, Sir, it behoves the Government to withdraw the proposal of further taxation.

Mr. KADER BAKSH: Sir, I beg to oppose the motion for the following reasons. This amendment seeks to replace the words "one half" by the word "one-third". Sir, I do not understand what purpose will be served by such an amendment as this, when the difference is so small. My friends who have moved this amendment have also fully realised that it makes practically no difference and that it is an amendment for the sake of amendment only. Now, Sir, my honourable friend Mr. Mohalanabis said that when the people had to sell their lands, their hearths and homes, any proposal for the imposition of a tax like this would be absurd. I would submit, Sir, that those people who had to sell their hearths and homes will not be affected by this Bill. As I said yesterday, it is only those people who have got greater purchasing power and who actually buy large quantities of goods that will be affected, and those people who are poor and who buy only ten or five rupees worth of cloths will not be affected. Besides, the kinds of cloth that these people generally buy will not be taxed. Had he had the goodness to move an amendment which would seek to exempt such articles of cloths as handloom chaddar, khaddar and loongies, he would have done more good to the people than by introducing such an amendment which stands to no reason; and therefore I oppose it.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: In rising to support this motion I would like to give a bit of arithmetic to the Hon'ble Finance Minister and for the consideration of the honourable members of this House. I think the object of the Finance Minister is to double the tax which is now being levied under the existing Finance Act of 1941. The amendment proposes that instead of 3 pies in the rupee the taxation should be 4 pies in the rupee and not 6 pies. That is the proposal, i.e., a reduction of two pies in the rupee. Now, Sir, let us consider the value of a commodity in the year 1941 and the value of that commodity in the present year. I think it will be admitted on all hands that what was sold at one rupee in the year 1941 is sold at least for three rupees in the year 1944, if not for more. Therefore, if the Government was getting one pice with regard to a commodity which was sold in 1941, now he will get one anna if four pies is substituted for three pies, that is four times the revenue that he was getting under the existing Act. If that is so, then it would appear that by this amendment the tax is not actually doubled but quadrupled. If on the other hand the Bill is passed as proposed by the Finance Minister, the tax will be increased by 8 times if we consider the price of a commodity that was prevailing in 1941 and the price of the commodity prevailing now in 1944. I would submit to the Finance Minister and many other members who speak on behalf of Government that if their real intention is that the poorer section of the population should not be affected by this tax, is there any provision in the Bill which would save these people from the harmful effects of the taxation proposed? We have tried to point out before that there is none. Not only that, attempts have been made by the Opposition to improve the Bill in this direction but that was not accepted. I therefore submit that if this amendment is passed the real object which the Hon'ble Finance Minister has in view would be attained and I hope he will not oppose this amendment which really satisfies all the requirements which he wants in order to approach the Government of India for a subvention for balancing the provincial budget. With these few words, I support the amendment.

The Hon'ble Mr. TULSI CHANDRA COSWAMI: Sir, I will not repeat my arguments. Even Mr. Bankim Chandra Mukherjee with his legal training seems to have failed to appreciate my point. But I am not sorry for myself: I am rather sorry for him. I would just like to say this, however, that in our attempts through this Bill to exempt the poor man's cloth—both mill-made and hand-woven—we are about to sacrifice an enormous amount of revenue. I am not in a position to say how much; but from the calculation that it has been possible for me to make, I think it will run into several lakhs of rupees, and in view of this increased exemption in favour of the poor man's cloth I think we are justified in taxing those who can afford to bear the burden. Sir, I oppose the amendment.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Then why don't you do away with the Schedule altogether?

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that in paragraph (a) of clause 2 of the Bill, for the words "one half" in line 2, the word "one-third" be substituted.

(The amendment was negatived.)

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: I beg to move that in clause 2 of the Bill, for the words "one half" in line 4, the word "three-eighths" be substituted.

Sir, the Hon'ble the Finance Minister will realise that we are fighting every inch of the ground. This time we have suggested three-eighths of an anna in place of one-half anna. In the previous amendment we suggested one-third anna in place of one-half anna and failing this we have adopted the golden mean and suggested three-eighths of an anna. Our first amendment was for the deletion of clause 2. Our grounds are the same, namely, that the country cannot bear the burden. I would tell the Hon'ble the Finance Minister, "You have defeated us in those amendments and failing in our attempts to carry the amendment for one-third, we are trying to make it three-eighths. Will you bend?" With these words, I would ask the House to accept my amendment.

Mr. MUNGTURAM JAIPURIA spoke in Hindi.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Mr. President, Sir, I am afraid, the Hon'ble Finance Minister is trying to take us through blind alleys and pathways, for, in none of his speeches in reply to the debate has he given us any indication of the approximate amount that may be available from this taxation. A similar situation also arose in 1941 when his predecessor in office piloted the original Bill. It seems that the Hon'ble Mr. T. C. Goswami has no clear idea, not being a mathematician himself, of the approximate amount that may be derived from this source. We would be justified in giving our support to this measure if we had any idea of the amount Government exactly required to meet the deficit and how much would be available from the Sales Tax. The amendment proposed by my friend Mr. Lalit Chandra Das is a very reasonable one. I think Government should not try to impose all on a sudden a measure like this on the poor unwary tax-payer. They should proceed cautiously, stage by stage. In the original Act the rate of tax is a quarter of an anna in the rupee. Now it is sought to be increased to half an anna. Mr. Humayun Kabir's amendment was to limit the tax to one-third of an anna but that was not to be. My friend Mr. Lalit Chandra Das's amendment suggests a via media and in fact, Sir, the voting on this amendment would be the test of the sincerity of Government to exempt the poor from the operation of this measure. Sir, I have already said that the rich alone will not bear the burden of taxation but the poor also would have to share the burden equally.

Sir, the handloom industry has not been exempted. In the original Act it was kept outside the purview of taxation but by the inclusion of clause 3, the handloom industry has been brought within the mischief of the Act; and not only that, the small industries also will suffer. As I said yesterday, so far as my district is concerned, there are innumerable weavers who eke out a wretched existence out of the profits derived from the handloom and other cottage industries. I do not know, Sir, what will be their condition if the Bill is passed into law.

Sir, with these words, I support the amendment.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: Sir, I would like to say a few words in this connection. I am rising again to speak in support of the motion which my friend Mr. Lalit Chandra Das has moved, having spoken on the previous motion which is practically on the same line, because the Hon'ble the Finance Minister could not appreciate the little bit of arithmetic which I gave him. He cannot say how much he expects to get from this taxation. Perhaps he will get several lakhs of rupees. He may get two to ten lakhs of rupees by including dhooties, lungies and other things. But, Sir, we have to consider that out of the 60 millions of population of Bengal practically 90 per cent. are living on the verge of poverty, starvation and also bankruptcy. (The Hon'ble Mr. T. C. Goswami: The amount will be nearer Rs. 20 lakhs, but as we have got this by estimate I did not mention the amount.) Let us expect Rs. 50 lakhs. So, by doubling this tax you get 8 times more, because the prices of commodities have gone up nearly 4 times. I, therefore, submit that this moderate proposal of reducing the tax to $4\frac{1}{2}$ pies per rupee should be accepted by the Hon'ble the Finance Minister.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that in clause 2 of the Bill, for the words "one-half" in line 4, the word "three-eighths" be substituted.

(The amendment was negatived.)

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DÁS: Sir, I beg to move that in clause 2 of the Bill, after paragraph (a), the following proviso be inserted, namely:—

"Provided that the tax payable by a dealer in respect of all mill-made cloth except those covered by the Schedule to this Act shall not be more than one quarter anna in the rupee on his taxable turnover."

Sir, may I say that the Hon'ble Finance Minister has got his pound of flesh? I would only urge upon him to make one exception with respect to the mill-made cloth and request him to retain the tax on such article as it is at present, namely, one pice in the rupee, because this tax is a tax which is imposed on all people of Bengal including the poor whose only interest in life in this unfortunate country is food and cloth. They have got to clothe themselves. They take to mill-made cloth for this purpose. Sir, in this connection, allow me to refer to the scheme which Government are making to rehabilitate the famine-stricken people of Bengal. At least 6 million people are affected by this measure, and in order to relieve their condition, Government have come up to enact a Bill called the Bengal Alienation of Agricultural Land (Temporary Provisions) Bill which implies that a vast number of people is without means for their living and they have sold their all in order to keep their body and soul together. Now Government proposes that they must get back their lands. The original Bill was to the effect that they should find out money in order to get back their land. Sir, all that has now been changed. If this is the condition of the country today, I would say that at least in the matter of cloth which is usually used by them, they should not be taxed at the rate of more than one pice in the rupee. Sir, the argument has been advanced by the Hon'ble Minister that the purchasing power of the people has greatly increased and therefore the tax will not weigh heavily upon the people of Bengal. That is a proposition which I contest, and I say that the purchasing power of a very small number of people, namely, those who are in the trade or who are connected with war efforts or who are contractors, has only increased. The dictum of the Hon'ble Finance Minister which he has used in his Budget speech in the Lower House, namely, that the rich have become richer and the poor poorer, is a truism. Speaking generally, the condition of the people of Bengal today is bad. Cloth is as necessary as food for the people. I, therefore, hope that he will see his way that at least on this particular item the tax may not be more than one pice in the rupee.

Mr. MUNCTURAM JAIPURIA spoke in Hindi.

Mr. BIREN ROY: Sir, an experienced businessman like Mr. Jaipuria is trying to lead us into something which is not correct. Mr. Jaipuria states that of the six crores of Bengalees five crores will be taxed to the extent of Rs. $1\frac{1}{2}$ crores. That, Sir, is not a fact. These 5 crores of people will not be taxed at all if they would only purchase cloths of a certain standard which will be exempted from the purview of this taxation. This rate will be fixed later on; perhaps it will apply to cloths worth Rs. 3 to Rs. 4 per pair. We are not going to emulate Mr. Jaipuria, when he says that the rest of the people, that is to say, one crore of Bengalees will have to pay tax at one to four annas. We would tax their cloths merely half an anna per rupee and the total receipts from all kinds of sales taxes would be not more than Rs. $2\frac{1}{2}$ crores; so there will not be Rs. $1\frac{1}{2}$ crores as anticipated by him only from the sale of the cloth purchased by these people.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Sir, I had hoped that Government would accept this amendment. This amendment is couched in a form which largely meets the viewpoint of the Government. I will first deal with some of the remarks made by the honourable member who has just sat down. He has assured us that the poor people of Bengal will not be taxed, that they will not have to pay anything by way of tax for the cloth that they will buy. We thank him for this assurance. But I am afraid that this House has listened to so many empty assurances from so many Hon'ble Ministers that the assurance of a Parliamentary Secretary is a small consolation. He has not also told us what exactly will be the level at which the exemption will be made. In course of casual conversation the other day with one of the Hon'ble Members of the Cabinet, I heard that cloths of the value of Rs. 7 or Rs. 8 a pair might be excluded. I do not know, Sir, if this is authentic; but there was some such suggestion. Even if it is Rs. 8 per pair, the figure quoted by Mr. Jaipuria still holds good. He put it very clearly before the House, and members will agree that 16 yards of cloth is the minimum with which a person can clothe himself in a year. Sixteen yards at annas eight or ten annas a yard will not escape the tax. With annas eight a yard, the mischief of the tax may perhaps just be avoided, but I am not sure that this will be certainly so. But in any case, suppose it is one pie more than annas eight, then the cloth will come within the mischief of this tax. If the honourable members opposite and the Hon'ble Minister are going to take the matter in their own hands and assure us that a certain cloth will not be sold at more than a stipulated price, then there would be some justification that such cloth will not be taxed. The examples we have had so long of the way in which Government manage their affairs do not encourage one to think that they will be able to fix a minimum price and control it. Unfortunately, in actual operation Government have again and again failed in their attempt to control the market. They have often bungled the whole thing in a miserable manner. I am giving one instance. I understand, Sir, that in Calcutta alone about 1,174 persons have applied for a quick decision with regard to the unstamped cloth which is in their stock. Out of this Government, in the course of the last $2\frac{1}{2}$ months, disposed of only 74 cases. Even in these 74 cases, all the cloths have not yet been stamped. If the Government cannot dispose of 74 cases within $2\frac{1}{2}$ months you can easily understand what they will do and how long will they take to dispose of the cases of 1,174 merchants; and this relates only to Calcutta. This failure on the part of Government to deal with these cases means that so much cloth is not available to the consumers. In consequence the prices are forced up. Attempts which the Government made from time to time to effect control of prices have so long failed because Government could not exercise control at the necessary points; they cannot control raw materials: they cannot control the actual price of production: they cannot control transit: they cannot control transport and they cannot control the actual distribution amongst the retailers. When they attempt control at any one point, the result is a bottle-neck. Their control causes more cloth to be withdrawn from the market. So far as control of price is concerned, we have seen in the course of one year's experience that as soon as a scheduled price is declared in respect of an article, it suddenly vanishes from the market and you cannot get it in the market. These difficulties we have experienced during the last year. Take the situation in Bengal today. We require at least one lakh bales of cloth per month to be imported from outside the province in order to meet the demands of the province. One lakh of bales requires to be transported from outside. The Government members as well as the members of this side of the House know very well that today transport is controlled by authorities over which the present Government of Bengal have little or no influence. We know that in war time civilian handling of traffic is not possible. But the Bengal Government have failed to take advantage even of the facilities offered. The Government's delay in dealing with unstamped cloth is adding to the shortage of cloth in the market. Here also the shortage is thus artificially created.

Goods are not going out of Calcutta to the interior nor coming to Calcutta from outside the province. Now, in view of these conditions, how are the Government going to guarantee that they will be able to supply cloth to the poor people at, say, Rs. 4 a piece? I also know that for a long time Government have not been able to disburse to the different distribution centres the standard cloths which were accumulated in their stores. Government cannot possibly handle these questions unless they have some control over the transport. But they do not have that. In spite of the professions of Government, in spite of the best intention of Government, the poor people will therefore be actually affected. Government cannot guarantee that they will supply all the requirements of the poor at a price below the exempted rate. If my honourable friend Mr. Lalit Chandra Das's amendment is accepted, at any rate the problem of cloth,—and cloth is a very large problem of the poor,—will be solved. My honourable friend Mr. Jaipuria has very rightly said that the traders do not come into the picture at all. They do not pay this tax. The consumers or the customers have got to pay every penny of this Sales Tax, as will be evident from the cash memos. So far as the traders are concerned, they are not directly involved in this tax. Therefore, if Government accept the suggestion of Mr. Lalit Chandra Das and exempt mill-made cloths from paying this increased tax, if the mills are charged a lower rate as suggested by him, a very large section of the poor will get the relief which Government profess or declare they want to give to the poor.

Mr. LATAFAT HOSSAIN spoke in Urdu.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: Sir, I rise on a point of order. Is the honourable member speaking on the motion or what? He seems to be attributing dishonest motive to the entire community.

Mr. PRESIDENT: No, no. He is making a general statement which he is perfectly entitled to. He is not making any reflection on anybody.

Do Government propose to reply?

The Hon'ble Mr. TULSI CHANDRA COSWAMI: Sir, further discriminatory treatment in the matter of mill-made cloth is quite unnecessary. I think my honourable friend Mr. Latifat Hossain has given a satisfactory answer to the observations of Mr. Jaipuria.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that in clause 2 of the Bill, after paragraph (a), the following proviso be inserted, namely:—

“Provided that the tax payable by a dealer in respect of all mill-made cloth except those covered by the Schedule to this Act shall not be more than one quarter anna in the rupee on his taxable turnover.”

BENGAL LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL DEBATES

First Session, 1944—No. 24.

THE COUNCIL met in the Legislative Chamber of the Legislative Building, Calcutta, on Thursday, the 16th March, 1944, at 1 p.m., being the twenty-fourth day of the First Session of 1944, pursuant to section 62(2)(a) of the Government of India Act, 1935.

Mr. President (the Hon'ble Sir BIJOY PRASAD SINGH ROY, K.C.I.E.) was in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Case against Mr. Latafat Hossain, M.L.C.

90. Mr. K. G. ROY CHOWDHURY: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Judicial Department be pleased to state—

- (a) if it is a fact that Mr. Latafat Hossain, M.L.C., and his colleagues of the Bhatpara Municipal Board were prosecuted without adequate preliminary investigation into the charges laid against them;
- (b) if it is a fact that the Assistant Sessions Judge, Alipore, acquitted them agreeing with the unanimous verdict of the Jury; and
- (c) what legal expenses have been incurred by the Government over the criminal proceedings covering a period of 18 months?

MINISTER in charge of the JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Nawab Musharruf Hossain, Khan Bahadur): (a) No. Very thorough investigation by an able D. D. Officer resulted in submission of the charge sheet.

(b) Yes.

(c) Rs.2,930-8.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: May I know from the Hon'ble Minister the name of the Magistrate who was in charge of this case?

Mr. PRESIDENT: I do not think that is quite pertinent.

Mr. YAKUB H. S. SATTAR: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state who prosecuted Mr. Latafat Hossain which involved an expenditure of Rs. 2,930-8?

The Hon'ble Nawab MUSHARRUF HOSSAIN, Khan Bahadur: I want notice.

Khan Bahadur ABDUL COFRAN: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state what was the verdict of the jurors?

The Hon'ble Nawab MUSHARRUF HOSSAIN, Khan Bahadur: Not guilty.

Starvation cases in Dinajpur.

47. Mr. KEDAR BAKSH: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of Civil Supplies Department be pleased to state—

- (a) if he is aware that nearly 500 families in the town of Dinajpur have already been faced with starvation due to want of foodstuff;
- (b) whether it is a fact that nearly an equal number of family is not having more than one meal a day;
- (c) if he is aware that the food situation in the town of Dinajpur has assumed an alarming position; and
- (d) if so, whether the Government have taken or are likely to take steps without any delay for sending rice to Dinajpur town for selling it at a cheap rate to save the people there and also to open free kitchens in the town area and other kitchens for the sale of food at a nominal price?

Mr. KADER BAKSH: Sir, I do not want any answer to this question now as I think the situation is changed and it has lost its importance. What is the use of getting answer after 7 months? It has lost all its force and importance. If he so desires, the Hon'ble Minister may read the printed answer but it has no bearing on the subject now.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The House has the right to get the reply. If you do not want to put the question then of course there would be no reply. But in public interest the Chair can allow the Hon'ble Minister-in-charge to reply to the question under rule 33.

MINISTER in charge of the CIVIL SUPPLIES DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Mr. H. S. Suhrawardy): The replies are with reference to the time when the honourable member sent notice of the question.

- (a) There was some distress but perhaps not to the extent visualised by the honourable member.
- (b) It is possible that some needy families were not having more than one principal meal a day.
- (c) and (d) No. Rice and paddy were reported to be readily available in the town and there had been an appreciable drop in prices.

Standard Cloth.

57. Mr. NACENDRA NATH MOHOLANOBISH: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Civil Supplies Department be pleased to state—

- (a) why "standard cloth" has not yet been made available in the districts of Northern Bengal and particularly in Jalpaiguri, Dinajpur and Darjeeling; and
- (b) whether sufficient number of standard cloths would be made available in the mofussil districts without further delay?

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: The position on the 2nd July, 1943, was as follows:—

(a) The first allotment of standard cloth to Bengal was very small. Supplies had to be restricted to non-paddy-growing districts and areas affected by cyclone. Dinajpur was included. But the mills which were asked to supply Dinajpur have not yet fulfilled their contract. One of them has just done so, and the cloth is expected in the near future.

(b) It is expected that large quantities of standard cloth will be made available to the mofussil districts if supplies are received according to the indents placed by this Government with the Government of India.

Mr. NAGENDRA NATH MOHOLANOBISH: Sir, we have heard from the Hon'ble Minister what was the position on the 2nd July, but will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state what is the present position about the standard cloth?

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: Sir, there are questions that have been put to me regarding the present position of the standard cloth and I shall answer them on the floor of the House.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Will the Hon'ble Minister please state when was this answer prepared which he has just now read out?

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: That I am not in a position to say.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Can he say only by guess how long ago?

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: It must have been prepared in due time.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: About six months ago?

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: Very likely.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Then, Sir, may I know why the question was not answered during the last session?

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: I think, I have given full explanation on the last occasion why it was not possible for me to reply to this question and other such questions.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Does the Hon'ble Minister want to suggest that we shall put questions and he would answer them according to his own convenience?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Perhaps the Hon'ble Minister means,—though it is not for me to say what he exactly means, and if I am wrong he will correct me,—that the reply was prepared in due course and he could not go through it and approve of it. I speak from my personal experience.

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: Sir, if the answers are delayed, the importance is altogether lost. Moreover, there is a time-limit within which a question should be answered.

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: There is no doubt about it that the questions should be answered in due time and as rapidly as possible. On the last occasion I fully explained that owing to the strain and stress of the very peculiar circumstances of last year it was not possible for me to attend to the work of the legislature. It is not because I do not realise the importance of this House, it is not because I have no desire to answer questions; on the contrary, I have every desire to place all the facts before this House as soon as they are available. But the circumstances during the last session were so peculiar that I could not find time to do my legislature work. I gave that explanation very fully on the last occasion and I understood the House had accepted that explanation. It is no use raising the point again.

Controlled grain shops in the mofussil.

84. Mr. NAGENDRA NATH MOHOLANOBISH: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Civil Supplies Department be pleased to state—

- (a) if Government-controlled cheap grain shops have been opened in any mofussil districts to supply rice to the public at large;
- (b) how many such shops have been opened in Calcutta for supply of rice to the public at large; and
- (c) if the Government are aware that the number is insufficient to supply the population of Calcutta, and if the Government will be pleased to take steps for opening adequate number of such shops, both in Calcutta and mofussil?

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: The position on the 7th July, 1943, was as follows:—

- (a) A statement is laid in the Library.
- (b) 373.
- (c) Yes; it is contemplated to replace these shops by a large number of Government Distributing Centres.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, may I enquire of the Hon'ble Minister why the statement is placed in the library? Is it because if it is placed in the library it is no use for us for putting supplementaries or anything of that sort? May I suggest that it should be placed on the table of this House?

Mr. PRESIDENT: No, it is not the practice. The practice is to lay such statements on the library table.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: If it is placed in the library, how can I use it now when I want to put some supplementary questions in this connection?

Mr. PRESIDENT: It is a bulky document and so it cannot be placed on the table of this House; the Hon'ble Minister has only followed the previous practice.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: May I suggest, Sir, that this practice be changed in the interest of the debate?

Mr. PRESIDENT: I am afraid it is not always convenient to change the practice because this practice has developed as a result of long experience. Your experience of this House is rather limited and so is mine as President of the House. So I would rather be reluctant to change the practice without further experience.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, I have already put forward my argument from the point of view of convenience. Unless we get these statements at least 30 minutes before the House sits, we feel it very inconvenient in the matter of putting supplementary questions. Therefore, I think the practice may be changed, as many things are being changed for the sake of convenience.

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: May I point out, Sir, that if the honourable members are very keen on doing their parliamentary work, why don't they come a little bit earlier and take a little bit of trouble and go to the library to read the papers there?

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Then I would suggest, Sir, that the statements may be given to us one day before so that we may be able to equip ourselves with the supplementaries better, and it would be in the best interest of the House.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Mazumdar, this is something which is absolutely new, because the Parliamentary institution has been functioning in this Province for nearly a quarter of a century, and I can tell you that no member has ever complained that he had found no time to consult papers placed in the library. This is my experience.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, on several occasions complaints of this nature were brought to the notice of your predecessor in office.

Mr. PRESIDENT: But what is the justification for doing so. If people associated with the legislature for the last quarter of a century could find time to look into the papers placed in the library table and get information from there, there is no reason to think that that practice has caused inconvenience and should be changed.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Are you sure, Sir, that the legislators for the last 25 years found time to go to the library and read the statements there? When Mr. Mazumdar was complaining about the existing practice and saying that for the sake of convenience the papers should be placed on the table within the House so that all members may read them, it was not merely for the convenience of this particular member only but for the convenience of all the members. Now, if really there are certain good reasons in favour of placing these statistics in the library, then will the Hon'ble Minister please rise up and give us those reasons so that we may be satisfied? At present we are not satisfied and so we press that these statements ought to be placed within the House so that all members may immediately refer to them and put supplementaries to the Hon'ble Minister.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I understand that there is a file on the subject and my predecessor very carefully went into the matter. I would like to go through it before I give my final decision.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS and Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Thank you, Sir.

Want of rice and cloth in Bakarganj district.

85. Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Civil Supplies Department be pleased to state if he is aware of the fact that Bakarganj is now, as regards rice, a deficit district?

(b) Is it a fact that the district is running short of the supply of cloth and the available stock is selling at an abnormal price?

(c) Do the Government contemplate importing sufficient stock of rice and standard cloth from outside to relieve the distress of the people of the district? If not, why not?

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: The position on the 8th July, 1943, was as follows:—

(a) No.

(b) I have no such information, except that prices of cloth have risen high everywhere.

(c) Steps have been taken to import large quantities of standard cloth to Barisal. As regards rice the question does not arise.

Bad quality of rice.

86. Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Civil Supplies Department be pleased to state if it is a fact that a very bad quality of rice which was declared by the Chief Analyst of the Corporation of Calcutta to be unfit for human consumption, was supplied by the Government to the said Corporation for their labour staff?

(b) Is he aware that a large volume of complaints against the rationed foodgrains supplied by the Government-controlled stores was to the effect that they were very bad in quality being rotten or sometimes mixed up with dust and rubbish?

(c) If the replies to (a) and (b) be in the affirmative, what steps do the Government propose to take to prevent such foodstuffs being supplied to the shopkeepers in future when wholesale rationing is going to be introduced in Calcutta and its adjoining industrial areas?

(d) Do the Government propose to appoint a non-official vigilant committee in every circle of every ward in Calcutta for the purpose of supervising supply of rations to the public? If not, why not?

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: (a) The Government of Bengal are in possession of a report by the Corporation of Calcutta to the effect that a quantity of rice delivered to the Corporation has been declared by their Chief Analyst to be unfit for human consumption. No copy of the Chief Analyst's report, however, has been supplied by the Corporation though they were asked to do so.

(b) Some such complaints have been received.

(c) Government have made arrangements to take samples of all food-grains arriving in Bengal whether by sea or by rail. Samples are examined and care is taken to ensure that only rice which is suitable for human consumption is supplied to shopkeepers in the rationed area.

(d) Government propose to appoint a Non-Official Advisory Committee for every sub-area in the rationed area. Steps have already been taken to constitute these committees.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: May I enquire if the Calcutta Corporation has up till now sent any report about the Analyst's Examination?

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: Not up till now, as far as I am aware, Sir.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: As regards the decision of Government about the appointment of a Non-Official Advisory Committee for every sub-area in the rationed area, has this proposal been given effect to up till now?

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: Steps are being taken to constitute these Committees; orders were passed long ago, and I hope these Committees will come into being shortly.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: How long will it take to give effect to these steps?

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: I am not in a position to give a date, Sir.

Debt Settlement Board.

87. Mr. NAGENDRA NATH MOHOLANOBISH: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Co-operative Credit and Rural Indebtedness Department be pleased to state—

(a) whether the Government propose to dissolve the Debt Settlement Boards which are still functioning in view of the relief that the debtors may have under the Bengal Money-Lenders Act;

(b) if not, how long more the Government intend the Debt Settlement Boards to function?

MINISTER in charge of the CO-OPERATIVE CREDIT and RURAL INDEBTEDNESS DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Mr. Jogendra Nath Mondal): (a) No, as agriculturist debtors are likely to get more relief under the Bengal Agricultural Debtors Act than under the Bengal Money-Lenders Act.

(b) The Debt Settlement Boards will continue to function till the disposal of the applications made to them.

Introduction of Rationing Scheme.

88. Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Civil Supplies Department be pleased to state when do the Government expect to start the Rationing Scheme at controlled rate of prices to relieve the people of Bengal including Calcutta, and whether sufficient stock of foodstuffs have been secured to maintain regular supply?

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: Rationing has come into force in Calcutta, the South Suburban municipalities and the municipalities of Tollygunge, Garden Reach, Howrah and Bally-Belur with effect from the 31st January, 1944. The scheme will be extended as soon as practicable to the whole of Greater Calcutta, i.e., Calcutta and the Industrial Area. The Central Government have undertaken to supply foodgrains sufficient to feed Greater Calcutta and it is expected that sufficient stocks will be available to maintain regular supplies.

It is not proposed to ration the whole of Bengal, but I have issued instructions to take steps to ration in a modified form all the urban areas and subdivisional headquarters and deficit rural areas. This system will apply to those persons who have no food stocks of their own. Some areas are already rationing themselves, while Chittagong town has been wholly rationed.

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: With regard to this question also I may say that it has lost its importance, for rationing has already been started in Calcutta. We know all these things. And you must pardon me, Sir, if I say that this delay has been made with a purpose.

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: Why?

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: This question will have no effect. When we wanted to know of these things information was not supplied to us.

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: Sir, I have already said that it is true that this question has not been formally answered on the floor of the House here but information relating to this matter has been given in numerous communiques. And honourable members of the House if they are also members of the public who keep in touch with what is going on in the province knew fully well when rationing was going to be introduced.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, if the Hon'ble Minister has been giving this information elsewhere, then why did he not take the earliest opportunity of laying this information before the House? Why then did he not answer my question? (No. 86.)

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: Not elsewhere, but in this very province.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: With regard to the observation made by the Hon'ble Supply Minister that information given to the province is practically given to the House, then, what is the use of this House? We are sitting here at the cost of the ratepayers—at a daily cost of about Rs. 3,000 for both Houses combined, and if a press-note or communique is published for general information and we are referred to it in the House, then what is the use of our being here? The Hon'ble Minister has surely some sort of responsibility for placing information here and we are paid to do our duty to elicit information.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I hope the Hon'ble Minister realises that the House has a special right to get information from the Government and the House is not expected to draw its inferences or to get information from the information supplied to the public at large.

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: Sir, I made that observation in answer to a statement of Mr. Chakraverti that this answer had been held back purposely. It was that matter I was replying to. There is no question of keeping it back purposely and there is no point in doing so.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, but—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Is it necessary to pursue the point any further? You have made the position perfectly clear and the Hon'ble Minister has also explained his difficulties. After that is it necessary to pursue the point further?

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, 12 days' time for answering questions should be insisted upon and the departments concerned should see to it that the information is collected within that time and on expiry of this period the matter should be brought before the House. Otherwise, what is the use of providing for 12 days' notice?

Mr. PRESIDENT: I hope Government do their best to see that questions are replied to as early as possible.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: That is not done, Sir, and that is our grievance.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Government should do it.

Point of Privilege.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, I rise on a point of privilege—

Mr. PRESIDENT: What is your point of privilege?

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: My point of privilege is in connection with my adjournment motion which I wanted to move regarding non-availability of rice in the various parts of Bengal at controlled rates. When I made my statement Mr. Suhrawardy told this House that my statement was not based on facts and my statement was not correct—that it was a prejudicial report and that it caused unnecessary alarm. I submit, Sir, that I was justified in making my statement, as it was based on a Government document—I mean the Calcutta Gazette. Therefore what I said was correct and based on Government report. The statement of the Hon'ble Minister has practically violated the privilege of a member of the House, because my statement was based on correct information—information supplied by the Calcutta Gazette. So, Sir, I want to have the statement made by the Hon'ble Minister withdrawn.

Mr. PRESIDENT: What Mr. Suhrawardy actually said was this: "On a point of order, Sir. I do not know whether the honourable member is in order in reading out his motion before it is admitted, but I wish to bring to your notice that the motion contains matters which are rather prejudicial. They are not based on facts and they are likely to cause unnecessary alarm".

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: Sir, the honourable members had made so many wrong statements in the House, have they ever taken them back? Then, Sir, what is the privilege? How does the privilege of the House arise—

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: Sir, the Hon'ble Minister says that the honourable members of the House make wrong statements. Should he be allowed to make such a statement?

Dr. KUMUD SANKAR RAY: Does the Hon'ble Minister think that wrong statements should not be the monopoly of this side of the House only?

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: What I meant was this: Sometimes wrong statements are made in this House; but are they taken back or expunged? After all, wrong statements that are made by members on the floor of the House are not taken back. I dare say that the speeches of many honourable members are sometimes wrong but are they taken back or expunged? So, I submit there is no question of a privilege motion.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, as a matter of fact, Mr. Haridas Mazumdar's adjournment motion was based upon a copy of the Calcutta Gazette. In that copy it was specifically stated that in certain places there was shortage of rice. But the Hon'ble Minister used some words which were derogatory to the prestige of the honourable member and that is why he has raised this point of privilege.

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: Sir, the point was whether a serious situation had actually arisen or not. I have explained to the House the other day that the serious situation had not arisen. Take the specific case of Jhenidah. It has been stated in the Gazette report that there is no rice at Jhenidah. But, Sir, Jhenidah is set in a surplus area and there is plenty of rice and paddy. No serious situation has arisen because the market of Jhenidah as such has not got any rice. Now, Mr. Haridas Mazumdar from the statement which appeared in the Calcutta Gazette concludes that a very serious situation has arisen in the province. That, Sir, is an alarming news which is likely to arouse panic in the minds of the public. And this fact is wholly unwarranted.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Is the alarm due to Mr. Mazumdar's motion or due to the publication of the fact in the Calcutta Gazette?

Mr. PRESIDENT: I should like to know what is the point of privilege. How the privilege has been affected, you must explain that point.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, the point is this: I have been charged with making incorrect statements. But, Sir, I have conclusively proved from the Calcutta Gazette that there was shortage of rice at Jhenidah. My argument was based on the facts collected from the Gazette. But the Hon'ble the Civil Supplies Minister accused me of having made incorrect statements. That statement should be withdrawn by him.

There is another point, Sir. Whether there was a serious situation or not, that was going to be discussed in the House. The Hon'ble Minister might have proved that the situation was not serious. The motion was simply before the House for discussion.

Mr. PRESIDENT: To cut short matters, if Mr. Mazumdar feels that his privilege as a member has been affected, this matter may be referred to the Privileges Committee.

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: Sir, may I point out that Mr. Mazumdar is a little bit mistaken in the idea of a serious situation? If there was no case of a serious situation, then there was also no case for bringing in an adjournment motion by him. The adjournment motion is based on the arising of a serious situation of definite urgent public importance—

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: Sir, when you have decided the matter, can the Hon'ble Minister again speak?

Mr. PRESIDENT: As it has been decided to refer the matter to the Privileges Committee, there should be a formal motion by an honourable member to that effect. Will somebody move the motion?

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, I beg to move—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Let someone else move it.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, I beg to move that the point of privilege raised by Mr. Haridas Mazumdar regarding the infringement of the privilege of an honourable member of this House in connection with the adjournment motion be referred to the Privileges Committee.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Is it the general desire of the House that the matter should be referred to the Privileges Committee?

Mr. MESBAHUDDIN AHMED: Sir, I do not think that after the explanation given by the Hon'ble Mr. Suhrawardy it is necessary that this matter should be referred to the Privileges Committee.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is that—

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Sir, before you put this matter to vote may I submit one thing? Matters of privilege of this House have generally been referred to the Committee without any voting on the matter. We made no further comment on the matter raised by Mr. Mazumdar in the expectation that it was the general sense of the House to refer the matter to the Committee without any voting. You, Sir, as the custodian of the rights and privileges of this House should see that this matter is settled there. If matters like these are put to vote, a very bad precedent would be created.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I hope that Government will realise the position and they will not object to this matter being referred to a Privileges Committee.

Mr. MESBAHUDDIN AHMED: Sir, if I remember aright, votes were taken on previous occasions.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Do you insist or you accept my suggestion?

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: Sir, it is merely a question of wrong statement made over here. How many wrong statements have been made from time immemorial in all Parliaments?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Is it the desire of the House that this matter should be referred to the Privileges Committee where it may be discussed in an atmosphere of detachment? It is for the Committee to recommend whether this is a matter of privilege or this is not a matter of privilege. That is why I suggest that the matter should be referred to the Privileges Committee. Do I take it that it is the general desire, and there is no objection on the part of Government?

(There being no objection from any section of the House, the Hon'ble President declared the motion of Mr. Das carried.)

The Bengal Finance (Sales Tax) Amendment Bill, 1944.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Now, we come to the discussion of the next item on the agenda, namely, the Bengal Finance (Sales Tax) Amendment Bill.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, I beg to move that after paragraph (a) of clause 2 of the Bill, the following new paragraph be added, namely:—

“(aa) to sub-section (1), the following proviso be added, namely:—

‘Provided that the tax shall not be leviable more than once on any goods in the course of its transit from the producer or importer to the ultimate consumer’.”

Sir, in commending this amendment to the acceptance of this House, I must at the very outset say that it is the most reasonable and equitable amendment of the whole lot. The simple principle is that one commodity should not be twice taxed. Sir, it has got two aspects—one with finished goods and the other with the raw materials that are used to make the finished goods. Take for instance, a text-book. The primary education text-books are exempted but the paper that makes the books is taxed once and when the books of the upper classes are printed, they are taxed for the second time; the ink is also taxed. Therefore, this is one aspect of the question that the same article is practically taxed twice. Take another instance. A patent medicine is taxed and the ingredients that go to make that medicine are also taxed separately.

Then the other aspect of the question is that the same goods are taxed twice when they are transferred from one place to another. There must be rules and other safeguards sufficient to protect that in the process of transfer the goods are not taxed twice. Sir, this tax practically falls on the shoulders of the poor masses and poor middle-class people. If the articles of luxury, such as liquor, wines, Burma cheroot and other things are taxed at the rate of annas 8 in the rupee, we have no objection. But what we say is this: there should be a graded and graduated incidence. If this sort of tax which makes every one, rich or poor, liable to the same amount of tax is to be resorted to, then it will be very inequitable, particularly in a country where literacy is about 6 per cent. I want to stress this point. I do not like to harp on the arguments that have been advanced by me and the honourable members of the House on several occasions but would again ask the Hon'ble Finance Minister if he has the power—of course I doubt very much if he has the right to change a comma, or a semi-colon of this amending Bill, because he is speaking nothing but His Master's Voice—

The Hon'ble Mr. TULSI CHANDRA GOSWAMI: Sir, this is my Bill and the drafting is also mine.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Thank you. I am very glad to learn that the Hon'ble Finance Minister is in a position to change everything in his Bill, lock, stock and barrel. Very good. But I would only request him to change the lock only and keep the stock and the barrel to himself. With these words, I commend the motion to the acceptance of the House.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Amendment moved: that after paragraph (a) of clause 2 of the Bill, the following new paragraph be added, namely,—

‘Provided that the tax shall not be leviable more than once on any goods in the course of its transit from the producer or importer to the ultimate consumer’.”

The Hon'ble Mr. TULSI CHANDRA GOSWAMI: Sir, it is my painful duty to oppose the amendment moved by Mr. Haridas Mazumdar. It is painful because it seems to me a loss of time—I am sorry to have to use that expression—because the arguments advanced by him are obviously inspired by—again I shall not use a stronger word—by a misunderstanding of the provisions of the clause. What he has proposed is an unworkable proposition; it will benefit no one and it will only lead to friction, for it is impossible to keep a life-history of each and every item of commodity. The scheme of the Act is such that the articles have to bear only one tax. That is the whole scheme of the Act. It is a one-point tax. I need not deliver a lecture on that but would only ask Mr. Haridas Mazumdar to think over it and if necessary with the assistance of more intelligent persons.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Sir, I quite realise the force of what the Hon'ble Finance Minister has just now stated: but I would remind him of one consideration in connection with this amendment. When the original Bill was first moved, it was suggested on behalf of Government that there would be taxation at one point only.

Even now, I think that is the intention of Government. But as the Finance Minister has now pointed out, it is almost impossible to keep a life-history of every particular commodity. I commend for his consideration a suggestion that was made at the time of the consideration of the parent Act. The suggestion which was made at that time was that if the taxation could be imposed at the source, namely, in the case of manufactured goods at the time it passes out of the hands of the manufacturer into the hands of those who deal with the goods and in the case of raw materials at the time it passes into the hands of the buyer from the hands of the producer—if the tax could be fixed at one point—this mischief could be avoided. I agree with the Hon'ble Finance Minister that it is difficult to have any machinery for checking the operation of the tax which is being realised now. But if some such machinery could be evolved, that will probably serve the purpose which the Government have in view.

The Hon'ble Mr. TULSI CHANDRA COSWAMI: May I offer an explanation in regard to what Mr. Humayun Kabir has said? I quite realise that at the early stage the trade may not be wise enough to avoid in some few cases double taxation; but as the trade gets used to it it will realise that it is a single tax and if the merchant is careful he will avoid double taxation.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that after paragraph (a) of clause 2 of the Bill, the following new paragraph be added, namely:—

“(aa) to sub-section (1), the following proviso be added, namely:—

‘Provided that the tax shall not be leviable more than once on any goods in the course of its transit from the producer or importer to the ultimate consumers’.”

(The amendment was negatived.)

Mr. KAMINI KUMAR DUTTA: I beg to move that in paragraph (6) of clause 2 of the Bill, for the words “three per centum” in line 2, the words “two per centum” be substituted.

I think no comment is necessary in support of my amendment. The tax proposed is a mass taxation. So any reduction in its incidence will go to the benefit of a large section of the public. Therefore, I have suggested a reduction of one per centum, i.e., to say, from three per centum to two per centum, which will give some relief to a very large section of the population.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Motion moved that in paragraph (6) of clause 2 of the Bill, for the words “three per centum” in line 2, the words “two per centum” be substituted.

The Hon'ble Mr. TULSI CHANDRA GOSWAMI: I think, Sir, here there is some misconception. I took some trouble in my speech while introducing the Bill to show the necessity in fairness to the traders for allowing this percentage. The present provision of one per centum is really inadequate on the present rate; that is to say, in many cases the trade suffers a loss. Even with 3 per centum, as I pointed out as a result of a slight arithmetical calculation the dealer may still be losing something like .18 of a pie of the Rs. 3-0-6 that Government collect on every Rs. 100 of his turnover. So in all fairness we should allow them this little concession. Not a concession, but just a fair share to which he is entitled.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is that in paragraph (6) of clause 2 of the Bill, for the words "three per centum" in line 2, the words "two per centum" be substituted.

(The amendment was negatived.)

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that clause 2 stand part of the Bill.

(The motion was put and agreed to.)

Clause 3.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Clause 3 stand part of the Bill.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, I beg to move that in clause 3 of the Bill, the words "for the entries" in line 1 be deleted and for the word "substituted" in line 3, the word "added" be substituted.

I think, Sir, it is a very important amendment. In the schedule showing exemption from the Finance Sales Tax Act, 1941, in item 16 it has been laid down that handloom woven cloths when sold by a dealer who does not deal in any other kind of cloth would be exempted. The present Bill wants to do away with that provision, and in its place they suggest that the following should be substituted, namely: "When the sale price of a dhoti, lungi or saree does not exceed such amount as the Provincial Government may fix in respect of dhooties, lungies or sarees, as the case may be, by notification in the Official Gazette:

Provided that the Provincial Government may fix different amounts for dhooties, lungies or sarees of different sizes."

Now, Sir, to a certain extent cloths whose prices would be fixed by the Provincial Government would go tax-free and all the rest would be taxed. Sir, it is a very important thing and the whole House should consider it very carefully and seriously. We want that handloom and hand-woven cloths should remain exempt as before and should not be taxed as now suggested. All that I suggest is that this item 16 may remain as it is. Over and above that we would have no objection if this amendment is added. I got the impression from the Hon'ble the Leader of the House, that if item 16 of the schedule is abolished, a very small body of people would be affected. I desire to draw his attention to the fact that a very large body of people are concerned with this particular trade of handloom-woven cloths. Let them enjoy the benefit as they have been enjoying from the time of the introduction of the Sales Tax in 1941. I desire to quote certain figures from the Annual Report of the All-India Spinners Association for the year 1941-42 to show the extent of khadi work in Bengal and its possibility—

	Rs.
Total production of khadi	6,13,118
Total nett khadi sales	5,64,055
Number of spinners under All-India Spinners Association in Bengal (of these 12,498 are Muhammadans) ...	15,726
Number of weavers under All-India Spinners Association	699
Wages distributed by the All-India Spinners Association, Bengal, to spinners	85,044
Wages distributed by the All-India Spinners Association, Bengal, to the weavers	48,936
Number of villages served	757

Besides this there are other khadi associations who deal in handloom woven cloth. Now, Sir, there is a very large body of people who will be affected by the abolition of item No. 16 of the Schedule. I want to remind the House that at the Madhabdih Bazar alone in the district of Dacca which deals exclusively in handloom woven cloths thousands of rupees worth of goods are transacted every week. In the district of Dacca there are 700 villages in which there are large numbers of dealers who deal in handloom woven cloths. In Tipperah, Sir, there are several well-known places where countless dealers deal in handloom woven cloths. There is a big centre for such goods at Barkamla and at Mainamati. Comilla is also well-known for such a centre. There are several villages, such as Hirapur, Andikote, Gungar, Kaliganj and other places where a large number of spinners deal exclusively in handloom woven cloths. Sir, even the Hon'ble Mr. Suhrawardy who piloted the Sales Tax Bill when it was introduced for the first time during the régime of the First Fazlul Huq Ministry in 1941 never thought that handloom and hand-woven cloth should be taxed at all. I am quoting a portion of the speech which Mr. Suhrawardy then delivered in the Assembly—"Sir, such articles as saris, dhootis and gamchas as produced by our country weavers" that is his expression "produced by our country weavers". "Potteries produced by our coomers, slippers produced by our cobblers, tobacco is grown by our villagers and all these could be excluded from the taxation." But it pains me, Sir, to see that at a time when this matter is in the charge of Mr. Goswami, a prominent Congressman, he should do away with item No. 16 which exempts handloom woven cloth from taxation. Sir, this is an act which should not have come at least from him. The prince among men who is now detained in the palace of His Highness the Aga Khan in Poona used to say: "You Hindus and Muslims unite, be non-violent, spin and weave. This will lead you to Independence." Now, the Hon'ble Finance Minister who was a devotee of Mahatma Gandhi, should he now be a party to taxing spinning and weaving? Should he not encourage such a thing as handloom and woven cloth free of taxes? Should he impose this tax upon handloom and hand-woven cloth? Then, again, not only is a principle here involved but there is also the question of patriotism, nationalism involved in the matter. Here, Sir, are our village cottage-industries awaiting development and encouragement and what is the best method of developing and encouraging them? Is it by the imposition of a tax that you are going to develop them or encourage them? Will they be able to hold their head high in competition with mill-made cloths and other kinds of cloths? That is the first thing to look into. If you are willing to encourage the village cottage-industries, the principal thing which comes first to one's mind is the handloom cloth which is as much necessary as food. Sir, just as without food no one can live, so without cloth no one can hide one's shame. There is another thing in connection with this matter, and that is the question of money. Where will the money go? The money will have to be paid for purchase of cloth. The money goes to the poor, for it is they who manufacture and actually sell these cloths without payment of any tax. Are they, therefore, the persons upon whom this tax should be imposed? So I think that a distinct improvement can be made in this Sales Tax Bill if the word "substituted" is changed and in its place the word "added" is substituted. Keeping these cloths tax-free as hitherto, the Hon'ble Minister can very well add to Schedule 16 dhootis, lungis or sarees. When the sale price of a dhooti, lungi or saree does not exceed such amount as the Provincial Government may fix in respect of dhooties, lungis or sarees as the case may be, by notification in the Official Gazette, they may also be exempted from the tax. This will be a great improvement, and I appeal to the Hon'ble Finance Minister to allow the House to make this improvement. With these words, I commend my amendment to the acceptance of the House.

MR. PRESIDENT: Amendment moved: that in clause 3 of the Bill the words "for the entries" in line 1 be deleted and for the word "substituted" in line 3, the word "added" be substituted.

MR. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: Sir, in rising to support the motion moved by my friend Mr. Lalit Chandra Das I would like to say a few words. As I made it clear yesterday in my speech, there are some defects in the wording of the Bill itself. Possibly it did not strike the Finance Minister when the Bill was drafted, and we were assured that the Bill was drafted by the Hon'ble Minister himself possibly without the assistance of the Legislative Department and that is why this mistake crept in. When we heard Government members during the last two days in connection with the discussion on the Bill, I think it was admitted on all hands that the poor man's cloth would be excluded from the operation of this tax. Possibly the Finance Minister knows very well, as has also been pointed out by the mover of this amendment, that a large section of the poorer people wear dhootis and saris which are prepared by the handloom weavers in the country and it will mean the abolition of the handloom industry altogether if you impose a tax on handloom products which would be used by the poorer population of the province. As a matter of fact, on further consideration I find that the amendments relating to clause 3 which have been tabled by many honourable members would have very much improved the Bill if the Hon'ble Minister had made a provision that handloom cloths, dhooties, saries, chaddars, gamchas, lungis made of yarns up to 40 counts shall be excluded from taxation under the Finance Sales Act. That would have benefited the poorer section of the population; and even now I would suggest for the consideration of the Hon'ble Minister the suggestion which I am making, namely, that he should exclude dhootis, lungis, sarees, gamchas, chaddars and handloom woven cloths prepared up to 40 counts. This would be an improvement on the Bill as it stands now and if this amendment is accepted, possibly in course of 15 minutes all the amendments on the list, from No. 24 to No. 35, will be disposed of. With these words, I support the amendment.

Mr. KAMINI KUMAR DUTTA: Sir, I had also an amendment which is almost identical. Although the wordings are different, practically it covers the same ground. The amendment of Mr. Das which seeks to exempt from this tax dhootis, lungis, sarees, irrespective of the fact whether produced by handloom cotton weaving or by mill, if the sale price would not exceed a particular amount which the provincial Government may fix, would certainly benefit the poorer sections of the public. Item 16 in the schedule to the existing Sales Tax Act did exempt handloom woven cloth. It requires no speech to justify the amendment before the House. Handloom is an indigenous industry which requires all possible encouragement from the State. It benefits not only the weaver, the producer of the commodity but also benefits the poorer section of the public for whom generally a very large percentage of the handloom cloths are woven. So this industry which benefits not a very inconsiderable section of the population requires special protection from the State and as such handloom woven cloths ought to be exempted from the operation of this Bill. There is another factor, too, which has been brought home to us by the exigency of the war. Mill-made cloths are not so very easily available even now. A situation may arise when owing to the difficulty of transport and other factors mill-made cloths may not be available in every part of the country. So provision should be made for handloom woven cloths in this province and for this State-aid ought to be given to this industry. Instead of giving it this help, by this amending Bill a fresh tax is going to be levied on handloom woven cloths which were exempted in the original Act. So, from the stand-point of cottage-industry as well as from the stand-point that the poorer sections depend very much on these handloom woven cloths, these cloths should be exempted. Cloth is one of the essential necessities of our life and as there are weavers who are competent and capable of supplying the cloths required for this province, they ought to be given all possible aid and protection by the State. I do support the amendment with all the emphasis that I can command. This amendment should not be looked at merely from a commercial point of view. It should be looked at from the larger interest of the nation.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Haridas Majumdar, you have an amendment. Do you propose to move it now or separately?

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: I shall move it separately.

Mr. PRESIDENT: You may move it now and after that I shall call upon the honourable members to speak on the amendments.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: All right, Sir. I beg to move that in clause 3 of the Bill, for the word "substituted" in line 3 the word "added" be substituted.

Sir, the arguments already advanced by my honourable friends who have supported the previous amendment will convince our friends opposite that it is necessary that handloom woven cloths should be excluded from the operation of the Bill. There is an additional reason also. These poor weavers, jolas and tantis should be given adequate relief, and not only the coarse cloths should be exempted but also cloths whose prices may be Rs. 20 or Rs. 30 a pair, should also be exempted for the sake of helping this cottage-industry. Sir, the Manchester mills dealt a heavy blow to this industry only a few decades back, but during the time of the Swadeshi movement this industry was again showing up its head: it was coming back to its own inch by inch, and if at this stage another blow is given, this industry will be killed not to come back to life again after the war. When the big factories will raise their heads not only on the banks of the Ganges but all over India, I am sure these poor people and this poor industry will be forgotten as a thing of the past. I hope and trust that this handloom industry will be spared by the Hon'ble Finance Minister if he has power to do so.

With these words, I commend the resolution to the acceptance of the House.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Dutta, I presume you do not propose to move your amendment.

Mr. KAMINI KUMAR DUTTA: No, Sir, it is all the same.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Yes, it is all the same.

Motions moved:

That in clause 3 of the Bill, for the word "substitute" in line 3, the deleted and for the word "substituted" in line 3, the word "added" be substituted.

That in clause 3 of the Bill, for the word "substituted" in line 3, the word "added" be substituted.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Sir, I rise to support this amendment. I hope that in this case at any rate the honourable members supporting Government will find it possible to accept this amendment. I find that amendments almost to an identical effect have been tabled by an important member from the Government side. If that is any indication of what he actually desires, I take it that the Government side already feel the force of some of the remarks which have been made from this side of the House. Now, Sir, the purpose of this amendment is to retain a very valuable provision which was made in the original Act. It was enacted that all handloom woven cloth, when sold by a dealer who does not sell any other kind of cloth should be exempted from the Sales Tax. The idea behind this exemption has already been stated. It is not necessary for me to dilate upon it very much. But I would nevertheless like to point out once more to members of this House that even today the supply of mill-made cloth is not adequate for meeting the requirements of the province. In very many cases, there is local production and local consumption. If this process of local production and local consumption is disturbed, then it would affect the economic life of the rural areas. In very many cases, I know from personal experience that there are persons who are agriculturists but also have in addition probably a handloom. They manage to eke out an existence by combining the income from their agricultural and weavers' profession. Now, if the change which Government propose to make is carried into effect, the class of persons whom I have in mind and about whom the honourable members of this House also know from their personal experience, will be very seriously affected. This amendment which has been moved by my honourable friend Mr. Lalit Chandra Das does not in any way want to change the Government Bill beyond adding a particular clause of exemption in addition to what is already there. The present amending Bill seeks to take away a concession which had been enjoyed by the poorer classes, the weavers and their customers. The purpose of the present amendment is to retain that. As has been stated by speakers on this side of the House, this is necessary not only from the point of view of the actual economic interests of these weavers and their customers, but it is also necessary from the point of view of the development of a very important cottage-industry in this country. If this amendment is not carried and if all hand-woven cloth is included within the purview of this Bill, what will be the result? The Government can say that they are going to exclude cloth of a particular value, but they are not going to make any distinction between the mill-made cloth and the hand-made cloth of the same value. They will simply fix a price. The form in which the Bill-clause has been drafted is that the Government may fix different kinds of prices for different sizes. There is no reference whatsoever to the cloth which is woven on a handloom or to the cloth which is woven in a factory. The only reference is to a difference in size. If the Bill-clause as originally drafted is carried into effect, the result would be that a piece of cloth, whether handloom-woven or mill-manufactured, will come under exactly the same consideration from the Government. Now, Sir, it is known that cottage-industries cannot thrive unless there is a certain amount of protection for them. If it be the case that Government put the mill-made cloth and the hand-woven cloth exactly in the same category, then the handloom cloth will be gradually driven out of the market, and as has been pointed out by Messrs. Lalit Chandra Das and Kamini Kumar Dutta, a very large number of persons derive their livelihood from this source.

I would also in this connection make a passing reference to some observations made by Mr. Kader Baksh yesterday. He said, "What after all does a difference between one-quarter and one-half in the rate of the tax make"? It may be the case that to him or to the Hon'ble Finance Minister, the difference is not very material. Yet to a very large number of our fellow-countrymen, half an anna in the rupee means a quite considerable proportion of their daily income. Even under the present abnormal conditions in the rural areas, Government wanted to provide test relief only at the rate of six annas per day. According to the estimate of Government, six annas should thus be the income of a person a day even under the present abnormal conditions. Some attempts were made to increase this rate but I do not know whether they were carried into effect. In some places test relief operations could not be continued as able-bodied workers did not come forward and were not willing to work at the rate of six annas per day. Therefore, in some cases Government had to abandon schemes of test relief. If the Government decide that six annas should be the average daily normal income of a labourer in this province, then to such persons the difference between a quarter of an anna and half an anna is certainly a material difference. I would ask Mr. Kader Baksh not to judge the poorer sections in this country by his own standard but to show them some sympathy. If he remembers that a considerable section of this community buy cloths locally produced and in the local market, then he will understand what a difference this amendment will make.

Mr. Latafat Hossain also made certain remarks yesterday. He took to task the members of the Opposition because he knew, he said, that these amendments were brought forward only in order to harass the Government—I think that is the term he used—and not out of sympathy for the poor. I do not know if he has genuine sympathy for the poor, and if he has, then he should come forward to support the amendment, which aims primarily if not entirely at doing good to the poorer classes of people in the country. From the point of view of the agriculturist, from the point of view of the rural population and from the economic point of view, it is desirable that handloom woven cloth should be exempted from the operation of the Sales Tax. The amendment Mr. Das has moved seeks to safeguard this privilege which is already being enjoyed and which was given to the poorer classes of persons by a former Finance Minister. I would put it to the Hon'ble Finance Minister whether he would be the person who is going to kill the cottage industries and especially handloom weaving? Will he be the instrument to destroy this item in the national economy, for which the Congress—to which organisation the Hon'ble Finance Minister at one time belonged—pressed so much? Is the Finance Minister going to be the person who is going to kill the handloom industry and cottage industry from which such a large proportion of our fellow-nationals today derive their income? If Mr. Das's amendment is carried, the position of the handloom weavers is safeguarded. In addition, one item which was missing in the existing Act will have been added in the present Bill, for there was no reference whatsoever therein to coarse lungis, dhotis, and sarees unless they were woven by hand. If Mr. Lalit Chandra Das's amendment is carried, we will have two types of safeguards. On the one hand, all handloom woven cloths will be exempted from the operation of this Bill. In addition, mill-made cloths below certain prices will also be exempted. This amendment gives double protection to the poorer section of the population, namely, he will be able to buy handloom-made cloth or if he so prefers he will be able to buy mill-made cloth and he will not have to pay any tax provided the quality and the price of the cloth is such as would be fixed by the Government. In view of these considerations, I would urge upon the Hon'ble the Finance Minister to look at this amendment with sympathy. It is a constructive suggestion of the Opposition which would definitely improve the Bill. It is a matter in favour of which the Government party have expressed their own desires, and indicated unmistakably by amendments tabled by Government party members. We expect that they will accept the amendment and persuade the Government to accept it and not put it to the vote. As Mr. Mukherji has said, if this is agreed to, we would be finishing the Bill immediately, because all the other amendments will fall through. From that point of view, Government would be well advised to accept it.

Mr. K. G. ROY CHOWDHURY: Sir, I wholeheartedly support the amendment moved by my friend Mr. Lalit Chandra Das. This principally relates to the weavers, and we all know that the total production of handloom cloths in India has greatly dwindled. In olden days it was Lancashire that strangled the handloom industry in this country and now it is the cotton mills of India that are killing this industry. I may remind the Hon'ble Finance Minister that Mr. Rajagopalachariar, one of the greatest leaders of the Congress, introduced the Sales Tax Bill in Madras and exempted handloom products. This Bengal Act is a copy of the Madras Act. He made a famous speech while introducing his Bill, not from the point of view of the spinner, not from the point of view of encouraging khadi, not from the point of view of consumers, but from the point of view of protecting lakhs of weavers. The number of weavers in Bengal is very large, according to the report of the Royal Agricultural Commission. It is more than 2 lakhs in Bengal. The amendment asks for small concession which should be given to help the weavers. The production of handloom woven cloth should be tax-free not so much from the point of consumers as from the point of view of weavers. The consumers are already hard-hit because of the greed of the cotton mill-owners of Bombay. By wholesale exemption of handloom products he would be showing sympathy towards the hand-weaving industry and weavers of Bengal. The Hon'ble Finance Minister must exempt all production of handloom woven production. It is known to him no doubt that in the last year's famine and distress they suffered most. It is also perhaps known to the House that about 60 per cent. of the weavers in Bengal is Muslim. So my Muslim friends opposite should realise that 60 per cent. of weavers who belong to the Muslim community will be benefited if this amendment is accepted. I appeal to them to bring pressure on the Hon'ble Finance Minister to accept this amendment and to see that the production of handloom woven cloth is fully exempted from the operation of this Bill. Fancy sarees made by handloom weavers do fetch good prices but the power-looms are copying the designs and unless some protection is given, hand-woven sarees will disappear from the market and thousands of weavers would lose their bread.

Mr. KADER BAKSH: Sir, I had no desire to take part in this debate. But certain remarks have been made by my friend Mr. Humayun Kabir to which I have to reply, because I had not been truly represented in his speech. It is not a fact that when I spoke yesterday on his amendment to reduce the per centum from one-half to one-third I had not the interests of the poorer sections in view. He thinks that he knows better about the handloom weaving industry than I do, but he forgets that he has been all along in Calcutta and so he cannot speak of the weaving class in the villages.

He has never gone into the interior villages and seen things for himself. I speak from my own personal experience—

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: On a point of order, Sir. Am I the subject of this amendment or is he speaking on the amendment?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Probably that is the preamble to his speech. (Laughter.)

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Preamble without any body.

Mr. KADER BAKSH: Sir, I have been with these weaving class people for the last 20 or 25 years. I started an association under the co-operative system in my own district. I have been thick and thin with these people. But be that as it may, Sir, I never said yesterday that these people should be taxed. I made a reference yesterday in my speech that certain classes of cloths ought to be exempted from the operation of this Act. But this is my personal view. I think sarees, dhoties, lungis and gamchas of certain counts, not the finer qualities, should be exempted. My honourable friends opposite have got into a habit of wearing khaddar which are very fine and costly. Those varieties should never be exempted.

As regards the difference between 1/3rd of an anna and 1/4 of an anna, I said there is no difference. But there is difference between 1/4 of an anna and 1/5 of an anna. Sir, I think, I have made my position absolutely clear to Mr. Humayun Kabir.

The Hon'ble Mr. TULSI CHANDRA COSWAMI: Mr. President, I may say at the outset that from the point of view of sentiment my sympathies are entirely with the movers and supporters of the two amendments, but there is also the other side of the question. I want to know how in a consumers' tax the weaver is directly hit. I have tried to find that out. I am sure that in trying to protect the weavers we are really giving a premium to dealers. Ours is a consumers' tax, remember that. Therefore, what I propose to do is this. Without making a long speech I may tell you what I propose to do. I propose by my rule-making power to fix different prices for handloom woven cloths and mill-made cloths (Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: You cannot do so.) I am competent to do so, and thereby give a preference in favour of handloom made cloths—

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Sir, may I interrupt the Hon'ble Minister for a minute and draw his attention to the proviso which says that "Provided that the Provincial Government may fix different amount for dhoties, lungis or sarees of different sizes." There is no reference whatever here to anything about the different types of cloths manufactured in mills. By his rule-making power he cannot do that. Of course, if he can do so we would welcome that and it would meet our point.

The Hon'ble Mr. TULSI CHANDRA COSWAMI: Sir, I have had it legally examined and I am in a position to say that it is possible for me to give a preference to the handloom made cloths. My object is not to kill the handloom industry. They must be protected not merely by an exemption here but by other means more effective and efficacious. But I think we have no right to exempt those purchasers, to give bounty to those purchasers, who are able to afford cloths, dhoties or saries, priced at, say, Rs. 50 or Rs. 100, and that is why I am declaring on the floor of this House that in consultation with the representatives of different Indian Chambers of Commerce and Weavers' Associations I shall fix rates which will give a preference in favour of handloom woven cloth over mill-made cloth. I hope this will satisfy the honourable members. The statement which I have made is one which I hope I shall be able to implement. I cannot accept the amendment simply because I cannot exempt the rich man's cloth.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order, order. There are two amendments before the House—one moved by Mr. Lalit Chandra Das, and the other by Mr. Haridas Mazumdar. Now, if Mr. Lalit Chandra Das's amendment is carried, then Mr. Haridas Mazumdar's amendment will not arise, and if Mr. Lalit Chandra Das's amendment is negatived, then Mr. Haridas Mazumdar's amendment will fall through. They are exactly the same. I shall put Mr. Lalit Chandra Das's amendment to vote.

The question before the House is: that in clause 3 of the Bill the words "for the entries" in line 1, be deleted and for the word "substituted" in line 3, the word "added" be substituted.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order, order. The House has divided.

Ayes being 14 and Noes 23, the amendment is negatived.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: I beg to move that in clause 3 of the Bill, in column 1, after the word and comma "lungis," in line 1, the words "chaddars and gamchas" be added.

Sir, the amendment is self-explanatory and I need not say anything about it.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Amendment moved that in clause 3 of the Bill, in column 1, after the word and comma "lungis," in line 1, the words "chaddars and gamchas" be added.

The Hon'ble Mr. TULSI CHANDRA COSWAMI: Sir, I am afraid, I cannot accept the amendment about chaddars and gamchas. (Laughter.)

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that in clause 3 of the Bill, in column 1, after the word and comma "lungis," in line 1, the words "chaddars and gamchas" be added.

(The amendment was negatived.)

Mr. NUR AHMED: Sir, in view of the assurance given by the Hon'ble the Finance Minister, I do not move any of the amendments standing in my name.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, is it in order for Mr. Nur Ahmed to say that he would not move all the amendments when those amendments are not before the House now?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Strictly speaking he is not, because all his amendments are not yet before the House. But I think he did it as a matter of convenience.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: I beg to move that in clause 3 of the Bill, in column 1, after the items "dhotis, lungis and sarees", the following new items be added, namely:—

"and any cloth woven in handlooms".

Sir, I hope the Hon'ble Finance Minister will accept it for the sake of the poor section of the population and will not reject this modest amendment.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Amendment moved that in clause 3 of the Bill, in column 1, after the items "dhotis, lungis and sarees," the following new item be added, namely:—

"and any cloth woven in handlooms".

The Hon'ble Mr. TULSI CHANDRA GOSWAMI: Sir, I do not see any justification for exempting this because the actual purchase of these commodities by the poor will not entail any sale tax.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that in clause 3 of the Bill, in column 1, after the items "dhotis, lungis and sarees," the following new items be added, namely:—

"and any cloth woven in handlooms".

(The amendment was negatived.)

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that clause 3 stand part of the Bill.

(The motion was agreed to.)

Mr. PRESIDENT: After the time-limit fixed for amendments, the office received notices of two amendments, one from Mr. Kamini Kumar Dutta and the other from Mr. Shrish Chandra Chakraverti. In view of the fact that it is an important Bill, I am prepared to accept these amendments at short-notice. Will Mr. Dutta move his motion now?

Mr. KAMINI KUMAR DUTTA: Yes, Sir. I beg to move that after clause 3 of the Bill, the following clause be added, namely:—

“4. After item 16 of the Schedule to the said Act, the following new item be inserted, namely:—

16A Handloom woven cloth ..	When the cloth is woven in cotton yarns only.”

Sir, the object of the amendment is simple. It has been stated by the Hon'ble the Finance Minister that under the rule-making power he would provide for some special concession in favour of handloom cloths. The real object of the present amendment also is to give relief to the poorer sections of the public who earn their living by weaving ordinary cotton cloths and not silk cloths.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Amendment moved that after clause 3 of the Bill, the following clause be added, namely:—

“4. After item 16 of the Schedule to the said Act, the following new item be inserted, namely:—

16A Handloom woven cloth ..	When the cloth is woven in cotton yarns only.”

The Hon'ble Mr. TULSI CHANDRA COSWAMI: Sir, I take it that the Hon'ble the Leader of the Opposition is satisfied with my assurance which I have already given. Therefore, I hope he would oblige me by not pressing this amendment for the simple reason that even handloom woven cotton cloths are sometimes very expensive. We know that the price of ordinary cotton khaddar of special quality varies between Rs. 25 to Rs. 30 a piece. That is a fact. So, I hope he would not press his amendment.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is that after clause 3 of the Bill, the following clause be added, namely:—

“4. After item 16 of the Schedule to the said Act, the following new item be inserted, namely:—

16A Handloom woven cloth ..	When the cloth is woven in cotton yarns only.”

(The amendment was negatived.)

Mr. KAMINI KUMAR DUTTA: Sir, I beg to move that after clause 3 of the Bill, the following clause be added, namely:—

“4. After item 16 of the Schedule to the said Act, the following new item be inserted, namely:—

16A Handloom woven cloth ..	When the sale price does not exceed rupees fifteen.”

My present amendment is just consistent with the principle enunciated by the Hon'ble Minister himself in his assurance. I have fixed the price at Rs. 15, so that the poorer sections may get some relief out of this handloom woven cloths.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Amendment moved that after clause 3 of the Bill, the following clause be added, namely:—

“4. After item 16 of the Schedule to the said Act, the following new item be inserted, namely:—

16A Handloom woven cloth ..	When the sale price does not exceed rupees fifteen.”

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Mr. President, Sir, I beg to support this amendment. I think that my friend Mr. Dutta has taken the Hon'ble Finance Minister at his word, and has taken him at a very great disadvantage. One of the main arguments advanced by my honourable friend, the Finance Minister, and some of his supporters was to the effect that there is handloom cloth which can sell for Rs. 50 or even more per piece, and as he has put it, he was not prepared to exempt any rich man's cloth from the operation of this tax. Now, Sir, the sting of that objection is entirely removed if this amendment is carried. I would ask my honourable friends to my left and in front to support the amendment for it will both save the weavers' interests and the interests of the poor people. My honourable friends to my left do not certainly want that the rich man should not enter heaven any more than the camel should pass through the needle's eye! This amendment is entirely in consistency with their principles and in consistency with the principle of the members of the other side.

There was one other point to which reference was made by my honourable friend the Finance Minister. He failed to understand how the consumers' tax can in any way affect the weavers. I ask him to apply his mind for a moment to the question and it will be clear to him. Our contention is that unless there is some difference in the price between the mill-made cloth and the hand-made cloth, there would be a general tendency for the consumer to prefer mill-made cloth to handloom woven cloth. For the same price, the average man would rather purchase the finer mill cloth than the coarser hand-woven cloth. Therefore, even if the tax is paid by the consumer, still the fact that it actually increases the price immediately places the hand-made cloth at a disadvantage compared to the mill-made cloth. In view of these facts, I think that if the Hon'ble Finance Minister opposes this amendment, he will be doing so without any reasons or grounds but simply for the sake of opposition.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Sir, I hail from a district where cottage industries were in a flourishing condition in olden times, but now-a-days the handloom industry and the cottage industries of the district are practically non-existent. I do not say they are in a moribund condition, but they have practically ceased to exist. The famous muslin is gone, so are the other industries. In the Dhamrai thana as well as in Narsingdi thana in the district of Dacca, there are a large number of weavers who have been eking out a wretched existence from income derived from the sale of hand-woven cloth. Sir, as Mr. Humayun Kabir has rightly said, it will indirectly affect the handloom industry to a great extent. That the price of hand-woven cloth is higher than that of mill-made cloth is well-known, and if on the top of that the Sales Tax is added to the price of the cloth, it will indirectly operate harshly upon the purchasers. Consumption will be directly affected, and the purchaser indirectly affected. My concern is about the poor middle classes and the poor, and as the Hon'ble Finance Minister has given us an assurance that he will see to it that the poor man does not suffer in any way, what harm can there be in accepting the amendment as it is practically in line with his argument?

The Hon'ble Mr. TULSI CHANDRA COSWAMI: Sir, my difficulty in accepting the amendment is simply this: I wish to fix different rates according to the prevailing market rate in consultation with the various interests and it would be unfair both to myself and to those whom I want to consult if I were to accept any price in advance. Besides, there may be a necessity for charging those rates if the prices fall as we expect the prices will fall. Rs. 15 may be quite right today but may be much too much tomorrow. I therefore oppose the amendment.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order, order. The question before the House is: that after clause 3 of the Bill the following clause be added, namely:—

“4. After item 16 of the Schedule to the said Act, the following new item be inserted, namely:—

16A Handloom woven cloth . . . When the sale price does not exceed rupees fifteen.”

(The amendment was negatived.)

Preamble.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that the Long Title and Preamble stand part of the Bill.

(The motion was agreed to.)

Mr. PRESIDENT: The Hon'ble Minister will now move the Third Reading of the Bill.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Are you going to take up the Third Reading just now when only 5 minutes are left? Under rule 67 of the Procedure Rules of this House I would suggest that the third reading be postponed till Monday. My reasons are these—

Mr. PRESIDENT: In view of the importance of the subject, it being a Finance Bill, I think it would be better not to take up the Third Reading of the Bill today. It should be taken up on Monday next.

The House now stands adjourned till 2-15 p.m. tomorrow.

Adjournment.

The Council then adjourned till 2-15 p.m. on Friday, the 17th March, 1944.

Members absent.

The following members were absent from the meeting held on the 16th March, 1944:—

BENGAL LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL DEBATES

First Session, 1944—No. 25.

THE COUNCIL met in the Legislative Chamber of the Legislative Building, Calcutta, on Friday, the 17th March, 1944, at 2-15 p.m., being the twenty-fifth day of the First Session of 1944, pursuant to section 62(2) (a) of the Government of India Act, 1935.

Mr. President (the Hon'ble SIR BIJOY PRASAD SINGH ROY, K.C.I.E.) was in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Persons arrested and detained under Regulation III of 1818.

91. Mr. NAGENDRA NATH MOHALANOBIS: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Home Department be pleased to state—

- (a) how many persons in Bengal have been arrested and are still being detained under Regulation III of 1818, on and from 3rd June, 1943, to 15th June, 1943; and
- (b) what allowances, if any, have been allowed to each such person and to his family?

Mr. BIREN ROY (on behalf of the Hon'ble Khwaja Sir Nazimuddin):

(a) Nine, but two have subsequently been released.

(b) A personal allowance of Rs. 30 per month has been granted to each Regulation III prisoner and in addition family allowances at Rs. 100 per month to three of these and at Rs. 30 per month to one.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Will the Parliamentary Secretary please name those persons to whom family allowances have been given?

Mr. BIREN ROY: Mr. Sibnath Banerji, Mr. Niharendu Dutta Mazumdar and Mr. Pratul Chandra Ganguli.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: And Rs. 30?

Mr. BIREN ROY: The gentleman has since been released—Mr. Narendra Nath Sen Gupta.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: What about the three more gentlemen who are under detention under Regulation III of 1818? Has any allowance been sanctioned to their families?

Mr. BIREN ROY: No, not yet.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Has any application been made by them?

Mr. BIREN ROY: No.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Does not the law require that they should be given family allowances even if they do not apply?

Mr. BIREN ROY: No; personal allowances are being given.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: But why no family allowances are given?

Mr. BIREN ROY: The matter is under consideration.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state what was the income of these three Regulation III prisoners before their detention?

Mr. BIREN ROY: I want notice.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state if it is a fact that under Regulation III these persons are entitled to family allowance whether they apply for it or not?

Mr. BIREN ROY: I have already replied that the matter is under consideration.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: But are they not entitled to family allowance under the rules? If so, this cannot be under consideration because it is a question of fact.

Mr. BIREN ROY: It is.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: If it is a fact—and it has been admitted by Government, that they are entitled to family allowances—then why no family allowances were granted to them?

Mr. BIREN ROY: Sir, I have already said that the matter is under consideration: various things have to be taken into consideration in that respect.

Dr. KUMUD SANKAR RAY: May I know what is the number of family members of the Regulation III prisoners whose allowances have been increased?

Mr. BIREN ROY: For such figures, I want notice.

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: What are the various considerations which are under the consideration of Government?

(Mr. Shrish Chandra Chakraverti put the question from a seat which was not allotted to him.)

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Chakraverti, you must speak from the seat which has been allotted to you.

Mr. BIREN ROY: There are various factors, such as their income, properties and other things.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: How is it that although the applications were submitted in June, 1943, and we are in the middle of March,—nearly 10 clear months have elapsed—they are still under the consideration of Government?

Mr. BIREN ROY: All these allowances were settled in February, so a little more time must elapse.

Adjournment motion regarding salt supply.

Mr. NACENDRA NATH MOHOLANOBISH: Mr. President, Sir, with regard to my adjournment motion, the Hon'ble Minister for Civil Supplies wanted to make a statement today. I do not know if he is going to make the statement or whether I shall move my motion.

Mr. PRESIDENT: He is going to make the statement.

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: Sir, I would like the House to realise that except in the matter of price there is no control over salt. Private traders are free to get as much salt as they can and to move the salt wheresoever they like without any permits or hindrances. From this it will be obvious that if there are any difficulties at all in the supply and distribution of salt, it is due to difficulties of transport over the greater portion of which the Government of Bengal has no control. To begin the story from the beginning: Salt has to be imported almost exclusively from the Red Sea ports and the West Coast ports. Our monthly consumption is estimated at 30,000 tons of salt of which 4,000 tons are sent to Assam. This is the minimum estimate, although the trade puts it at a higher figure of between ten and eleven lakh maunds. I will not take the House through the correspondence between us and the Government of India on the question of building up reserves within the Province. It will suffice if I were to state that the Government of India have now come round to the view that we should have a reserve of 16 lakhs of maunds of salt within the Province, and of this I propose to keep 8 lakhs in Calcutta and 8 lakhs in the districts. The Government of India have further agreed to provide shipping for us at 30,000 tons a month. Shortage was apprehended by me when the Government of India decided to stop rail-borne traffic from the West Coast ports to Bengal. In the meantime, I have been successful in building up a reserve of 8 lakhs of maunds to meet the emergency that might arise owing to deficiency of transport. I made arrangements to send 2 lakh maunds to the mofussil for immediate consumption. This was in the beginning of December. Transport, however, was not provided, and when it was provided, it broke down owing to a jam in the Bengal and Assam Railway. It will thus be seen that steps, and early steps, were taken by the Government of Bengal long before any one realised that there was likelihood of any shortage of salt. But circumstances over which the Government of Bengal had no control prevented them from carrying out the programme. The present arrangements stand as under:

More than 2 lakh maunds of salt have already been despatched to the districts. There is a programme for a further despatch of 4 lakh maunds on Government account. These were to be held as a reserve, but owing to the shortage of salt they will immediately go into consumption. An elaborate programme has been arranged for these despatches; from the 3rd of March 26 wagons per day have been available on the Bengal and Assam Railway. Two more wagons on the broad gauge above Abdulpur, making four wagons in all for these stations, will be available from today, bringing the total to 28 wagons. From the 1st April we shall have 30 wagons per day. From tomorrow 6 wagons a day will be available on the East Indian Railway, 7 wagons a day on the Bengal Nagpur Railway. Salt is being moved to Jessore to the extent of 6,500 maunds by military transport. Country boats are being utilised to carry salt to the East Bengal stations direct from Calcutta, and also from Khulna to which 15 trucks a day are being sent. A country boat convoy conveying 57,500 maunds of salt from Calcutta is already on the way to Madaripur, Gopalganj, Munshiganj, Narayanganj, Chandpur, Feni, Hularhat and all such stations. By day after tomorrow I expect that the figures of our despatches will have gone up to 340,000 maunds of salt on Government account, and I expect to provide much larger facilities to private trade after the 21st of March, if necessary, by cutting down transport of other commodities. It will be realised by the members that many commodities have got to be sent at the same time, as there is a demand for all of them in all the districts at the same time, and transport therefore has to be balanced so that all the commodities may be sent, and at the same time the commodities which are most urgently needed should have precedence for the time being. All the districts therefore have been catered for. The honourable member, I understand, comes from Jalpaiguri. We have already sent to Jalpaiguri 8,000 maunds of salt; to Dinajpur 11,500 maunds; to Rangpur 12,000 maunds; and similarly every district has had a share. I am looking further into the question of sending salt to as many places within the district as possible so that distribution may be more easily effected. As regards supplies, not only did the Government of India stop rail-borne salt but we received little salt in October, none in November, and very little salt in December. I can only trust that the Government of India have awakened to the very serious, I may use the word desperate, situation which has developed in Bengal owing to their not having provided sufficient shipping space. There is, however, no need for despondency. The Government of India have promised that they will send us at least 30,000 tons per month in future. They have increased the allotment of our imports from the Red Sea ports. For some reason or other, they had laid down a basic figure for imports which was by no means typical, as the imports in that alleged basic year had been the least owing to war conditions. They have increased the figure by 50 per cent. and we are pressing upon the Government of India to increase it still further, as the quota still falls short of our requirements. Secondly, the quota was distributed amongst persons who could not take full advantage of it. We are impressing upon the Government of India to redistribute the quota amongst those who can take full advantage of these imports. As I said before, there is no necessity for despondency. There is plenty of salt both in the Red Sea ports as well as in the West Coast ports, and all that now remains is for the Government of India to provide to us the necessary transport facilities. We are also impressing upon them the necessity of opening up rail-borne traffic at once until the situation here eases. I am also making arrangements for importing salt on behalf of the Government of Bengal so that we can build up our reserves, and in this respect I have every hope that the Government of India will come to the financial assistance of the Government of Bengal.

I need hardly assure the honourable members that I consider salt to be one of the most important commodities, and a very serious situation is sure to develop if arrangements are not made for proper supplies and distribution. So far as the Government of Bengal is concerned, we took precautions in time, we foresaw the difficulties, we made our arrangements, but these arrangements, so far as they have broken down, broke down due to supplies and transport questions over which we have no control. The situation has greatly improved at this stage, but I am leaving no stone unturned to secure salt from wherever I can get it and to impress upon the Government of India that they must keep to their promise and in fact they must make attempts to increase their monthly quota without which the situation will not be brought under control. In addition to this, I may also inform the House that we are taking urgent steps to put our own salt industry, both factory and cottage, on a proper footing. The price of salt is high enough to make it lucrative for our people to make salt by the pan method and an organisation on these lines, I am sure, will relieve the situation considerably. Our claim to manufacture salt, I am sure, will be recognised and encouraged by the Government of India.

Mr. NAGENDRA NATH MOHOLANOBISH: Sir, after hearing the Hon'ble Minister I think the situation is rather more serious than I anticipated. I, therefore, submit that this is a matter which should be debated upon in the House specially when the Hon'ble Supplies Minister is trying to shift the blame on the Government of India. We shall have to consider as to how far the Government of India is responsible and how far the Government of Bengal is responsible for this non-availability of salt. Therefore, Sir, I desire to press the adjournment motion.

Mr. PRESIDENT: One fact you must bear in mind, Mr. Moholanobish, that the motion is for discussing the failure of Government. When you mention Government, you no doubt mean the Local Government, the Government of Bengal.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Sir, before you give your decision in the matter, may I be allowed to speak on the subject—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Yes, I would like to hear you but only on the point regarding the admissibility of the motion.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: All right, Sir. As has been just now pointed out by you and rightly so, an adjournment motion will lie only if the responsibility can be fixed upon the Government of Bengal. I think the statement made by the Civil Supplies Minister has not shifted that responsibility from the Government of Bengal. In his statement he clearly admitted that there was no salt which came into Bengal during the months of October and November. He no doubt argued that the Government of India did not provide any transport for bringing salt into Bengal during the months of October and November. But whatever the reason, as Government were not able to take necessary steps during the months of October and November, the situation is worse today. Therefore, I think that the charge of failure to bring salt into Bengal will lie against the Bengal Government. We are not primarily concerned with the Government of India. We are concerned with the Government of Bengal. We want them to put up a case to the Central Government so strongly that it will not be possible for the Government of India to refuse their demand.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The point is this, Mr. Humayun Kabir. You must convince me first of all that the Government of Bengal have failed in their attempt to supply salt. On the other hand, I am inclined to think from the very elaborate and illuminating statement made by the Hon'ble Minister that the Government of Bengal did their best and that the failure of the Government of India to supply salt during October had its repercussion on salt situation in Bengal in subsequent months. The statement does not show that the Government did not take sufficient steps for improving the supply of salt or that they did not do their best to remedy the situation. That is the view, I am inclined to take. I am, however, prepared to hear if any honourable member wants to speak on the point of admissibility.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Sir, the Government of Bengal may have made an attempt and even serious attempt; but this must also be remembered that the charge of failure of Government will lie if in spite of such attempts an untoward incident takes place—

Mr. PRESIDENT: I am afraid, not.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Please listen to me, Sir. Suppose there is the possibility of disturbance and Government make some arrangements for keeping the peace. If these arrangements prove inadequate, then an adjournment motion will certainly lie because preparations for prevention of the breach of the peace were not adequate. Here also my contention is that since the Government of India did not supply salt in October and the Government of Bengal knew that they had not done so, it was their duty to make certain representations. In spite of such representations after the failure to supply salt in October, the Government of India again failed to supply salt during November, then the representations were not of a nature likely to influence the Government of India. The Government of Bengal should then have put whatever pressure they had at their command upon the Government of India. I am submitting to you that the Government of Bengal have not been able to exert that pressure which it was possible for them to do. In any case, after the months of October and November, the months of December and January have passed. Instead of improving, the situation is continually deteriorating. Today the position is far worse and to use the expression of the Hon'ble Minister himself, the situation is today desperate. If that is the result of the activities of the Government of Bengal, if that is the result of their pressure on the Government of India, if the situation is desperate. I submit that a case for discussion of the matter in this House has been clearly established.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: Sir, having regard to the admission made by the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Supply Department that he failed to get supply of salt from the Government of India during October and November, what was he doing all this time? We are now in March. The Hon'ble Minister himself admitted that steps were taken, and steps can be taken even now for manufacturing salt within the province. But what was he doing last October and November when he found that the Government of India could not supply salt owing to transport difficulties and when it is further found that transport was not within the control of the Government of Bengal why the Hon'ble Minister did not tap all the resources within the province and arrange the manufacture of salt in the coastal districts of Bengal? I have personal experience about this matter. After the cyclone of 1942 I travelled through the coastal districts of Midnapore and walked down all the coasts where salt is manufactured. I found that there was ample scope for the manufacture of salt in Tamluk and Contai and the people and labourers told me that if they can have a pan worth Rs. 10, they could manufacture half a maund of salt every day. So if they could be supplied with three or four thousand pans we could have got two thousand maunds of salt daily and the desperate situation, as the Hon'ble Minister has himself said, could have been avoided. So, Government has failed to take early steps to avoid this desperate situation and therefore it ought to be discussed in the House.

Mr. K. C. ROY CHOWDHURY: Sir, may I be permitted to enquire if the Hon'ble Minister is aware that in the Ganjam district on the eastern coast of India through which I made extensive tour, there is plenty of salt made there—white salt and not black salt—and many merchants of Calcutta did procure Ganjam salt for Bengal's use. Has any attempt been made to get Ganjam salt through the Bengal-Nagpur Railway? Secondly, in Bihar, which has been taken over by the Governor under section 93 and is a non-Ministerial province, there is no scarcity of salt.

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: Sir, however much I wish this matter to be discussed, if not for anything else, at least for finding if there is a solution of the salt problem, I submit that the technical difficulty standing in the way of this motion being moved is very great. First of all, the subject-matter of this motion is not the primary concern of the Provincial Government; Secondly, it does not fulfil the tests, viz., that the matter must not only be urgent, not only be of public importance but it must be of recent occurrence. (Interruptions from the Opposition benches.) The honourable member ought to have brought up this motion before. But certainly on the question of urgency of the motion there is no doubt. As regards the merit of the motion, that is still to be discussed.

I am certain the matter has not been of recent happening. The situation was very bad for a long time—at least for 2 months. Extraordinary condition was prevailing in certain districts and salt was selling at Rs. 1-4 or Rs. 1-8 a seer. Honourable members who are anxious for this discussion had notice of that position and they could immediately bring this matter to the notice of Government and raise a discussion here upon that subject. The honourable member who has brought in this adjournment motion could have moved that the business on the Order Paper should be adjourned and that subject should be given precedence. But he has not done that at the appropriate time.

The other point is: whether this subject—this supply of salt or the failure to supply salt—is the primary responsibility of the Government of Bengal against whom the honourable member wants to bring this censure motion. I submit, Sir, if the responsibility of supplying salt lies with any Government, it lies with the Government of India. Therefore, you will have to decide whether the responsibility lies with the Provincial Government or with the Government of India. Because salt is supplied through the agency of the Central Government. They control the movement of wagons and other transport facilities. The Government of India are rigorously controlling the transport systems under the Defence of India Rules. They are controlling the different transport systems, viz., railways, shipping, private transport and all sorts of other mechanical transport systems. They are even controlling the loading itself. Therefore, it is the primary responsibility of the Central Government. If there is any failure—there is failure and a serious failure at that—the failure is on account of the failure of the Government of India.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Mr. President, Sir, this is a very urgent matter. On an issue like this the Sind Ministry threatened resignation. I should like to enquire from the Hon'ble Minister to what length they put pressure on the Government of India, —whether they threatened resignation or not. If they have not done that, they have failed. That is my point.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Mr. President, Sir, I want to say something with respect to this matter. What has fallen from the lips of Mr. Hamidul Huq Chowdhury does not really comply with the provisions of the Procedure Rules. He has said that it is not a matter of urgent importance (Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: It was urgent) nor of recent occurrence. But, Sir, the Hon'ble Minister himself has admitted that the matter is urgent. As regards whether the matter is of recent happening, I may say this, Sir, that shortage of salt is not a question of one day but it is a continuing incident and all the while we were hoping that the matter would be righted. We waited and waited and when we could not wait any longer we have brought this motion. We then thought that as the matter is definitely of urgent public importance, it should be brought to the notice of Government prominently. Sir, no question of its being of recent occurrence can arise now as it is a continuing grievance.

Then with regard to the failure of Government. The Hon'ble Minister tried to shift his own responsibility on to the Government of India. We have not heard the version of the Government of India as to whether they are really responsible for this shortage of salt in our province. So, I will put it to you, Sir, to consider whether it is not the duty of the present Ministry to supply salt to Bengal so long as they are on the saddle. We will not enquire how they will bring the salt. But they must bring the salt because that is a most essential thing for people to get. Can the Hon'ble Minister avoid responsibility by saying that there is no transport when there is dearth of rice? Sir, so, cannot dearth of rice be the subject-matter of an adjournment motion? As regards salt, how can they avoid responsibility? They must supply salt from outside, if necessary. They cannot plead want of transport facilities from the Government of India. I say, Sir, whether or not the Hon'ble Minister wants to shift responsibility from his own shoulder to the Government of India is quite a different thing. I will suggest, Sir, that as the Government of Bengal is bound to supply salt to the people of Bengal by whatever means they can, they cannot avoid their own responsibility by saying that it is due to the failure on the part of the Government of India. If a discussion on this matter is allowed it may transpire that the Government of India have not failed to discharge their duties in this matter. We have not heard whether the Government of India knew how matters stood during the months of December, January, February and March in Bengal. So, Sir, I should rather think that the Government of Bengal have not been able to tackle this problem properly.

There is another point, Sir. If the Hon'ble Minister allows the adjournment motion to be moved and the matter is discussed in this House, the Government of India may know the whole situation; otherwise a mere statement by the Hon'ble Minister that he had done everything that he could possibly do and that the Government of India did not fulfil their promise in the matter of providing transport facilities to the Bengal Government is no solution to the problem. If he is really sincere that he would not fail us in the matter of salt, then he should allow this House to discuss this matter and in that case the Government of India may also profit by our discussion here.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Sir, we are not here to apportion blame either to the Government of India or to the Government of Bengal or for the matter of that, to anybody. We do not know the Government of India. We know the honourable gentlemen opposite—the members of the happy family who adorn the Treasury Bench. We are concerned with the Ministry in whose hands has been placed the destiny of nearly sixty million people. It is for them to see that salt is supplied to the population of Bengal. Sir, I do not know whether the Hon'ble Minister or Mr. Hamidul Huq Chowdhury has taken care to inquire for the last three or four days——

MR. PRESIDENT: Rai Bahadur, you cannot go into the merits of the question. Whether it is admissible or not: that is the point which we are considering, and if you have got anything to say on that point you may say that.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Sir, it is a matter of great provincial importance. If the Hon'ble Minister has failed to move the Government of India to supply salt to the people of Bengal, it is for him to see that the Central Government respond to his requests, and it is only for the purpose of giving the Legislature an opportunity to ventilate and give publicity to the matter and to bring home to the Government of India the importance of the question that discussion seems desirable. That is my point.

Mr. KADER BAKSH: May I say a few words, Sir? We are not discussing the merits or demerits of the motion at present. Here the Hon'ble President has asked us to give our views as to whether the motion can be admitted or not. Now, Sir, everybody knows that salt has become a rare commodity in Bengal. This is a fact which cannot be denied. Now we have to see how salt has become so scarce? My honourable and learned friend who always blames us for some reason or other—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Kader Baksh: please speak strictly on the admissibility of the motion.

Mr. KADER BAKSH: All right, Sir. Everybody knows that salt has become scarce: but, Sir, time is the most important factor in deciding the matter of the admissibility of a motion like this. This situation has arisen for more than two months. We have been experiencing this difficulty in mofussil towns for more than two months. What prevented my honourable friend from raising the question before the House in time? I do not understand why there has been all this delay in bringing this question before the House for discussion? I beg to submit that since the problem has eased to a certain extent, this motion has lost all its importance and should not be admitted.

Mr. NACENDRA NATH MOHOLANOBISH: Sir, I should have thought that Mr. Das has very clearly replied to the point raised by Mr. Hamidul Huq Chowdhury about the urgency and the recent nature of the question. I do not want to take your time, Sir, by dilating on this point. Mr. Kader Baksh just now has said that this scarcity of salt has been existing for the last two months and yet this matter was not raised and asks why it is that it should be brought up at this stage. On this point, Sir, as you will remember, you gave your ruling that as the matter is a continuing one and as the situation is getting from bad to worse, there is no question that it is of recent occurrence and also of urgent public importance as has been admitted by the Hon'ble Minister himself. (The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: No.) The question therefore is, as you have been pleased to observe, whether having regard to the explanation given by the Hon'ble Minister this matter should be further discussed. If I have read the rules aright, then I think that the question of the admissibility of such a motion depends upon whether or not there has been a failure of duty on the part of Government. That is, I think, admitted. We are not concerned with reasons just now. On the question of admissibility, failure is admitted and the other points, namely, public importance and recent occurrence also are admitted. I submit that this is a question which should be discussed in the House. Whether the explanation of the Hon'ble Minister is satisfactory or not, whether that should be accepted or not, that is for the members of this House to decide. Therefore, I hope, you will be pleased to admit the motion, Sir.

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: I am not certain whether you have ever given your ruling on this point that a continuing case entitles a motion to be brought up whenever any member chooses to do so. Let me give an instance. We have been passing through a very difficult period, we have had distress for a considerable time, almost on the verge of famine; but will that enable any honourable member to come up at any time that he chooses and move an adjournment motion on the ground that the distress is continuing? In this particular case, far from the situation getting worse I have pointed out to the House that the situation is getting better, that it is now under control today, and that steps have been taken to move salt from here to the districts in increasing quantities. Sir, I was beginning at first to wonder, I say this with great respect and I hope the honourable members opposite will kindly bear with me, I was at first beginning to wonder whether it was worth while, if the Opposition developed such a factious mentality, for me to take them into such serious confidence, as I always do. I thought that what the honourable members opposite really wanted was information on the matter and that they were keen on knowing the present condition and not that this was going to form the subject-matter of another debate which they would utilise to make matters worse. I shall have to consider seriously in future whether.....

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: On a point of order, Sir. Is the Hon'ble Minister speaking on the point of the admissibility of the motion? Then why should he bring in the question of what his attitude should be and also the attitude of the Opposition?

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: I may not have been quite relevant; but, Sir, you have allowed members of the Opposition to raise many points.....One further point for instance which has been raised by certain honourable members——

Mr. PRESIDENT: The Opposition may have been irrelevant but why should not Government be relevant? The Hon'ble Minister is expected to reply to the point as to whether the adjournment motion may be admitted or not.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Evidently, the Hon'ble Minister has nothing to say on the point of admissibility, Sir.

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: An insinuation has been made today to the effect that attempts have been made by this Government to shift responsibility on the Government of India. I have done nothing of the kind, Sir. I have just told the House where the responsibility lies and I have merely stated facts in an objective manner. Then, Sir, as I have said, if honourable members opposite develop a factious mentality it is extremely difficult for me—

Mr. PRESIDENT: That is not the point we are discussing just at present. That you can say during a general discussion. Do you mind replying to some of the questions put by Mr. Mukherji and Mr. Roy Chowdhury?

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: If you mean, Sir, the question whether we could have imported Ganjam salt—if that is a point relevant to the question of admissibility,—the reply to that is that we pressed upon the Madras Government to send us salt and they have refused to do so. The only arrangement that has been made with them is that they are going to send 25 wagons of salt all told, which is nothing..... (Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVARTI and other members of the Opposite Benches: When, when.) This has been going on for some time—25 wagons are only a recent concession.

Then, Sir, with regard to the point that in Bihar there is no salt difficulty. Restriction of import from the west coast by rail applies to Bengal and not to Bihar. Bihar is being supplied through the kindness of the Government of India with rail-borne salt. Certain honourable members raised the question of resignation, but, Sir, that question does not arise and never arose, because whenever we took up this question with the Government of India, that Government always acceded to our demands. They have acceded to our demands but did not send us the salt.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I have very carefully considered the question and I am grateful to the honourable members for giving their views. There is no doubt that the question is urgent and it is of public importance. As regards the matter being of recent occurrence, I stick to my views that it is a continuous grievance. The example has been given by the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Civil Supply Department, namely, when last year we had been passing through a severe famine, would honourable members have been justified in moving adjournment motions whenever there was a single case of death in a particular house. It is probably a hypothetical example to which it is difficult to reply. If, however, there is a situation as happened last year it is not possible for anybody to fix a particular point of time when an adjournment motion can be moved. With regard to the matter before the House, I consider that the primary responsibility does not lie with the Government of Bengal, because supply of salt, as Mr. Hamjūl Huq Chowdhury has pointed out, is the responsibility of the Central Government and the Central Government also control transport. The Government of Bengal has to appeal to the Central Government for supply of transport and supply of salt and to bring to their notice the situation that has occurred in the province. I think Government did their best: that is the inference that I draw from the statement of the Hon'ble Minister. So in that view of the matter, I think that the adjournment motion is not admissible because although it is of.....(Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: Sir, you said that the matter is of public importance.) Yes, I have already said that the matter is urgent and of public importance. But it must also be the primary responsibility of the Government of Bengal. It would have been quite relevant if this adjournment motion had been brought in the Central Legislature.

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: How do you say, Sir, that this responsibility lies with the Central Government?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Because salt forms a 'Central subject and the supply of salt to the province is a Central subject. So, the Government of Bengal can merely appeal to the Government of India for salt. They can bring to the notice of the Government of India the need of the province as regards salt. That is why it is not the concern of the Provincial Government.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: But, Sir, two conditions have been satisfied, namely, the matter is of urgent public importance and is of recent happening—

Mr. PRESIDENT: But that will not do. It must also be the primary concern of the Provincial Government.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: What about the manufacture of salt within the province? Is not that the primary concern of the Bengal Government?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Mukherji, there are three conditions to the admissibility of an adjournment motion: First, the matter must be of urgent public importance, secondly, that it must be of recent happening and, thirdly, it must be the primary concern of the Provincial Government. Here, it is not the primary concern of the Provincial Government. So, in spite of the fact that the matter is urgent and of definite public importance and also that the matter is of recent happening, the fact remains that it is not a matter which is primarily a concern of the Bengal Government. In view of the fact, I cannot give my consent to the moving of this adjournment motion.

In this connection I may also mention that salt is included as item 47 in List I, Schedule VII of the Government of India Act, 1935.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, is not supply of salt the primary concern of the Provincial Government?

Mr. PRESIDENT: I have given my ruling, Mr. Das, that supply of salt is controlled by the Government of India, because transport is entirely in their hand.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Sir, you have given your ruling and we cannot have any further discussion on that; but, Sir, one aspect of the ruling given by you in this matter may be cited for future occasions also.

Today, Sir, as you have rightly pointed out that there is the question of definiteness, there is the question of public importance, there is the question of recent occurrence and there is also the question of failure of Provincial Government or otherwise. But what I want to know from you, Sir, is who will decide the question of the failure of the Government? Is it desirable that this question should be decided by the President?

Mr. PRESIDENT: I have not decided that, Mr. Kabir. You are mistaken. I have read rule 98 of the Council Procedure Rules which lays down that a matter must be definite, must be of urgent public importance and must also be primarily a concern of the Provincial Government. So, on the last point the adjournment motion fails.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: This has cleared the position, Sir. I was not quite clear about the position.

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: Sir, is he discussing the merits of your decision? Because, if it is so, I want to join in the discussion.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Hamidul Huq Chowdhury, it is the duty of the Chair to explain the decision if there is any doubt in the mind of any honourable member. Now, Mr. Kabir, I hope you now understand the point.

. The House will now take up Non-official Bills.

NON-OFFICIAL BILLS

The Bengal Local Self-Government (Amendment) Bill, 1943.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Sir, on the last occasion I replied at some length to some of the points which were raised by Government with regard to this Bill and most of my honourable friends opposite were convinced that the objection which had been raised by two members of Government were based on the fact that neither of them had read my Bill. In fact, Sir, the objections had no reference whatsoever to the Bill of which I had given notice. My Bill, as you will remember, Sir, concerns the local self-governing institutions. The primary purpose of the amendment Bill which I have moved is to do away with the system of nominations in local bodies. Even though at one time it was my intention to include in this Bill also the question of the introduction of adult franchise, at the suggestion of the then Government this portion was excluded. My honourable friend the Minister for Revenue who took it upon himself to reply on behalf of Government on the other occasion read the Statement of Objects and Reasons in which there was a sentence which dealt with adult franchise. Basing his argument on that sentence without reading the actual clauses of the Bill, he opposed the Bill on the ground that adult franchise raised a very difficult question which should not be mooted at this time. I have tried to convince my honourable friends opposite that the apprehension expressed by the Government was absolutely unjustified and in fact unfounded; for the provision in regard to adult franchise has already been dropped at the suggestion of the Select Committee. Therefore, the Bill which we are now considering in this House has nothing whatever to do with adult franchise. In that connection I also said that it was still my conviction that adult franchise should be introduced and local bodies were the best place where adult franchise could be introduced. But in any case that question is not before us now, since the Select Committee dropped the clauses dealing with adult franchise. Now, we are concerned only with the Bill as it is before the House.

Now, Sir, one other objection which was raised by an honourable member was that if nominations were abolished, what would happen to certain special interests? Here, again, the objection was raised because he had not read the Bill. In the Bill certain elaborate provisions have been introduced, which again were drafted by the Legislative Department of the Government of Bengal. These provide that for industrial and other interests, some special seats would be created. Therefore, most of the objections which were raised by the Government were against imaginary defects in the Bill, against clauses which did not exist in the present Bill but which were in the original Bill. The Bill as it was before the House did not contain any of the provisions against which Government was tilting more or less, I should say, like Don Quixote against the wind-mill and the imaginary robbers.

I will not take much longer time of the House. We have discussed this question at great length—not once or twice but on many occasions. This Government and the first Fazlul Huq Ministry in 1937 also sent this Bill for circulation for, I think, four or five times. It was during the interregnum when the Progressive Coalition Government was formed that they accepted the principle of my Bill. Though that Government accepted the principle of my Bill and sent it to a Select Committee, it could not be enacted due to sudden dissolution. My honourable friend Mr. Hamidul Huq Chowdhury pretends to be opposed to it. With his experience in this House for six or seven years he knows better than anybody else that the question of abolition of nomination has come up before the Government of which he is a supporter today. The Government of which he was a supporter in the past also accepted the principle of abolition of nomination. But when it actually comes to put it into practice, the Party of which he is a supporter appears to be opposed to the idea. I will remind him that at one time, because of this very attitude on the part of Government, he had for a short while come over to the Opposition and tried to force Government to be a little more progressive. The Hon'ble Leader of the House has professed on more occasions than one that he is against nomination. He urged the last Government to abolish it. I would ask him, what has happened to his professions now? Once I twitted him, "Now that you have changed sides, you would oppose this Bill;" but he said that he would do nothing of the kind. He also told me that whatever might be his position in this House, to whichever Government he might belong, he would always uphold the principle of abolition of nomination, and therefore any Bill which wanted the abolition of nomination would have his support. Now I think he should justify his profession by actual practice. The motion today is admittedly one for abolition of nomination. From experience we have learnt that nomination does not help anybody, it does not make for good administration, it does not in any way remedy the inequities from which the minority communities suffer. My honourable friend the Leader of the House, when he was on this side, was always against nomination. He has made statements which are on record and which show that he was against nomination. Many members on the other side of the House have also stated,—and their statements are on record,—that they are against nomination. Well, Sir, if everybody is against nomination, why not abolish it? The European party too are in a way committed to my Bill, because the European party participated in the deliberations of the Select Committee. After the question of industrial representation was settled, the leader of the party, Mr. Ross, signed the report of the Select Committee without any Minute of Dissent. He thus expressed his own consent, and since in the European party an individual member never speaks for himself but always speaks for his party, his signature signified also the consent of his party. Since in this House—so far as statements and professions regarding the abolition of nomination are concerned—every one is in favour of abolition, I would ask the Honourable the Leader of the House to carry into practice what he has been actually professing, protesting and declaring all these days. With these words, I commend my motion to the acceptance of the House.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN:

Sir, on behalf of Government I want to reply to the speech of Mr. Humayun Kabir because he has raised certain matters which require a reply. It has been said that the Bill has been circulated many times and therefore it does not require circulation. But at the same time the mover of the Bill admits that the Bill has been substantially changed in the Select Committee and that there were certain defects in the Bill which have been removed by the Select Committee. Whether those modifications are according to the wishes of the public in general we want to know. It is the duty of Government to know whether the modifications made by the Select Committee were sufficient to safeguard the interests of the backward communities and other minority communities, if nomination were abolished and election pure and simple were adopted. In order to safeguard the interests of the backward communities it is very necessary that Government should obtain public opinion. Moreover, the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Local Self-Government Department has already pointed out that Government is bringing out a comprehensive Bill for the abolition of nomination which would at the same time safeguard the interests of the backward communities. In view of that I think this Bill should go out for circulation and we should get public opinion on the provisions of the Bill. Once those opinions are with us, we might be able to consider this Bill along with the Government Bill which is being drafted at the present moment. For the information of the House I may say that we have appointed a Special Officer for six months to draft a comprehensive Bill relating to the self-governing institutions, one of the principal objects of which will be the abolition of the nomination system. After this decision having been taken and sanction having been given to the appointment of a Special Officer to draft such a Bill, it will be absolutely unnecessary now to consider a Bill of this nature by a private individual, the provisions of which have been substantially changed and on which the public opinion of the country has not been taken. So, in this view, I think the Bill should be circulated for eliciting public opinion thereon.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that the Bengal Local Self-Government (Amendment) Bill, 1943, be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinion thereon by the 31st August, 1944.

The motion being put, a division was claimed and taken with the following result:—

(When the question was put by Mr. President, Mr. Hamidul Huq Chowdhury shouted for division along with the members of the Opposition.)

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Sir, as Mr. Hamidul Huq Chowdhury has asked for the division against Government motion, he cannot vote for the Government under the rules.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Yes, you cannot vote in that case, Mr. Chowdhury.

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: Sir, I called the division by mistake.

Mr. PRESIDENT: It is always done by mistake.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order, order. The House has divided.

Ayes—23; Noes—10. The amendment is, therefore, carried.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The next item is "The Hindu Women's Rights to Property (Extension to Agricultural Land) Bill, 1943.

Rai Bahadur BROJENDRA MOHAN MAITRA: What about my Advocates' Robes Bill?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Previous sanction with regard to it has not yet been obtained from His Excellency the Governor.

Rai Bahadur BROJENDRA MOHAN MAITRA: I think that His Excellency has not refused his sanction.

Mr. PRESIDENT: We have not yet received any communication from His Excellency.

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Sir, may I inform the honourable member that Government is already going to introduce a Bill on the lines of the Hindu Women's Rights to Property Bill. So may I request the honourable member not to move his motion?

Mr. NAGENDRA NATH MOHOLANOBISH: I have seen it published in the Calcutta Gazette, and it is almost in similar line with mine save and except a very minor alteration which can be accepted. If the Hon'ble Revenue Minister moves that as an amendment, I am prepared to accept it. Because there is a similar Bill introduced or sought to be introduced by the Hon'ble Minister, there is no reason why this Bill should be postponed. If my Bill is passed into law, then the same purpose may be served and a lot of money will be saved thereby.

Mr. PRESIDENT: So you do not accept the suggestion of Government.

Mr. NAGENDRA NATH MOHOLANOBISH: No, Sir.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Then you may go on.

Mr. NAGENDRA NATH MOHOLANOBISH: Sir, I beg to move that the Hindu Women's Rights to Property (Extension to Agricultural Land) Bill, 1943, be taken into consideration.

Sir, as will appear from the Statement of Objects and Reasons which is appended to the Bill, this Bill is really necessitated by the decision of the Federal Court. As honourable members are aware, under the Hindu Law the widows have really only the right of maintenance and they have no right of inheritance if there are son or sons left, and the widow of a predeceased son will not even be entitled to maintenance as of right so long as the father-in-law is alive, and the law is that after the death of the father-in-law the widow of the predeceased son might only claim maintenance as of right. To avoid this situation, the Central Legislature passed a Bill in 1937, being Act No. XVIII of 1937, by which rights were sought to be conferred upon the widow and the widow of the predeceased son, and the widow of the predeceased son's son, and also rights were conceded to widows of coparceners in joint Mitakshara family. Now, when that Act was passed, the Legislature intended to cover all sorts of properties, but subsequently when the matter was referred to the Federal Court, the Federal Court came to the conclusion that having regard to the limitation that was imposed upon the Central Legislature by virtue of List I of the Sixth Schedule to the Government of India Act, 1935, the Central Government had no jurisdiction to legislate with regard to agricultural lands, and therefore the decision has led to this position that though the Act applies to all properties and lands, they are entitled to have better rights with regard to all properties save and except agricultural lands. Now, there is obviously no meaning in having two different laws of devolution of succession or inheritance in regard to different classes of property. Therefore, Sir, following the decision of the Federal Court, the Bombay Legislature passed Act No. XVII of 1942 in which the Central Act was applied to agricultural lands. Shortly after that in 1943, by Act No. IX of 1943 Sind also adapted the said Act to agricultural lands. I, therefore, propose that in Bengal also the said Act, as amended by Act XI of 1938 of the Central Legislature, should be applied to agricultural lands so that there may not be any difference in the case of inheritance to agricultural lands as well as to other properties. It is perfectly clear that the Central Legislature never intended that their enactment should govern only properties other than agricultural lands. That being the case, it was really a mistake on the part of the Central Legislature to pass that Act including agricultural land; that is now being rectified. The principle of the Bill is, I think, quite clear and I do not think there is any honourable member of the House who will oppose the Bill for it is necessary that widows, predeceased sons' widows, predeceased sons' sons' widows should be allowed to have a share in the inheritance under circumstances which have been enumerated in the Central Act of 1937. I do not know if there is any one here in this House who would raise any objection to the principle of the Bill; but if there be any conservative member who would like not to interfere with the Hindu law as it is, I may also submit that the law must be progressive and that having regard to the change in society and also to the habits and social structure and the position of the members of a family as is now in vogue in this country, we should have a law which would be adapted to the temper and inclinations of the present society. Therefore, this small change is really no change at all because the right to maintenance was already there; all these widows had also the right of inheritance and in case of partition amongst the sons, Hindu widows are entitled to have a share equal to that of a son. This is now going to be legalised—whether or not there is partition amongst the sons, widows must have a share during her life time and after her death it would go to the reversioner. I submit, therefore, without taking much time of the House that the Bill is really a Bill the principle of which we have already accepted by the Central Act which is now in operation with regard to every property save and except agricultural land and that if the law is not brought into line with the Central Act, there would be unnecessary litigation between the son and the mother over the simple question as to whether a certain property is agricultural property or not. Take, for instance, a zemindary. The son would say to the mother in terms of the Central Act—this is to be regarded as agricultural land and therefore a widow is not entitled to have any share of it. The same for instance, in regard to patni tenure and permanent tenure, and so on and so forth. So that unnecessary litigation between the widow and her sons would go on over the nature of a property which they are going to inherit, because the expression agricultural land, as honourable members will see, has not been defined in the Constitution Act. To set at rest all these controversies, I think the present Bill should be enacted which would help the women to acquire better rights as has already been acquired by others who are entitled to property other than agricultural land. In that view of the case, I commend my motion to the acceptance of the House.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Motion moved: that the Hindu Women's Rights to Property (Extension to Agricultural Land) Bill, 1943, be taken into consideration.

Mr. BIREN ROY: Sir, as a Hindu member of this House I would like to state a few things in support of the Bill when it is being taken up for consideration. In doing so, my first contention would be to record my dissent against the creation of an idea that there is unanimity of Hindu opinion against the Bill. The leader of the Hindu Nationalist Party is significantly absent though he is at an advantage in this House, as he is not confronted by educated progressive women legislators from his community and this is primarily due to the denial of economic independence to our womenfolk. It is the property instinct of selfish men which is responsible for this state of affairs, as the men in India have so long treated women as mere private property in all respects and hence have denied them the right to inherit properties in the same manner as are accorded to men, and thereby they have been able to keep the women perpetually under their economic domination. Our conservative Hindu colleagues have practically gained the point in that they have been able, as I hear, to get on their side some of our Muslim friends with the slogan that this is a communal matter and hence Muslims, should not interfere in this Bill which affects only the Hindus. I hope at least my progressive Muslim friends would not be taken in in this way. Any measure that is likely to better the position of women generally should be supported by all progressive modern men. There are whisperings that the only two ladies in this House being Christian, they would not be competent to say anything on this aspect of inheritance by Hindu women. But certainly these ladies do represent the spirit of the progressive women in taking up their position as an equal and fit partner of men in all spheres of public activity, and I hope they will whole-heartedly support any Bill including the present one that might be brought before this House for the betterment of the women-folk generally.

If we look at the position of women in that country of admirable fighters for all that is best and progressive in modern civilisation, I mean the U. S. S. R., we find that in the brief span of 25 years women in Soviet Russia have been raised from a state of drudgery to one of vigorous participation in every form of public activity, in striking contrast to the status and position of women here and in some other backward countries, where she is relegated to the task of child-bearing and house-keeping only.

My conservative Hindu friends may put forward various points, namely, that unscrupulous men would take advantage of uneducated and helpless women when they get property rights; but I hold completely different views. The same thing may be urged about ignorant uneducated men also. At present women are in the most helpless condition, and it is only now that some progress is suggested. With more education and a feeling of security brought on by acquiring the right of inheritance, women-folk of our country will certainly try to take more active part in the social, political and cultural spheres in our country and will contribute generally to the betterment of the country as a whole. The Government have already under contemplation a Bill of a similar nature, I mean like the one which has already been passed by the Central Legislature and as the Hon'ble Minister in charge has already stated that Government are going to bring a Bill of a similar nature in the near future, I think the Bill may be circulated for ascertaining public opinion on it.

MR. PRESIDENT: Will any other honourable member speak on this Bill?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Sir, I have already stated that this Bill requires very careful consideration and from the speech of the last speaker it seems that there is a section of the Hindu community which is not in favour of this Bill. That is all the more reason why Government should carefully consider the position and in view of the fact also that Government has already introduced a Bill of a similar nature for ascertaining public opinion thereon, I think it is only fair that the Bill should not be taken up hurriedly and passed in such hot haste. I intended to move that the Bill be circulated, but as I could not give notice, it is not possible for me to do so. Therefore, there is no other alternative but to oppose the motion. If the Opposition agrees, I am prepared to move for the circulation of this Bill.

MR. NAGENDRA NATH MOHOLANOBISH: Sir, having regard to the Bill that has been introduced by the Government, by the Hon'ble the Revenue Minister, I do not see any point in circulating the Bill for eliciting opinion, because if you kindly refer to the wordings of the provisions of the Bill that has been published in the Gazette and compare them with the present Bill, you will find that the only difference is that whereas by this Bill transfers made up to the commencement of this Act should be protected, the Government Bill provides that transfers made up to the 13th January 1944 would only be protected. Save and except that, there is absolutely no difference between the provisions of these two Bills and Government having accepted the principle of this Bill in its entirety, I see no reason why they should oppose the Bill. I am agreeable to accept the small modification as regards restricting the transfers up to the 13th January 1944. Therefore, I submit, Sir, there is no point in circulating this Bill for eliciting opinion thereon. On the other hand, if the Government really insist, this minor modification may be settled if the Bill is referred to a Select Committee.

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Sir, unfortunately the honourable member—

MR. PRESIDENT: Are you rising on a personal explanation Mr. Mukerjea? Because otherwise you cannot again speak on this motion.

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEE: Yes, Sir. Unfortunately, the honourable member has misunderstood my point. The Government has published the Bill so that the public may go through the Bill and examine the provisions of the Bill carefully. Sir, I have no other alternative but to oppose the motion.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Before I put the motion to vote, I would just like to draw attention to rule 40 of the Council Procedure Rules according to which a motion which is identical with the one on which the Council has given a decision in the same session cannot be brought forward in that session again. So whatever the decision the House might give on this motion, the Government Bill cannot come up this session. Once some decision is given no further decision can be taken on the same subject.

The question before the House is: that the Hindu Women's Rights to Property (Extension to Agricultural Land) Bill, 1943, be taken into consideration.

(The motion was negatived.)

The Eastern Bengal and Assam Disorderly House (Amendment) Bill, 1940.

Sir, I beg to move that the Eastern Bengal and Assam Disorderly House (Amendment) Bill, 1940, be referred to a Select Committee consisting of—

- (1) the Hon'ble Khwaja Sir Nazimuddin, K.C.I.E., Minister in charge of the Home Department,
- (2) Khan Bahadur Mr. Shamsuzzoha,
- (3) Mr. Bankim Chandra Datta,
- (4) Mr. D. J. Cohen,
- (5) Mr. Lalit Chandra Das,
- (6) Mr. Bankim Chandra Mukherji,
- (7) Mr. R. S. Purssell,
- (8) Rai Bahadur Radhika Bhusan Roy,
- (9) Mr. Dharendra Lal Barua,
- (10) Khan Sahib Subidali Molla, and
- (11) the mover,

with instructions to submit their report within four months from the date of reference and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a quorum shall be four.

Sir, this is a very important amending Bill, and its importance has been increased by the recent happening in the country. It is a Bill which wants to amend the Bengal and Assam Disorderly House Act of 1907. Sir there are two Acts which deal with the evils of prostitution—one is the Bengal Suppression of Immoral Traffic Act and the other is this Act. The Bengal Suppression of Immoral Traffic Act is more wide and comprehensive and provides for all sorts of remedies. There is provision in this Act for Rescue House and other things which are very costly, and so this Act is in force only in Calcutta and its suburbs. But this Act which I want to amend is in force in all the mofussil towns of Bengal. Sir, I find from the opinions received in respect of this Bill that there is some misapprehension that because the Bengal Suppression of Immoral Traffic Act is in force, so this Act cannot be in force. Sir, the main provision of this amending Bill is that there is a definition of prostitution, whereas in the Act of 1907 there is no definition of prostitution, and that is, Sir, a great lacuna on account of which Government have failed to secure conviction in many cases instituted by police. There is an important decision of the Calcutta High Court which is to the effect that this Act cannot be effectively enforced in an urban area. In my amending Bill I want to meet that lacuna by providing a definition of the term "Prostitution". Then, I have added after the words "occupied by students", the words "any place of public worship". It is desirable that no brothel should be established near any house of public worship. I think this amendment is also necessary. In connection with the regulation of this evil, I want to add some other provisions. At present brothels exist promiscuously in all parts of a town. There is no restriction as to the place where these prostitutes may live. I have accordingly added a clause so that municipal commissioners may regulate the location of brothels within their own area. There was an important lacuna in the Act in that there was no provision about punishment for procuration of girls for purposes of prostitution. I have provided that procuration of a girl to become a prostitute or detention of a girl or woman against her will will be an offence. These are some of the provisions of the Bill under consideration. This Bill was circulated thrice for eliciting public opinion. At the first time about 68 opinions were received. Out of them except 2 everybody supported the provisions of the Bill. The second time also a majority of opinion supported the provisions of the Bill and last time I have received opinions strongly supporting the provisions of the Bill. Members of Associations and also of public bodies have supported the Bill. At a time, when taking advantage of the famine situation in the country and helplessness of women and girls some unscrupulous people are trying to turn them into prostitutes, it is necessary that the provisions which are embodied in this Bill should be added to the Act of 1907 which is in force in all the towns of Bengal. I think I need not make a long speech on this important subject; the utility of such a measure is apparent and I hope the House will accord wholehearted support to the motion for referring the Bill to a Select Committee.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Motion moved: that the Eastern Bengal and Assam Disorderly House (Amendment) Bill, 1940, be referred to a Select Committee consisting of—

- (1) The Honourable Khwaja Sir Nazimuddin, K.C.I.E., Minister in charge of the Home Department,
- (2) Khan Bahadur M. Shamsuzzoha,
- (3) Mr. Bankim Chandra Datta,
- (4) Mr. D. J. Cohen,
- (5) Mr. Bankim Chandra Mukherji,
- (6) Mr. Lalit Chandra Das,
- (7) Mr. R. S. Purssell,
- (8) Rai Bahadur Radhica Bhusan Roy,
- (9) Mr. Dhirendra Lal Barua,

- (10) Khan Sahib Subidali Molla, and
- (11) the mover (Mr. Nur Ahmed), with instructions to submit their report within four months from the date of reference and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a quorum shall be four.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Sir, on behalf of Government we are prepared to accept this motion for reference to Select Committee. It is a social legislation and a move in the right direction. It seeks to improve the present law on the subject and Government are prepared to accept the motion for Select Committee.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is that the Eastern Bengal and Assam Disorderly House (Amendment) Bill, 1940, be referred to a Select Committee consisting of—

- (1) the Hon'ble Khwaja Sir Nazimuddin, K.C.I.E., Minister in charge of the Home Department,
- (2) Khan Bahadur M. Shamsuzzoha,
- (3) Mr. Bankim Chandra Datta,
- (4) Mr. D. J. Cohen,
- (5) Mr. Lalit Chandra Das,
- (6) Mr. Bankim Chandra Mukherji,
- (7) Mr. R. S. Purssell,
- (8) Rai Bahadur Radhica Bhusan Roy,
- (9) Mr. Dhirendra Lal Barua,
- (10) Khan Sahib Subidali Molla, and
- (11) the mover,

with instructions to submit their report within four months from the date of reference and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a quorum shall be four.

(The motion was agreed to.)

Mr. NUR AHMED: Sir, may I have your permission to postpone item No. 11, because the Hon'ble Minister wants time to consider it?

Mr. PRESIDENT: You do not want to move No. 11?

Mr. NUR AHMED: I want to postpone its consideration for the next non-official day with your permission.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I think there is no harm in that. Then what is your next motion?

Mr. NUR AHMED: Sir, I want to leave out all items from Nos. 11 to 17. I propose to move from the circulation of motion No. 18.

Mr. PRESIDENT: If you do not want to move these items, why did you give notice of them? It means a lot of work in the Council Department and also a lot of work for Government. You should give notice only of those motions which you want to move. Practically, all the non-official Bills are yours. Please give notice of those Bills about which you are serious.

Mr. NUR AHMED: Sir, I was serious about all the Bills of which I gave notice. But Government want time to consider them.

Mr. PRESIDENT: In that case, it means that all your motions lapse.

Mr. NUR AHMED: But, Sir, I want to leave them out with your permission, for discussion on another non-official day.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Which one you want to move?

Mr. NUR AHMED: No. 18.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: What about the rest?

Mr. PRESIDENT: His motions lapse: the matter stands.

Mr. NUR AHMED: I beg to move that the Indian Registration (Bengal Amendment) Bill, 1943, be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinion thereon by the 30th June, 1944.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Motion moved: that the Indian Registration (Bengal Amendment) Bill, 1943, be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinion thereon by the 30th June, 1944.

BENGAL LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL DEBATES

First Session, 1944—No. 26.

THE COUNCIL met in the Legislative Chamber of the Legislative Building, Calcutta, on Monday, the 20th March, 1944, at 1 p.m., being the twenty-sixth day of the First Session of 1944, pursuant to section 62(2)(a) of the Government of India Act, 1935.

Mr. President (the Hon'ble Sir BIJOY PRASAD SINGH ROY, K.C.I.E.) was in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Release of the political prisoners of the Midnapore district.

92. Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Home Department be pleased to state whether it is a fact that none of the political prisoners belonging to the district of Midnapore has yet been released? If so, what is the reason thereof?

Mr. BIREN ROY, PARLIAMENTARY SECRETARY, (on behalf of the Hon'ble Khwaja Sir Nazimuddin): It is not a fact that none of the political prisoners from Midnapore district has been released.

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: Is the Hon'ble Minister aware that two members of the Assembly returned from the Midnapore district have not yet been released?

Mr. BIREN ROY: Yes.

Grievances of the Anglo-India Jute Mill workers.

93. Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Commerce, Labour and Industries Department be pleased to state if he is aware that the workers of the Anglo-India Jute Mills at a meeting held on the 20th December, 1943, at Kakinara, presented a statement of their grievances to the Labour Commissioner?

(b) If so, does he propose to enquire and state if the mill authorities are withholding the wages, dues, pensions and other allowances from the mill labourers?

(c) What steps do Government propose to take to remedy the above state of affairs?

MINISTER in charge of the COMMERCE, LABOUR and INDUSTRIES DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Mr. K. Shahabuddin): (a) A representation on behalf of the workers of the Anglo-India (Upper) Jute Mill, over the signatures of four workers, containing a list of grievances was received by the Labour Commissioner on the 24th December, 1943.

(b) Enquiries were made by the Labour Commissioner's Office and it has, so far, been known that the management did not withhold wages, dues, etc.

(c) Does not arise.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Arising out of (a), will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state what were the grievances mentioned in that representation?

The Hon'ble Mr. K. SHAHABUDDIN: I want notice.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Arising out of (b), will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state what exactly is meant,—what is the implication,—when Government use the two words “so far” in the reply here?

The Hon'ble Mr. K. SHAHABUDDIN: Information received up to that date.

Notice of strike by the Bengal Chemical Mazdoor Union.

94. Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Commerce, Labour and Industries Department be pleased to state if he is aware that the Bengal Chemical Mazdoor Union has given the Company notice of strike and sent a copy of the same to the Labour Commissioner?

(b) If so, will he please state what are the demands of the labourers?

(c) What steps do the Government propose to take for meeting their demands and preventing a strike?

The Hon'ble Mr. K. SHAHABUDDIN: (a) Yes.

(b) (i) Reinstatement of Babu Panchanan Karmakar and Babu Ramesh Chandra Seal or payment of extra one month's salary, gratuity and Company's contributions to their Provident Fund.

(ii) Dearness allowance of Rs.30 at flat rate.

(iii) Free family quarters for wholetime workers.

(iv) Leave with pay for 45 days per year; 30 days as compulsory leave and 15 days as sick leave.

(v) Abolishment of contract system.

(vi) Registration of Provident Fund and to make it compulsory for every employee.

(vii) Formation of an enquiry committee with three members; two nominated from Mazdur Union and one from the Company.

(viii) Free uniform (pant and shirt) for mechanical workers.

(ix) To introduce graded service according to nature of work and seniority.

(x) One month's pay as bonus.

(c) An enquiry into the matter with a view to prevent a strike and to meet the legitimate demands of the workers is in progress.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Is the Hon'ble Minister aware that similar demands on behalf of the workers have been made from other factories as well?

The Hon'ble Mr. K. SHAHABUDDIN: Representations have been received, but it is very difficult to say whether their demands are similar in nature.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: In view of the fact that there are similar demands from many different factories and mills, will the Hon'ble Minister consider the preparation by Government of a scheme making for uniform conditions of service in the different mills?

The Hon'ble Mr. K. SHAHABUDDIN: Sir, in this connection I may inform the honourable member that the Government of India, as a result of the recommendations of the Tripartite Labour Conference, have set up a Committee which is touring all over India, and most of the points raised in this connection are to be considered by it. We are awaiting the report of that Committee; in the meantime the Government of Bengal also are collecting facts and data for the purpose of coming to a satisfactory decision.

Wages of jute mill hands.

95. Mr. KRISHNA CHANDRA ROY CHOWDHURY: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Commerce, Labour and Industries Department be pleased to state if he is aware that the existing rate of wages and dearness allowances paid to the jute mill hands per head is on an average only Rs.25 a month?

(b) Is this amount adequate to meet the present cost of living?

(c) Does he propose to take steps to see that jute workers are paid wages commensurate with the present cost of living?

The Hon'ble Mr. K. SHAHABUDDIN: (a) As far as I am aware, the existing rates of wages and dearness allowances paid to jute mill hands per head are, on an average, above Rs.25 a month.

(b) The Family Budget Enquiry is in progress and a Subsistence Level Enquiry will be taken up shortly. Adequacy of the present rates of wages and dearness allowances may be determined on the completion of these enquiries.

(c) Does not arise at present.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Arising out of (a), will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state whether Rs. 25 represents the wages or wages and dearness allowance combined?

The Hon'ble Mr. K. SHAHABUDDIN: I suppose it is wages and dearness allowance combined.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Is the Hon'ble Minister aware that Re. 1 per day is the minimum cost of living for an adult person today in Bengal?

The Hon'ble Mr. K. SHAHABUDDIN: That is, Sir, a question of opinion, I submit.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Questions over.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Sir, I sent notice of an adjournment motion regarding large-scale arrest by the police in certain villages of Faridpur—

Mr. PRESIDENT: It has not come to me as yet.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: I sent it this morning at 9-30.

Mr. PRESIDENT: It was received in office at 10-30 and so no action has been taken on it as yet.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: I hope it may be raised tomorrow, Sir.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Yes.

Message from the Assembly.

Mr. SECRETARY: Sir, the following message has been received from the Bengal Legislative Assembly:—

“The Bengal Orphanages and Widows’ Homes Bill, 1944, as passed by the Bengal Legislative Assembly at its meeting held on March 3, 1944, has been duly signed by me and is annexed herewith. The concurrence of the Bengal Legislative Council to the Bill is requested.

SYED NAUSHER ALI,

Speaker,

Bengal Legislative Assembly.’”

CALCUTTA;

The 17th March, 1944.

Sir, I herewith lay on the Table the Bengal Orphanages and Widows’ Homes Bill, 1944, as passed by the Bengal Legislative Assembly at its meeting held on the 3rd March, 1944.

The Bengal Finance (Sales Tax) Amendment Bill, 1944.

The Hon’ble Mr. TULSI CHANDRA COSWAMI: Sir, I beg to move that the Bengal Finance (Sales Tax) Amendment Bill, 1944, as settled in the Council be passed.

Sir, I thank the honourable members for having thoroughly discussed my little Bill. I thank them particularly for the reason that any misgivings that there might have been in their minds must have been cleared up during the last three days’ long discussions. Really, it is a very short Bill which deals mainly with the question of doubling the rate of the sales tax. Other questions were also raised, the most important of which was that of exempting the handloom-woven cloth entirely. I stated before the House my reasons for not being able to accept the proposition entirely. But the House will remember that I gave an assurance, which I propose to make good in the next few days if this Bill receives the concurrence of this House, that I would by my rule-making powers see that preference is given to the handloom industry. I may tell the House that representatives of Indian Chambers of Commerce have been consulted by me and I think I may say that they were quite satisfied with the rates proposed by the Finance Department. There is very little for me to add to what I have been saying during the detailed discussion of the Bill. I therefore hope that my little Bill will be sanctioned by the House.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Motion moved: that the Bengal Finance (Sales Tax) Amendment Bill, 1944, as settled in the Council, be passed.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, I have the painful duty of opposing the passing of the Bill. The Hon’ble Finance Minister has just now told us that this little Bill of his should be passed. The Bill may be little in size but its implications are very great. When I spoke about the budget I said that the budget was a ministry-saving budget and I think that this Bill may be termed as a handloom-killing Bill. Sir, a sales tax if properly designed and judiciously spent and intended to relieve general taxation is a beneficent measure worthy of support. I do not dispute that. We are now disillusioned as regards the help from the Centre—4½ crores are all it assures us in two years—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order, order. I hope honourable members would not talk with one another in this way.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, here in Bengal, we have to reconstruct the social structure which has been damaged so severely by famine and pestilence and mints of money will be required for this purpose. The money must be well spent; otherwise the result will be nothing. Even if the Central Government pay us their entire revenue, that would not be enough for restoring at Government expense every piece of land which has been sold in distress, covering the province with a net work of hospitals, nursing every individual diseased person suffering from starvation and semi-starvation for months with the same care as is bestowed upon Mahatma Gandhi after his historic fasts and selling rice at four rupees per maund (the pre-famine price) to every person whose per capita income is below Rs. 15 per month. Irrespective of outside help, we have got to do our duty by our less fortunate brethren. The sales tax is the only weapon in the armoury of the provincial Government for imposing such taxation as will not fall ultimately upon the poor. The most objectionable feature of the present Bill is that it does away with the exemption so long enjoyed by the handloom cloth. The Finance Minister said in the other House that he did not want that the costly Dacca saree would go tax-free. I only wish that Mr. Goswami, whose ancestral home is situated in the heart of a handloom weaving area very near Farashdanga and Chandernagore and whose forefathers were great patrons of this industry, spent a couple of hours in the cottage of a tanti or jola and studied sympathetically and analytically the difficulties of the handloom weaver who for years has been fighting a losing battle against the multicoloured, richly bordered sarees of mills like Calico. The smaller rate of import duty on foreign yarn than on foreign piece-goods devised by the Central Government acted as a sort of protection to the weaver. The import figure of yarn in pre-war years will give an idea of how this industry was kept going. Handloom weaving, according to the Royal Commission on Agriculture, is next to agriculture, the largest industry in the country. Persons employed in mills, factories and mines are far less in number than those engaged in handloom weaving. This fact is all the more important in Bengal where in the vast jute mill industry operated with the golden fibre grown by sweated Bengalee peasants, Bengalee labour constitutes a negligible fraction of the total number of mill-hands. In spite of strong agitation in the Press the local Government has done nothing to ensure a fair share of the heavy wage bill to the children of the soil though, as demonstrated by Srijut Alamohan Das in his Bharat Jute Mills, this can easily be done with a little sympathetic handling. The British managing agents of by far the major number of jute mills should try to rectify the present state of things with great benefit to our famine-ridden population. Now handloom weaving remains our only considerable industry leaving out agriculture—our সবে ধন নীলমণি Government, as I described in my last budget speech, squandered away large sums of money advanced by the Central Government for resuscitating handloom weaving while the Madras Government spent every rupee effectively and enabled the Madras weaver to capture Bengal market. Now the Government comes with the proposal of taxing the handloom cloth. The most formidable competitor of the poor handloom weaver is the wealthy Indian cotton mill owner who can employ artists to invent new methods of dyeing and border designs. This fact has to be recognised and borne in mind by well-wishers of our village industries. We know that the cotton mill industry has had for many years now a high tariff wall to its advantage. On the same principle on which the cotton mill claims protection against foreign cloth, the handloom is entitled to protection against Indian cotton mills. The small protection which the village weaver enjoyed by way of less import duty on yarn than on piece-goods was not enough and even this has been neutralised by the reduction of imports on account of the war. When Sriji C. Rajgopalchari became Chief Minister of Madras, he for the first time evolved a scheme of protection for the handloom industry within the narrow limits of provincial taxation by imposing the sale tax on mill-made cloth and exempting the handloom from it. The whole of India was agreeably surprised at this feat and some other provinces followed the example of Madras. Handloom cloth in this war has so far gone free from sale-tax in our province but the Ministry is now going to undo that principle of Provincial protection which is the result of considerable hard thinking on the part of one of India's astutest politicians. I now want to point out to the British members of the legislature that before the war the village weaver used British and Japanese yarn. After this war there will be for some years an embargo on the import of goods from enemy countries like Japan so that there is a good prospect of substantial business between Britain and India on this head. So before killing the weavers with this tax we should remember that they are like "a bold peasantry, a country's pride, when once destroyed can never be supplied". The Bengalee weaver is the best of the whole Indian species. According to the Finance Minister, the costly Dacca sarees can easily bear the sale tax. But any one who has studied the problem with some attention knows that during the Pujas of the last ten years the sale of Bengal handloom sarees has been declining steadily at Howrah hat, one of the biggest marts of handloom products in India. The rich borders and colour-designs of Cauvery sarees and sarees of mills like Calico of Bombay have captured the imagination of our ladies and the earnest expostulation of anxious publicists that from the aesthetic point of view a rich colour ill-suits our ladies most of whom are dark in complexion has failed to produce the desired effect. If the sale-tax now render the handloom saree more costly, the process of conquest by other sarees will be accelerated. It will then be easy for the ultra-modern daughter or daughter-in-law to persuade the mother or the mother-in-law to take to other sarees. The poor tanti or jola who weaves the costly Dacca or Farasdanga saree could not earn more than eight to ten annas a day even before the war. What must be his lot now?

Of the weavers, the greater number is drawn from the Muslim community and I am grieved to think that Muhammadan legislators and Ministers do not realise what they are doing. If any body of men were impelled by the motive of crushing the Muhammadan population of Bengal after a devastating famine while masquerading as impartial administrators of a province, it could not do better than take up the items of imposing the sale-tax on the handloom cloth and fixing by statute the maximum price of jute, the only Muhammadan crop under the sun at Rs. 17 while the ruling price of hessian is Rs. 28-8: so that quantity for quantity raw jute sells in Calcutta at Rs. 14 while hessian sells at Rs. 28-8. While the Morley-Minto Government and the Montford Ministries tolerated a tyranny carried on for decades by a well-knit body of British jute magnates against the poor, dumb unorganised millions of Moslem cultivators of Bengal, the present Ministry legalises it and prevents the possibility of a windfall to the jute-grower as in 1925-26 when the price of jute soared up to Rs. 25. The tax on the handloom cloth will complete the work of annihilation of the Moslems. Milton wrote of a section of his countrymen "License they mean when they cry for liberty". Of the present Muhammadan Ministers and Muhammadan members supporting them, it may be said, "Themselves they mean when they cry for Community".

Relief to handloom weavers figured prominently in famine relief work during a hundred per cent. British rule in India in the past. After the intense and widespread famine of 1897 in Northern India, Bengal, Burma, Madras and Bombay a Famine Commission was appointed in 1898 under the presidency of Sir James Lyall. It made special recommendations for the relief of the weavers. Our Ministers, who are present here with the proposal of taxing the weavers when with the price of rice at Rs. 24 in some parts famine still continues, provide an example of fools rushing in where angels fear to tread. It is sheer misfortune of Bengal that Congress majority did not make possible the inauguration of cent. per cent. British rule here at least for the duration of the War. The farsightedness of Mahatma Gandhi saved many provinces in war time.

In a normal year Bengal purchases piece-goods worth 12 crores of rupees from other provinces. If we want to stop this drain for post-famine reconstruction, our only means is to increase very largely the production of the handloom and this can be done by maintaining the sale-tax on mill-made cloth and keeping the handloom cloth tax-free.

Cotton mills in Bengal cannot supply more than 10 per cent. of the province's requirements. Our capitalists are determined not to invest money in industries. Under the circumstances the only practicable proposition to make Bengal self-contained is to strengthen and not weaken the handloom industry.

To exempt the handloom products and coarse mill-made cloth 10 × 44, as well as slate, pencil, text-books for schools and colleges and medicines for epidemic diseases, we may treble, quadruple, even increase tenfold the sale-tax on liquors and wines, cosmetics, gramophone records, fine mill-made dhoties and sarees, shoes above the price of Rs. 10, ladies' umbrellas, musical instruments, and such other luxury articles. The craze for luxury is so great at the present moment that the sale of these articles will not be impeded by the tax while round sums will be collected for the public exchequer.

Before I conclude, let me quote some observations of Sir George Birdwood one of those Englishmen who loved this country:—

“In the village—at the back of the house, which form the low irregular street, there are two or three looms at work.....the frames hanging between the acacia trees, the yellow flowers of which drop fast on the webs as they are being woven”.

“In consequence of the improvement of national taste in this country, and the spread of higher education and culture among the natives of India, we may hope for a rapid increase in the demand for Indian handloom made and artistically dyed and printed piece-goods. Nothing could be more distinguished for the ball-room, nothing simpler for a cottage, than these cloths of unbleached cotton with their exquisitely ornamented narrow borders in red, blue or green. Indian native gentlemen and ladies should make it a point of culture never to wear any clothing or ornaments but of native manufacture.”

With these few observations, Sir, I oppose the passing of this handloom-killing Bill.

Mr. NUR AHMED: Sir, I rise to support the motion for the final consideration and passing of the Bengal Finance (Sales Tax) Amendment Bill, 1944. During the discussion of this Bill we have heard many speeches from a large number of members. The learned speaker who has just sat down gave a homily and a sermon about the utility and necessity of handloom industry. In this House, I think, every honourable member is solicitous about the development of handloom industry in Bengal. Sir, Bengal was once very famous for its handloom industry, and it even attracted in the past the attention of the world's market to its muslin, so much so that the great and powerful British Government had to pass a law prohibiting the import into United Kingdom of Bengal's muslin and other finer cloth for which it was once very famous. Sir, nobody is less anxious than the previous speaker to see that such an industry of our country is not allowed to die out. Mr. Majumdar has raised the question that as a result of this tax handloom industry of ours will receive a death blow. But, Sir, the Hon'ble Finance Minister who is in charge of this Bill gave us a solemn assurance that he will exclude the handloom-woven cloth of a certain value from the operation of this tax by virtue of the power given to him under section 6 of the original Act.

Sir, with great respect I would ask my honourable friend, Mr. Majumdar to look to section 6 of the Sales Tax Act, 1941. That section says that by notification issued three months ago Government can add to the schedule of exempted articles any new article. As regards the exemption of handloom-woven cloth up to a certain extent and of certain value there will be no difficulty in view of the clear provision of that section which empowers Government to add to the exempted articles, as I have already said. So we can rely on the assurance given by the Hon'ble Minister. Really speaking, the handloom industry is a great necessity in Bengal. In Bengal at present about two lakhs of people live on the handloom industry and its products are worth 5 crores or more per year. From the statistics of 1942, it appears that Bengal handloom industry produced about 16 per cent. of cloths whereas the Bengal mills produced 20 per cent. and the rest, that is, 64 per cent. is produced by Ahmedabad and Bombay and other places. Out of Bengal's total requirement, this industry caters to the extent of 42 per cent. So anything which is likely to affect this very important industry, specially in war time when prices of cloths have increased, every one is anxious to prevent that, but I may assure honourable members on the other side that—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order, order, again there is too much talking going on among the honourable members and I am finding it difficult to follow the debate.

Mr. NUR AHMED: I may assure honourable members that we are for unfettered growth and development of this industry in Bengal, as has been stated by the Finance Minister himself. As regards a sale tax, the principle of such a tax had been accepted by the Congress Ministry when it was in office. Before the war this tax was a prime source of income of some of the Governments of the world. About 26 per cent. of the income of Russia used to come from the sales tax. As regards the rate we find that it was 5 per cent. in Australia and 2 to 16 per cent. in France and so forth. The only other point for consideration, when we accept a sales tax, is the inequality of the distribution of the tax. It is an admitted fact that in India the burden of taxation among the poor and the rich is very unequal. According to Prof. K. T. Shah, the poor pay about 167 crores of taxation whereas the rich pay only 111 crores of taxation per year. Of course, owing to the imposition of the excess profits tax and other taxes, this inequality has been to some extent reduced but still the burden continues to affect the poor unequally and the question of adding to that burden should receive very careful consideration at the hands of honourable members of this House. But unfortunately I must assert that this tax will fall on the poor consumers to some extent.

Sir, I submit with all respect to the Hon'ble Finance Minister that this tax will be an additional burden on the poorer section of the population. So my appeal to the Hon'ble the Finance Minister is that the tax may be administered in such a way as not to harass the poor. Individually speaking, I would be the last person to favour such a measure of taxation at this time of our province. But considering the necessity of money for rehabilitation, for reconstruction, I have persuaded myself to support the measure. But I appeal again to the Hon'ble the Finance Minister and also the Ministry that the money raised by this tax must be spent for the benefit of the poor and spent for the purpose of rehabilitation of the poorer section who have lost their all in this world and are without any means of livelihood. With this appeal, I support the Third Reading of the Bill.

Mr. C. E. CLARKE: Mr. President, Sir, in supporting the motion for the passing of this measure, I congratulate the Hon'ble Minister for the dignity and composure with which he has faced formidable opposition.

Sir, in considering the Bill which amends the Bengal Finance (Sales Tax) Act of 1941, we have endeavoured to keep properly focussed the original aims of the Act—principally those of nation-building and being convinced of the greatly increased spending power now unquestionably in our midst, we have no hesitation in supporting a measure that will bring the additional revenue of which the province is sorely in need for this purpose.

Sir, many speakers have stressed that the budgetary deficit was to some extent the result of the famine conditions being in turn the result of war conditions and therefore not the responsibility of the Provincial Government. To this, we must, in a measure agree, but it would be a matter of extreme satisfaction to be able to tell the world that Bengal has done her utmost by her own efforts to extricate her people from the distress into which they have fallen through, what to some extent we regard as, uncontrollable circumstances. Greater dignity and more respect will come to Bengal if our efforts are substantial. In any event, the measure of assistance likely to be given will, in all probability, depend upon the measures we ourselves adopt.

The effect of the war on Bengal's finances was touched upon by my honourable colleague Mr. Chakraverti whose opinion seemed to be that the British and United Nations should shoulder some portion of the deficit burden, particularly of famine expenses. I join issue with Mr. Chakraverty. The presence of large numbers of overseas forces in our province has undoubtedly brought vast quantities of money into the principal cities. Whether the distribution or spending power has or has not been equitable is not for comment on this occasion but large sections of the public have more to spend and by applying the increase in Sales Tax, considerable revenue having its source in far distant countries, should be available for the purpose for which the Act of 1941, now amended, was conceived.

Sir, speaking on Sales Tax collections, as notified in the Budget estimates, we feel justified in drawing attention to the relatively small amount shown as collections for 1942-43. I do not think we can express very great satisfaction with this result and it is perhaps not unnatural that we should wonder if all the sources for collection are being fully examined. Some business and commercial houses in this city alone are collecting on behalf of Government quite substantial sums and it seems to us, Sir, that this point requires the attention and close scrutiny of the Hon'ble Minister and of the department concerned. Particularly, we would refer to sub-clause (1) of clause 7 of the Sales Tax Act, 1941. It is highly probable that many dealers who need not have registered at that time are now doing business on a scale that should bring them well within the necessity of registration.

In the Budget estimates, the anticipated revenue is slightly higher and it is perhaps a matter for commendation that any figure could have been arrived at, at all, particularly as taxable turnover is likely to be adversely affected by clause 3 of this amending Bill and also by the anti-inflationary measures introduced during the year in the form of the Cotton Cloth and Yarn Control Order and Hoarding and Profiteering Preventing Ordinance. These two measures are necessary and would have been widely welcomed and probably improved if the business and commercial houses had been permitted to bring their knowledge and experience to bear upon the framing of them. As it is Sir, the Hoarding and Profiteering Prevention Ordinance obliges the dealer to issue a cash memo. for purchases under Rs. 10 only when asked to do so. Sir, this is not merely a loophole but a wide open drain so far as the Bengal Sales Tax is concerned. We fail to see how taxable turnover can satisfactorily be checked by the Sales Tax Inspectors if all sales are not properly recorded and this, we contend, can only be done if memos. are made out at the time of purchase. We suggest that such an obvious defect in the Hoarding and Profiteering Prevention Ordinance, which might result in evasion of the payment or collection of the Bengal Sales Tax, should form the subject of close examination by the Finance Department.

In regard to clause 3 of the present amending Bill, we have to express satisfaction at the statements which have been made by the Hon'ble Minister. It is obvious that he has the interest of the Weavers of the class of textiles specifically referred to very much in mind and in view of his assurances that this will continue to engage his attention, we support the motion for the passing of this Amendment Bill and again congratulate the Hon'ble Minister on its framing.

Alhadj Khan Bahadur SHAIKH MUHAMMAD JAN : Mr. President, Sir, I think, I cannot support the Bill in the form in which it is going to be passed by the Council. I am not against the principle of taxation, because as the Hon'ble the Finance Minister and the Hon'ble the Leader of the House have said that taxation is indispensable in all civilized countries and without taxation no progress can be made. I quite agree with them with this proviso that the taxes must be realised from those who are able to pay. I am not in favour of indiscriminate taxation. Had this Bill been introduced for the purpose of taxing the rich people, I would have been the first man to support it. Of course, we cannot make any discrimination between the rich and the poor in the matter of a sales tax. But if we are serious, we can make discrimination in this way. Articles which are indispensable, i.e., articles which are required both by the rich and the poor should be exempted; but articles which are not indispensable and which are not required by the poor, such as motor-cars, spirits and many other things should be taxed. Medicine which is required both by the rich and the poor should be excluded from the operation of this tax. This is why my honourable friend Mr. Humayun Kabir wanted the Bill to be referred to a Select Committee, because there we would have been able to persuade the Hon'ble Finance Minister to exempt items such as medicine, etc., from the operation of this tax. Similarly, we would have been able to induce the Hon'ble Minister to impose this sales tax at a much higher rate, not like one pice or two pice in the rupee but 2 annas and 4 annas in the rupee, on such articles of luxury as are exclusively used by the rich. In that case, the Hon'ble Minister would have got more money than he expects to realise at present. Therefore, as I said before, I am sorry I cannot support this Third Reading of the Bill.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE : Sir, I am sorry I cannot agree with my colleague of the European Group who congratulated the Hon'ble Finance Minister on his introduction of the present Finance Bill and on the steps that he has taken for the purpose of meeting the deficit that has been disclosed in the Budget of the present year. The honourable member agreed that the deficit is due largely to causes connected with the war, and after having made that admission, I think, he ought to have at once proceeded to the next bold step of agreeing to the suggestion that the entire deficit should be met from resources other than taxing the already heavily taxed poor people of Bengal. It is admitted on all hands that so far as the poor people are concerned, the tax which is proposed to be passed will fall on them to a very large extent. While I make this submission, I would like to take one particular matter for the consideration of the House. The Hon'ble Finance Minister has given us an assurance and I find that the honourable member of the European group who spoke referred particularly to this matter, namely, that the Finance Minister would make certain provisions with regard to exempting certain classes of handloom-woven cloth up to certain prices from the operation of the tax. Sir, I do not know whether this implication was present in the mind of the Finance Minister or of the Legislative Department so far as the drafting of this particular clause is concerned. As a matter of fact, in opposing the provisions of the Bill and in supporting the amendment to clause 3, I made it clear that unless some specific reference is made in the clause about exemption with regard to the handloom-woven cloth, it would be very difficult to introduce by exercising the rule-making power any exemption in favour of the handloom cloth of a certain price. As a matter of fact, under clause 3 what is proposed is this: for the entries in columns 1 and 2 of the Schedule to the said Act in respect of item 16 of the said schedule, the following entries shall be substituted, namely,.....etc., etc. If we refer to item No. 16 in the schedule, we find that limited protection was given under the existing Act to the handloom-woven cloth and not to other cloths. Even that limited protection however is now expressly withdrawn by reason practically of the repeal of that item and the substitution in its place of a new clause which says that dhotis, lungis and sarees which do not exceed in value such amount as the Provincial Government may fix in respect of them as the case may be by notification in the Official Gazette shall be exempted. With regard to this provision, I submit that it may be contended hereafter that having expressly excluded the handloom-woven cloth, the provision which is substituted does not include the handloom-woven dhotis, lungis or sarees, there may be difficulty, and what we wanted was to point out that this glaring defect in the present Bill should be remedied by providing certain exceptions in case of the handloom-woven dhotis, etc. As a matter of fact, my suggestion was that if the Ministry really wanted to give the poor people of Bengal some relief, it could exclude all dhotis, sarees and lungis and handloom cloth up to a yarn of 40 counts. They could give such protection to the industry and could make an express provision in the provisions of the Bill without any ambiguity. As it is, I submit that so far as this particular clause is concerned, it would be open to very serious comment and I doubt very much whether by the rule-making power which is provided in the Act itself, Government would be able to legally exclude the handloom-woven cloth up to a certain value from the operation of the tax. So much for the amendment to clause 3, Sir.

With regard to the other provisions, namely, about the question of raising revenues from this province, I submit that if the Finance Minister had looked to other sources of revenue and if he had looked to the schedule itself, as has been pointed out by several members on this side of the House, if he had looked to the various other articles which are not generally used by the poorer section of the people. In the poorer section I include the lower middle-class of the population who have to purchase various other things, other than dhotis, lungis and sarees, middle-class people who have been hard hit by reason of the distress which prevailed last year, hard hit by reason of the abnormal prices of foodstuffs prevailing last year and who are now practically on the verge of bankruptcy. The proposed tax would practically kill the poorer middle-class of Bengal, who are the backbone of society, who are the backbone of the inhabitants of Bengal. You are killing them by means of these new provisions of the Sales Tax Bill without trying to impose taxation on items which would yield much more revenue. Looking to the sources of Provincial Revenues, we find under the Receipt side of the Provincial Excise a sum of Rs. 72 lakhs. If tax under this head is doubled, another sum of Rs. 72 lakhs could easily be obtained and at the same time it would not touch the pocket of the poorer section of the people at all. I would next refer to another item, item 13, page 18, of the Receipt side where taxes and other duties are mentioned. Here we find an item named "entertainment tax Rs. 30 lakhs" and "betting tax Rs. 25 lakhs." The Hon'ble the Finance Minister could have substantially raised the taxation under these two heads without touching the pockets of the poor people. So far as the entertainment tax is concerned, it may be said that it does touch the poor people. But there is one consolation in this tax that if the poorer section want to enjoy, they must pay the tax inasmuch as without additional tax it is not possible to balance the budget. I, therefore, submit that the consideration which the Hon'ble the Finance Minister did not give ought to have been given to the poorer section of the people in attempting to raise increased revenues and therefore I say that I cannot congratulate the Hon'ble the Finance Minister on his bringing up this Bill for consideration of the House. With these words, I oppose the passing of the Bill.

Mr. K. C. ROY CHOWDHURY: Sir, I make this last minute appeal to the Hon'ble Finance Minister for the wholesale exemption of the productions of handlooms from this tax. He has taken powers to exempt handloom cloths of certain value—but I say, make it wholesale exemption as in the Madras Act which we have practically copied. The reasons are obvious. We know that the sarees used by the Bengali ladies throughout Bengal are made in handlooms and their prices are higher than the prices of coarse cloth. They are fancy sarees. But the cotton mill companies are making and marketing fancy cloths in imitation of handloom sarees. The result is a serious competition and before long handloom weavers of fancy sarees will have to give up weaving handloom sarees and lose their living.

There is another more important question. There are 2 lakhs weavers employed in handloom industry in Bengal. The Government cannot expect to get good revenue by taxing these sarees. Then, why touch the poor weavers' pockets? If Government forego this, say a lakh of rupees on fancy sarees, they will earn the gratitude of the handloom weavers. This you can do by your rule-making power. I should like to have your assurance that you will exempt wholesale the productions of handloom.

Secondly, you must exempt the handloom-woven cloths, otherwise the country will take serious notice of your apathy towards the weavers. I appeal to the Hon'ble the Finance Minister to make a declaration here that he would see to it that the purchasers are not fleeced by shopkeepers in respect of denomination of coins. For example, you go to a shop and buy 12 annas worth of taxable articles. Now under the Act you are to pay one pice for every 8 annas and what about 4 annas? As there is no half-pice or even one pice, you will have to pay two pice for 12 annas. I had been to the Gariahat market and there I saw hundreds of pice are being illegally collected in this way. Government must appoint inspectors to check these collections. Either you should ask the shopkeepers to forego the half pice and take one pice from the purchasers or introduce and supply half pice or cowries. If you give assurance on these two counts, you will earn the gratitude of the poorer section of the country. Sir, I have no objection to accept the Third Reading of the Bill, if these assurances are forthcoming.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Sir, we have already made our position in regard to this Bill perfectly clear. We are on principle opposed to a taxation measure just now. We consider that the economic condition of the country is not such as to justify any taxation measure at this time unless there be very good reason to the contrary. We have also urged upon the Hon'ble Minister to limit the life of this Bill to one year, and asked the House to build up a convention by which taxation measures can be annually renewed and surveyed by the Legislature in order to see that the amounts which are voted by the Legislature for particular purposes are used for those purposes in a proper manner and are not diverted to other channels. That is all the more necessary in view of the fact that in the past new taxation measures have at times been introduced on the ground that the money would be used for specific purposes in nation-building departments; but after the money has been obtained by the Government, it has been used in other directions. The Hon'ble the Finance Minister has himself admitted that that has been the case with regard to the Sales Tax itself. We also find, Sir, that in the Budget provisions for this year, the amount of money spent for the "Police" and the "Jails" together amount to approximately Rs. 4 crores. I believe the expenditure under "Police" is very near Rs. 3 crores and under "Jails" the amount is over Rs. 1 crore, say one crore and 20 lakhs—I do not remember the exact amount. In any case, the "Jails" and the "Police" together cost nearly Rs. 4 crores during the current year. This certainly is a very large increase upon the expenditure incurred for "Police" and "Jails" in previous years. We find that after the inauguration of Provincial Autonomy, the expenditure on the "Police" and the "Jails" has been continually increasing.

Now, Sir, I stated a moment ago that this is not, in our opinion, the time for the introduction of a new taxation measure or for realising money from the people at large for the purpose of meeting expenditure under the head "Police"! Unless there is a very good reason to the contrary, unless money is used for nation-building departments, for departments which will improve the community as a whole and make individual members of the community better in every respect, there is no justification for fresh taxation at such a time. I am not opposed to taxation as such. I quite agree with the Hon'ble the Finance Minister that it is the best instrument through which the Government can redistribute the financial resources of the country, and carry out in a more efficient manner the social services and other welfare measures than through individual efforts. All these we admit; but at the same time we hold that unless money which is obtained through new taxation at the present juncture is ear-marked for some nation-building department, there is no justification in the present crisis for imposing a new tax.

There is no doubt that there is financial crisis. There is no doubt that there are difficulties with which the country is faced; but as has been pointed out by more speakers than one, the particular Bill which we are considering to-day will be merely a drop in the ocean so far as the actual deficit of this year is concerned. Besides, as I submitted to the Hon'ble Finance Minister a point to which he did not give any satisfactory reply, the deficit which has been incurred by the Province during the last two years has been largely on account of factors which do not mainly concern the Province. They are a direct corollary to the conditions which obtain as a result of the war, and therefore they should be treated as part of the war expenditure. Therefore, I suggested to the Hon'ble the Finance Minister that he should take the country and the Legislature into his confidence and build up public opinion behind him so that a united demand can be placed before the Government of India that these moneys should be obtained from sources other than the Provincial revenue as part of the war expenditure. That demand on our behalf has also not been met by the Hon'ble Finance Minister. Therefore, as I said a moment ago, unless he can prove and make out a very good case that this money is going to be used for nation-building departments, at the present juncture and with the present economic background, there is no justification whatsoever for the increase in the tax which he seeks to impose.

References have been made to the improvement of particular items of the Bill. The Hon'ble Finance Minister will remember that we suggested that some machinery should be devised by which a different rate of the tax can be imposed on different types of articles. The articles which come under the category of luxury should be treated in a manner different from articles which are necessities and which are essential for the purposes of the existence of the people of this country. As I pointed out to him, medicine has not been exempted from the operation of this tax. On this point we would like an assurance from the Hon'ble Finance Minister. We are glad that he has given a qualified assurance so far as the handloom industry is concerned, but I would like him to state his position more explicitly and clearly before this House. What exactly will be the difference in taxable price between the cloth that is woven on handloom and the cloth that is manufactured in mills? I have an impression that the price which the Hon'ble Finance Minister has in mind is that the handloom saree priced at Rs. 12 per pair will be exempted from the operation of this tax. If this is the figure which he has in mind, I would submit that it is quite inadequate. To-day even ordinary sarees, not handloom-woven but woven by mills, cost more than that sum.

The Hon'ble Mr. TULSI CHANDRA COSWAMI: If the honourable member would excuse my interrupting him for a moment, I may say that I have not fixed the prices as yet.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Well, I am glad to learn that he has not yet fixed the prices. So, I would like him to keep this point in mind when he will be considering the question of fixing the limit beyond which the handloom cloth will be taxed. The figure should be such as may actually afford a protection to the handloom weavers. I would, in fact, support the demand which has been made by my friend Mr. K. C. Roy Chowdhury so far as the handloom cloth is concerned, that Government will be well-advised to exempt them altogether from the operation of this tax. The fact has already been pointed out that the amount of money which the Government can hope to obtain from the handloom cloth cannot be very large, and as the Hon'ble Finance Minister himself knows, all the cloth woven on handloom in Bengal today or at least a major portion of it is of lower count. Therefore, if he wants to give an actual protection to the handloom weavers by this Bill, I would ask him to consider if there is any justification in giving pinpricks to the weavers of our Province. It will, after all, not fetch any large revenue to the Government coffer; it will not affect a very large proportion of the finer cloth.

I, therefore, submit to him from the point of view of considering the handloom-woven cloth as a craft that there is some justification for safeguarding and for giving a certain amount of protection even though it may be the case that some of these cloths is fine and is sold at a price which only the relatively well-to-do can pay for. I would also ask him to consider the consequences that are likely to follow. If the finer handloom cloths are taxed, the tendency will be for those who patronise this type of finer cloth to transfer their patronage from the handloom-woven cloth to other types of fine cloth, and in this way one of the finest handicrafts which still exist in Bengal may be killed.

Mr. Krishna Chandra Roy Choudhury has also referred to the fact that a very large proportion of the agriculturists in the different parts of the province are now engaged in the production of handloom-woven cloth. If this large class of men is affected, if a source from which they derive their livelihood is taken away from some of them at least, as will be the case if the finer cloth is taxed, then they will lose their main source of income. From the sale of the coarser kind of cloth the profits are bound to be less and the profits from the finer count cannot be very large; and taking all the coarser types of cloth together they cannot derive from them that amount of income which is necessary in the present circumstances. In view of these considerations, I would urge upon the Finance Minister to accept the suggestion of Mr. Krishna Chandra Roy Chowdhury and exempt the handloom-woven cloth altogether from the operation of this tax. Even then, however, that would not entirely satisfy this section of the House, for unless the receipts from this tax are ear-marked for expenditure on the nation-building departments, we cannot with a clear conscience support at the present moment any taxation measure. Moreover, it has not been made a time-measure. There was a suggestion that Government might limit the life of this measure to two or three years, which suggestion the Opposition would have been prepared to consider if it came from the Government. If the life of the tax were limited to three years, Government could very well have argued that an emergency measure like this during the duration of the war was necessary and the Opposition might have gone some way towards meeting them. But that limit too has not been proposed or accepted by the Government, and the suggestion that the money which would accrue from the tax might be ear-marked for the nation-building departments, that, suggestion, too, has not been accepted by them. And finally the suggestion was made to them that the handloom-woven cloth should be entirely exempted from the tax; but that too was not accepted by Government. All this shows that Government are not prepared to consider even constructive suggestions from the side of the Opposition. With these words, I express my general dissatisfaction and disapproval of the Bill at the present moment.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Sir, I rise to oppose the motion. I oppose the passing of the Bill not because it is a taxation measure but because the proposal to double the rate of the Sales Tax is ill-timed and inopportune. The economic condition of the country has undergone a considerable change for the worse since the year 1941 when the Act which the present Bill seeks to amend was passed. The situation was bad enough in 1941 and it is undoubtedly a hundred times worse now owing to the devastating famine of last year and the epidemic diseases and pestilence which followed in its wake taking a heavy toll of human lives in the province.

Sir, I am not convinced that this measure will not affect the poorer middle-class and the poor. The Hon'ble the Finance Minister has tried in the course of the debate on the Bill to impress upon the House that it is a beneficent measure and that it will not touch the poor. He has pleaded for its acceptance as the proceeds of the tax, we are led to believe, will be devoted to the expansion of the nation-building departments. Sir, the same arguments were trotted out by his honourable colleague, Mr. Suhrawardy, who as Finance Minister piloted the Sales Tax Bill in 1941. I have tried in vain to elicit from the Hon'ble the Finance Minister information regarding the expected yield from this taxation—what came to the coffers of Government after the passing of the Act in 1941 and how was the money spent. I do not know why the matter is being kept a close secret from us; yet we are asked to cast our votes in favour of the Bill, not knowing how much we will get and to what extent, if at all, it will benefit the public utility services, such as Education, Public Health, Sanitation, Irrigation, Agriculture and Industry. We, on this side of the House, are not prepared to take a leap in the dark and to encourage the distribution of patronage to the adherents and supporters of the Ministry by the creation of new posts for them and their relatives. If the Ministry had been sincere in their protestations and their solicitude for the poor, they would not have provided for the exclusion of the handloom-woven cloth (item 16 of the Schedule), from the list of articles exempted from taxation under the proposed measure. The privilege which cottage industries are now enjoying is thus sought to be taken away without any justification whatsoever. If the Finance Minister had suggested the omission of country liquor, ganja, bhang and charas from the schedule, we would have been glad to support him. While consumers of these articles are still to enjoy exemption from taxation, handloom products are to be taxed with vengeance! The Hon'ble the Finance Minister does not seem to realise the far-reaching effects of this imposition. It will give a death-blow to the handloom industry of Bengal. The weavers of the district of Dacca which is famous for its handloom-woven fabrics and their fellow weavers in other parts of the Province will be hard-hit if the Bill is passed into law in its present form. It is strange that while the Ministry is prepared to encourage the drink evil and the evil habit of smoking ganja and charas, they are out to strangle and destroy the cottage industries. Sir, we did not expect that the Hon'ble Mr. Tulsi Chandra Goswami, the erstwhile Congressman and an exponent of the khaddar cult would suddenly change his front and make a reactionary proposal like the one under discussion in company of those from whom nothing better can be expected.

Sir, if we analyse for a moment the assurances given by the then Finance Minister, Mr. H. S. Suhrawardy, the original sponsor of the 1941-Bill, we find that these were mere empty promises. The money derived from the levy does not appear to have been profitably spent although during the consideration stage of the Bill at another place and subsequently in this House, the Hon'ble Mr. Suhrawardy said "that the purpose of this taxation is to provide further funds for nation-building departments and further amenities to the masses of this province!" Addressing his critics he added that "to them it did not matter if there was no money for water-supply, for primary education, for public health, for irrigation or for agriculture". May I now ask whether those promises have been redeemed? Has there been any expansion of the nation-building activities since the passing of the Bengal Finance (Sales Tax) Act of 1941? If so, in what direction? The only development noticeable has been in the ministerial sphere—expansion of the Cabinet from 8 to 13 Ministers and the appointment of 13 Parliamentary Secretaries and a number of Government Whips, thus bringing the total to 30. Look at the expenditure that the province has been made to incur on account of the costly paraphernalia of administration. Sir, the proposal of the Finance Minister to double the Sales Tax cannot be too highly condemned. Let there be a substantial reduction in the salaries of Ministers, their Parliamentary Secretaries and the Whips. First impose a cut of 50 per cent. on their salaries and an uniform cut of 20 per cent. upon the salaries of all Government employees drawing a monthly salary of Rs. 300 and above and then resort to further taxation, if necessary.

Then, Sir, there is another important point which may be urged against the passing of the Bill. It is well known that the prices of articles of daily use are going up by leaps and bounds. The tax already imposed is being realised for the last three years and as the prices of commodities increase, Government also derive additional income from these sources. If the prices had been stationary, then the Government could complain that they needed more money and that therefore, this Bill had been brought forward. Sir, the policy of Government is inexplicable. In this connection, I may mention another important point.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Do you propose to quote from all the books? They are a formidable lot.

Rai KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE Bahadur: No, Sir, I am just quoting an extract from the speech of the Hon'ble Minister's predecessor in office, the redoubtable Mr. Suhrawardy. He said on the 12th March,

1941, when the Bill was in its consideration stage: "We have chosen this tax out of several taxes, because for a small sacrifice we hope to obtain large income which may be of real use to the province." Elsewhere he said, "He was not in a position exactly to state what income this tax would fetch"

Sir, the Hon'ble the Finance Minister has not also enlightened us as to what amount we are going to get from this increased taxation. There is a huge deficit in the Bengal Budget. In his Budget speech he struck a pessimistic note to the effect that if things went on like this, the Province would be heading towards bankruptcy. Sir, if the Hon'ble Finance Minister had given us any idea as to the amount that this taxation measure would fetch, we would be justified in supporting him at this stage.

Sir, with these words, I strongly oppose the motion.

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: Mr. President, Sir, I do not desire to repeat the argument advanced by the previous speakers against the passing of this Bill. I know very well that all these arguments are of no avail to a Ministry having a comfortable majority still to disregard any opposition we may raise. However, Sir, this measure of taxation is being passed at a time when Bengal is groaning under famine, pestilence and epidemics and their consequences—death all round. But our Hon'ble Finance Minister has told us in a technical manner that this is an anti-inflationary measure. Of course, this is a very easy device for shelving the responsibility of further taxation. He has not explained to us the causes of the inflation and how much the people are responsible for such an inflation and from which quarter this inflation is coming. I believe, this inflation has its root elsewhere in the far off British Isles and on the other side of the Atlantic, I mean America, which are responsible for causing inflation in this country and we are to pay the penalty. That is the argument—

The Hon'ble Mr. TULSI CHANDRA GOSWAMI: It is better not to embark upon a technical subject without technical equipment.

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: I wish the Hon'ble Finance Minister had not used a technical argument in the course of his speech. Since he has done so he should have enlightened not only the members of this House but people outside in this respect. My honourable friend Mr. Clarke has joined issue with me as regards my contention that the British Government and the United Nations should bear the deficit burden of this Province when this Province is landed in such a condition by their action. At least everybody should admit that war is not of our making. He has also preached self-help and suggested that Bengal should bear the burden wilfully; but I should tell him that he should preach self-help among his own people: they should not help themselves with others' resources. Before resuming my seat I join in the request to the Finance Minister to exempt the handloom cloth as the entire Bengali community wants such an exemption. With these words, I oppose the motion for passing the Bill.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Mr. President, Sir, I remember that at the time when Provincial Autonomy was inaugurated the Government of India wiped off eight crores which was then the debt of the Government of Bengal to the Centre. Before the new Constitution came into being, the Bengal Government used every year to run into deficits and they came to a huge amount, namely, to eight crores. And just to give the autonomous Government in Bengal a start, the Government of India wiped off that debt. Now, Sir, our debt, or to be exact, our deficit has come to a huge amount of over 10 crores this year and over 7 crores for the next year, that is to say, altogether to 17 crores 46 lakhs. It would not be possible to meet even a substantial portion of this deficit by the receipts which are expected to accrue from this taxation measure. Even if we add to this tax the receipts which will be in our hands by the passing of the Agricultural Income Tax Bill, even that will not be enough or sufficient to wipe off the deficit. So what I contend for is that to meet the deficit this measure is not essential. But how to meet this deficit, that is the point; that is a point for serious consideration even now when the matter is being discussed. As I have remarked while moving some of my amendments, I would repeat my statements even now, that Bengal did her utmost to increase her revenue. Bengal's revenue in 1941-42 was not more than 16½ crores of rupees. But we were able to raise it in 1942-43 to rupees 21½ crores. That is a good increase on the side of receipts no doubt; but fortunately or unfortunately for Bengal, things so shaped themselves that we could not help the rise of expenditure at a tremendous speed. The expenditure swelled up to 32 crores from 16½ crores. To 32 crore from 16 crores is a big enough jump. Now, Sir, what is this big jump due to? Mainly, to extraordinary charges in India, mainly to the war conditions and the famine. Is Bengal responsible for all these? Should Bengal alone be made to pay all these debts? We can, of course, tax ourselves but it will be to no purpose unless the Government of India realises its own responsibility in the matter. I say that a large proportion of this deficit can be accounted for as having been spent on civil defence, and also on famine. Sir, defence is a Central subject; but be it civil or military, I submit the whole portion of the civil defence expenditure as well as the expenditure on famine should be borne entirely by the Government of India.

The Hon'ble Mr. TULSI CHANDRA GOSWAMI: Sir, may I say that a large portion of this expenditure is paid by the Government of India?

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: A large portion is paid by the Government of India, I admit; but a large portion is also paid by the Provincial Government and in respect of famine and extraordinary expenditure on "extraordinary charges in India", the responsibility to pay should be entirely that of the India Government. If things are viewed in the right perspective, the influx of soldiers into Bengal, the influx of population from outside India and from outside the province—all these factors have got to be considered along with the tremendous rise in the cost of living due to war. I think, Sir, that a large portion of it should be borne by the Government of India. Our revenues cannot meet those expenses. We tried our best to raise our income, and we raised it from 16 crores to 21 crores,—not a matter of joke. In this time of difficulty, we are asked that we should double the sale tax. We have not been told yet why this is required. The time, Sir, is inopportune because Bengal suffered severely from famine; a heavy toll of human life was taken by this famine and there are vast masses of people who have sold away their all for the purpose of keeping body and soul together. Government ought to realise their position. Government ought to take up the question of their rehabilitation. Government has, of course, brought forward a Bill for the purpose of rehabilitation of these people, I mean the Land Alienation Bill. It means that the vast majority of the people of Bengal are on the verge of ruin and this taxation measure will operate as the last straw on the camel's back at this particular moment. This taxation measure would affect the poor and rich alike. Why should there be a tax like this at the present moment inflicting equal burden on all? The Hon'ble the Finance Minister has said that the purchasing power of the people has increased. If that is so, let this tax be paid by those people alone whose purchasing power has increased. If the burden of this taxation measure falls not only on the rich people but also on others who do not profit by the present war and who have been hard-hit, there will be great injustice. As the Hon'ble Mr. Goswami said during the Budget debate, only a very small proportion of the people have become rich and they are getting richer while richer every day and the poor are becoming poorer every day. Nobody denies that a certain proportion—a very small proportion—has become rich and their purchasing power has increased. But it cannot be said that the purchasing power of the people has increased generally. That being the position, we tried our level best to meet the awkward situation. During the debate on this Bill, at every stage we fought our points, and when we wanted to limit the life of the Bill to one year we almost succeeded, the difference of votes was only 3—18 to 21. We wanted to limit the life of the Bill to one year but we failed. Then we fought the next ground, that is to lessen the incidence of taxation. We tried to fix it at one-third, one-half and again tried to fix it at one pice on mill-made cloth; but we failed in our attempt. And lastly, it pains me most because it was the unkindest act of the Hon'ble the Finance Minister, he declined to agree to our suggestion that there should be no taxation on handloom-woven products. That I think is the unkindest act of the Hon'ble the Finance Minister. The Hon'ble Mr. Suhrawardy did exempt them. He went further even. He exempted certain other articles also, namely, articles grown by our cultivators such as tobacco and articles manufactured by our potters, etc. Most unfortunately Mr. Goswami has selected that particular item which should not have been taxed at all. Sir, cloth is as much essential for the people as food. Sir, he realises the force of our arguments and now he says that he would try to protect certain classes of handloom-woven cloth under his rule-making power. Sir, this rule-making power is a kind of despotism which has been exercised by the so-called autonomous Government behind the back of the Legislature. They take away the power of the Legislature and act behind the Legislature. They do not place the rules before the Legislature for its approval even. Now, Sir, who is to judge whether the rules are good or bad? If after drafting the rules, the Government would come before the Legislature for approval, that would have been a different thing. But that was not to be. As I have already described, this rule-making power is a sort of despotism which should never be largely resorted to by autonomous Governments. Secretly it is taking away the power of the Legislature. Then, Sir, everybody on this side of the House has suggested that the handloom-woven cloths should be exempted from the Sale Tax but the Hon'ble the Finance Minister has not accepted that suggestion. He comes to put certain kinds of ordinary dhuties, sarces and lungies out of the purview of the tax when they fall within controlled prices. It is our view that so far as item 16 is concerned, it should be left untouched. I do not think that the promise of the Hon'ble the Finance Minister to give some sort of protection to hand-woven cloths is quite sufficient for the purpose of deleting item No. 16 of the Schedule to the Act. In this connection, I may mention one thing. Weavers of Bihar, Orissa and Assam are being encouraged to produce fine khadi; but here you are going to put an embargo upon khadi if the price is more than the minimum to be fixed by you. But why not exempt altogether from taxation the finer quality of khadi? You should by all means encourage the production of fine khadi. This industry is not big enough to compete with other kind of cloth industries. Sir, Dacca muslin, one time a very fine fabric, has completely disappeared from the market. There were instances of the fingers of the muslin weavers being cut to kill this industry. Taxation is another way of killing cottage industries. The weavers of Madras have not got to pay the Sale Tax. They are producing finest fabrics. There is no embargo. Why you are taxing here? Why handicap Bengal weavers? Bengal is to compete with the weavers of Bihar, Orissa and Madras and other places. You speak of Madras in this connection. But Madras left out of taxation the handloom-woven cloths. Madras had to resort to Sales Tax because they introduced prohibition. In order to meet the deficit owing to prohibition, they resorted to this tax. They thought that that would be the best thing to meet the deficit. In Bengal, however, the receipt on head "Excise" is increasing by leaps and bounds.

Sir, I think I have said enough to show that I am not at all satisfied with the provisions of the Bill, and therefore, Sir, I oppose the final passing of the Bill.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN:

Sir, I should like to give a very short reply to one of the points on which special stress has been laid. Special stress has been laid on the point that handloom industry should not have been taxed at all, but Sir, most of the criticisms, I find, are due to incorrect understanding of the provisions of the Bill. As regards Mr. Humayun Kabir, he has already admitted that most of the handloom-woven cloth will go untaxed, because the cloth that will be purchased by the poor will be below the minimum. It is not only this; I may point out that those cloths which are of the higher price and which will pass direct from the weaver to the consumer will also escape the tax. It is only the cloth of finer texture which will pass through shops whose annual turnover is more than Rs. 50,000 that will be taxed; also the cloth which will pass through manufacturers whose annual turnover is Rs. 10,000 will be taxed and not any other cloth. But, I know that our weavers are very few in number whose annual turnover is Rs. 50,000, or whose aggregate manufacture is Rs. 10,000, because the handloom weavers work individually and they are generally poor.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Then why do you abolish item No. 16?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN:

We have been very much solicitous to protect the poor, and this no other province has done. I have got the Madras Act before me, and I find that there even foodgrains have been taxed and rice and paddy have not been exempted and it is only the cotton textile that has been exempted: whereas in Bengal we have exempted from taxation all essential articles of food and also things like kerosene and other necessities of life. I assert that not a single poor man will be touched by the tax which we have imposed. In the Original Act there was no provision for exempting cloth. A person however poor he might be cannot do without cloth and poorest of the poor was liable to pay the tax. We have exempted such poor people's cloth from the operations of the Act. In the present Bill we have not only exempted pulses and cereals and other essential articles of foodgrains, and necessities of life such as quinine and primary school text-books but also poor man's cloth. In our country the poor cannot afford to buy anything other than what has been exempted. According to the standard of Bengal as it is now, the average income of the people is only Rs. 15 per annum per head. By exempting from taxation absolute necessities of life—articles which are necessary for an average man,—are we not taxing only those who are better placed in life in order to help those people who are poor? Are we even now when poor people are dying for want of food, to sit idle and wait for help to come from the Centre or the United Kingdom? Will that be creditable for us? Are we to do nothing to help ourselves, relying on the impression that help will come from the Centre or that the United Kingdom will come to our help? Nobody realises better than I do as to what injustice has been done to Bengal, because I know how very badly we have been treated by the Centre. It is also the land system of our country which is responsible to a very great extent for our poverty and for our chronic financial strugency; and unless and until these things are righted, we must go on taxing the people who are better off. If we don't do it, then we would be held responsible to somebody some day, I think. With these words, I support the motion for the passing of the Bill.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order, order. The question before the House is: that the Bengal Finance (Sales Tax) Amendment Bill, 1944, as settled in the Council be passed.

(The motion was agreed to.)

Amendments to the Bengal Legislative Council Procedure Rules.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN:

I beg to move that the proposed draft amendments to rules 56, 57 and 58 of the Bengal Legislative Council Procedure Rules be referred to a Select Committee under rule 110(3) of the Rules.

The Committee will have to be elected or nominated by consent. Perhaps that may be done tomorrow.

Mr. PRESIDENT: A day will have to be fixed for election which will take place according to the proportional representation system.

Motion moved: That the proposed draft amendments to rules 56, 57 and 58 of the Bengal Legislative Council Procedure Rules be referred to a Select Committee under rule 110(3) of the Rules.

(The motion was agreed to.)

The Bengal Alienation of Agricultural Land (Temporary Provisions) Bill, 1944.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The House will now resume consideration of the Bengal Alienation of Agricultural Land (Temporary Provisions) Bill, 1944. Mr. Mesbahuddin Ahmed.

Mr. MESBAHUDDIN AHMED: Sir, I beg to move that in clause 2 of the Bill, before sub-clause (I), the following sub-clause be inserted, namely:—

“(a) ‘agricultural land’—

- (a) when used with reference to a proprietor or tenure-holder, means any land which on the date of the transfer of such land by sale referred to in sub-section (I) of section 4 was comprised in the estate or tenure, as the case may be, of, and held in khas by, the proprietor or tenure-holder who made such transfer; and
- (b) when used with reference to a raiyat or under-raiyat means a holding or a part of a holding of such raiyat or under-raiyat.”

Mr. PRESIDENT: Amendment moved: that in clause 2 of the Bill, before sub-clause (I), the following sub-clause be inserted, namely:—

“(a) ‘agricultural land’—

- (a) when used with reference to a proprietor or tenure-holder, means any land which on the date of the transfer of such land by sale referred to in sub-section (I) of section 4 was comprised in the estate or tenure, as the case may be, of, and held in khas by, the proprietor or tenure-holder who made such transfer; and
- (b) when used with reference to a raiyat or under-raiyat means a holding or a part of a holding of such raiyat or under-raiyat.”

Mr. NUR AHMED: I beg to support this amendment. By this amendment the definition has been widened in the Bill which formerly included only under-raiyats and raiyats. Now, the difference of opinion as evidenced in the amendments before the House in the cases of proprietors and tenure-holders with regard to holding their land has disappeared. With these words, I support the amendment.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Sir, I am glad to find that the Government have come forward to accept the suggestions made from this side of the House and incorporated in the amendment the suggestions which we have proposed. We welcome this response on the part of the Government and would only ask you to consider what will be its repercussions on the Bill as a whole; for, as has just been told by my friend Mr. Nur Ahmed this has had in effect the consequence of enlarging the scope of the Bill and perhaps it may be also necessary to change the very Title of the Bill as a result of this amendment. However, we on this side of the House can naturally have no objection whatsoever to accepting it since this amendment was originally initiated from this side of the House.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Kabir, I have considered the points which you and Mr. Nur Ahmed raised. If this Bill were sent to a Select Committee at the time, the Select Committee could have enlarged the scope of the Bill. So what the Select Committee would have done, the house can do.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, may I say a few words? The title of the Bill as published says that it is a temporary measure: it refers first of all to the lands of raiyats and under-raiyats. It states in the preamble: "to provide for the restoration to raiyats and under-raiyats of agricultural lands alienated by them during the year 1943 as a result of the prevailing economic distress". It is here, Sir, in the Bill itself this is what is stated. Now, Sir, so far as this definition goes the Government has accepted our suggestions and has incorporated them in this amendment; we all support this particular amendment. Would it not require the sanction of the Governor for this purpose?

Mr. PRESIDENT: It has been obtained.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Thank you, Sir.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is that in clause 2 of the Bill, before sub-clause (I) the following sub-clause be inserted, namely:—

"(a) 'agricultural land'—

(a) when used with reference to a proprietor or tenure-holder, means any land which on the date of the transfer of such land by sale referred to in sub-section (I) of section 4 was comprised in the estate or tenure, as the case may be, of, and held in khas by, the proprietor or tenure-holder who made such transfer; and

(b) when used with reference to a raiyat or under-raiyat, means a holding or a part of a holding of such raiyat or under-raiyat;"

(The motion was agreed to.)

Proposed change in sitting hours.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Sir, the Lower House has agreed to sit from 4 o'clock from tomorrow; so I suggest that we meet at 1-30 p.m. from tomorrow.

Mr. PRESIDENT: As the Leader of this House you should realise one fact that this House cannot change its sitting hours to suit the convenience of the other House.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: I was told by some of my colleagues and even the members of the Opposition complained that 1 o'clock is too early; so they have agreed to—

Mr. PRESIDENT: I know that. We decided to sit earlier only to accommodate the other House. But that House changes its sitting hours without referring the matter to us.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: I told them to accommodate us and as a result of my request they have changed the time.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Is it the general desire of the House to sit at 2 o'clock? I suggest that we may sit at our usual time of 2-15 p.m. and continue till 4-15.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Yes, Sir, we may sit from 2-15 p.m. from tomorrow.

Mr. MESBAHUDDIN AHMED: We might meet at 1-30 p.m. from tomorrow.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I do not propose to take the responsibility: I will leave it to the party leaders. So I suggest that we sit at 2 o'clock tomorrow and then if the party leaders come to an agreement that we should meet at 2-15 p.m. or at 1-30 p.m., I shall accede to it.

The House stands adjourned till 2 p.m. tomorrow.

Adjournment.

The Council then adjourned till 2 p.m. on Tuesday, the 21st March, 1944.

Members Absent.

The following members were absent from the meeting held on the 20th March, 1944:—

- (12) Mr. S. N. Sanyal.

BENGAL LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL DEBATES

First Session, 1944—No. 27.

THE COUNCIL met in the Legislative Chamber of the Legislative Building, Calcutta, on Tuesday, the 21st March, 1944, at 2 p.m., being the twenty-seventh day of the First Session of 1944, pursuant to section 62(2)(a) of the Government of India Act, 1935.

Mr. President (the Hon'ble Sir BIJOY PRASAD SINGH ROY, K.C.I.E.) was in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Appointments in Medical Department.

96. Khan Sahib NURUL AMIN: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Public Health and Local Self-Government Department be pleased to state—

- (a) the number of permanent and temporary posts separately in the Provincial cadre in the Medical Department;
- (b) the number of such posts permanently and temporarily held by Muslims;
- (c) the number of such posts reserved for Muslims according to the Communal Ratio Rules; and
- (d) whether all such posts reserved for Muslims have been permanently filled up, and, if not, what steps are being taken by the Government to recruit Muslims to fill up these vacancies?

Mr. BIREN ROY (on behalf of the Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi Jalaluddin Ahmad): (a) (i) Bengal Medical Service (Upper)—

Permanent	164
Temporary (Normal)	10

(ii) Bengal General Service—

Permanent	40
Temporary	Nil

(b) (i) Bengal Medical Service (Upper)—

Permanent	35
Temporary	5

(ii) Bengal General Service—

Held permanently by Muslims	4
Held temporarily by Muslims	5

(c) The number of vacancies that occurred since the introduction of Communal Ratio Rules on 17th March, 1939, and the number filled up, the number reserved for Muslims as well as the number of Muslims appointed are given below:—

	Number of vacancies.	Number filled up.	Number reserved for Muslims under Communal Ratio Rules.	Number of Muslims appointed.
(i) Bengal Medical Service (Upper)—
Permanent ..	37	24	12	9
Temporary ..	76	50	25	23
(ii) Bengal General Service	19	18	9	7

The above figures are as they stood on 1st February, 1944.

(d) No. Attempt is being made to fill up 50 per cent. of the vacancies that have occurred since March, 1939, by Muslims, as far as possible, according to the availability of suitable Muslim candidates.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Arising out of (d), were the posts advertised in due course?

Mr. BIREN ROY: Yes, Sir.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: What do the Government propose to do if the vacancies are not filled up?

Mr. PRESIDENT: That is a hypothetical question.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Sir, my idea is to elicit information regarding Government's intention as to how these posts are going to be filled up. Will the vacancies be filled up in the near future?

Mr. BIREN ROY: That has already been answered in the reply that most of the vacancies have been filled up and as for the vacancies that have not yet been filled up, it was because suitable candidates were not available.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Do the Government propose to advertise again for these posts?

Mr. BIREN ROY: Yes, Sir.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Arising out of (d), am I to understand that by suitable Muslim candidates Government mean suitable Bengali Muslim candidates?

Mr. BIREN ROY: Yes, as far as possible.

Relief to the poor.

97. Mr. NUR AHMED: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Revenue Department be pleased to state whether any steps have been taken by the Government of Bengal to enforce the provisions of the Bengal Rural Poor and Unemployed Act, 1939, especially to make a list of the destitute and unemployed in every union with a view to giving relief to them in these days of acute distress and starvation? If not, why not?

(b) Is it a fact that the deficit areas of Bengal have been organised on a famine basis?

(c) If so, have the Government taken any measure as laid down in the Bengal Famine Code to provide relief to the destitute pardanashin women in these areas and to provide medical relief as enjoined in the said Famine Code in these areas? If not, why not?

MINISTER in charge of the REVENUE DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Mr. Tarak Nath Mukerjee): (a) Yes, in most of the unions, but the Priority Lists prepared for relief during the present distress have met the purpose to an even greater extent than contemplated by the Act.

(b) and (c) Yes.

Mr. NUR AHMED: Arising out of (c), will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state what steps and what special measures have been taken to provide medical relief to the pardanashin women in their homes?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: They were treated, as far as possible, by the doctors especially employed for this purpose.

Mr. NUR AHMED: Will the Hon'ble Minister please give an idea of the steps that have been taken?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: I regret to say that it is not possible for me to give a detailed account of the steps that have been taken, as it is a matter for the Medical and Public Health Department.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state if the provisions of the Famine Code have been applied in respect of last year's famine?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: More than that.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: In reply to questions (b) and (c), the Hon'ble Minister has said "Yes". Now my supplementary question is: how does the Hon'ble Minister say that measures have been taken according to the provisions of the Bengal Famine Code?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Not only the provisions of the Famine Code have been followed, but much more steps have been taken.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: My question is: how the Bengal Famine Code can be applied here, when the Government declared that there was no famine in Bengal.

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Although famine was not declared, there was no bar to taking steps according to the provisions of the Famine Code.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: With reference to the reply (a), am I to understand by the words "most of the unions" that at least in 50 per cent. of the unions such lists have been prepared?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: It is rather difficult to say what is the percentage exactly, but it is certainly more than 50 per cent.

Mr. KRISHNA CHANDRA ROY CHOWDHURY: Arising out of (c), will the Hon'ble Minister please say what is the nature of the relief that is being provided?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Relief in the shape of foodgrains, medical aid, supply of cloth and all other things, is provided.

Mr. KRISHNA CHANDRA ROY CHOWDHURY: Without doing any work?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: For work in the shape of test relief work.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: What steps have been taken so far as Dacca and Mymensingh districts are concerned?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: For these details I want notice.

Adjournment Motion.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Sir, I gave notice of an adjournment motion regarding the situation arising out of the action of the police in arresting a large number of persons in the villages of Rashinagar, Atghar, Gobindapur, Sinhapratap, Gattibalia, etc., under the police-station Kotwali in the district of Faridpur, following an affray between some villagers and Government medical units at the Kanaipur hat on 10th March, 1944, over the question of forcible vaccination.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Humayun Kabir, will you please satisfy me on one point? The incident took place, according to you, on the 10th March; but you gave notice only yesterday, i.e., on the 20th March. Why this delay? How do you justify the delay?

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: The quarrel took place on the 10th March, but arrests took place thereafter. From the 11th March arrests began and they were continuing thereafter. The people came and saw me on Saturday last, and since there was no sitting of the House on Saturday and Sunday being a holiday I sent in notice as early as I could, namely, on Monday morning.

Mr. PRESIDENT: What is the special feature of the incident? Why do you want to adjourn the ordinary business of the House to discuss it?

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Sir, it is a definite matter of urgent public importance which may be readily admitted by you. In connection with this incident a large number of persons in different areas have been arrested and this has caused panic in the locality, and is also in fact affecting the cultivation of the land. The incident arose over a quarrel between some medical units who tried to vaccinate the people—

Mr. PRESIDENT: What was the number of people who were arrested, according to your information?

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: About ten important persons, leading persons of the different villages, have been arrested up till now. The arrest of these ten important persons has naturally created a panic among the other villagers. Sir, I find that some honourable members on the Government benches are smiling at the number mentioned by me. Sir, I need hardly say that if one of the members on the Government benches is arrested, it will create much more panic than the arrest of these ten insignificant persons—

Mr. PRESIDENT: No analogy need be cited, Mr. Kabir. Please come to the point.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: This occurrence arose over the attempts of the medical unit to vaccinate the villagers who being superstitious and ignorant thought that there was something dangerous about the matter. Instead of dealing with the situation in a tactful manner, attempts at forcible vaccination were made. Some of the villagers took the law into their own hands and some persons belonging to the medical unit were assaulted. That is a very regrettable thing, I admit; but if the Government instead of arresting persons who had nothing to do with the incident—for instance, they arrested a person named Bahadur Khan who had been lying bed-ridden for about two months—had tried to reason with them, it would have been far better. This has, therefore, created a general sense of panic in the locality. It is in order to draw the attention of the Hon'ble Home Minister to the situation that has been created that I have given notice of this adjournment motion. You will remember, Sir, that formerly we have sometimes called for papers on the subject in such a situation. If, Sir, you so desire, instead of pressing my adjournment motion, I shall be content with calling for papers on the matter if Government are prepared to make a statement regarding the situation under reference. I feel that if the attention of the Hon'ble Home Minister and of the higher authorities is drawn to it, the grievances of the local villagers may be largely met. There is a saying in Bengali, Sir, that when one asks a payada to get hold of a person, he very often goes and binds him, insults him and abuses him and commits far more excesses than is sanctioned by the authority concerned.

Mr. PRESIDENT: What I feel is this: after all, on your own admission the number of persons arrested is only 10. Is it not so?

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Yes, Sir, that is so, as far as my information goes up till now.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Well, it is not then a very important matter, because such arrests take place every day all over the province and Government are expected to carry on their administrative duties in the normal manner. I would, therefore, suggest that you ask for information on the subject from the Hon'ble the Home Minister and let the information be placed before the House, instead of moving for adjournment of the ordinary business of the House.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: If you so desire, Sir, as I have already said, I will ask for papers on the subject if the Government are prepared to make a statement. This adjournment motion may be taken up afterwards, if at all necessary. I, therefore, would move for papers in connection with the incident that took place in these villages in police-station Kotwali in the district of Faridpur, following an affray between some villagers and Government medical unit at the Kanaipur hat over the question of forcible vaccination on the 10th March, 1944.

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: May I rise on a point of information, Sir? Will the honourable member kindly explain what is the special feature of these arrests which distinguishes this case from the ordinary rioting cases in which arrests are made?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Let us hear the Hon'ble the Home Minister first.

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: Sir, I am glad to make a statement on this subject. As regards this matter, as far as I am concerned, I have not got the file with me now. But I want to make a protest and submit for your consideration that in my opinion this case is not different from the other cases that occur in many parts of Bengal almost daily. Then, Sir, the honourable member has himself admitted that there was an incident in which the medical unit people were assaulted. So, if after the assault 8 or 10 persons, who might have taken part in the affray, had been arrested, this by no stretch of imagination can be the subject-matter of an adjournment motion and a matter for discussion here. For such cases, the courts of law are open. If anybody has been wrongly arrested, the courts of law are there to see that justice is done. But how can I, sitting here, give any satisfaction to the honourable member? After all, the matter has to be investigated. Another thing I may point out to you—who are the people on whose behalf the honourable member is speaking? Is it on behalf of the persons who are resisting the vaccination and have thus violated the law? If so, this is very serious. I think every one—every sensible man will admit that when there is a serious epidemic of smallpox or cholera, compulsory vaccination is the only remedy and people are liable to be prosecuted for resisting vaccination during such time under the law of the land. So, if there are arrests for refusing to be vaccinated and for assaulting the persons who went to do their duty, the police have only carried out their normal duties in arresting them. May I ask whether the honourable members are prepared to jeopardise the health of the people by espousing the cause of such people instead of condemning the people who took part in the riot? If the honourable members do so, it would be jeopardising the health of the people—it would be encouraging the people who are resisting vaccination. It is well-known, Sir, that smallpox has been eliminated from every civilised country. There is no smallpox in those countries because they went in for mass vaccination. It is recognised by all medical authorities that the only way by which we can drive away smallpox is by means of mass vaccination. The Military authorities are assisting the Government in carrying out this work. Instead of honourable members coming forward to help us and support our action, if they try to prevent mass vaccination it is really a tragedy. So, I submit that there is no case whatsoever for bringing up this matter before the House. When the honourable member said that a large number of arrests had been made, the impression I got was that 50 or 100 persons had been arrested. I do not deny that such things happen. But it cannot be helped. It has been admitted by the honourable member himself that the medical unit people had been assaulted and it has also been admitted that some people took part in the assault—who are those people—they must be some of those who assaulted the medical unit people. The police in course of arrest may have arrested some of the innocent people. But my submission is that it is the court of law that can decide these cases. I submit, Sir, no statement is called for and accordingly the proposal of the honourable member should be rejected.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I have considered this question. In my opinion it is not a matter of sufficient public importance to justify the adjournment of the ordinary business of the House. But if the honourable member wants information from Government on this subject, certainly he can ask for information and it is for the Government to supply the information if they want to do so. That is all I can say.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: As I said, Sir, as soon as you made the suggestion about calling for papers, I asked for the same instead of pressing the adjournment motion before the House. I would make only one remark in reply to what the Hon'ble the Home Minister has said. We are not in any way defending those people who took part in the riot. As for the number of arrests, I think the Hon'ble Minister has overlooked the fact that the arrests of 10 leaders of 10 villages is certainly a fact which creates considerable panic in such a situation. It is to the interest of the Government to see that there is no state of panic over this matter. Then he stressed the necessity of vaccination. We all agree that it is a vital matter. Sir, Government themselves had been sleeping over the matter for a long time and suddenly they have awakened to the necessity of vaccination. We are thankful to them for this even at this belated hour. If the villagers are superstitious, it is no fault of theirs; if they are uneducated, it is no fault of theirs. We should persuade them to get themselves vaccinated. Sir, I submit that the public importance of this incident arises in this manner. If 10 important villagers in 10 important villages are in this way arrested and some of them, we have reason to believe, were arrested without sufficient reason, it does create a state of panic; and if there is panic, that can be the subject-matter of discussion in this House. In this connection, I would call for papers, if the Hon'ble the Home Minister is prepared to make a statement before the House.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Kabir, my suggestion would be that you should put a short-notice question and Government, if they consider the matter of sufficient importance, will agree to reply to that short-notice question. They should give you full information on the subject. I think that is the best method of getting information.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: I will do so; but, Sir, you yourself know that short-notice questions even if they are accepted by Government are not answered always.

Mr. PRESIDENT: They are being answered.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Many of them are not being answered.

Mr. KADER BAKSH: Sir, may I speak a word or two?

Mr. PRESIDENT: But the matter has been disposed of. There is nothing to be said now.

Mr. KADER BAKSH: Sir, the matter may be disposed of here but it will be discussed—

Mr. PRESIDENT: No, Mr. Kader Baksh there is nothing before the House on which you can speak now.

Amendments to the Bengal Legislative Council Procedure Rules.

Mr. PRESIDENT: As regards the amendments to rules 56, 57 and 58 of the Bengal Legislative Council Procedure Rules, they have been referred to a Committee under rule 110 (3) of the said Rules. A Committee is, therefore, to be constituted with the President and the Deputy President and five other members to be elected as required under the said rule.

I therefore fix 1 p.m. on Saturday, the 25th March, 1944, as the last hour and date for receiving nominations for the said election.

The Bengal Alienation of Agricultural Land (Temporary Provisions) Bill, 1944.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The House will now resume further consideration of the Bengal Alienation of Agricultural Land (Temporary Provisions) Bill, 1944.

Mr. MESBAHUDDIN AHMED: Sir, I beg to move: That in clause 2 of the Bill, after sub-clause (1), the following sub-clause be inserted, namely:—

“(1a) ‘complete usufructuary mortgage’ means a transfer of the right of possession in any land for the purpose of securing the payment of the mortgage debt upon the condition that the said debt shall be deemed to be extinguished by the profits arising from the land during the period of the mortgage.”

Sir, the definition of other usufructuary mortgages is necessary to cover the cases of such transfer by proprietors as the Bengal Tenancy Act definition will be inapplicable to such cases.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Amendment moved: That in clause 2 of the Bill, after sub-clause (1), the following sub-clause be inserted, namely:—

“(1a) ‘complete usufructuary mortgage’ means a transfer of the right of possession in any land for the purpose of securing the payment of the mortgage debt upon the condition that the said debt shall be deemed to be extinguished by the profits arising from the land during the period of the mortgage.”

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is that in clause 2 of the Bill, after sub-clause (1), the following sub-clause be inserted, namely:—

“(1a) ‘complete usufructuary mortgage’ means a transfer of the right of possession in any land for the purpose of securing the payment of the mortgage debt upon the condition that the said debt shall be deemed to be extinguished by the profits arising from the land during the period of the mortgage.”

(The amendment was agreed to.)

Mr. MESBAHUDDIN AHMED: Sir, I beg to move that in clause 2 of the Bill, for sub-clause (3), the following sub-clause be substituted namely:—

“(3) ‘proprietor,’ ‘tenure-holder,’ ‘raiyat,’ ‘under-raiyat,’ ‘landlord,’ ‘estate,’ ‘tenure,’ ‘holding,’ and ‘improvement’ have the same meanings as they have in the Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885.”

Sir, this is a matter of definition only.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Amendment moved: That in clause 2 of the Bill, after sub-clause (3), the following sub-clause be substituted, namely:—

“(3) ‘proprietor,’ ‘tenure-holder,’ ‘raiyat,’ ‘under-raiyat,’ ‘landlord,’ ‘estate,’ ‘tenure,’ ‘holding,’ and ‘improvement’ have the same meanings as they have in the Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885.”

(The amendment agreed to.)

Mr. MESBAHUDDIN AHMED: Sir, I beg to move that in clause 2 of the Bill, for sub-clause (4), the following sub-clause be substituted, namely:—

“(4) references to ‘proprietor,’ ‘tenure-holder,’ ‘raiyat,’ ‘under-raiyat’ and ‘transferee’ shall be deemed to include references to their successors in interest.”

Sir, this is also a matter of definition only.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Amendment moved: That in clause 2 of the Bill, for sub-clause (4), the following sub-clause be substituted, namely:—

“(4) references to ‘proprietor,’ ‘tenure-holder,’ ‘raiyat,’ ‘under-raiyat’ and ‘transferee’ shall be deemed to include references to their successors in interest.”

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Sir, I would only enquire of the honourable mover of this amendment why he has excluded any reference to a holding or a portion of a holding. There is no doubt that proprietor, tenure-holder, raiyat or under-raiyat, all these have been included; but nevertheless in the original Bill clauses, there was also a reference to a holding or a portion of a holding, and it was explicitly mentioned that reference to a holding shall be deemed to include references to a portion of the holding. Will the honourable mover please explain?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Sir, “holding” includes a portion of a holding and therefore no separate definition is necessary.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Then why was it not mentioned before?

Mr. PRESIDENT: But the word “portion of a holding” does not occur in the amended Bengal Tenancy Amendment Act. It was bad draftsmanship.

Order, order. The question before the House is that in clause 2 of the Bill, for sub-clause (4), the following sub-clause be substituted, namely:—

“(4) references to ‘proprietor,’ ‘tenure-holder,’ ‘raiyat,’ ‘under-raiyat’ and ‘transferee’ shall be deemed to include references to their successors in interest.”

(The amendment was agreed to.)

The motion that clause 2, as amended, stand part of the Bill was there-after agreed to.

Clause 3.

The motion that clause 3 stand part of the Bill was also agreed to.

Clause 4.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Mesbahuddin will now move his amendment No. 17A.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, before you call upon Mr. Mesbahuddin to move his amendment, you will kindly permit me to move my amendment No. 25? When the original Bill was presented to the House, we were called upon to put in amendments—

Mr. PRESIDENT: You want to do away with the financial limit?

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Yes, Sir, and it is very necessary that this amendment should be allowed to be moved in the first place. My amendment is to the main Bill clause; but we could not put in any amendment to the amendment of Mr. Mesbahuddin. It is, therefore, necessary that I should be allowed to move my amendment No. 25 first.

Mr. PRESIDENT: So that if your amendment is accepted, the other amendment may be modified!

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Yes, Sir, if my amendment is accepted, the other amendment of Mr. Mesbahuddin will have to be modified.

There is also another amendment standing in the name of Mr. Kamini Kumar Dutta where he has suggested some alteration with regard to the figure of Rs. 250.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I think the most convenient method of dealing with this matter would be to let Mr. Das move his amendment first. If his amendment is accepted, then a consequential amendment will have to be made. If it is not accepted, Mr. Mesbahuddin Ahmed may move his amendment as it is.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Then the other amendments on the same subject will have also to be moved, Sir.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Naturally.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: I beg to move that in clause 4 of the Bill, the words "the amount or value of which does not exceed two hundred and fifty rupees" in lines 3 and 4 be deleted.

If these words are deleted, the clause would read thus: "If on or after the 1st January, 1943, and before the 1st January, 1944, a raiyyat or under-raiyyat has transferred any holding by sale for any consideration, and if—

(a) he applies in the prescribed manner to the Collector * * * and then other things will follow.

My grounds are these: the principle of the Bill is to give relief to those who were compelled to sell their property for saving themselves—to keep their body and soul together. But should the relief be limited only to a certain number of people? Will only those people who sold their holdings or part of the holdings or tenure or nij-jote at a price of Rs. 250 or less get the relief? That seems to be the standpoint of the Government. It is understood that this standpoint has been arrived at by certain figures collected. I have had the privilege of the figures being shown to me by the Hon'ble the Revenue Minister in charge of the Bill. It appears from that that so far as the transfer of holdings at a fixed rate is concerned, 46,000 persons out of 60,000 persons will get the relief; that is to say, 14,000 people will not get any relief. That is in respect of sale of holdings at fixed rate. The Bill also refers to *raiya*ts and under-*raiya*ts and certain figures have also been obtained in respect of transfer of occupancy holdings. It will appear from this category of figures that about 90,000 persons will not get any relief by this Bill. About 5 lakhs of transfers have been made out of which about 4 lakhs are up to the value of Rs. 250 by each deed. Other transfers, about a lakh, are of the value of over Rs. 250. So, under the Bill as it now stands, those persons will not be given any relief. May I ask why? Why should not they get any relief? Only because of the fact that the value of their property is over Rs. 250 they are going to be deprived of the relief proposed under the Bill as it now stands. I do not understand why Government have chosen the limit of Rs. 250 for giving relief. Why don't you make it 300, 400, or 1,000? If you are prepared to give relief because people were compelled to sell their property due to want, do it under some principle. Why do you deny relief to those who fall under the same category, simply for the reason that they sold it at a higher price than Rs. 250? May I ask what are the grounds for denying the relief to those who sold their property at higher price? It may be said by the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Bill—we are not prepared to give relief or protection to the zemindars. Sir, I am not asking him to give relief to zemindars or tenure-holders or even to *raiya*ts who are to sell their property for reasons other than what is purported in the Bill itself. You purport to give relief to those who actually sold their property for saving themselves from starvation. If you want to do so, do it with a full heart: do it without being niggardly in any way and do away with the limit of Rs. 250.

Sir, it is stated in the Bill that the owner has to satisfy the Collector that he could not have maintained himself or his family except by making such alienation of his holding. If the owner cannot satisfy, he cannot get the relief. If the consideration money is more than Rs. 250, then he will not get anything and why? Why he should not get anything, I ask? He equally had difficulties in maintaining his family. Therefore, I ask if the Government are going to be generous at other people's expense, let them be more generous and not be niggardly by restricting the concession to those cases only where the consideration money for the sale of the holdings does not exceed Rs. 250. Let the principle of the Bill operate equally in respect of all who had to sell their holdings for maintaining themselves and their families.

With these words, I move my amendment and I hope it will be accepted by the House.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House—

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Sir, you have not yet placed the amendment before the House.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Thank you. Amendment moved: That in clause 4 of the Bill, the words "the amount or value of which does not exceed two hundred and fifty rupees" in lines 3 and 4 be deleted.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Sir, you will notice that amendments Nos. 25 to 36 deal with the same subject and the only difference between them is about the amount. My honourable friend Mr. Lalit Chandra Das has suggested that there should be no limit whatsoever to the amount when we are thinking of giving relief to persons who were compelled to sell their holdings. In defence of his arguments he referred to one clause of the Bill where it has been explicitly stated that unless the owner satisfies the Collector he cannot get any relief. The owner has to satisfy the Collector that he had to sell his land to maintain himself and his family. If he can satisfy the Collector, there is no point in fixing the limit. He has advanced other arguments also in favour of his amendment. In any case the Government have accepted many of the suggestions of the Opposition, and brought forward new amendments. Thereby they have admitted that there was room for extending the scope of the Bill. My honourable and esteemed friend Khan Bahadur Abdul Momin moved certain amendments. All these have been incorporated in the Government amendments.

Amendments Nos. 25 to 36 of the list have different figures ranging from Rs. 250 to Rs. 1,000; and there are two alternatives open to the Government. They can give relief to all who have been affected during the course of the famine of last year and accept Mr. Lalit Chandra Das's amendment. In that case, there would be no reference to any figure whatsoever. Anybody who was compelled to sell his holding in order to maintain himself and his family would be able to get relief. Or alternatively, a compromise may be made, namely, a figure between Rs. 250 and Rs. 1,000, may be suggested—any figure that may be acceptable to the Government. If, Sir, a figure higher than Rs. 250 is accepted, then that would bring relief to a large number of persons who would otherwise be excluded from the benefit of this Bill.

I would also like the Government to keep in mind one fact in this connection. The figure of Rs. 250 today represents in certain parts of Bengal the price of only about one bigha of land. In East Bengal, the price of one bigha of land is very nearly Rs. 200 even in the rural areas. Therefore, Rs. 250 is only a little more than the price of one bigha of land. I think Government will also admit that persons who do not own at least 5 bighas of land fall definitely among the poorer classes. To-day the price of five bighas of land in many parts of Eastern Bengal will be considerably more than Rs. 500 and in certain cases it may even be more than Rs. 1,000. Therefore, if this figure of Rs. 250 is stuck to by Government, that would exclude a very large number of genuine agriculturists apart from the tenure holders or landlords who, I maintain, will not then come into the picture at all. The amendment which has been moved by Khan Bahadur Momin and for the consideration of which the whole Bill had to be postponed would then be absolutely useless, because the tenure-holders, landlords and others who have been sought to be brought within the purview of the Bill will not come within the figure of Rs. 250. There is another point which should be remembered. I think it will be borne out by my honourable friends who have experience in this matter that when land is transferred, a higher value than the actual price is often put on record in order to prevent any re-transfer. In the past, it has often been the case that when land has been sold, the actual price has not been stated in the purchase document but a higher price has been put. I have been told by persons that sometimes they put the figure of Rs. 500 even when the actual price is Rs. 250. I am not a lawyer, but I have heard from more persons than one that actually a higher price is put on the document in order to prevent any re-transfer of the land to the agriculturist. Therefore, Sir, the figure of Rs. 250 would represent a very small figure indeed and would altogether keep out of the purview of the Bill the tenureholders or landlords. Secondly, Sir, the actual figure of Rs. 250 will not in all cases mean Rs. 250, but in many cases where the actual transaction has been Rs. 250, the amount entered has been higher. In view of these two considerations, I would ask the Hon'ble Minister to either accept the suggestion of Mr. Lalit Chandra Das or to state on behalf of the Government what sort of figure they think would be suitable for the purpose. If the figure of 1,000 or 500 rupees is agreed to or indeed any other figure that may be convenient, if an agreed figure is accepted by the Hon'ble Minister, I think then we can again arrive at a compromise and the Bill can go through much more quickly.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Before I call upon the Hon'ble Minister to reply to Mr. Lalit Chandra Das's motion No. 25, I would like to know if all or any of the motions from 26 to 36 are going to be moved.

Mr. KAMINI KUMAR DUTTA: I will move my motion, Sir.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Then move your motion so that there may be one discussion.

Mr. KAMINI KUMAR DUTTA: Sir, I beg to move that in clause 4 of the Bill, for the words "two hundred and fifty rupees" in line 4, the words "one thousand rupees" be substituted.

Sir, the object of my amendment is quite apparent, and it is also consistent with the object of the Bill itself. The object of the Bill is to give relief to those persons who in distress had to part with their land to maintain themselves. No doubt, it may be said that the figure also ought to be commensurate with the object of the Bill, and apparently the figure of Rs. 250 was fixed with a view to see that the transfers to be effected should be only by the poorer classes of people. But at the same time, as my honourable friend Mr. Humayun Kabir has already remarked, it is a matter of common experience—and I may state from my personal experience also that the price of the land sold in this time of distress was inflated in the sale deed. The inflated price was mentioned in the sale-deed for various causes. There was the apprehension that if any question of re-conveyance arose, then the re-conveyance would be for a higher amount and at the same time there is a common apprehension in the minds of these purchasers, particularly of the raiyati holdings, that if there were co-sharers they would come forward with applications for pre-emption. It is a common practice, although it is a vicious practice no doubt, to shut the door to the pre-emptor by putting in a fictitious value, so that if the man really purchases the property for Rs. 200 he puts down Rs. 500 so as to drive away the pre-emptor. So, if the object of the Bill is to give relief to those people who had to part with their land for dire necessity of meeting the requirements of their bare existence, the Bill should be framed in such a manner that it will give real relief—and not relief only on paper. Therefore, if Government want to give effective relief to those people who out of sheer necessity had to part with their land and with the only object of maintaining themselves, then I think Rs. 1,000 would not be a high amount at all, because in many of these transactions where the face value appears to be Rs. 1,000, it would not be really more than Rs. 500. At the same time, there need not be any apprehension of there being an abuse of the rights given by this Bill because the safeguarding clause in the Bill says that the Bill would operate only in respect of those transfers where the Collector would be satisfied that the transfer was really made under circumstances when the transferor could not have maintained himself or his family except by making such alienation of his land. When this safeguard is there, there need be no apprehension of any abuse of the provisions of this Bill by any body. Therefore, I would appeal to the Hon'ble Minister that as it is a Bill to which practically all the parties in the House are lending their support, and as there is perfect unanimity as to the object of the Bill the benefit proposed to be conferred under the Bill should not be confined only to rai-yats or under-rai-yats but should be applied to persons holding other kinds of tenancies and properties. I am really glad that Government have seen their way to accept some of our suggestions, and since the object of the Government and of the Opposition in this respect is exactly the same, namely, to give relief to people who had to part with their land, I again appeal to the Hon'ble Minister to see if he could accept this amendment of ours, viz., to enhance the sale-value of the land from Rs. 250 to Rs. 1,000 for the purpose of relief proposed in this Bill. I again state that it is a matter of common experience that in a sale deed the price is put at an inflated amount and so if the value is fixed at Rs. 1,000, the object of the Bill would be really gained and effective relief would be given to people who had to part with their land on account of dire necessity brought about by famine and distress.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: I beg to move that in clause 4 of the Bill, for the words "two hundred and fifty" occurring in line 2, the words "five hundred" be substituted.

Sir, the underlying principle of the Bill is good and worthy of support, but if the limit be not raised then practically the very object of the Bill will be defeated. It will be a sort of camouflaged generosity. So I think if this limit of Rs. 250 is deleted, every one will welcome it. If the limit is raised to 1,000 rupees, I have no objection; but failing that my amendment may be accepted. It is a very modest amendment and I think the poor will be relieved to a greater extent by my amendment.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Amendment moved: (Mr. Kamini Kumar Dutta's amendment) that in clause 4 of the Bill, for the words "two hundred and fifty rupees" in line 4, the words "one thousand" be substituted.

Amendment moved (Mr. Haridas Mazumdar's amendment) that in clause 4 of the Bill for the words "two hundred and fifty" occurring in line 4, the words "five hundred" be substituted.

Khan Bahadur M. A. MOMIN: Sir, I am afraid I will have to oppose all the three amendments moved from the other side. The House may remember that during the first reading stage, I made it clear that I did not feel any enthusiasm over this Bill, not because the intention of the Hon'ble Minister-in-charge was not good,—there is no doubt that the intention of the Bill is very good,—but because I was afraid that in different ways the whole purpose of the Bill will be defeated by benami and other transactions. However, I did not oppose the Bill then. Later, the scope of the Bill has been enlarged in accordance with our suggestions and the suggestions of the Opposition, by including proprietors and tenure-holders within the scope of this Bill. Now, it has been suggested by these amendments—and I will, first of all, refer to Mr. Das's amendment—to remove all limitations as regards the value of the holding or consideration money in giving effect to the provisions of the Bill. This and the other allied amendments, which have been moved do, in my opinion, cut at the very root of the very object underlying the Bill. This Bill was brought in pursuance of the popular demand that many poorer classes of tenants and agriculturists had to part with their land as a last resort because they could not maintain themselves and their families. Now, since then the conditions have improved and it has been possible for some of them to recover the lands which were sold under dire necessities. The mere fact that some men are tenure-holders or proprietors does not mean that they are in a better position, or that they are more wealthy or substantial people and as such should not be brought within the scope of the present Bill. There are numerous tenure-holders and proprietors, specially in Barisal, who own one or two bighas of land or even half an acre of orchard land round their homestead and that is their sole means of livelihood. During the hard days they had no other means to keep their body and soul together and therefore under dire necessity they had to sell portion of their lands, mostly "Bramhattar". They had no other income, and although they are tenure-holders or proprietors by courtesy, they are in fact much poorer than even rayats or under-rayats. There are some tenure-holders and proprietors and talukdars in Mymensingh who though paying revenue direct to Government are even poorer than the under-rayats. The income from their lands is so meagre that in order to maintain themselves and their families they had to sell out their holdings. The present Bill seeks to limit the re-transfer of all the lands already sold and is not intended to make it possible for people who have sold their lands, their zemindaries or portion of their zemindaries worth Rs. 50,000 to get back their land only if they can satisfy the Collector. Sir, the maintenance of a family is a question of degree. I may, for instance, require more money than a cultivator in the village and so it is very difficult to say what view the Collector would take in most cases. We have got experience of the Agricultural Debtors Act. (Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Here the Collector will decide and not the Union Boards.) Mr. Lalit Chandra Das also knows that many big zemindars applied for getting the benefit of the Bengal Agricultural Debtors Act. The Collector is too busy to take up these cases and so he will have to delegate his powers to some other officers. As I said before, the Collector or his agent will certainly let him try and fight his case. Now, if you accept Mr. Das's amendment, what will happen? All the transactions, sales and transfers, which have taken place between 1st January, 1943, and 1st January, 1944, will become null and void, and there is every danger of upsetting the whole lot of settled facts. Of course, you may say that this is a very merciful legislation and that mercy should extend to as large a number of people as possible. But you forget the other side of the picture. You are trying to be merciful to the people who have sold, but you are going to be unmerciful to the people who have purchased.

Then again, other factors should also be considered. The value of land has increased by 100 per cent. You yourselves have said that the lands which the people sold for Rs. 5,000 or Rs. 6,000 will easily fetch Rs. 10,000. Now that the land has gone up in value, the man who sold it will come up and put in a petition to the Collector. Suppose, there is a case where ordinary transactions have been completed and in the ordinary course nobody would have thought of it again; but now that the price has gone up, the man who had purchased will naturally try to keep back the land not so much for keeping it for himself as for selling it to somebody else at a higher value.

There is another point. In villages, as everybody knows, there are always more than one party. If a man has sold a piece of land, somebody must have been able to purchase it. Now, the purchaser will try to keep back the land from the seller by offering him higher price. Because the value has increased, therefore it will be to his interest to fight that case. All these evils will arise. So if you do not put any limit on the sale-price of the land, it will give rise to all these evils. When a man has sold his land, it has been sold with a proper contract and the contract stands. Now Government are doing a merciful act by making it possible, to a certain extent, for the poorer classes who have been hard hit to get back their lands. Of course, these transactions should be properly investigated. I take it for granted that they will be properly investigated, and that only in cases of genuine hardship such relief should be given. But I am definitely opposed to making it the rule and not the exception. This disposes of Mr. Lalit Chandra Das's amendment which seems to have been inspired by unlimited flow of the milk of human kindness.

As regards others, I think it is a question of degree. Government after proper investigation have found that Rs. 250 is the limit for which there is some justification. I quite agree with Government, because for the man who sold his land only to maintain his family the figure of Rs. 250 is quite fair, but for those who sold their lands for purposes of paying off debts, marriage expenses and expenses for sradh, etc., the question of granting any such relief does not arise. Therefore, Rs. 250 is a very very reasonable and adequate limit and we should stick to it. I hope honourable members of the Opposition understand this is a thing in which they must take a reasonable and practical view and should not go on theory only I would request them to leave the Bill as it is and not press their amendments.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: Sir, in rising to speak on the amendments now under discussion in the House, I would like to point out in the first instance that I am not in favour of the amendment of Mr. Das which seeks to delete the limit altogether. But I would like honourable member to consider whether the limit of Rs. 250 which the Government propose should not be exceeded. I was surprised to find my honourable friend Khan Bahadur Momin speaking against all the amendments proposed from this side of the House. No doubt he gave certain reasons in support of his argument that by extending the scope of the Bill to proprietors and tenure-holders he did not intend that proprietors and tenure-holders who had sold their land for more than Rs. 250 should be given any relief. I should have thought that having enlarged the scope of the Bill by including proprietors and tenure-holders, he would readily accede to some extension of limit proposed by Government. Now, Sir, with reference to this fact I am surprised to find that most of the honourable members have forgotten the acute distress that prevailed in Bengal in the last season and the rate at which foodstuffs were selling at the time and the reason why the people had to sell away their properties for the purpose of maintaining themselves. I think honourable members of this House would remember that in some parts of the province rice was selling at Rs. 80 to Rs. 100 a maund. I think in Chittagong, Dacca and Munshiganj rice was selling in the region of Rs. 80 to Rs. 100 per maund for a considerable period of time. Now, let us take an ordinary family of five persons. If we consider their requirements for three months we will find that they would require at least five maunds of rice for three months and these five maunds of rice could only be purchased at Rs. 400 and if that person had to sell two bighas of land for Rs. 400 would he not be entitled to relief under this Act in accordance with the principle enunciated by Government?

The Hon'ble the Revenue Minister has got before him a statistics of the sales that took place during the period under discussion: I mean from 1st January, 1943, to 1st January, 1944. I do not know whether that statistics includes transfer of the property of the proprietors and tenure-holders. (I hope the Hon'ble Minister will listen to what I am saying now, and not discuss other things with somebody else). The Hon'ble the Revenue Minister has before him a table showing the number of sale transactions that took place last year. He showed me that table according to which he says that about 80 per cent. or a little more of the transactions are with regard to amount up to Rs. 250. I think this statistics is with reference to the Bill which was then under consideration. The scope of the Bill has now been enlarged and sales made by the proprietors and tenure-holders have now been included. So I would like to know whether the Hon'ble Minister has included in his statistics the sales of tenure-holders and proprietors as well. I presume they have not been included. I would, therefore, submit that having regard to the fact that the scope of the Bill has been enlarged so as to include not only raiyats and under-raiyats but also the proprietors and tenure-holders and having adopted the principle of the Bill that cultivators of ordinary means who had to sell their land for the purpose of maintaining themselves should get relief, I do not understand why a low limit of Rs. 250 has been fixed. If you consider, as I have already said, the price of Rs. 40 for a maund of rice as it was then prevailing for a considerable time, and take the case of a family consisting of 10 members, which is not uncommon in Bengal, you will realise that the family would require Rs. 500 for rice only for the four or five months during which the distress prevailed. As a matter of fact, while I was touring during the distressed period in some of the districts of Bengal, particularly in Bankura, Midnapore, Birbhum and Burdwan, on several occasions I visited the sub-registry offices and I enquired as to why they were ~~selling~~ ^{selling} their properties —what was the reason of their selling and so forth. I found, Sir, that the people were selling lands including the standing crops for values which may be put at the rate of the price of paddy which was on the lands and the purchasers were getting the lands practically free. I also felt that many of the purchasers anticipated a legislation of this kind and so, as has been pointed out by my friend Mr. Humayun Kabir, in many instances the purchasers took the precaution of putting a higher value in the kabala than they had actually paid to the sellers. It is, therefore, clear that a limit of Rs. 250 which means practically the price of 6 maunds of rice at that time when distress was prevailing, is nothing. So I appeal to the Hon'ble Minister—I appeal to the members of Government and I appeal to the members occupying the European benches to consider the matter seriously. If you want to give any relief to the poorer middle class—not the poorest class—but the poorer middle class for whom I am speaking for the last few days, the poorer middle classes who are the backbone of this province—if you want to give some relief to them, raise the limit from Rs. 250 and fix it at any figure which you consider to be reasonable. For this purpose, I suggest that the House may be adjourned for 5 or 10 minutes so that we may come to a settlement as regards the figure. Anyhow, I have spoken enough to show that the figure should not be fixed so low.

With these few words, I support the amendment of Mr. Kamini Kumar Dutta and failing that the amendment of Mr. Haridas Mazumdar.

Alhadj Khan Bahadur SHAIKH MOHAMMAD JAN: Mr. President, Sir, without raising the Hindu-Muslim controversy, I may mention that it is really very surprising that the Muslim representatives of this House should oppose an amendment which seeks to give relief to the agriculturists, majority of whom are Muslims. It is a known fact that the Muslims of Bengal are more affected by last year's famine than the Hindus of this province, because the economic condition of the latter is decidedly better than that of the Muslims.

Khan Bahadur M. A. MOMIN: On a point of order, Sir. Is the honourable member entitled to speak on a subject which is absolutely irrelevant, namely, about the question of Hindus and Muslims?

MR. PRESIDENT: Perhaps he is developing his arguments.

Alhadj Khan Bahadur SHAIKH MOHAMMAD JAN: Well, Sir, while the representatives of the Hindus who are not so much affected are bringing forward various amendments for raising the limit from Rs. 250 to Rs. 1,000, so that not only the destitute persons but also the middle-class may reclaim their lands which they had sold at this price, Muslim representatives are opposing the amendments in a body. As has been very rightly pointed out by Mr. Humayun Kabir, Rs. 250 is too low a figure and is nearly the price of one bigha of land. Then there is another factor. Very often the purchaser asks the seller to put down a higher figure so that in case of the seller's asking the land back after some time, the purchaser may get more than what was actually paid.

Under the circumstances, I hope that my friends on the other side will make some compromise about the figure at which lands purchased should be returned to the original owners. They should not insist on the amount of Rs. 250 as provided for in the Bill, which is very low and they should ponder over the matter again and see whether Rs. 250 is a right figure.

If the Government really intend to help the middle-class persons who form the backbone of society, they should not insist upon Rs. 250 but raise it at least to Rs. 500, so that the middle-class people who were compelled to dispose of their small holdings under dire necessity may get back their only asset in life.

Sir, I support the amendment.

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Sir, as I had already stated in the initial stage, this is a temporary emergency measure meant to give relief to the poor who were mostly hard hit during the distressed months of the famine. Unfortunately, my friends are working under a misapprehension. The very fact that the price of rice and paddy was abnormally high last year never presupposes that the price of land was equally high. In fact, the situation was just the reverse, and from our enquiry and from my own personal knowledge of the actual situation of the rural area, I may tell the House that in most of the cases these lands were sold only at nominal price. As my honourable friends opposite including Mr. Humayun Kabir have said that in the sale deed a higher figure is generally put, it is a significant fact that in 85 per cent. of these transactions the figure was less than Rs. 250, and in spite of the fact that much higher figure is put in the sale deed it is seen that out of total transactions of 5 lakhs and 13 thousand cases in more than 4 lakhs and 50 thousand cases the figure recorded was Rs. 250. Similarly, in the case of tenure-holders, out of total transactions of 60,500 cases, in about 47,000 cases the figure was less than Rs. 250.

Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: On a point of order, Sir. Will the Hon'ble Minister please tell us what would be the figure if the amount is fixed at Rs. 500 instead of Rs. 250?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: It is not readily available. But, Sir, taking all these facts into careful and earnest consideration, Government have come to the conclusion that the sum of Rs. 250 will be quite fair and generous for the purpose of this Bill, and I hope that the honourable members will withdraw their amendments and accept the figure of Rs. 250.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order, order. Three amendments have been moved: one by Mr. Lalit Chandra Das, the other by Mr. Kamini Kumar Dutta and the last by Mr. Haridas Mazumdar. As Mr. Lalit Chandra Das's amendment is the widest, I shall put that to vote first.

The question before the House is: that in clause 4 of the Bill, the words "the amount or value of which does not exceed two hundred and fifty rupees" in lines 3 and 4 be deleted.

(The amendment was negatived.)

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that in clause 4 of the Bill, for the words "two hundred and fifty rupees" in line 4, the words "one thousand rupees" be substituted.

(The amendment was negatived.)

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that in clause 4 of the Bill for the words "two hundred and fifty" occurring in line 4, the words "five hundred" be substituted.

The question being put, a division was challenged and taken with the following result:

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order, order. The House has divided. Ayes—15; Noes—26. The amendment is, therefore, negatived.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Sir, the other House is going to meet, at 4 o'clock today. So, may I request you to adjourn the House now. Tomorrow is a Hindu festival and the House may meet day after tomorrow, with your permission, at 1-30 p.m. This has been arranged in consultation with the leaders of the different parties.

Mr. PRESIDENT: As stated by the Leader of the House I consulted the different party leaders and it has been agreed that we should sit at 1-30 p.m. instead of at 1 p.m. from Thursday next. It has been suggested that today we should adjourn the House now as by inadvertence the sitting hour of the other House has been fixed at 4 o'clock today. But in future we shall not be expected to change our time unless we are consulted previously. As regards the holiday, I take it that it is the general desire of the House that we should not meet tomorrow. (VOICES: Yes, Sir.) So the House is adjourned till 1-30 p.m. on Thursday, the 23rd March.

Adjournment.

The Council then adjourned till 1-30 p.m. on Thursday, the 23rd March, 1944.

Members Absent.

The following members were absent from the meeting held on the 21st March, 1944:—

BENGAL LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL DEBATES

First Session, 1944—No. 28.

THE COUNCIL met in the Legislative Chamber of the Legislative Building, Calcutta, on Thursday, the 23rd March, 1944, at 1-30 p.m., being the twenty-eighth day of the First Session of 1944, pursuant to section 62 (2) (a) of the Government of India Act, 1935.

Mr. President (the Hon'ble Sir BIJOY PRASAD SINGH ROY, K.C.I.E.) was in the Chair.

QUESTION AND ANSWER

Education for Muslim girls.

98. Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY (on behalf of Mr. Nur Ahmed): (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Education Department be pleased to state if it is a fact that the percentage of Muslim girl students in all stages of education excepting the primary stages is low as compared to that of non-Muslim girl students in Bengal?

(b) If so, what special measures have been taken by the Government of Bengal to raise the percentage of Muslim girl students to its maximum? If not, why not?

(c) Is the Hon'ble Minister aware that the number of Muslim girl pupils in middle and high English schools, colleges and professional schools and colleges is low as compared to those of other provinces in India?

(d) Is it a fact that a resolution to give effect to the recommendation of the Muslim Education Advisory Committee known as Momin Committee, as regards increasing the number of scholarships was moved during the last session of the Bengal Legislative Council to which an amendment was moved to allot rupees two lakhs for scholarships of Muslim girls?

(e) Is it a fact that an assurance was given on behalf of the last Ministry that a large sum would be provided in the next budget for providing scholarships to the Muslim girls in Bengal?

(f) If so, do the Government propose to give effect to the said assurance to provide large sums for scholarships of Muslim girls? If not, why not?

MINISTER in charge of the EDUCATION DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Mr. Tamizuddin Khan): (a) and (d) Yes.

(b) In addition to the Provincialisation of the Sakhawat Memorial High School for Muslim Girls, Calcutta, and the establishment of a first grade college meant mainly for Muslim girls, known as the Lady Brabourne College, Calcutta, Government have sanctioned a scheme for additional scholarships and stipends to Muslim girl students. Out of this fund, a sum of Rs.17,376 is now spent annually on additional scholarships of different values to Muslim girls reading in schools and colleges. These scholars enjoy the privilege of free tuition in addition. A further sum of Rs.4,800 is allotted to colleges for stipends to Muslim girls. Certain special stipends are also distributed by the Director of Public Instruction to Muslim girl students reading in schools and colleges, and a sum of Rs.3,445 was spent last year on this account.

(c) The number of Muslim girl pupils in secondary schools and colleges is somewhat low in comparison with some other major Provinces in India.

(e) Yes, though not in the next budget.

(f) Government realise the importance of encouraging the spread of education amongst Muslim girls and will make proposals for increasing present privileges as the growth of the demand justifies it.

Adjournment motion.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, I have got an adjournment motion which runs thus—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Mazumdar, you should allow me to say that questions are over.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: All right, Sir.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Questions over.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, I have an adjournment motion standing in my name which runs thus:—

That this Council do adjourn its business to discuss a definite matter of urgent public importance, namely, the serious situation that has arisen on account of the failure of the Government of Bengal to supply soft coke as fuel to the householders of Calcutta and its suburbs to meet their daily requirements.

Mr. PRESIDENT: What are your grounds?

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: This is an urgent matter of public importance and it requires no explanation, because there is acute shortage of soft coke in Calcutta. I have got personal experience in this matter, and this matter has also been ventilated in yesterday's newspapers. I can show from the papers also that there is acute shortage of soft coke. Therefore, Sir, this is a definite matter of public importance, because unless the food is cooked, nobody can take it. People are not getting coal from anywhere except from the black market where exorbitant prices are charged. Under these circumstances, this matter should be discussed. It is not a censure motion at all. I want only to draw the attention of the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Civil Supplies to this important grievance so that ways and means may be found to get over this difficulty.

Mr. PRESIDENT: If you do not want to censure Government, then what is the object of your bringing in an adjournment motion?

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, on the 7th February, I sent a short-notice question but on the 23rd Government said that they did not give their consent to it. This is generally the fate of short-notice questions. I have brought this adjournment motion, because this is a matter which cannot be delayed. That is the reason and that being the only alternative left to us to ventilate our grievances and those of the public in this House, notice of this adjournment motion has been given.

Mr. PRESIDENT: That will do. May I hear the Government's point of view in this matter?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Sir, the Hon'ble the Supplies Minister is not present here just now, and I do not think he has got any notice of this adjournment motion. As a matter of fact, I got it only just now.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The point now is: whether I should admit the motion or not. After I decide to admit it, I shall find out from the House whether the honourable member has the leave of the House or not. I understand that the Civil Supplies Department was informed that this adjournment motion was coming up before the House.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: In any case, Sir, Government have been doing everything possible to ease the situation. Government are aware that there has been a shortage of coal but that is due largely to transport difficulty, as has been explained previously many times in this House by my colleague, the Hon'ble Minister for Civil Supplies.

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: Then what is the use of a Government at all if they cannot do anything?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: But the honourable member knows very well that transport is a matter in which this Government has no hand.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: If, however, the Government give the House an undertaking that—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Let us hear the Hon'ble the Leader of the House.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: As I have said, Sir, Government has been doing all that is possible but lack of transport facilities over which this Government has no hand and for which this Government is entirely dependent upon the Government of India is causing all this difficulty.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Are Government prepared to make a fuller statement before the House?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Yes, Sir.

Mr. PRESIDENT: When?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Tomorrow.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: I hope, Sir, that till then the question of urgency will be waived by you.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Let Government supply the information tomorrow, as promised. If you are not satisfied with the statement, then you may mention about your adjournment motion and then I shall decide whether I can admit it under the rules or not.

Mr. BIREN ROY: Sir, there is also not enough number of members present today to grant the leave of the House so far as this motion is concerned.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I may tell Mr. Roy that the question of getting the leave of the House does not arise at this stage. I shall have to admit it first and if it is objected to, then the mover will have to obtain the leave of the House.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, may I mention that there is another adjournment motion standing in my name?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Yes, I have seen that. But how can you prove that it is a definite matter of urgent public importance?

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: May I move it in that case?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Don't move it but state your grounds first.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: In stating my grounds, I would require to read out the nature of my motion.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Yes, you may read it but you cannot move it at this stage.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: All right, Sir. My motion is as follows: That this Council do adjourn its business to discuss a definite matter of urgent public importance, namely, the failure of the Government so far to secure and maintain supply of sufficient number of cattle by importation of the same, control of their prices as well as by prevention of the fifty per cent. increase in the slaughter of cattle including milch cows, dearth of which is causing thousands of acres of cultivable lands to lie fallow although the cultivation season is nearing its end thus menacing the whole province with shortage of food including milk which has become scarce and whose price has gone skyhigh endangering the health of the people in general and of the children in particular.

The above is my motion, Sir. The cultivation season is about to end and our information is that thousands of acres of cultivable lands are lying fallow for want of cattle and that as yet the attempts of Government to import cattle from Bihar as well as from the Central Provinces have miserably failed. Not only that; the Government of Bengal have also taken statistics in Calcutta and also in other big municipalities from which it will appear that the slaughter of cattle has risen by 50 per cent. This is a very important matter because it menaces the whole province with shortage of food, and so far as milch cows are concerned, there is shortage in the matter of milk. The scarcity of milk will endanger the health of the children and of the public in general.

Sir, it is a continuing menace. This matter has been prominently brought to my notice by an article which I read today in the Patrika. There it has been clearly stated that Government made an attempt but failed to secure supply of cattle. Importation of cattle from other places is absolutely necessary to meet the situation which has arisen in this province. Several thousands of acres of land are lying fallow although the cultivation season is nearing its end. I have come to learn today also that according to the statistics taken by the Government slaughter of the cattle is increasing by leaps and bounds every day and that it has already increased by 50 per cent. in Calcutta and in some of the big municipalities of Bengal. So, Sir, this is an urgent matter of public importance and I hope I shall have your consent to move this adjournment motion. Do Government like to make a statement whether they have made any such attempt to import cattle? Several thousands of acres of cultivable land is lying fallow for want of cattle and will Government say whether the slaughter of the cattle has been as much as 50 per cent. above the normal figure?

MR. PRESIDENT: That will do.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Sir, I am prepared to make a statement in connection with this matter.

Government are fully conscious of the seriousness of the menace to the cattle population. On account of the shortage of cattle the cultivation of land is likely to be affected. But Government have been doing all that is possible under the circumstances. They are trying to import animals from Bihar and the Central Provinces; and even before the present serious situation had arisen, they attempted to arrange with the dealers of cattle to import cattle from Bihar. But that Government had put an embargo on the importation of cattle. Government are now negotiating for a permit for bringing 30,000 cattle from Bihar. They have also sanctioned Rs. 50 lakhs to be distributed as loans to agriculturists of badly affected areas for purchase of plough cattle. They are still carrying on correspondence with the Bihar and the Central Provinces Governments in order to arrange for the importation of cattle from those provinces. They have practically decided to fix two days in the week as meatless days in all the municipalities of the province and in the city of Calcutta. They are also considering the question of conserving the cattle population in Bengal by other means. So it will be seen that nothing has been left undone and all that is possible is being done. Government will always do its very best to see that agriculture does not suffer.

MR. PRESIDENT: Mr. Das, I am afraid I cannot agree with your contention. It is an urgent matter and it is an important matter, but it is not a matter of recent occurrence. This question should have been the subject-matter of a resolution or could have been brought up before the House during the general discussion of the budget. So in view of that I do not think it is a matter for which adjournment of the ordinary business of the House can be permitted. If the ordinary business of the House has to be adjourned for a matter like this, I am afraid, we shall never be able to make any progress with the ordinary business. You have listened to the Hon'ble Minister. I do not want to make any observation on his statement. It is, however, not a matter for which the business of the House should be adjourned, and I refuse consent to the motion being moved.

MR. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, a resolution was brought by Mr. Hamidul Huq Chowdhury but that did not come up. So, I have brought in this adjournment motion.

MR. PRESIDENT: There is a resolution on the subject.

Committee of Privileges.

MR. PRESIDENT: Under rule 123 of the Bengal Legislative Council Procedure Rules, I hereby nominate Khan Bahadur M. A. Momin in the casual vacancy in the Privileges Committee caused by the lamentable death of Khan Sahib Abul Quasem.

The Bengal Alienation of Agricultural Land (Temporary Provisions) Bill, 1944.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The House will now take up the Bengal Alienation of Agricultural Land (Temporary Provisions) Bill, 1944.

Mr. MESBAHUDDIN AHMED: Sir, I beg to move: that for clause 4 of the Bill, the following clause be substituted, namely:—

“4. Procedure for effecting restoration of lands alienated by proprietors, tenure-holders, raiyats or under-raiyats in 1943.—(1) If on or after the 1st January, 1943, and before the 1st January, 1944, a proprietor, tenure-holder, raiyyat or under-raiyyat has transferred any agricultural land by sale for any consideration the amount or value of which does not exceed two hundred and fifty rupees, and if,—

(a) he applies in the prescribed manner to the Collector at any time before the 25th day of December, 1945, for the restoration of such land to him; and

(b) he satisfies the Collector that he could not have maintained himself or his family except by making such alienation of such land,

the Collector shall, after giving the transferee and if such land is in the possession of any person other than the transferee, such other person also an opportunity of being heard, make an order in writing restoring such land to such proprietor, tenure-holder, raiyyat or under-raiyyat, as the case may be, and directing such proprietor, tenure-holder, raiyyat or under-raiyyat in the manner provided in sub-section (2) to pay in ten annual instalments by such dates as may be specified in the order the amount of such consideration or its value together with interest on such amount at the rate of three and one-eighth per centum per annum from the date of his receipt of such consideration and the amount of any compensation for improvements effected to such land, allowed by the Collector and determined by him in the manner prescribed, less the amount determined in the manner prescribed of the net income from such land of the person in possession of such land as a result of such alienation:

Provided that the first of such instalments shall be payable on a date not later than the 1st day of Baisakh next following the date of the order.

(2) When the Collector makes an order for payment by instalments under sub-section (1), he shall direct such instalments to be paid—

(a) in the case where the agricultural land in respect of which such order is made has been alienated by the transferee before the date of such order by means of a bona fide transfer for valuable consideration, or a bona fide gift by a registered instrument or heba, to the person in possession of such land as a result of such alienation;

(b) in the case where such land has been alienated by the transferee before such date by means of a bona fide lease for valuable consideration or a usufructuary mortgage, to the transferee and the person in possession of such land as a result of such alienation in such proportion and in such manner as may be determined by the Collector and specified in the order; and

(c) in other cases, to the transferee.

Provided that if such land is subject to a bona fide mortgage other than a usufructuary mortgage and such mortgage was executed after the transfer of such land referred to in sub-section (I), the Collector shall direct that such instalments shall first be paid to the mortgagee until the amount due under the mortgage as determined by the Collector is paid off and that thereafter any such instalments or part thereof still remaining due shall be paid in the manner provided in clause (a), clause (b) or clause (c) of this sub-section, as the case may be.

(3) Where an application made under sub-section (I) is accompanied by a statement verified in the manner prescribed that the proprietor, tenure-holder, raiyat or under-raiyat who made the transfer of the agricultural land by sale referred to in that sub-section could not have maintained himself or his family except by making such alienation of such land, the Collector shall for the purpose of clause (b) of that sub-section presume such statement to be correct until the contrary is proved.

(4) The amount ordered to be paid by instalments by a proprietor, tenure-holder, raiyat or under-raiyat under sub-section (I) shall be charged on the agricultural land in respect of which an order under that sub-section is made.

(5) Where any agricultural land in respect of which an order under sub-section (I) is made is, after the date on which such order takes effect under sub-section (I) of section 5, sold in execution of a decree or of a certificate signed under the Bengal Public Demands Recovery Act, 1913, other than a certificate for the recovery of any amount payable under such order, the whole of the amount payable under the said order then remaining due shall notwithstanding anything contained in such order at once become due and payable."

Sir, this is an amendment in which the Collector directs that the amount of such consideration or its value should be paid in 10 annual instalments. Unless this is done, the whole object of the Bill is frustrated. It cannot be expected that a tenant who is compelled to sell all his holdings in maintaining himself during the period of acute shortage and unprecedented rise in the price of foodgrains will be able to repay the whole amount in one instalment—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Mesbahuddin, I think the amendment is self-explanatory, and you need not take the trouble of making a speech to support it.

Mr. MESBAHUDDIN AHMED: All right, Sir. I need not say anything more.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order, order. Amendment moved: that for clause 4 of the Bill, the following clause be substituted, namely:—

"4. Procedure for affecting restoration of lands alienated by proprietors, tenure-holders, raiyats or under-raiyats in 1943.—(I) If on or after the 1st

January, 1943, and before the 1st January, 1944, a proprietor, tenure-holder, raiyat or under-raiyat has transferred any agricultural land by sale for any consideration the amount or value of which does not exceed two hundred and fifty rupees, and if,—

(a) he applies in the prescribed manner to the Collector at any time before the 25th day of December, 1945, for the restoration of such land to him; and

(b) he satisfies the Collector that he could not have maintained himself or his family except by making such alienation of such land,

the Collector shall, after giving the transferee and if such land is in the possession of any person other than the transferee, such other person also an opportunity of being heard, make an order in writing restoring such land to such proprietor, tenure-holder, raiyat or under-raiyat, as the case may be, and directing such proprietor, tenure-holder, raiyat or under-raiyat in the manner provided in sub-section (2) to pay in ten annual instalments by such dates as may be specified in the order the amount of such consideration or its value together with interest on such amount at the rate of three and one-eighth per centum per annum from the date of his receipt of such consideration and the amount of any compensation for improvements affected to such land, allowed by the Collector and determined by him in the manner prescribed, less the amount determined in the manner prescribed of the net income from such land of the person in possession of such land as a result of such alienation:

Provided that the first of such instalments shall be payable on a date not later than the 1st day of Baisakh next following the date of the order.

(2) When the Collector makes an order for payment by instalments under sub-section (1), he shall direct such instalments to be paid—

(a) in the case where the agricultural land in respect of which such order is made has been alienated by the transferee before the date of such order by means of a bona fide transfer for valuable consideration, or a bona fide gift by a registered instrument or heba, to the person in possession of such land as a result of such alienation;

(b) in the case where such land has been alienated by the transferee before such date by means of a bona fide lease for valuable consideration or a usufructuary mortgage, to the transferee and the person in possession of such land as a result of such alienation in such proportion and in such manner as may be determined by the Collector and specified in the order; and

(c) in other cases, to the transferee:

Provided that if such land is subject to a bona fide mortgage other than a usufructuary mortgage and such mortgage was executed after the transfer of such land referred to in sub-section (1), the Collector shall direct that such instalments shall first be paid to the mortgagee until the amount due under the mortgage as determined by the Collector is paid off and that thereafter any such instalments or part thereof still remaining due shall be paid in the manner provided in clause (a), clause (b) or clause (c) of this sub-section, as the case may be.

(3) Where an application made under sub-section (1) is accompanied by a statement verified in the manner prescribed that the proprietor, tenure-holder, raiyat or under-raiyat who made the transfer of the agricultural land by sale referred to in that sub-section could not have maintained himself or his family except by making such alienation of such land, the Collector shall for the purpose of clause (b) of that sub-section presume such statement to be correct until the contrary is proved.

(4) The amount ordered to be paid by instalments by a proprietor, tenure-holder, raiyat or under-raiyat under sub-section (1) shall be a charge on the agricultural land in respect of which an order under that sub-section is made.

(5) Where any agricultural land in respect of which an order under sub-section (1) is made is, after the date on which such order takes effect under sub-section (1) of section 5, sold in execution of a decree or of a certificate signed under the Bengal Public Demands Recovery Act, 1913, other than a certificate for the recovery of any amount payable under such order, the whole of the amount payable under the said order then remaining due shall notwithstanding anything contained in such order at once become due and payable."

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, may I make a submission?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Yes; what is your point?

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: I think you are going to put the amendment, clause by clause, just like 4(1), 4(2), 4(3).

Mr. PRESIDENT: No, no. This is one amendment and you cannot divide it.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, the difficulty is this—

Mr. PRESIDENT: If your suggestion is accepted, Mr. Das, I do not know what its effect will be on the other clauses. This is one comprehensive amendment which Government have introduced. Now, if we decide to divide it here and put it as different clauses and take the vote of the House on different clauses, then it may have its repercussion on the subsequent clauses of the Bill, and that will create serious difficulties.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: May I point out, Sir, that Government introduced the amendments and in doing so they took time and accepted most of our amendments and framed new amendments on the basis of our amendments and these new amendments have been placed before the House through their Whip. The result of all this has been that certain clauses have been put in, which were not to be found in the original Bill. Now, Sir, with regard to this amendment of clause 4, I say, that it is a new amendment and we cannot put in any amendment to this amendment; but we could do so if it were embodied in the draft Bill. If the clause is not put separately in parts, how are we to oppose a particular sub-clause of the main amendment? So far as new clause 4 is concerned, we agree to almost all the portions of it, from sub-clauses (1) to (4), excepting sub-clause (3). But with regard to certain other sub-clauses, I do not agree and I would like to point out where I do not agree. Can we oppose a portion of this clause unless you put the sub-sections of the clause separately? That is my difficulty. For example, I may say that I shall have to oppose sub-clause (3) of clause 4. It never found a place in the original Bill and I consider it to be contradictory and also illegal. And I would like to point out why it is contradictory and also why it should not be there. I hope, therefore, that you will kindly permit me to oppose sub-clause (3) and also agree to put it separately. I agree with the other parts of the clause. In what way can you put sub-clause (3) before the House unless you put it separately, Sir?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Let me have your concrete suggestion, Mr. Das. Which sub-clause you want to be put separately?

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sub-clause (3) of clause 4, in respect of which I would like to put in my views and oppose the sub-clause.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Your objection is confined to sub-clause (3) only? And your suggestion is that sub-clause (3) should be put separately?

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Yes, Sir.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Will that meet all your difficulty?

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Yes, Sir.

Mr. PRESIDENT: May I hear the Government's view on this point?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEE: Sir, the whole amendment relates to one clause. I, therefore, very much doubt if it can be taken in parts.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I realise after hearing Mr. Das that sub-clause (3) is a new sub-clause, for in that sub-clause the burden of proof has been shifted from the vendor to the vendee. So, what is the objection to the sub-clause being put to vote separately?

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: I do not think there may be any objection. For convenience of decision, the amendment can be broken into parts.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Very well. Mr. Das, will you speak now?

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: No, Sir, not now. When sub-clause (3) of clause 4 will be under discussion.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: Sir, I want to speak on the amendment.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Yes, you may speak on the entire amendment though I shall put sub-clause (3) separately.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: All right, Sir. In rising to speak on the amendment I would like to point out one or two inconsistencies which I think should be mentioned for the consideration of members of the House. Take, for instance, the proviso to sub-clause (2) which runs thus:—

“Provided that if such land is subject to a bona fide mortgage other than a usufructuary mortgage and such mortgage was executed after the transfer of such land referred to in sub-section (1)—the transfer referred to in sub-section (1) is between a proprietor, tenure-holder, raiyyat and under-raiyyat and so forth,—the Collector shall direct that such instalments shall first be paid to the mortgagee until the amount due under the mortgage as determined by the Collector is paid off and that thereafter any such instalments or part thereof still remaining due shall be paid in the manner provided in clause (a), clause (b) or clause (c) as the case may be."

Sir, what is the meaning here which the mover intends to imply by saying that if such land is subject to bona fide mortgage other than a usufructuary mortgage and such mortgage was executed after the transfer of such land referred to in sub-section (1)? The transfer may be by the transferee or transferor. It must be made clear in the draft. (Mr. PRESIDENT: Evidently, it is by the transferee.) That point, Sir, should be made clear.

Then again, why should the usufructuary mortgagee be left out, as he would be deprived of possession? That point has not been made clear in the amendment. I may also point out some other drafting difficulty which may hereafter arise if the clause is passed as it is. There is another clause—take for instance, clause 4(1) which says ".....if such land is in the possession of any person other than the transferee, such other person should have an opportunity of being heard, before an order in writing restoring such land to such proprietor, tenure-holder, raiyat or under-raiyat, as the case may be, etc." Here again there is some loophole and it has not been made clear how it should go out of the possession of the person other than the transferee. How it is to be given to a person other than the transferee—what sort of protection is to be given here? That loophole is kept here and the clause has been made complicated by the addition of various hypothetical cases which may or may not arise. The original section of the Bill has been changed lock, stock and barrel and a new section, a very cumbrous one, has been sought to be introduced which makes the provisions rather hard for application so far as the real tenant is concerned.

With regard to sub-clause (3) which is being objected to by Mr. Lalit Chandra Das, my observations would be that the provision that the onus is discharged by a verification of the transferor simplifies his task. Because, after all, we want to give relief. The presumption ought to be made in favour of the vendor that he was unable to maintain himself and his family without the transfer.

So, practically there would be no objection if the drafting is improved.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House—

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, I want to speak on this amendment.

Mr. PRESIDENT: But you should have spoken earlier. The whole amendment was before the House. However, you may speak now.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, I desire to draw the attention of the House, through you, to clause 4(1)(b). In that clause, it is clearly stated that "he satisfies the Collector that he could not have maintained himself or his family except by making such alienation of such land, the Collector shall, after giving the transferee and if such land is in the possession of any person other than the transferee, such other person also an opportunity of being heard, make an order in writing". The petitioner will have to satisfy the Collector and the Collector shall give a hearing to the transferee or such other person who is in possession of the land. Sir, the mover of this amendment has taken it almost bodily from the Bill itself as originally presented. In the Bill you will find in 4(b) "he satisfies the Collector that he could not have maintained himself or his family except by making such alienation of his holding....." and then in the proviso ".....if the holding is in possession of a person other than the transferee, to such person also." Here the mover has taken it from the Bill itself that the transferor will have to satisfy the Collector that he could not maintain himself except by the alienation of his holding and the Collector is to give a hearing to the transferee and if the holding is in possession of a person other than the transferee, to such person also. So, the mover wants that this should be a portion of the law itself.

Sub-clause (3) takes away the whole thing which was sought to be given in 4(b), for he no longer needs to satisfy the Collector. Because, the Collector, as soon as he puts his signature on the verification in the application, will presume such statement to be correct until the contrary is proved. Sir, sub-clause (3) runs as follows:—

"Where an application made under sub-section (1) is accompanied by a statement verified in the manner prescribed that the proprietor, tenureholder, raiyat or under-raiyat who made the transfer of the agricultural land by sale referred to in that sub-section could not have maintained himself or his family except by making such alienation of such land, the Collector shall for the purpose of clause (b) of that sub-section presume such statement to be correct until the contrary is proved." Here, Sir, according to clause 4(b), the onus is upon the transferor himself, namely, "he satisfies the Collector that he could not have maintained himself or his family except by making such alienation of such land", and then, Sir, the Collector is also to make enquiry by taking such evidence from the transferor as he thinks necessary. The clause 4(b) puts the onus upon the transferor but sub-clause (3) of clause 4 takes away that onus and says "the Collector shall for the purpose of clause (b) of that sub-section presume such statement to be correct until the contrary is proved." This is self-contradictory. Therefore, Sir, if clause 4(b) stands, clause 4(3) should not stand. Clause 4(3) is self-contradictory and illegal.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN:

Sir, my honourable friend has said that it is contradictory, but I say that it is certainly not contradictory, and the onus is not entirely shifted. The onus is discharged as soon as the transferor puts in a verified statement. Then the onus shifts to some other person to prove that the verified statement is incorrect. So there is no contradiction at all. This provision has been made only to help the poor tenants for whom we are going to legislate, because if these poor people are to come with witnesses in every case to prove that they had sold their lands for the purpose of maintaining their families—and as we know the caprices of our officers, poor people will be done for and it will be almost impossible for them to prove to the satisfaction of various temperaments ever by attending with witnesses from day to day. Therefore, it has been provided that when a transferor puts in a verified statement to the effect that he sold his land for the purpose of maintenance of his family, his onus will be considered to be discharged and if the purchaser contends that that verified statement is not correct, then it will be his onus to prove that it is incorrect. I think such an objection should not have come from a man like Mr. Das who is supposed to be the champion of the masses and the agriculturists.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order, order. Before I put the question to vote, I will break it up into three parts. I will first put 4(1) and (2) and then 4(3) alone and finally 4(4) and (5) together.

Sub-clauses (1) and (2) of clause 4 were put and agreed to.

Sub-clause (3) of clause 4 was put and agreed to.

Sub-clauses (4) and (5) of clause 4 were put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Sir, may I point out that there are a few printing mistakes in sub-clause (4) of clause 4 in the last line and in the penultimate line? They have, however, been corrected.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Then it is all right. But office can correct them, if they are mere printing mistakes.

I will now put clause 4 to vote.

The question that clause 4, as amended, stand part of the Bill was put and agreed to.

Clause 5.

Mr. MESBAHUDDIN AHMED: I beg to move that for clause 5 of the Bill, the following clause be substituted, namely:—

“5. Effect of order for restoration of lands.—(1) When the Collector makes an order under sub-section (1) of section 4 restoring any agricultural land to a proprietor, tenure-holder, raiyat or under-raiyat, such order shall have effect on the 1st day of Baisakh next following the date of the order.”

(2) From the date on which an order under sub-section (1) of section 4 takes effect under sub-section (1) of this section, the right, title and interest in the agricultural land accruing to the transferee as a result of the transfer referred to in sub-section (1) of section 4 shall, subject to the provisions of sub-section (4) of that section, be deemed to have vested in the proprietor, tenure-holder, raiyat or under-raiyat, as the case may be, free from all encumbrances, if any, which have been created after the date of such transfer.

(3) If on or before the date on which an order under sub-section (1) of section 4 takes effect under sub-section (1) of this section, the person in possession of the agricultural land as a result of the transfer referred to in sub-section (1) of section 4 has not yielded possession of such land to the proprietor, tenure-holder, raiyat or under-raiyat, as the case may be, the Collector may of his own motion, and shall on the application of such proprietor, tenure-holder, raiyat or under-raiyat, eject such person and place such proprietor, tenure-holder, raiyat or under-raiyat, as the case may be, in possession of such land”.

It is a consequential amendment, Sir, and so no comment is necessary.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Amendment moved: that for clause 5 of the Bill, the following clause be substituted, namely:—

“5. Effect of order for restoration of lands.—(1) When the Collector makes an order under sub-section (1) of section 4 restoring any agricultural land to a proprietor, tenure-holder, raiyat or under-raiyat, such order shall have effect on the 1st day of Baisakh next following the date of the order.

(2) From the date on which an order under sub-section (1) of section 4 takes effect under sub-section (1) of this section, the right, title and interest in the agricultural land accruing to the transferee as a result of the transfer referred to in sub-section (1) of section 4 shall, subject to the provisions of sub-section (4) of that section, be deemed to have vested in the proprietor, tenure-holder, raiyat or under-raiyat, as the case may be, free from all encumbrances, if any, which have been created after the date of such transfer.

(3) If on or before the date on which an order under sub-section (1) of section 4 takes effect under sub-section (1) of this section, the person in possession of the agricultural land as a result of the transfer referred to in sub-section (1) of section 4 has not yielded possession of such land to the proprietor, tenure-holder, raiyat or under-raiyat, as the case may be, the Collector may of his own motion, and shall on the application of such proprietor, tenure-holder, raiyat, or under-raiyat, eject such person and place such proprietor, tenure-holder, raiyat or under-raiyat, as the case may be, in possession of such land”.

Mr. T. B. NIMMO: Sir, there is just one point in this clause to which I would like to call the attention of Government and ask for clarification and that is in respect of clause 5(2). I would like to get the meaning of the words “free from all encumbrances, if any, which have been created after the date of such transfer”. The point is that rent is a first charge on the holding and might, therefore, be regarded as an encumbrance. At the date of restoration, there may be arrears of rent outstanding for the period it was in the possession of the transferee and this might conceivably be regarded as an encumbrance created after the transfer. I would like to ask the Hon’ble Minister through you, Sir, if he can state categorically that the words “free from all encumbrances” do not include liability for arrears of rent.

The Hon’ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Rent is certainly not an encumbrance. It is a liability but not an encumbrance. Rent will be payable by the person interested and it is the first charge.

Mr. PRESIDENT: If amendment No. 68B is carried, then amendments from 65 to 84 will not arise.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: What about amendments 37 to 68?

Mr. PRESIDENT: They do not arise. Order, order.

The question before the House is: that for clause 5 of the Bill, the following clause be substituted, namely:—

“5. Effect of order for restoration of lands.—(1) When the Collector makes an order under sub-section (1) of section 4 restoring any agricultural land to a proprietor, tenure-holder, raiyat or under-raiyat, such order shall have effect on the 1st day of Baisakh next following the date of the order.

(2) From the date on which an order under sub-section (1) of section 4 takes effect under sub-section (1) of this section, the right, title and interest in the agricultural land accruing to the transferee as a result of the transfer referred to in sub-section (1) of section 4 shall, subject to the provisions of sub-section (4) of that section, be deemed to have vested in the proprietor, tenure-holder, raiyat or under-raiyat, as the case may be, free from all encumbrances, if any, which have been created after the date of such transfer.

(3) If on or before the date on which an order under sub-section (1) of section 4 takes effect under sub-section (1) of this section, the person in possession of the agricultural land as a result of the transfer referred to in sub-section (1) of section 4 has not yielded possession of such land to the proprietor, tenure-holder, raiyat or under-raiyat, as the case may be, the Collector may of his own motion, and shall on the application of such proprietor, tenure-holder, raiyat, or under-raiyat, eject such persons and place such proprietor, tenure-holder, raiyat or under-raiyat, as the case may be, in possession of such land”.

(The amendment was agreed to.)

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that clause 5, as amended, stand part of the Bill.

(The motion was agreed to.)

Clause 6.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Clause 6 stand part of the Bill.

Mr. MESBAHUDDIN AHMED: I beg to move: that for clause 6 of the Bill, the following clause be substituted, namely:—

“6. Recovery of sums due under an order under section 4 as a public demand.—Any sum payable under an order under section 4 shall be recoverable as a public demand:

Provided that the Certificate Officer shall not order the execution of a certificate signed under the Bengal Public Demands Recovery Act, 1913, for the recovery of any amount due under an order made under sub-section (1) of section 4 by the sale of the agricultural land in respect of which the order under that sub-section has been made unless he is satisfied that all the instalments payable under the said order have already become due”.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Amendment moved: that for clause 6 of the Bill, the following clause be substituted, namely:—

“6. Recovery of sums due under an order under section 4 as a public demand.—Any sum payable under an order made under section 4 shall be recoverable as a public demand:

Provided that the Certificate Officer shall not order the execution of a certificate signed under the Bengal Public Demands Recovery Act, 1913, for the recovery of any amount due under an order made under sub-section (1) of section 4 by the sale of the agricultural land in respect of which the order under that sub-section has been made unless he is satisfied that all the instalments payable under the said order have already become due”.

[The above amendment of Mr. Mesbahuddin Ahmed (No. 84A) was agreed to by the House.]

Clause 6A.

Mr. MESBAHUDDIN AHMED: Sir, I beg to move: that after clause 6 of the Bill, the following new clause be inserted, namely:—

“6A. Prohibition of alienation until sums due under an order under section 4 are paid.—A proprietor, tenure-holder, raiyat or under-raiyat to whom any agricultural land has been restored by an order under sub-section (1) of section 4 shall not as long as there remains unpaid any sum payable by such proprietor, tenure-holder, raiyat or under-raiyat, as the case may be, under the order made under that sub-section, alienate by sale, lease, gift or other form of transfer or create any charge upon such land or any portion thereof and, notwithstanding anything contained in any other law for the time being in force, any alienation or charge so made shall be void and of no effect."

Mr. PRESIDENT: Amendment moved: that after clause 6 of the Bill, the following new clause be inserted, namely:—

"6A. Prohibition of alienation until sums due under an order under section 4 are paid.—A proprietor, tenure-holder, raiyat or under-raiyat to whom any agricultural land has been restored by an order under sub-section (1) of section 4 shall not as long as there remains unpaid any sum payable by such proprietor, tenure-holder, raiyat or under-raiyat, as the case may be, under the order made under that sub-section, alienate by sale, lease, gift or other form of transfer or create any charge upon such land or any portion thereof and, notwithstanding anything contained in any other law for the time being in force, any alienation or charge so made shall be void and of no effect.

(The amendment was agreed to.)

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that clause 6A stand part of the Bill.

(The motion was agreed to.)

Clause 7.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Clause 7 stand part of the Bill.

Mr. MESBAHUDDIN AHMED: Sir, I beg to move: that for clause 7 of the Bill, the following clause be substituted, namely:—

"7. Optional conversion of transfer by sale of land into complete usufructuary mortgage.—(1) A proprietor, tenure-holder, raiyat or under-raiyat who is entitled to apply for the restoration of any agricultural land under sub-section (1) of section 4 may, instead of applying for such restoration under that sub-section apply at his option for the conversion of the transfer by sale of such land into a complete usufructuary mortgage and in such case if the proprietor, tenure-holder, raiyat or under-raiyat otherwise complies with the provisions of clauses (a) and (b) of the said sub-section, the Collector shall first determine the amount which would have been payable by such proprietor, tenure-holder, raiyat or under-raiyat, as the case may be, under the said sub-section if an order under that sub-section for the restoration of such land had been made and, then make an order in writing converting the said transfer by sale into a complete usufructuary mortgage with—

(a) in the case of alienation by any of the means referred to in clause (a) of sub-section (2) of section 4, the person in possession of such land as a result of such alienation as the mortgagee, and

(b) in all other cases, the transferee as the mortgagee, for a period of ten years or such shorter period as in the circumstances of the particular case is in the opinion of the Collector justified, and the amount so determined by the Collector shall be deemed to be the mortgage debt for the payment of which such mortgage is created.

(2) When the Collector makes an order under sub-section (1) converting a transfer by sale into a complete usufructuary mortgage for a period specified by him, the right, title and interest in the agricultural land accruing to the transferee as a result of the transfer shall, with effect from the date of such order, be deemed to have vested in such proprietor, tenure-holder, raiyat or under-raiyat, as the case may be, subject to such complete usufructuary mortgage and free from all other encumbrances, if any, created after the date of the transfer and the liability for the payment of any amount referred to in sub-section (1) shall be deemed to be extinguished on the expiry of the said period.

(3) When the Collector makes an order under sub-section (1) converting a transfer by sale into a complete usufructuary mortgage for a period specified by him, such complete usufructuary mortgage may notwithstanding anything contained in sub-section (2) be redeemed at any time before the expiry of such period.

(4) On the expiry of the period of the mortgage or on the redemption of the mortgage before the expiry of such period under sub-section (3), if the mortgagee does not yield possession of the mortgaged land to the proprietor, tenure-holder, raiyat or under-raiyat, as the case may be, the Collector may of his own motion, and shall on the application of such proprietor, tenure-holder, raiyat or under-raiyat, eject the mortgagee and place, such proprietor, tenure-holder, raiyat or under-raiyat, as the case may be, in possession of such land."

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order, order. The amendment moved by Mr. Mesbahuddin Ahmed is now under discussion.

I shall put clause 6 to vote first and then clause 7.

The question before the House is: that clause 6, as amended, stand part of the Bill.

(The motion was agreed to.)

The amendment of Mr. Mesbahuddin Ahmed to clause 7 was put and agreed to.

The question that clause 7, as amended, stand part of the Bill was then put and agreed to.

New clause 7A.

Mr. MESBAHUDDIN: Sir, I beg to move: that after clause 7 of the Bill, the following new clause be inserted, namely:—

"7A. Notice of restoration of land or of the conversion of the transfer by sale of land into a complete usufructuary mortgage on the landlord.—Before making an order under sub-section (1) of section 4 restoring any agricultural land to a tenure-holder, raiyat or under-raiyat or an order under sub-section (1) of section 7 converting a transfer by sale of any agricultural land of a tenure-holder, raiyat or under-raiyat into a complete usufructuary mortgage the Collector shall require such tenure-holder, raiyat or under-raiyat to deposit such fee as may be prescribed for the service of a notice of such order in the prescribed form in the case, where such order relates to any agricultural land of a tenure-holder on the landlord of the tenure in which such land is comprised and, in the case where such order relates to any agricultural land of a raiyat or under-raiyat, on the landlord under whom such land is held, and the Collector shall as soon as may be after such order is made cause such notice to be served on such landlord in the prescribed manner, and on receipt of such notice the landlord shall cause his rent-roll to be corrected accordingly”.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Amendment moved: that after clause 7 of the Bill, the following new clause be inserted, namely:—

“7A. Notice of restoration of land or of the conversion of the transfer by sale of land into a complete usufructuary mortgage on the landlord.—Before making an order under sub-section (I) of section 4 restoring any agricultural land to a tenure-holder, raiyat or under-raiyat or an order under sub-section (I) of section 7 converting a transfer by sale of any agricultural land of a tenure-holder, raiyat or under-raiyat into a complete usufructuary mortgage the Collector shall require such tenure-holder, raiyat or under-raiyat to deposit such fee as may be prescribed for the service of notice of such order in the prescribed form in the case, where such order relates to any agricultural land of a tenure-holder on the landlord of the tenure in which such land is comprised and, in the case where such order relates to any agricultural land of a raiyat or under-raiyat, on the landlord under whom such land is held, and the Collector shall as soon as may be after such order is made cause such notice to be served on such landlord in the prescribed manner, and on receipt of such notice the landlord shall cause his rent-roll to be corrected accordingly”.

(The amendment was agreed to.)

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House: is that clause 7A stand part of the Bill.

(The motion was agreed to.)

Clause 8.

Mr. MESBAHUDDIN AHMAD: I beg to move: that for clause 8 of the Bill, the following clause be substituted, namely:—

“8. Bar of jurisdiction of High Court and Civil Courts.—Neither the High Court nor any Civil Court shall have jurisdiction in any matter which the Collector is empowered to dispose of under this Act:

Provided that any person who is dissatisfied with any order of the Collector made under section 4 or sub-section (I) of section 7 may within thirty days from the date of such order apply in the prescribed manner to the District Judge for the revision of such order and the decision of the District Judge thereon shall be final”.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Amendment moved: that for clause 8 of the Bill, the following clause be substituted, namely:—

“8. Bar of jurisdiction of High Court and Civil Courts.—Neither the High Court nor any Civil Court shall have jurisdiction in any matter which the Collector is empowered to dispose of under this Act:

Provided that any person who is dissatisfied with any order of the Collector made under section 4 or sub-section (I) of section 7 may within thirty days from the date of such order apply in the prescribed manner to the District Judge for the revision of such order and the decision of the District Judge shall be final”.

(The amendment was agreed to.)

The question that clause 8, as amended, stand part of the Bill was then put and agreed to.

Clause 9.

Mr. MESBAHUDDIN AHMED: I beg to move: that for clause 9 of the Bill, the following clause be substituted, namely:—

“9. Power to make rules.—(1) The Provincial Government may make rules for carrying out the purposes of this Act.

(2) In particular and without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing power, such rules may provide for all or any of the following matters, namely:—

- (a) the manner in which a proprietor, tenure-holder, raiyyat or under-raiyyat is to apply to the Collector under clause (a) of sub-section (1) of section 4;
- (b) the manner in which the Collector is to determine the amount of any compensation allowed under sub-section (1) of section 4;
- (c) the manner in which the net income referred to in sub-section (1) of section 4 is to be determined;
- (d) the manner in which the verification of the statement referred to in sub-section (3) of section 4 is to be made;
- (e) the fee to be deposited for the service of the notice referred to in section 7A and the form and the manner of service of such notice; and
- (f) the manner of application for revision under the proviso to section 8.”

Mr. PRESIDENT: Amendment moved: that for clause 9 of the Bill, the following clause be substituted, namely:—

“9. Power to make rules.—(1) The Provincial Government may make rules for carrying out the purposes of this Act.

(2) In particular and without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing power, such rules may provide for all or any of the following matters, namely:—

- (a) the manner in which a proprietor, tenure-holder, raiyyat or under-raiyyat is to apply to the Collector under clause (a) of sub-section (1) of section 4;
- (b) the manner in which the Collector is to determine the amount of any compensation allowed under sub-section (1) of section 4;
- (c) the manner in which the net income referred to in sub-section (1) of section 4 is to be determined;
- (d) the manner in which the verification of the statement referred to in sub-section (3) of section 4 is to be made;
- (e) the fee to be deposited for the service of the notice referred to in section 7A and the form and the manner of service of such notice; and
- (f) the manner of application for revision under the proviso to section 8.”

(The amendment was agreed to.)

The question that clause 9, as amended, stand part of the Bill was then put and agreed to.

Clause 10.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Clause 10 stand part of the Bill.

Mr. MESBAHUDDIN AHMED: I beg to move: that clause 10 of the Bill be omitted.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Amendment moved: that clause 10 be omitted.

The question before the House is: that clause 10 of the Bill be omitted.
(The motion was agreed to.)

Preamble and Long Title.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Preamble and long title be added to the Bill.

Mr. MESBAHUDDIN AHMED: I beg to move: that in the long title of and the preamble to the Bill, for the words "raiyats and under-raiyats of agricultural land", the words "proprietors, tenure-holders, raiyats and under-raiyats of certain agricultural lands" be substituted.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Amendment moved: that in the long title of and the preamble to the Bill, for the words "raiyats and under-raiyats of agricultural land", the words "proprietors, tenure-holders, raiyats and under-raiyats of certain agricultural lands" be substituted.

The question before the House is: that in the long title of and the preamble to the Bill, for the words "raiyats and under-raiyats of agricultural land", the words "proprietors, tenure-holders, raiyats and under-raiyats of certain agricultural lands" be substituted.

(The amendment was agreed to.)

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that the preamble and the long title, as amended, stand part of the Bill.

(The motion was agreed to.)

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Sir, since it is a non-controversial Bill, and since its clauses have been unanimously accepted by the House, may I have your permission to move that the Bill, as settled in the Council, be passed.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that the Bill, as settled in the Council, be passed.

(The motion was agreed to.)

Mr. PRESIDENT: Now we shall pass on to the next item of the business, namely, the Bengal Diseases of Animals Bill, 1944.

The Bengal Diseases of Animals Bill, 1944.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: I beg to move that the Bengal Diseases of Animals Bill, 1944, be taken into consideration.

Sir, this is a non-controversial Bill. It is meant to guard against epidemic diseases of the cattle and other animals. So I think there will be no controversy over its provisions. But there may be suggestions for providing changes here and there which we might consider if the Bill is sent to a Select Committee. I am prepared to accept the amendment of Mr. Nur Ahmed to send the Bill to a Select Committee for a month.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Sir, I gave notice of an amendment for the circulation of the Bill and my second amendment was to refer the Bill to a Select Committee. The Hon'ble Minister—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Rai Bahadur, you should speak from your own seat. Otherwise, I cannot hear you.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: But, Sir, this is a self-allotted seat.

Sir, what I was going to say is this. My first amendment is for circulation of the Bill for eliciting public opinion thereon and my second one is for reference of the Bill to a Select Committee. I now find that the Hon'ble Minister has taken up the other amendment of Mr. Nur Ahmed ignoring my first and second amendments. So I want to know from the Hon'ble Minister what objection can there be to my moving the motion for reference of the Bill to the Select Committee. I do not move my first amendment.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that the Bengal Diseases of Animals Bill, 1944, be taken into consideration.

(The motion was agreed to.)

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Sir, I beg to move that—

Mr. NUR AHMED: On a point of order, Sir. I submit that this motion is not in order. The full quota of members from the Coalition Party has not been represented on the Select Committee. It should be at least 6 but he has included only 4.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I understand according to the quota to which the Coalition Party is entitled, excluding the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Bill if he is a member of this House, is 5 whereas the number of members proposed to be put on the Select Committee from the party is only 3. Therefore, the amendment of Rai Bahadur Keshab Chandra Banerjee is not in order.

Mr. NUR AHMED: Sir, I beg to move—

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: On a point of order, Sir. I think there is not the requisite number of members from different parties on the Select Committee proposed by Mr. Nur Ahmed.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I think, it is quite in order.

Mr. NUR AHMED: Sir, I beg to move: that the Bengal Diseases of Animals Bill, 1944, be referred to a Select Committee consisting of—

- (1) the Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Saiyed Muazzamuddin Hosain, Minister in charge of the Agriculture Department,
- (2) Mr. W. B. G. Laidlaw,
- (3) Mr. Shrish Chandra Chakraverti,
- (4) Mr. Lalit Chandra Das,
- (5) Mr. Haridas Mazumdar,
- (6) Mr. Khorshed Alam Chowdhury,
- (7) Mr. Sultanuddin Ahmed,
- (8) Mr. Moazzemali Chowdhury,

- (9) Khan Bahadur Abdul Momin,
- (10) Mr. Biren Roy, and
- (11) the mover,

with instructions to submit their report within a month from the date of reference and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a quorum shall be five.

Sir, as regards the principle of the Bill, there is no difference of opinion. Only I find there is some drafting mistake and that some addition should be made in the Bill. So I move this motion for reference of the Bill to a Select Committee so that the honourable members may get an opportunity of looking into the provisions of this Bill and also to make some additions if they think necessary.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Amendment moved: that the Bill be referred to a Select Committee consisting of—

- (1) the Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Saiyed Muazzamuddin Hosain, Minister in charge of the Agriculture Department,
- (2) Mr. W. B. G. Laidlaw,
- (3) Mr. Shrish Chandra Chakraverti,
- (4) Mr. Lalit Chandra Das,
- (5) Mr. Haridas Mazumdar,
- (6) Mr. Khorshed Alam Chowdhury,
- (7) Mr. Sultanuddin Ahmed,
- (8) Mr. Moazzemali Chowdhury,
- (9) Khan Bahadur Abdul Momin,
- (10) Mr. Biren Roy, and
- (11) the mover,

with instructions to submit their report within a month from the date of reference and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a quorum shall be five.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Sir, I rise to support the amendment moved by Mr. Nur Ahmed. I have gone very carefully through the provisions of the Bill, and have noticed certain glaring omissions. I think there is much scope for improvement of the Bill. Some of the powers sought to be given to the Veterinary Assistants will, I am afraid, operate harshly against the poor. If the Veterinary Assistants is an overzealous or dishonest officer, he can abuse his powers and harass the public. So far as I can see, the Bill drafted by the Hon'ble Minister is defective in some respects; there are also drafting mistakes. Therefore, necessary improvements could be made if the Bill were referred to a Select Committee. Certain powers which should not be exercised by the Veterinary Assistants have been vested in them, whereas these powers should legitimately be exercised by the Subdivisional Officers or other higher officers of the Veterinary Department of the Government.

With these words, Sir, I support the motion.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Sir, on behalf of Government I may say that the Government have no objection to the Bill being referred to a Select Committee.

(The motion for referring the Bill to a Select Committee was agreed to.)

Mr. PRESIDENT: The next item of business is the Bengal Embankment (Amendment) Bill, 1944. But as we have not yet received previous sanction of the Governor, it cannot be taken up.

The House stands adjourned till 2-15 p.m. tomorrow.

Adjournment.

The Council then adjourned till 2-15 p.m. on Friday, the 24th March, 1944.

Members absent.

The following members were absent from the meeting held on the 23rd March, 1944 :—

- (1) Khan Bahadur Naziruddin Ahmad.
- (2) Mr. Humayun Reza Chowdhury.
- (3) Mr. N. C. Datta.
- (4) Khan Bahadur Abdul Gofran.
- (5) Maulana Muhammad Akram Khan.
- (6) Mr. R. S. Purssell.
- (7) Khan Bahadur Kazi Abdur Rashid.
- (8) Mr. S. N. Sanyal.

BENGAL LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL DEBATES

First Session, 1944—No. 29.

THE COUNCIL met in the Legislative Chamber of the Legislative Building, Calcutta, on Friday, the 24th March, 1944, at 2-15 p.m., being the twenty-ninth day of the First Session of 1944, pursuant to section 62(2)(a) of the Government of India Act, 1935.

Mr. President (the Hon'ble Sir BIJOY PRASAD SINGH ROY, K.C.I.E.), was in the Chair.

Long adjournment of the House.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Sir, before you take up the business of the House for the day, may I submit that the business of the House will be at an end today because we have no further business at present and that the House may on that account be adjourned till the 17th of April?

Mr. PRESIDENT: I understand after we have finished today's business there will be no business for this House till the 17th of April. Of course, this will be announced in due course by the Chair at the end of today's sitting.

There are no questions today.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: On a matter of information, Sir. May I refer to the statement circulated among the members regarding the number of outstanding questions, I mean questions which still remain unanswered by Government and the total number of which comes to 142? They are lying unanswered since the year 1941. For the year 1941 there is one question; for 1942 two questions; for 1943 75 and for the year 1944 sixty-four questions up to now, which total together 142. As many as 142 questions are, therefore, lying unanswered. And on the top of all this it appears that we have for today no questions to be replied to by Government.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Sir, in accordance with the assurance I gave the Chair a few days ago, I have communicated to my honourable colleagues the fact that the House wants that answers to these long outstanding questions should be expedited.

Mr. PRESIDENT: It is highly desirable that you should realise, Khan Bahadur Sahib, that answers to these questions should be expedited as much as possible.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: I quite realise that, Sir, and I have no doubt that my colleagues concerned will expedite the answers.

Mr. PRESIDENT: There is going to be a recess of three weeks and I hope that in the meantime all the answers will be made ready.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: I will convey your observation to my colleagues, Sir.

Resignation from Select Committee.

Mr. W. B. G. LAIDLAW: I am sorry to put you to this trouble, Sir, but I would like to resign from the Select Committee on the Diseases of Animals Bill and if I may humbly suggest Mr. T. B. Nimmo's name in my place, I would like to do so.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I think that it is the practice in the House of Commons that any member may be allowed by the Standing Committee to resign from a Select Committee which has not yet started its work. So, there is no objection to your resigning from the Select Committee and under rule 123 of the Procedure Rules of this House I appoint Mr. Nimmo in your place on that Select Committee.

The Bengal Embankment (Amendment) Bill, 1944.

The Hon'ble Mr. BARADA PRASANNA PAIN: Sir, I beg leave to introduce the Bengal Embankment (Amendment) Bill, 1944. It is very short Bill.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that the Hon'ble Mr. B. P. Pain be given leave to introduce—but has not the Bill been already published in the official gazette?

The Hon'ble Mr. BARADA PRASANNA PAIN: Yes, Sir, that is so.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Then no leave is necessary. You simply introduce the Bill.

The Hon'ble Mr. BARADA PRASANNA PAIN: That is what I am doing, Sir.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The Bill is introduced.

Amendment to rule 9 of the Bengal Legislative Council Procedure Rules.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: I beg to move that the following draft amendment to rule 9 of the Bengal Legislative Council Procedure Rules, be referred to a Committee under rule 110(3) of these rules, viz., "that if any member is unacquainted or not sufficiently acquainted with the English language he may speak in any other language."

Mr. PRESIDENT: Motion moved: that the following draft amendment to rule 9 of the Bengal Legislative Council Procedure Rules, be referred to a Committee under rule 110(3) of those rules, viz., "that if any member is unacquainted or not sufficiently acquainted with the English language he may speak in any other language."

Mr. W. B. G. LAIDLAW: Mr. President, Sir, I rise to oppose the motion for amendment of rule 9 of the Legislative Council Procedure Rules. I would point out that rule 9 in its present form has worked satisfactorily for a period of seven years. It was made by and with the approval of the members of this House. I would suggest that those rules of conduct, which by usage have proved to be satisfactory, are the most valuable and that changes should not be made without very careful consideration.

The requirement of section 85 of the Government of India Act, 1935, is that there shall be provision to enable persons not sufficiently acquainted with the English language to use another language and this House in adopting rule 9 decided that the requirement of the Government of India Act in this matter could be carried out with the greatest degree of satisfaction to all of the members by giving the Chair discretion to allow a member to speak in a language other than the official language. The proposal now before us is to deprive the Chair of that discretion thus leaving it in the hands of a member to speak in any language he chooses. It would be open to a member to say that on a particular question he is not sufficiently acquainted with the English language to express himself on that question in the official language.

I want to emphasise the importance of maintaining an official language in speech and writing. Specially in India, any relaxation or abuse of the idea of an official language will tend to lead to the kind of conditions which supervened at the construction of the Tower of Babel. In other countries the importance of the language question is such that it finds its place in the Constitution and there are places such as Canada where there are more than one official languages. In Canada there are two—English and French, and all speeches and records are maintained in both languages. In South Africa English and Dutch are the official languages but in South-West Africa there is or was special provision for the use of German. In New Zealand where the official language is English, the Maori members of the Legislature are allowed to speak in Maori. In all these cases the official language is clearly defined and any departure therefrom is only conceded under strictly controllable rules.

It may seem a simple matter to the mover to relax the rule in the case of this House where members are likely to resort to one of, say, three languages; but I suggest to you that in this matter we must not be merely parochial. We have got to consider what would happen if all of the Provincial Legislatures adopted the course envisaged. In course of time the official language would fall into disuse and gradually the language commonest in each province would become the language of the Legislature. What happens in the Legislature and in the courts inevitably has its repercussions outside and if the different provinces started to use different languages in their official affairs it would be a bad day for those who are striving towards the unification of all-India or at any rate a great part of India under a Federal Government or Governments. With diversification of language would come disruption. At the Centre it would be quite impossible to recognise more than one official language and I suggest that our future representatives in the Federal Legislature should now begin by disciplining themselves to the idea of a Lingua Franca for all-India, perhaps one day for all countries in the world. I believe that to relax that discipline now in the manner proposed would be a retrograde step.

One further point the House must bear in mind: all that I have said has equal application: no matter what language might ultimately be chosen for all-India. I am not speaking on this subject merely because English happens to be my own language. The House has to decide that whatever be the all-India official language, members of all the Legislatures should be encouraged to try to use that language and only as a matter of courtesy should a departure therefrom be consented to by the Chair.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Mr. President, Sir, I would like to support the motion of Mr. Haridas Mazumdar. He wants to refer this matter to a Select Committee to consider whether rule 9 of the Bengal Legislative Council Procedure Rules should be amended or not. Under rule 9 the discretionary power rests with the Hon'ble the President. The President will have to decide whether a member is sufficiently acquainted with the English language to carry on the debate in this House. Now, Sir, that rule has been sought to be modified in order that the members may choose their own language to deliver speeches in this House. This is, after all, a Provincial Legislature where the members are predominantly Bengalees. The President may think that certain members are sufficiently acquainted with the English language but it is for the members themselves to consider whether they would be able to express themselves fully and would feel more at home with the English language or with any other language. Some members might feel more at home to speak in their own mother tongue. It is something unnatural that in our own Legislature where we sit we would be debarred by the operation of a certain rule or section of the Government of India Act to speak in our own tongue. In fact, this rule is being relaxed in the other House, so much so that the members themselves choose their own line of action, whether they would speak in their own mother tongue or in English. Here I think the fear of the Tower of Babel will not arise; it would only mean that our English friends will feel some difficulty in understanding some of the speeches. Similarly, it may be said that when our English friends start speaking in this House, a large number of members find difficulty in following them. Sir, taking the situation as it is, namely, that it is a Provincial Legislature where members are predominantly Bengalees, it will be only fair and legitimate that they should have this liberty of speaking in their own mother tongue without any fetter being put upon their choice by the President.

Under these circumstances, it is a very reasonable proposition that this matter should be considered by a Select Committee of this House and when their report will be presented, it will be for this House to decide whether this rule would require modification or not.

With these few words, I support the motion of Mr. Haridas Mazumdar.

Mr. KAMINI KUMAR DUTTA: Sir, I rise to support the motion of my friend, Mr. Mazumdar. I think that the amendment proposed is more in consonance with the Statute than the existing rule. The amendment rather cures a defect in the rule as it exists. Section 85 of the Government of India Act, 1935, provides, first of all, that all proceedings in the Legislature of a province shall be conducted in the English language. Then, there is a proviso attached to it which says that the rules of procedure of the Chamber or Chambers and the rules, if any, with respect to a joint sitting, shall provide for enabling persons unacquainted or not sufficiently acquainted with the English language to use another language. So, the object of the Statute was to give the right to the member to speak in a language with which he is acquainted. But rule 9 of the Bengal Legislative Council Procedure Rules makes the exercise of this right of a member subject to the discretion of the Chair by adding that the President may permit him to speak in any other language. Of course, as a matter of practice and convention in this House the President has always permitted members not sufficiently acquainted with the English language to speak in Bengali and in Hindi also. But in case the President refuses permission, which, of course, we do not apprehend, a difficulty may arise. Therefore, we should make the rule consistent with the provisions of section 85 of the Government of India Act, 1935, by making the right to speak in a language which is known to the member, when he is unacquainted with the English language or not sufficiently acquainted with the English language, an untrammelled one. The Government of India Act, 1935, clearly indicates that the rules must provide for such a facility to the members. This amendment would remove the lacuna and it would make the rule absolutely consistent with the provisions of section 85. It has been said by Mr. Das that in Bengal we have the right to speak in our mother tongue. In Bengal Hindi is also used by some sections of the public; so some members may speak in Hindi also. Generally speaking, the proceedings in a House of the representatives of the people ought to be in the language of the province so that the people at large of the province concerned may follow the proceedings. It is desirable that all proceedings in the Legislature of a province should be conducted not in the English language but in the language of the province; but we need not go so far. Let us be contented with the provision as it exists now in the Government of India Act that the proceedings shall be conducted in the English language, but at the same time when that section provides that right should be given to a member to use any other language, we should make that right an untrammelled one, without any restriction being placed in the exercise of that right. Therefore, I fully support the amendment proposed by Mr. Mazumdar.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: Sir, I would like to say a few words in support of the motion that has been moved by my friend Mr. Haridas Mazumdar. In doing so, I would begin by making a reference to section 85 of the Government of India Act, 1935, which has been already referred to by my friend Mr. Kamini Kumar Dutta. If we refer to the rules themselves it will be found that this rule is made by the Legislative Council under sub-section (1) of section 84 of the Government of India Act. If we look to sub-section (1) of section 84 which gives authority to frame the rules, we will find a further provision—I am reading the sub-section, which is as follows:—A Chamber of a Provincial Legislature may make rules for regulating, subject to the provisions of this Act, their procedure and the conduct of their business. It means, Sir, that whatever rule we may make, the rules must be subject to the provisions of the Act, and therefore ex-hypothesi the rules should be consistent with the other provisions of the Act itself. If we now look to section 85, we will find that section 85 is in these words: “All proceedings in the Legislature of a province shall be conducted in the English language, provided that the rules of procedure of the Chamber or Chambers, and the rules, if any, with regard to joint sittings shall provide—and this is mandatory—for enabling persons unacquainted or not sufficiently acquainted with English to use another language”. Therefore, section 85 contemplates that it should not be left to the option of anybody and if any member is not sufficiently acquainted with English, he is entitled, he has the right to use another language. The rules that are made by the Chamber should be consistent with the provisions of section 85 of the Government of India Act and that is made clear by section 84(I) of the Act which gives authority to enact these rules to a Provincial Legislature. I, therefore, submit for the consideration of the House that the motion brought by Mr. Haridas Mazumdar is not only necessary but it removes a defect in the rules which is there and which should be remedied by the Chamber.

Coming to the speech of my friend Mr. Laidlaw, I do not understand what objection he could have to the rule being altered in the way in which it is proposed. The only condition may be not to do away with the English language altogether but to give liberty to any member of this House to speak in any language he likes, if he thinks that he will not be able to express himself in the House in the English language. I do not know, therefore, why the honourable member of the European Group wants to raise on this question such an issue as the Federation for the whole of India, thereby mixing up the small issue which we are now discussing. As a matter of fact, I am of opinion that British people when they come to India and adopt a particular province as their own place of residence where they want to carry on their business should learn the language of the province in order to understand the people and carry on their business.

As a matter of fact, I know many Europeans speaking fluent Bengali. I hope Europeans coming to India should be sufficiently conversant with the Bengali language. So far as Hindi is concerned, there is no difficulty in understanding Hindi, because the Europeans always keep upcountry servants who are Hindusthanis: so they make themselves acquainted with Hindi. Then, Sir, the I.C.S. officers, before they take up the service, have to pass in the language of the province where they are posted. So the rule ought to be amended.

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: I think, Sir, that the amendment is misconceived and the arguments have not been properly appreciated. I will not talk of the sentiments and wishes of the members. But looking at the language of the section it is clear that there is a condition attached to section 85 of the Government of India Act for a person being permitted to speak in any language. That condition has to be fulfilled. Therefore, any rule which has the effect of making this condition absolutely null and void cannot fulfil the requirement of the section. My friend's amendment amounts to this—a person who is not sufficiently acquainted with the English language according to himself, can speak in any language he likes. In other words, there is no check on the person if he wants to assert that he is not sufficiently acquainted with English language in spite of the fact that he knows that language very well, and he shall be the judge of his own ability and nobody will be able to question him and even put him this question—are you not sufficiently acquainted with English—because there is no judge. Who will judge that? I think there must be somebody who will judge whether he knows the English language or not. What is the rule? Much has been made of the word "may". In interpreting, "may" is often interpreted as "shall". I think, Sir, that so far as this rule is concerned, it should be read along with section 85 of the Government of India Act. That rule gives power of decision to the President. When a person is really unable to speak English he may speak in other language. But to decide whether that person really does not know the language, a tribunal is contemplated under the rule and the rule provides the President as that body. As soon as the President is satisfied under rule 85, he shall permit him to speak in other language. Therefore, the word "may" means "shall". It cannot go against the provision of section 85. With regard the word "may" in the expression "if the President is satisfied that he is unable to speak in English he may speak in any other language", the word "may" means "shall".

As soon as you accept the amendment of Mr. Haridas Mazumdar, section 85 would be nullified. It will be contrary to section 85. For instance, Sir, who will judge whether a member is sufficiently acquainted with the English language or not? He is his best judge. Only a tribunal can judge that and no other person can challenge him on that point. Therefore, the rule as it stands is perfectly in consonance with the provision of section 85.

Khan Bahadur M. A. MOMIN: Sir, may I speak a few words in this connection?

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: On a point of order, Sir. This amendment if it is allowed would be ultra vires of the Act. This matter should not be left to debating or voting. It is purely a matter for a ruling from the Chair. Mr. Hamidul Huq Chowdhury has already explained the implication of this amendment. So, it is a question of a ruling from the Chair.

Mr. PRESIDENT: If you want my ruling, then I shall have to consider this question fully. So, let the matter be postponed, so that I may go through it more carefully in the light of Mr. Hamidul Huq Chowdhury's observations and then give my ruling.

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: Sir, do you propose to give your ruling without hearing us any more?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Let the matter be postponed now. We do not meet before the 17th April and when we meet we shall fix a date for the consideration of this matter.

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: Sir, I request you not to qualify your observations—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Before the Chair gives the ruling it is always the practice, if it is a complicated question, to hear what the honourable members of the House have got to say in the matter.

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: Yes, Sir, but not hearing only one or two members.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The matter is postponed.

The Hon'ble Minister for Civil Supplies will now make a statement regarding the shortage of coal as promised by the Hon'ble the Leader of the House on the adjournment motion of Mr. Haridas Majumdar.

Statement by the Hon'ble Minister for Civil Supplies on coal shortage.

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: Sir, before I make the statement, may I tell the House without meaning any offence to the honourable members and particularly to Mr. Haridas Majumdar, that he need not exercise his ingenuity in discovering objects for adjournment motions when there is no reason for it. I realise that this House has not many opportunities for discussion of Government policy or for informing itself of how things are shaping. Therefore, I shall be most happy to accept short-notice questions and try to answer them to the best of my ability. I do hope, Sir, that honourable members will take this course in trying to elicit information from the Government rather than come before the House with adjournment motions for which there is no justification and which simply waste the time of the House.

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: Sir, I take strong exception to the remark made by the Hon'ble Minister. He means to say that the Opposition moves an adjournment motion only to waste the time of the House.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Chakraverti, you should not disturb or interrupt the Hon'ble Minister.

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: But can he go on expressing such remarks unrestrained?

Mr. PRESIDENT: He is quite justified in expressing his views; but so long as he does not use unparliamentary expression or makes any observation casting reflection on the members of the Opposition generally, I cannot stop him.

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: I am thankful to Mr. Haridas Majumdar for he has given me an opportunity of placing before this House and before the public certain factors relating to the coal situation in Bengal. Now, Sir, the responsibility of this Government only arises after the coal is delivered, and therefore for distribution only. We make arrangements for distribution on certain lines depending upon the receipt of certain quantities of coal; and if those quantities are not delivered to us, it is clear that the distribution must go awry. For distribution the following factors have to be considered with which this Government have no concern at all. They are: adequate raising of coal in the coal fields after which wagons have to be made available in the coal fields for loading; then those wagons have to be loaded and thereafter the railways have to move the wagons, and thereafter only it comes to us. How much will come to us will depend again on the allotment of the provincial quota of wagons by the Coal Controller, and also on the actual allotment of wagons to the parties that may be recommended by the Provincial Governments. Now, Sir, this is a matter which rests entirely with the Coal Controller who is an officer of the Government of India and not of the Government of Bengal. The arrivals have been extremely inadequate and irregular, and, Sir, more than that the quota allotted to the province has been most inadequate in spite of the protests that we have made. In 1943, the quota allotted to Bengal was 3,600 wagons. In November, 1943, the quota was reduced to 2,000 wagons; and when we protested vigorously the Coal Controller was kind enough to increase the quota by just 100 wagons. Now, Sir, in March, 1944, the quota has been reduced to 1,942 wagons of which we understand that 900 wagons are for Calcutta. This I understood up to this morning. Looking in today's newspaper, I found that the Coal Controller has stated that he is going to send 25 wagons a day to Calcutta which means 750 wagons per month which is a discrepancy I have not yet been able to reconcile. Now, Sir, even on the basis of 900 wagons we have got in January only 611 wagons, in February, 528 wagons, and in March, up till the 23rd, 479 wagons only. Therefore, Sir, there is bound to be shortage of coal in Calcutta, and there is bound to be difficulties in distribution, and the distribution arrangements that we have made cannot possibly stand up to this shortage. We have recently made certain arrangements to expedite arrivals. On occasions there has been congestion in the railway yards at Chitpur, and the Coal Controller has made this a ground for moving coal from the collieries to the various sidings. In order to prevent this we have made arrangements with him that when there is congestion in the Chitpur yards, he will move coal to Howrah, but he should not hold up wagons on any account. Further, to obviate delays that occur when only one wagon has to be moved, we have arranged with him that, instead of moving individual wagons, he will move half-rakes to us. This scheme has borne fruit, as I can show from the figures. On the 17th March we had 15 wagons, on the 18th 10 wagons, on the 19th 13 wagons, on the 20th 6 wagons, on the 21st 1 wagon only, on the 22nd 15 wagons, and on the 23rd, the day since which this scheme has come into operation, we got 79 wagons. In order to relieve fuel shortage, I am also making arrangements to import wood fuel at cheap rates from Jhargram and other places in the Midnapore district. (Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: How have you solved the transport difficulty in this case ?) I think that the wood fuel and coal have obtained such a priority that the railways have promised to give us the wagons.

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: May I ask the Hon'ble Minister through you, Sir, if he thinks that this supply of wagons will be sufficient for Bengal?

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: I have reiterated several times that the supply is most inadequate for Calcutta and certainly inadequate for Bengal. There is a severe coal shortage in the province; but it is not for me to say whether the view-point of the other side is answerable or unanswerable. The view-point of the other side is that the supply of coal and wagons must be conditioned by ability to move and the general restrictions and disabilities arising out of the war situation.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, in view of the statement just made by the Hon'ble Minister, I shall have to put some questions to him to satisfy the House with regard to the attempts made by the Government of Bengal to relieve the distress, I mean, the coal famine in Calcutta, particularly as regards soft coke. I, therefore, think that a day should be allotted for the discussion of this very important subject when I shall formally press my adjournment motion to be moved in due course. Besides, the Hon'ble Minister has admitted his failure to supply coal.

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: Sir, after the very long statement that I have made and after I have taken the House so fully into confidence as regards the coal position, I do not know how the question of an adjournment motion really arises. What, Sir, is the use of a prolonged discussion again on the matter and what does the honourable member mean by saying that he would like to know what attempts are made or have been made to procure wagons etc., and whether the promise of the Coal Controller can be relied upon. Sir, if the Government of Bengal had not made any attempts, how could they at all have got any wagon? Sir, we watch the situation closely and resist any attempts on the other side to cut down our quota of wagons, sometimes successfully and sometimes the reverse. Honourable members will surely remember the attempts which I made—it was, I claim, an ingenious plan—to secure more coal when the whole coal position had collapsed sometime ago. I personally put myself in touch with all relevant officers, the Coal Controller, representatives of the East Indian and Bengal and Assam Railways, transport authorities, and river carrying companies, in order to carry coal via Azimganj from one side of the river to the other and from one railway system to another. I managed to get a good deal of coal and the situation was relieved at once. But as soon as this method of coal supply was found to be successful, super-priorities stepped in, took advantage of the system and deprived us of our coal. I claim, Sir, that the Government of Bengal is fully alive to the situation.

(At this stage the Hon'ble President vacated the Chair.)

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: May I suggest to my friends opposite that we on this side of the House also feel the acute situation that has arisen, because every one is suffering and suffering very acutely. After hearing the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Supply Department it is clear that the supply of coal is still becoming worse and he has explained that the primary difficulty is created by authorities other than the Government of Bengal and that the Government of Bengal has been doing everything possible and will continue to do its best. In that view of the matter, the adjournment motion may be withdrawn, after a record being made that the House strongly feels the acuteness of the situation created by the coal shortage in the province without reference as to who is responsible for this.

Mr. KRISHNA CHANDRA ROY CHOWDHURY: I would like to have some information regarding local irregular distribution. I speak more from personal experience—

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: Order, order. You ought to have raised that question immediately after the statement of the Hon'ble Minister-in-charge of Civil Supplies.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: In view of my friend Mr. Hamidul Huq Chowdhury's suggestion that the House keenly feels, the acute shortage of coal supply and that Government are practically not at all satisfied with the state of affairs, I beg to withdraw my adjournment motion.

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: Order, order. The House will now take up discussion of Non-official Resolutions.

NON-OFFICIAL RESOLUTIONS.Enquiry in Campbell Medical School strike.

Mr. KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: I beg to move that this Council is of opinion that a Committee consisting of officials and non-officials be appointed to enquire into the causes of the recent strike by the students of the Campbell Medical School, Calcutta, and to make recommendations with a view to the prevention of its recurrence in future.

Sir, it may be argued by the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the department or by some one of his colleagues that the subject-matter of the resolution has become stale and is no longer of any public interest in view of the settlement of the strike and the reopening of the school on the 27th January last after a period of five weeks during which it remained closed under the orders of the Government. In fact, I gave notice of the resolution before the matter had been settled, when the piquant situation that arose in consequence of the strike was still continuing. The resumption of the normal activities of the school is no proof of the fact that the causes which led to the strike had been removed and that it would not take place again in future.

Sir, if we look into the aetiology of this tumult, we find that it arose out of certain essential things not being provided for in which the students and their guardians are vitally interested. The most important of these are the inadequacy of teaching arrangements, the unsatisfactory boarding and lodging arrangements and thirdly, the absence of proper facilities and adequate protective measures for the A. R. P. personnel.

Sir, I wish to make it clear at the outset that I am not a supporter of acts of indiscipline or insubordination on the part of our boys or, for the matter of that, of anybody. I am no believer in the cult of strike as a weapon to wrest from the authorities undue privileges and concessions; but there are strikes and strikes. Some of these may be based on imaginary grievances or misunderstanding of the intention of the authorities and some on real disabilities suffered by those who failing to get redress resort to this method of protest. It is to find out the causes of the recent strike of the students of the Campbell Medical School and to devise means for its prevention in future that I urge the appointment of an impartial committee of enquiry. I learn from a reliable source that the strike resulted from the real grievances of the students. A member of the teaching staff of the Jagannath Intermediate College, Dacca, was for a long time an indoor patient of the hospital. Both he and some of his fellow-patients, the reliability of whose evidence cannot be questioned, and who can bear testimony to all that had happened, were undergoing treatment in the hospital at that time. Not only the students of the school were dissatisfied with the behaviour of the Superintendent and the Deputy Superintendent, but the public had also complaints to make against the manner in which the patients were being looked after.

Now, Sir, so far as the students were concerned, they failed to get any remedy at the hands of the Superintendent and of the authorities in charge of the Medical Department of Government. So, as the last resort they decided to go on strike. They approached the Superintendent in the first instance, then the Surgeon-General and finally the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Local Self-Government and Public Health Department. The Surgeon-General was, of course, pleased to grant an interview to two representatives of the students, but it is understood that no assurance was given that their complaints would be looked into. Then, the students approached the Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi Jalaluddin Ahmad, the Minister in charge of the department concerned who, instead of giving them a sympathetic hearing, accorded them a cold reception and is reported to have gone even to the length of reproaching them. This precipitated the crisis culminating in the strike in the third week of November. Sir, the situation was not properly dealt with. For, if it had been handled tactfully, the crisis might have been averted and the patients of the hospital would have been spared the sufferings and hardships which they had to undergo in consequence of the strike.

Sir, I am not here to defend the strikers if they were in the wrong. I am anxious to see justice being meted out to those who were responsible for wilful neglect of duty, indifference and malpractices within the precincts of the hospital and outside. Sir, of the three points to which I referred at the outset, the most important is the inadequacy of arrangements for teaching. Some of the members of the staff were useless as teachers. They had no capacity to make their lectures really interesting to the students. It was due to defective method of teaching that the students lost confidence in themselves—students who might otherwise have done well in their examinations. I do not mean to say that all the members of the teaching staff must be efficient teachers. At any rate, a fair proportion of them should be able to teach well, otherwise the result of the school is bound to be unsatisfactory. Then again, the popular complaint is that the right type of candidates are not selected for admission into the school. There is no doubt a Selection Committee appointed by Government every year, but political considerations weigh more with the Ministry than anything else in the matter of the constitution of these committees. This is also partially responsible for the bad results. To my mind, a panel of successful teachers should be prepared by the Medical Department of the Government from which a suitable number of teachers should be deputed to every medical school in Bengal. Besides ensuring uniformity, it will raise the standard of teaching and create interest and confidence in the minds of the students.

The next question I would like to mention is the unsatisfactory character of their lodging arrangements. No separate boarding house exists for the students of the Campbell Medical School like the students of other institutions in the city and in the district of towns of Bengal. They have, therefore, to live in private hostels and messes with officers, businessmen and students of other educational institutions. Sir, during the last food crisis the students had to suffer untold inconvenience. As is well known, the medical students have to attend to their duties in the hospital at odd hours, and sometimes they have to join their duties without taking their meals; and when they come back from the hospital, they find to their utter chagrin that no proper arrangements were made for their meals. If they had separate boarding houses for themselves, they would be able to adjust their routine according to their convenience. Then, Sir, the A. R. P. arrangements to which I have already referred are inadequate. There is no proper shelter or refuge room. The slit trenches which exist are unsatisfactory for being used as shelters on the sounding of the siren. Sometimes, frogs are seen leaping about and the trenches are sometimes used by the menial staff for purposes other than those for which they are intended. These were the main grievances of the students not to speak of the public complaints to which I shall presently refer.

Sir, the strike was in the beginning confined only to the students of this school, both male and female, but as it was allowed to continue, it ultimately affected other institutions as well, and the students of the mufassil schools and colleges also joined in the strike out of sympathy for the students of the Campbell Medical School. Now, Sir, the serious charges against the Superintendent and the authorities in September last, through certain members of the Legislative Assembly, who were also holding responsible positions in the Government—charges of corruption and maladministration in the school—went practically unheeded. No notice was taken of the complaints. The inactivity of the Surgeon-General's office and the way in which the department proceeded in the matter had the inevitable effect of encouraging rather than discouraging dishonesty. Sir, facts were suppressed and the whole thing was hushed up. Government thus stand discredited for the conduct of some of their dishonest officials. It is unfortunate that the administrative heads have the peculiar tendency of shielding their subordinates and of acting on their advice without proper enquiry, even when the persons complained against are suspected to be guilty.

I will now mention seriatim the charges that have been levelled against the administration of the school. The first charge is the curtailment by the Superintendent of the diet of certain patients admitted to the hospital through a member of the staff with whom he (the Superintendent) had personal differences. A Chinese patient admitted in October, 1943, was given the usual diet worth three to four rupees per diem, whereas the other cabin patients who obtained admission with the help of the doctor with whom the then Superintendent was not on good terms were made to suffer in the way indicated. Then, again, the little diet that was supplied to the patients was of a very inferior quality and unfit for consumption. The second charge is the surreptitious removal of food articles such as rice, dal, onion, potato, salt, etc., stocked by Government for the use of the menials in an emergency, namely, during air-raids. The menials would have borne testimony to this if an enquiry had been made at the proper time. The authorities were informed that if the stock was examined without giving previous notice, the real position could be ascertained, but unfortunately nothing was done. The stock of food articles was kept in the compound of the nurses' quarters for daily sale to the menials. Several bags of rice out of this stock, it was alleged, had been secretly removed by the Deputy Superintendent at different times covering a long period. He was reported to have been caught red-handed by the menials on one occasion in the presence of some doctors and students: this could be easily verified if a prompt enquiry had been held. Another serious charge brought against the Deputy Superintendent was that he was in the habit of removing daily from the hospital foodstuffs for his own household consumption. The third charge is that the Deputy Superintendent was running a sweetmeat shop in Premchand Boral Street in benami. He had a medicine shop in Khengrapatti by the name and style of "P. M. Brothers" or something like that from which medicines used to be supplied to the Campbell Medical School Hospital. Medicines were also reported to have been taken from the hospital stock for sale to the public through this pharmacy. The quality of food supplied by contractors was had and the quantity less than what was sanctioned. It is further reported that the Deputy Superintendent used to share profits with them—

Khan Bahadur M. A. MOMIN: How do you know it?

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: That is the report and hence the necessity for an enquiry. There are other allegations against his conduct and relations with the nurses and students which might be revealed on enquiry. Sir, the seriousness of the allegations can be easily realised. The Superintendent is said to be well aware of these facts; but he used to shield the Deputy Superintendent, his protegy.

Sir, on the 21st March in reply to supplementary questions asked at another place, a certain Parliamentary Secretary gave evasive replies. It was quite apparent from the supplementary questions put to him that the Government were trying to avoid the real issue. What we want is to put a stop to such unsatisfactory state of things. It is not my intention to cast any unmerited aspersions against anybody. I, therefore, urge most strongly the appointment of an impartial committee which alone would be able to find out the truth or otherwise of the allegations levelled against the administration. I cannot understand why the Surgeon-General's office or for the matter of that the Government ignored the allegations without proper enquiry. It was not before a couple of months had elapsed that the Government was roused from their slumber. What enquiry, if at all, Government made departmentally, we do not know. But that enquiry had the effect of stiffening the attitude of the head of the institution with the result I have already indicated. Both the Government and the students being involved in the matter, an impartial enquiry has become necessary.

With these words, I commend my resolution to the acceptance of the House.

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: Motion moved: that this Council is of opinion that a Committee consisting of officials and non-officials be appointed to enquire into the causes of the recent strike by the students of the Campbell Medical School, Calcutta, and to make recommendations with a view to the prevention of its recurrence in future.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: Mr. President, Sir I would like to support the resolution that has been moved by Rai Keshab Chandra Banerjee Bahadur with regard to the incident that happened in the Campbell Hospital. To support his resolution he has cited many facts and figures which, if true, indicate a disgraceful state and it is, therefore, necessary that in order to get at the circumstances which really led to the events, an enquiry should be started so that the matter may not be repeated again in the future. It is necessary not only for the purpose of the proper administration of the school itself but also to ensure harmony between the students and the school authorities, so that work may go on smoothly and there may not be any complaint of the nature which led to the strike.

With these few words, I support the resolution.

Mr. AMULYADHONE ROY: Mr. President, Sir, I have heard with attention the speech delivered by Rai Keshab Chandra Banerjee Bahadur. My friend Mr. Bankim Chandra Mukherjee has stated that the Rai Bahadur has given facts and figures which cannot be challenged. But, Sir, I am unable to say whether those facts and figures can be challenged or not. However, I am definite that the allegations are such that a committee of enquiry should be appointed by the Government. Recently, Sir, corruption has crept into the administration from top to bottom and the Government of their own motion has started enquiry into many cases and reports have already been submitted by their officers recommending many cases of suspension and commissions. But, Sir, unfortunately, the Government is sitting tight over the matter. There are cases where gazetted officers have been found guilty of corruption. Inspectors belonging to the Criminal Investigation Department have made thorough enquiries and they have already submitted reports for suspension of these officers, but up till now we do not know whether any commission has been appointed and whether these officers who have been found guilty by the departmental authorities have been brought before the commission. Allegations made by the Rai Bahadur are so serious that no civilised Government should shrink from making an enquiry and I hope, Sir, the Government will not oppose the resolution, but accept it without any rider. With these words, I support the resolution.

Mr. KAMINI KUMAR DUTTA: Sir, before I had listened to the statement made by Rai Keshab Chandra Banerjee Bahadur, I did not think the resolution to be of a very serious nature at all. But after listening to the various instances of corruption and delinquency so definitely and specifically stated, it seems that the matter is a very serious one and it will be the duty of the Government to fully enquire into the truth or otherwise of the allegations. The allegations made are not of a general character but they are of a definite and specific character,—definite as to the facts and definite as to the persons against whom accusations have been made. Of course, persons against whom allegations have been made have one extenuating fact. They may say: well, we are not the only persons guilty of corruption or guilty of indiscipline. A wave of jobbery and corruption is sweeping over the country and we ought to be included in the list of those who have been connived at.

Apart from this, there seems to be no other extenuating fact. Now, this resolution relates to the hospital and the management of the hospital. Even in this time of cruel war, prisoners of war are also treated well by their enemies; but here in the civil hospitals it is very strange that such things can happen. The allegations made are not only of great indiscipline but of moral turpitude also. So I do not think this resolution does require further speech from me to commend it to the acceptance of the House. It simply asks for the appointment of a Committee to enquire into the accusations against the officer who holds a responsible position; and considering the position of the man against whom the allegation is made, the nature of the accusation and the incident regarding which this accusation has been made, I think the House would agree to the appointment of a Committee to enquire fully into the whole matter.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Sir, it is my misfortune that I have to give reply to the resolution in the absence of the Minister in charge of the Department.

Rai Bahadur KESHAJ CHANDRA BANERJEE: On a point of order, Sir. It is desirable that the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the department concerned should be present here to reply to the various points raised in connection with this resolution. The Hon'ble Leader of the House not being acquainted with the facts will not, I am afraid, be in a position to furnish correct information in regard to the points to which reference has been made. There is a definite allegation against the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Public Health Department that when the students approached him he treated them coldly and even scolded them. These are the charges which the Hon'ble Minister alone is competent to answer.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Sir, I can reply in general terms to the various allegations that have been made, but I cannot reply to the details. So it is for you to consider whether it should be postponed or not.

Mr. AMULYADHONE ROY: Are you going to support the resolution?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: No, I have been instructed to oppose the resolution.

Mr. MESBAHUDDIN AHMED: Sir, when the Hon'ble Minister concerned is absent, let it stand over.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, will you permit the Hon'ble Leader of the House to reply to the resolution while the Minister in charge is absent? A suggestion has been made by the Chief Whip of the Government that it should be held over.

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: A very pertinent question has arisen. It is really unfortunate that when the House sits for transaction of business the Hon'ble Ministers remain absent. Now, there are certain practical difficulties for which the discussion of this resolution cannot stand over. As a result of ballot it has been the first subject to be discussed. Now, if we adjourn the discussion of this resolution, either I shall have to adjourn the House immediately.....

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: May I submit, Sir, that this House certainly has got the inherent power to decide whether it shall take the subject today or shall pass on to the next subject?

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: Order, order. I am afraid I have not been clearly understood. Mr. Mesbahuddin Ahmed stood up and said that the resolution should stand over but the difficulty is that on the next non-official day this resolution may not be the first subject to be discussed.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Since the resolution has been part-heard, what is the objection to take the matter up as the first thing on the next non-official day?

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: I think the rules will not stand in the way. Under the rules, a number of members can always secure priority for a particular motion and have it taken up the first thing on the next non-official day.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: If the House unanimously agrees to this course, then certainly that can be done.

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: Are you prepared to move a resolution to this effect?

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: Rule 94 may be applied in this case.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Sir, I am surprised at the attitude taken up by Mr. Hamidul Huq Chowdhury, who wants to postpone consideration of this resolution and pass on to the next item.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: No reason has been assigned as to why this resolution should be postponed. Only Mr. Hamidul Huq Chowdhury from the Government Party stood up and said "let this resolution be postponed" and attempts are accordingly being made to postpone it. We have read in Shakespeare's Julius Caesar, Sir, that Julius Caesar's appearance in the Senate was going to be postponed till "Caesar's wife shall meet with better dreams". So, here, also are you going to wait till the Hon'ble Public Health Minister has better dreams and chooses to make his appearance in this House and give a reply?

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: Sir, I definitely suggested that this resolution which has been part-discussed be adjourned till the next non-official day and that it should be taken up as the first item on that day.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Thank you, I am very sorry I misunderstood you.

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: Sir, is it permissible under the rules to set this item down to be taken as the first business on the next resolution day?

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: As I have said, rule 94 applies in this case. This rule requires the consent of 23 members to take a matter out of turn. I think 23 members will be forthcoming to do so, and we may agree that this resolution be postponed till the next resolution day.

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: Mr. Mukherjee, are you in favour of adjournment?

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: Yes, Sir.

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: May I take it that it is the unanimous desire of the House that consideration of this resolution should stand over till the next non-official day?

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: Yes, Sir, provided it be taken up as the first item on that day.

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: Yes, certainly, that was the suggestion made by Mr. Hamidul Huq Chowdhury.

Encouragement of sugar industry.

Mr. NUR AHMED: I beg to move that this Council is of opinion that the Government of Bengal be urged upon to adopt all feasible measures to encourage and help the sugar industry, both in cottages and in small factories, in Bengal.

Sir, I have come before this House with a resolution the subject-matter of which has become very important. This resolution deals with a very simple matter, namely, sugar industry. As regards sugar industry, Bengal was once famous for sugar and sugarcane. From the early history of this industry, it appears that Bengal was once famous for this industry. From reports of the foreign travellers we find that in Bengal the sugar industry was widely developed and Bengal used to export sugar to Iran, Iraq, Arabia and many other countries of the world. Mr. C. W. E. Cotton in his Hand-book of Commercial Information says that India was the original home of sugar. Sir John Colebrooks in his treatise "Husbandry of Bengal" says—sugarcane grew profusely in Bengal and from India it was introduced into Arabia and from Arabia to Europe and Africa. The districts of Midnapore, Birbhum and Rangpur were specially famous for sugarcane. Bengal's sugar trade was very flourishing during the time of the East India Company between 1674 and 1680, when white sugar was purchased by the Company from Bengal for being exported to Europe. Before this, the Portuguese used to export sugar to Europe. According to Bernier, sugar industry was well-developed in Bengal; between 1830 and 1832 Bengal's sugarcane and sugar was as good as those of the West Indies. Bengal's sugar trade was restricted by imposition of heavy duty in order to encourage sugar industry in the West Indies. For example; it appears that whereas the duty on imported sugar of West Indies was 15 shillings per ton, in the case of Bengal sugar it was £37-16-3 ad valorem. So, it will be seen that Bengal sugar received a set-back. But this restriction was withdrawn in 1837 and as a result Bengal's sugar trade revived. In 1830-31, the quantity of sugar exported to England was 218,915 maunds and to other countries 595,856 maunds of the total value of Rs. 67,18,911. In 1845-46, the export to England again rose to 1,831,263 maunds worth Rs. 179 lakhs. Restrictions were re-imposed in 1846 as a result of which the sugar trade of Bengal was ruined. According to the latest figure, we find that Bengal's estimated quota of production was 55,000 tons and last year Bengal produced only 14,000 tons of sugar. Bengal's total estimated requirement of sugar is 195,000 tons of which Bengal can produce only 12,000 tons and the rest has to be imported from other provinces. Sir, sugar has become a very covetable commodity now-a-days. If we compare the production of other countries, we find India has got the first place but what is the position of Bengal. As regards the figures obtained in 1938-39, India produced about 40 lakhs of tons of sugar, whereas Cuba produced 2,750,000 tons, Russia—2,260,000 tons, Germany—2,097,000 tons, United States of America—974,000 tons, Philipines and Java—1,500,000 tons: so India was first in world production.

Bengal's production as compared with the other provinces is the lowest, though Bengal has got unique advantage in the matter of the production of sugarcane and sugar. Sir, Bengal produces only 3 per cent. of her own requirement whereas her consumption is 13 per cent. of India's production. Sir, the Bengal peasant is very much accustomed to the method of production and also cultivation of sugarcane. The question of sugar industry in Bengal came up for consideration by several committees in the past. In 1920 it was considered by J. Mackenna Committee and also by another committee in 1930 as well as by the Tariff Board in 1931-32; but unfortunately none of these committees went into the question of the cultivation of sugarcane. They held that owing to the cultivation of jute and shrinkage of the acreage of sugarcane, Bengal is not suitable for development of the sugar industry. But we find that from the economic point of view these industries have become very important for Bengal. Of course, the acreage of sugarcane in Bengal has dwindled owing to the cultivation of jute; but the cultivation of jute has been restricted and larger areas have been now released for the cultivation of sugarcane. As compared with the United Provinces, Bengal produced 3,000 lbs. per acre of sugarcane cultivation, whereas the United Provinces produced only 2,000 lbs. per acre.

As regards the cost of gur, Bengal's cost has come down to Rs. 2-3 per maund, whereas in the United Provinces it is Rs. 2-14 and in Bihar it is Rs. 2-7. Therefore, Sir, from every point of view Bengal is the most suitable place for the development of this industry.

Then there is another point. This industry can solve the unemployment problem to a great extent, because both in the factory stage and as a cottage industry a huge number of men can be employed. In 1935-36, 8 crores and 33 lakhs of rupees were paid as price of sugarcane to the sugarcane-growers who had to maintain about 22 lakhs and 60 thousands of workers. One crore of rupees was paid to the workers in factories, and 2½ crores of rupees were paid to Government railways, and one crore was paid for the purchase of indigenous products, such as, lime, sulphur, bags, manure, etc. The sugar industry employed 2,000 science graduates, 10,000 educated workers, one lakh skilled labourers while the gur industry employed about one crore and 2 lakhs of persons and 50 lakhs in secondary industries: in all, 180 lakhs of persons are employed in this industry in India. Sir, in 1931-32, there were only 32 sugar factories in India, but these increased in the year 1938-39 to 140. In the United Provinces in that year there were 72 factories, in Bihar there were 32 factories whereas in Bengal there were only 10 vacuum factories. Bengal's position is very low in comparison with the other provinces. It is admitted by Government that there are elements in Bengal which are favourable to the growth and development of the sugar industry. The Bengal cultivators are accustomed to growing sugarcane and they are also accustomed to the use of modern implements and modern methods. It appears that in Bengal there are in use about 40,000 Renwick's sugarcane crushing machines and about 30,000 Renwick pans. Bengal's way of crushing sugar into gur is very simple. A simple machinery which costs little can be prepared and has been prepared at an economic price. Comparing Bengal's products with those of other countries, it is very necessary that Bengal's workers should be encouraged. This sugar industry may help the growers and cultivators in more than one way. It is said that the cultivation and production of sugar help the cultivation of paddy, by increasing the yield per acre. It will supply fodder for the cattle and will also employ cultivators during the time when he has got no paddy crop or other crops to look to. It will also supply the cultivator with cash money; for with the price that he gets for his sugarcane he can purchase his necessities of life. This industry will help him in many other ways. I am fully conscious of the fact that the Government of Bengal has provided about 12 lakhs of rupees by way of subsidy to the sugar industry in Bengal in order that the cultivators may grow more and more sugarcane. As regards that, my submission is that that money should be supplied by the Government of India. Bengal's exchequer should not be depleted by that amount because restriction in price has been fixed by the Government of India. The result of this restriction is that Bengal's sugarcane-grower has been affected and therefore I submit that it is the duty of the Government of India to pay the sum required to encourage and help the sugarcane-growers of Bengal. My resolution is very simple and I have given facts and figures to show that Bengal should now make a serious attempt to develop this industry now that the jute cultivation is being restricted under direction from the Government. With these words, I commend my resolution to the acceptance of the House.

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: Resolution moved: that this Council is of opinion that the Government of Bengal be urged upon to adopt all feasible measures to encourage and help the sugar industry, both in cottage and in small factories, in Bengal.

Mr. KAMINI KUMAR DUTTA: Sir, I have great pleasure in supporting this resolution which has been moved by my friend Mr. Nur Ahmed. Indeed, his speech on the subject was an illuminating one. It contains useful statistics and the history of the whole trade. I can say that I am personally very much benefited by his speech and I have learned something new from it. What does his speech reveal? It reveals that in the year 1830 Bengal occupied the foremost position so far as the sugar industry is concerned; but now it is the last. So it cannot be said that the province has not the capacity. The country has the capacity but the reason for its decline must be sought elsewhere. Even at the present moment, while in the sister provinces of the United Provinces and Bihar, progress is being made in this industry, Bengal is lagging behind. So far as this industry is concerned, it will not only help the cultivators but it will also be another commercial crop so to speak. I may go further and say that this industry will help the labour and also the educated people in the shape of a demand for technicians. So, I fully support the resolution of my friend Mr. Nur Ahmed.

The Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja SHAHABUDDIN: Sir, I am very glad to welcome this resolution and I am also happy that the honourable mover of this resolution has given many facts in order to emphasise the need and importance of the development of this industry. So far as Government are concerned, I can assure that they are fully conscious of the importance of this industry. Their only difficulty is that when they proceed to assist this industry and take steps to stimulate the industry they are being charged as going to do something for the vested interests. I want to tell you that the Sugar Enquiry Sub-Committee of the Bengal Food Survey Committee was entrusted with the task of making enquiries regarding the position of the sugar industry in all its aspects—a survey of the present condition and future prospects of the industry as well as a comprehensive scheme for its development. Government accepted one of the most important recommendations of the Committee, namely, the setting up of a Provincial Sugar Board and has actually constituted a Board by a resolution, dated the 17th September, 1943. I should like to read out the functions assigned to this Board, as they would indicate the importance that Government attach to this Advisory Board—

- (1) development of sugarcane cultivation in Bengal in the best interests of the growers, the industry of the province including experiments in respect of varieties of cane, manures and methods of cultivation and control, and prevention of pests and diseases;
- (2) formulation of scheme for better organisation of cane-growers, co-operative or otherwise, and for irrigation and drainage with a view to fostering the development of cane cultivation;
- (3) development and improvement of communications and transport facilities for sugarcane, gur, sugar and bye-products of the industry;
- (4) sale and purchase of sugarcane including the determination of proper prices of cane to be paid to cultivators from year to year according to the crop condition and the prospects of the sugar industry, organisation and methods and the terms and conditions thereof including the prevailing system of weighment and allowances and maintenance of healthy relations between growers of sugarcane and sugar factories in Bengal in the mutual interest of both growers and manufacturers;
- (5) determination of zones, if necessary, as between different factories and as between mill agents and co-operative unions;
- (6) development of the sugar manufacturing industry on sound lines in all its aspects, including the best utilisation of bye-products of the industry;
- (7) development of gur manufacturing industry specially in areas where there are no sugar factories;
- (8) marketing of the products and bye-products of cane, sugar and gur and safeguarding the interests of these industries in Bengal against competitions both internal and external prejudicial to their development;
- (9) Dealing with such other matters as may be conducive to the development of sugar and gur industries on proper lines.

Sir, I have read out the terms of reference of this Board just to emphasise the fact that Government expect the Board to advise the Government in taking all steps necessary for the development of this industry. With the setting up of this Board, one very important question arose, namely, the very low price of sugarcane that was paid last year. The House knows very well that the price of sugar is fixed by the Controller of Sugar and naturally the prices of the raw materials have got to be adjusted according to the fixed price of the finished good, namely, sugar. Mills in Bengal, as soon as we came into office, approached us and said that on the basis of the price fixed last year they could hardly manage to pay more than 10 annas per maund of sugarcane and although there was an expectation that the Controller was going to raise the price, the mills thought that the price will not be raised sufficiently and so it would not be possible for them to pay more than 12 annas for the sugarcane. They also said that on the basis of 12 annas they were certain that there would be no sufficient supply of sugarcane to the mills and because they cannot pay more than 12 annas the only means open to them was to close down all the mills and stop manufacturing sugar.

That was the problem which the Government had to solve. We went into the matter thoroughly and we were convinced; but I may tell you that this Government at that stage had no means to ascertain whether this claim of the sugar-mills, namely, that they could not pay more than 12 annas was correct or not, and the time at our disposal was not sufficient to go into the claims of each mill and find out whether they were justified or not. We were confronted with the situation that if no other means was devised to pay a little more to the sugarcane-growers, the mills on the one hand were not prepared to work, and on the other hand the cultivation of the sugarcane for the next year would be adversely affected. In view of this situation, the Government accepted the contention of the mills for the time being that they were unable to pay more than 12 annas. As, however, we felt that even this 12 annas would be a very low price for the cultivator, it was decided that we must do something to maintain this industry as well as pay sufficiently reasonable price to the cane-growers. Accordingly, after going into the matter, the Government decided that at least the price of one rupee at the reception centre and one rupee at the mill-gate should be the minimum. And since the mills could not pay more than 12 annas, the Government decided that this difference between 12 annas and one rupee would be paid out of the provincial revenues. Our calculation of the production cost was Rs. 20,000 which we considered to be the maximum that we could budget for this year, and we could not do more than that. The total subsidy that the Government will have to pay will be in the neighbourhood of 16 lakhs of rupees. This amount of 16 lakhs of rupees had been paid to safeguard the interest of the cultivators and to maintain the industry as a going concern. Although I am very happy to find that there is so much support in favour of this resolution of my honourable friend Mr. Nur Ahmed, yet on previous occasions both in this House and in the other place Government have been bitterly criticized for giving 16 lakhs of rupees as subsidy for the sake of maintaining the industry. As far as the Advisory Board is concerned, they have set up two special committees—one to go into the agricultural side of this problem and the other to go into the industrial side of the problem. The Committee has not started its work yet. As a matter of fact, the names of the members of the Board have not yet been finally settled. I hope there will be a meeting of the Advisory Board by the end of this month and this Committee will finally set up. The third point I would like to mention is that I do not subscribe to the views of my honourable friend Mr. Nur Ahmed when he said that the manufacture of sugar in Bengal is more economical and less expensive than elsewhere. I beg to differ from him on this point. Unfortunately, up to now, the sucros contents of Bengal sugarcane are far less than they are in the sugarcane of other places. Here it is a little over 8 per cent. whereas in the provinces of the United Provinces and Bihar it is in the neighbourhood of over 10 per cent. We have been suffering on account of this low sucros contents of Bengal sugarcane. My honourable friend, the Minister for Agriculture, should improve the quality of the sugarcane—as it comes within his sphere of activity—and I can assure you that he is fully alive to the necessity of improving the quality of the sugarcane grown in Bengal. It is needless for me to mention in this connection that every possible assistance from Government will be given in that respect also. With these words, I am very happy to accept the resolution moved by my friend Mr. Nur Ahmed.

Khan Bahadur M. A. MOMIN: I want to speak, Sir.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Sir, is it worthwhile speaking now when only two minutes are left?

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: Do you want to speak on this subject?

Khan Bahadur M. A. MOMIN: Yes, Sir. I will just begin and then I will have a right to speak on the next day. ;

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: How long will you take to finish your speech?

Khan Bahadur M. A. MOMIN: I never speak longer than what is absolutely necessary.

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: The difficulty is that we have already reached our time-limit.

The Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja SHAHABUDDIN: Sir, let it be carried over.

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: It that be the desire of the House—

Khan Bahadur M. A. MOMIN: Sir, we have just heard the Hon'ble Minister for Commerce and Industries. Ordinarily, one would be satisfied to hear that Government is trying to do everything to improve the manufacture of the sugar industry and the cultivation of sugarcane in Bengal. But if we could feel ourselves absolutely assured by that statement that everything is being actually done, then of course there would have been no necessity for me to speak at all on this matter. But the only reason why I wish to speak is that although we emphasise that not only do we entirely agree with the resolution but our agreement is unanimous, yet I would go further and ask the Government to tell us definitely on what lines they are going to help and encourage this industry. There is no necessity of repeating the various resolutions which have been passed on this matter.

The Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja SHAHABUDDIN: On a point of information, Sir. Are we discussing this matter again after I have replied? Sir, I have not only quoted from resolutions but I have indicated the practical steps that have been taken by Government to encourage the sugar industry.

Khan Bahadur M. A. MOMIN: The Hon'ble Minister has quoted many resolutions but he has not read that portion of the minutes where it was resolved that no action need be taken on the resolution at present.

The Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja SHAHABUDDIN: It is rather just the other way about, Sir. I have indicated what we have already done in the matter. I have said that we have given a subsidy of 16 lakhs of rupees to the cane-growers. Can there be a better practical proof of our active interest in this matter?

Khan Bahadur M. A. MOMIN: If I am allowed to speak on the next day, then I will be able to show that whatever has been done in this regard has not been effective at all. The result has been that we find nowadays that gur is selling here at fourteen annas a seer, whereas in the United Provinces gur is selling at four annas a seer.

The Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja SHAHABUDDIN: I am prepared to listen to the Khan Bahadur Sahib and I am quite sure that I shall be able to meet his arguments very satisfactorily.

Mr. KAMINI KUMAR DUTTA: Sir, before you adjourn the House, may I mention a matter regarding the resolution relating to the Campbell

Medical School enquiry? This resolution moved by Rai Bahadur Keshab Chandra Banerjee had to be adjourned after being partly discussed on account of the absence of the Hon'ble Minister in charge of Public Health and Local Self-Government. I mention this matter again and request on behalf of the mover and ourselves that it may be put on the record that the resolution had to be postponed because of the absence of the Hon'ble Minister concerned, and that it would be taken up as the first item on the next day for resolutions.

The Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja SHAHABUDDIN: I think that it would create a bad precedent if the consideration of any subject is postponed because a particular Minister was not present in the House. The House knows very well, Sir, that not only is the Hon'ble the Leader of the House present here but that he has been fully authorised and is able to reply to the resolution.

Mr. KAMINI KUMAR DUTTA: So far as I remember, Sir, the House unanimously agreed to the postponement of the resolution because the Hon'ble Minister concerned was not present in the House.

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: So far as this question is concerned, I may remind the Hon'ble Khwaja Shahabuddin that the Hon'ble the Leader of the House gave us to understand that he would be able to give only a general reply and not a detailed reply to all the points raised by the mover of the resolution. It was then at the instance of Mr. Hamidul Huq Chowdhury who proposed that this resolution might be postponed so that a reply might be given by the Hon'ble Minister concerned, that it was so postponed.

The Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja SHAHABUDDIN: I am sorry, Sir, it is so different from what is claimed by the other side.

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: I do not think we can take up any other aspect of the matter, Sir, at this stage.

Mr. KAMINI KUMAR DUTTA: I am not placing any new question before the House. I simply want to say that the record should contain what actually happened in the House with regard to this resolution.

Mr. DEPUTY PRESIDENT: Order, order. The House now stands adjourned till 1-30 p.m. on Monday, the 17th April, 1944.

Adjournment.

The Council then adjourned till 1-30 p.m. on Monday, the 17th April, 1944.

Members Absent.

The following members were absent from the meeting held on the 24th March, 1944:—

- (1) Khan Bahadur Naziruddin Ahmad.

- (3) Mr. N. C. Dutta.
- (4) Khan Bahadur Abdul Gofran.
- (5) Alhadj Khan Bahadur Shaikh Mohammad Jan.
- (6) Maulana Muhammad Akram Khan.
- (7) Mr. N. N. Mookherji.
- (8) Mr. T. B. Nimmo.
- (9) Mr. R. S. Purssell.
- (10) Khan Bahadur Kazi Abdur Rashid.
- (11) Dr. K. S. Ray.

BENGAL LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL DEBATES

First Session of 1944—No. 30.

THE COUNCIL met in the Legislative Chamber of the Legislative Building, Calcutta, on Monday, the 17th April, 1944, at 1-30 p.m., being the thirtieth day of the First Session of 1944, pursuant to section 62(2)(a) of the Government of India Act, 1935.

Mr. President (the Hon'ble Sir BIJOY PRASAD SINGH ROY, K.C.I.E.) was in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Allowances to political prisoners.

99. Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Home Department be pleased to state whether it is a fact that in spite of the declaration of the Government of Bengal, the allowances to political prisoners have not yet been increased? If so, when will the same be increased and actually paid to them in view of abnormal rise in prices?

Mr. BIREN ROY, PARLIAMENTARY SECRETARY (on behalf of the Hon'ble Khwaja Sir Nazimuddin): No. It is not a fact.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: When was this question put?

Mr. BIREN ROY: Perhaps six months ago.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Since when have the allowances been increased?

Mr. BIREN ROY: Since the date of the declaration by Government in the Press.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: What is the date of the declaration?

Mr. BIREN ROY: August, 1943.

Deaths due to malaria.

100. Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Public Health and Local Self-Government Department be pleased to state—

- (a) the number of deaths due to malaria and cholera in the Province, district by district, during 1942 and up to June in 1943;
- (b) the quantity of quinine distributed in each district during that period;
- (c) the sums of money actually spent in each district for the supply of drinking water during that period; and
- (d) what urgent steps the Government propose to take to meet this extraordinary and abnormal situation?

Mr. BIREN ROY, PARLIAMENTARY SECRETARY (on behalf of the Minister in charge of the Public Health and Local Self-Government Department): (a) to (c) A statement is laid in the Library.

(d) The following steps have been taken by Government to deal with the situation :—

- (1) More than 2,000 beds were provided in 11 hospitals in and around Calcutta for medical treatment of sick destitutes.
- (2) Emergency Relief hospitals have been opened in 26 districts.
- (3) Special arrangements have been made to facilitate speedy supply of drugs to these hospitals.
- (4) By arrangement with the Government of India several Burma Medical Officers and Sanitary Inspectors have been employed on medical relief work in the Province; 200 sweepers have also been brought from the United Provinces for work in emergency hospitals.
- (5) Fifty-six Military Medical Officers have been lent by Government of India to work as Subdivisional Health Officers. Government of Bengal pay their travelling allowances and other incidental expenses.
- (6) Sanction has been accorded to the opening of out-patient treatment centres working from 1,400 dispensaries for free distribution of quinine and other medicines.
- (7) One thousand special Sanitary Assistants are employed on anti-epidemic inoculation and vaccination in the districts.
- (8) Anti-cholera vaccine and smallpox lymph, drugs and disinfectants have also been provided by Government.
- (9) Government has also sanctioned a sum of Rs.17 lakhs for repair and re-sinking of derelict tube-wells.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: In view of the gravity of the situation, do the Government consider that the arrangements and provisions made are quite sufficient for the purpose?

Mr. BIREN ROY: For the present, yes.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state, with reference to answer (6), when was sanction accorded and whether the work has been completed according to the Government scheme?

Mr. BIREN ROY: For the date, I want notice. But the work has already been started and distribution of quinine has already begun.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Is the Government aware that in spite of the steps taken by Government to deal with malaria, quinine is not available in some of the districts?

Mr. BIREN ROY: It is not a fact that in some districts quinine is not available, but it may be possible that in some places it may not be available for a time.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Is the Hon'ble Minister aware that in spite of the repeated reminder given by the Health Officer of the Dacca Municipality, quinine was not sent there in good time?

1944.]

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Mr. BIREN ROY: It may be that it could not be sent in good time on account of heavy rush of demand; but it was supplied since.

Fire in Tollygunge Bustee Area.

101. Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Home Department be pleased to state whether it is a fact that at Tollygunge at noon on the 8th March, 1944, an aeroplane catching fire fell in a bustee area resulting in a terrible accident and explosion?

(b) Is it a fact that there the huts caught fire as a result of the falling of the burning plane and several huts were burnt down?

(c) Is it a fact that in the crash of the falling aeroplane, several people were killed and several injured? How many were killed and how many were injured and of them how many were seriously injured? Of the killed and injured how many were women and how many children? How many of the injured died subsequently?

(d) Will Government compensate the injured and the relatives of the killed? If not, why not?

(e) Is it a fact that the Government Rescue Parties arrived very late to render timely aid to the dying and the wounded and is it a fact that they failed to make a correct estimate of the dead, dying and the wounded who would total not less than a hundred?

Mr. BIREN ROY, PARLIAMENTARY SECRETARY (on behalf of the Minister in charge of the Home Department): (a) and (b) Yes.

(c) Yes. 37 killed, including 3 missing, believed killed and 3 died in hospital; 7 injured, including 1 seriously. (10 men, 22 women, 12 children.)

(d) Compensation will be paid as soon as particulars are complete.

(e) All services were prompt in rendering help to the injured and in Salvage and Rescue Work. A.R.P. First Aid Parties were prompt in rendering first aid to and removing the injured to hospital and all the injured were admitted by 1 p.m. It is not a fact that casualties were greatly underestimated.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state if he is aware that this question was a short-notice question?

Mr. BIREN ROY: Yes, it was a short-notice question. But it has been exhaustively replied to.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, since it was a short-notice question, may I ask why it was not replied earlier?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Was it a short-notice question?

Mr. BIREN ROY: It was not exactly a short-notice question—

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, it was a short-notice question—

Mr. BIREN ROY: Sir, it was a question which was replied—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Was it admitted as a short-notice question?

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, in the Assembly a short-notice question exactly on the same line was admitted but—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Das, let me find out what is the position. In the meantime, let us proceed with the other question. I shall find out whether it was admitted as a short-notice question or not.

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: Arising out of (a) of the answer where it is stated "37 killed, including 3 missing, believed killed * * *", has the Government been able to find out yet whether these people were really killed or missing?

Mr. BIREN ROY: The position is that there was a heavy fire and many persons were burnt beyond recognition; therefore, it was not possible to find out whether they were killed or missing. Records made in the locality about the number of persons missing is 3. It was not reported in the hospital or in the cremation ground. So it is believed that these people were killed.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Is it a fact that earlier reports published in the newspapers put down the total number of casualties at 100?

Mr. BIREN ROY: No.

Fire in a South Calcutta Bustee Area.

102. Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Home Department be pleased to state if he is aware that a South Calcutta bustee has been practically swept away by a disastrous fire caused by the crash of a training aircraft?

(b) If so, will he please state the number of deaths and injured involved in this accident?

(c) Is it a fact that no fire lanes were provided in this bustee? If so, why?

(d) Is he aware that Mr. Haridas Majumdar, M.L.C., previously put down a question indicating the desirability of opening fire lanes in the Calcutta bustee?

(e) Is it a fact that no compensation, even of a casual nature, has been awarded to the living relatives of the victims? If so, why?

(f) Do the Government propose to consider the desirability of holding a non-official enquiry into the matter? If so, what steps have been taken by them in this connection?

Mr. BIREN ROY, PARLIAMENTARY SECRETARY (on behalf of the Hon'ble Khwaja Sir Nazimuddin): (a) Yes.

(b) Dead 34, injured 7, missing 3.

(c) Yes. Fire lanes have been provided in the larger bustees for the purpose of (1) preventing spread of fire, (2) allowing access to Fire Brigade. Fire lanes are not practicable in small bustees.

(d) Yes.

(e) All possible help was rendered to the distressed people. The homeless were taken to a Relief Centre where they were fed and clothed. Monetary compensation will be paid as soon as particulars are complete.

(f) No. The Government are satisfied that this was an accident and that loss of life and fire were unavoidable.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, may I know how the Government reconcile the two answers, I mean answer to the present question and to my question No. 101? In answer to my question the number of persons killed has been given as 37 killed and 3 died in hospital and 7 injured; but in the present question No. 102, the number of dead has been put at 34, injured 7 and missing 3. How do the Government explain the position?

Mr. BIREN ROY: It must be a printing mistake.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Then which answer is correct, the previous one or this one?

Mr. BIREN ROY: Three persons died in hospital subsequently.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Still there is a difference of 3.

Mr. BIREN ROY: In answer to question No. 101, it has been stated: 37 killed, including 3 missing whom the Government thought to have been killed. So, it should be 34 plus 3 died in hospital.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I think 37 includes the 3 persons who subsequently died in hospital.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: It should be 40. Thirty-seven killed plus 3 died in hospital.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: If there was a comma after "killed", it would have been 40; but there is no comma after the words "believed killed". So the number should be 37 in all.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Yes, I think it is quite clear, Mr. Das.

As regards the short-notice question of Mr. Lalit Chandra Das, I find that the question was admitted by me as a short-notice question but Government refused to answer that short-notice question.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: But, Sir, the Hon'ble Minister has actually admitted this question and replied this question in the Assembly; so how can he refuse to answer that short-notice question here?

Mr. PRESIDENT: There should be no reference to the other place. You should stand on your own rights.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: I stand on my own rights. But he should be reasonable and should not be partial to one House and unjust to the other. That is my protest.

Mr. BIREN ROY: Sir, it is very difficult to reply to this statement.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Why?

Mr. BIREN ROY: Because in the Assembly the question was asked at a later date when we had better information; but here the short-notice question was tabled just after the occurrence when much information was not in our possession.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Questions Nos. 103 and 104 will be answered tomorrow, as the Hon'ble Mr. Suhrawardy is absent today.

Roads on the Hastings Bridge.

105. Mr. NARESH NATH MOOKERJEE: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Communications and Works Department be pleased to state who is responsible for reconditioning the road surface on the Hastings Bridge which is in a most deplorable condition?

MINISTER in charge of the COMMUNICATIONS and WORKS DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Mr. Barada Prasanna Pain): The Department of Communications and Works.

Yield of paddy in Bengal.

106. Mr. NACENDRA NATH MAHALANOBIS: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Agriculture Department be pleased to state if the Government are aware that production of paddy per acre in Bengal is the lowest in the world and that every other paddy-producing country grows on an average at least double the quantity per acre?

(b) If so, do the Government propose to institute an enquiry into the causes thereof and take immediate and effective steps to increase the production of paddy in Bengal?

MINISTER in charge of the AGRICULTURE DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Saiyed Muazzamuddin Hosain): (a) On the information available the yield of paddy in Bengal seems very low as compared with other paddy-producing countries, but it cannot be said definitely that it is the lowest or that it is only half of the yield in other countries.

(b) The Paddy and Rice Enquiry Committee appointed in 1938 inquired into the matter and recommended the use of improved seeds and cheap but efficient manures and also provision for irrigation facilities. The Agriculture and Irrigation Departments are taking action on these lines.

Cattle-breeding.

107. Mr. NUR AHMED: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Agriculture Department be pleased to state if it is a fact that the consumption of milk per head in Bengal has been reduced during the last ten years?

(b) If so, what measures have been taken by the Government of Bengal to improve cattle-breeding and also to increase the quantity of milk and milk products in Bengal?

(c) Is it a fact that a larger mortality among cattle has taken place during the last ten years in Bengal on account of various animal diseases prevalent in the Province?

(d) If so, what measures have been adopted by the Government to check rinderpest and other animal diseases in Bengal?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: (a) The total supply of milk has not materially decreased during the last ten years. The population of the Province having however increased by about 20 per cent. during this period and the number of milch cows having remained more or less stationary, the average supply of milk per capita has decreased.

(b) A Cattle Improvement Scheme is in operation in 23 districts of the Province. Under this scheme the breeding operations of some 2,000 improved Government bulls are supervised, the scrub deshi bulls castrated, the improved progeny of Government bulls registered, the growing and conservation of fodder crops encouraged and propaganda carried out to improve the feeding of cattle.

(c) No, except that during last one year or so cattle mortality increased to a considerable extent as a result of disease and starvation. It is true that during the last ten years a large number of outbreaks of epidemics were recorded but this was due to improvements effected in the reporting organisation. The position regarding epidemics of cattle diseases before the period in question was certainly not better: only many outbreaks were not reported and hence not recorded.

(d) To ensure effective control of cattle disease Government have taken over the entire itinerant veterinary staff under their control thus enabling themselves to move the staff freely to places where it is most needed. A large number of vaccine production centres have also been established. A scheme for preventive inoculation on a large scale as well as the introduction of a Cattle Diseases Act for more effective control of cattle epidemics are now under the consideration of Government.

Dr. KUMUD SANKAR RAY: What was the per capita supply of milk previously and what it is at the present moment?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: I want notice.

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: Upon what data has the Hon'ble Minister said that the number of cows has remained more or less stationary?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Upon the data supplied by the Live-stock Officer.

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: What is the total cattle population in Bengal?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: The cattle population of Bengal is 25 millions.

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: What is the machinery for calculating this?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: It is the Union Boards who collect these statistics.

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: Is it not a fact that there is a general report from the Union Board?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Yes, there is the printed report of the Union Board.

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: Is not the Hon'ble Minister aware that this report is wholly unsatisfactory, because there is absolutely no chance of getting a correct statement of the position from the chowkidar of a Union Board?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: But that is the best under the circumstances. We are, however, trying to collect more reliable statistics in future.

Dr. KUMUD SANKAR RAY: What is the total supply of milk?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: It is not possible to give any figure; I believe what has been given here in the answer has been given by guess work.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Will the Hon'ble Minister please state whether the staff available is sufficient to cope with the work?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Not at all.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Then what do the Government propose to do in this connection?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Government are just considering the question of entirely reorganising the department and that is why they have imported an expert officer from the Punjab to develop agriculture in Bengal on the lines of the Punjab, if not on a better basis.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Is the Hon'ble Minister not aware that the Punjab officer is an agricultural expert only and has no knowledge of veterinary matters?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Well, this officer was the Principal of an Agricultural College in the Punjab and also dealt with veterinary matters.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Does this officer hold any diploma in veterinary subjects?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: That is not necessary; agriculture includes veterinary.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Will the Hon'ble Minister please state when their scheme of preventive inoculation is going to come into operation?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: The scheme has only been drawn up and has not yet been sanctioned by the Cabinet.

Mr. PRESIDENT: You must resume your seat, Mr. Mazumdar, after you have put your question, and not remain standing.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: All right, Sir. I am sorry.

Dr. KUMUD SANKAR RAY: Does the scheme contemplate free inoculation?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Yes, absolutely free inoculation; but as an experimental measure it will be started only in certain districts.

"Grow More Food" campaign.

108. Mr. BIRENDRA KISHORE ROY CHOWDHURY: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Agriculture Department be pleased to state what steps the Government propose to take to push effectively the "Grow More Food" campaign among the agriculturists, besides circulating posters, bulletins, leaflets, etc., among the agriculturist masses?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: The policy of Government in connection with the "Grow More Food" campaign is not merely to make propaganda with a view to induce cultivators to cultivate more land and grow more food but also to arrange to supply to them an adequate quantity of improved seeds and cheap but efficient manures and to provide irrigation facilities so that a better yield may be secured and additional crops may be raised. It is also the policy of Government to reclaim waste land as far as possible for the cultivation of food and fodder crops.

Schemes for supply of seeds during 1944-45 including those of aman, aus, rabi and fodder crops at a cost of more than Rs.51 lakhs have been sanctioned and other schemes are being considered.

Some minor irrigation schemes have been executed and several other schemes—both major and minor—are now under consideration. A scheme for the use of Persian Wheels has been sanctioned and demonstration regarding it has been undertaken.

Vegetable seeds have been distributed on a fairly large scale and Government are considering how best their production can be increased.

To replenish the stock of cattle Government are exploring the possibilities of importing cattle from other provinces and in the meantime loans have been sanctioned on a generous scale to enable the poorer cultivators who sold their cattle for maintenance to purchase cattle.

At the instance of this Government, the Central Government have amended the Defence of India Rules, and a Waste Land Cultivation Order is being prepared for taking power to compel owners and occupiers of waste land to cultivate it for growing food and fodder crops and, if they default, to settle such land with others for the purpose. The Railway Administrations have agreed to their surplus lands being settled with cultivators for growing food and fodder crops and enquiries are now in progress to locate such lands fit for cultivation for the purpose.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Will the Hon'ble Minister please state whether any cattle has been actually imported from outside into this province? If so, how many?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: No cattle has been yet imported by Government but negotiations are going on with the Central Provinces and the Bihar Governments.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Since when?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: For nearly a month. Formerly the Bihar animals used to come through northern Bengal, but this year we learn that only 25 per cent. of the usual number came this year. We, accordingly, started negotiations with the Bihar Government and we found that an embargo was placed by that Government on the export of cattle from Bihar. We asked for a permit to import 50,000 cattle from Bihar.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: As a result of continued negotiation, is there any hope that the embargo will be removed?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: We hope so. We sent letters to the Bihar Government and then sent a telegram and not getting any reply we made a trunk call on the 'phone. We have now been informed that the matter is now in the hands of the Governor. In view of their difficulties they are thinking whether they can render any help to us or not.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state how much money has been placed in the hands of poorer cultivators for the purchase of cattle?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: How can I say that at this stage? It is being paid now.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state whether any waste land has been reclaimed so far? If so, how much?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: No campaign has yet been started for reclamation under the Waste Land Cultivation Order. But some waste land has been reclaimed. The Waste Land Cultivation Order is going to be published soon.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: It has been stated in the answer that it is also the policy of Government to reclaim waste land as far as possible for the cultivation of food and fodder crops: has that policy been implemented?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: That has not been started yet. It is now a voluntary process and people are now being induced to grow more food crops. But now we are going to make it compulsory by enforcing the Waste Land Cultivation Order.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state how much waste land has been so far reclaimed?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: I cannot give you the exact area. But the information of the Agriculture Department is that about 8 lakhs acres of land have been reclaimed so far.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state through what agency the seeds are being distributed?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Through the demonstrators of the Agriculture Department.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Is it a fact that seeds are being distributed through the steamer companies?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: No, I am not aware of it.

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state whether he is fully satisfied with the result of distribution of seeds through demonstrators and whether they are of a satisfactory nature?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: I am not, because the number of staff is very short. We are thinking of distributing seeds through development officers and jute regulation staff. A Seed Committee is now sitting for considering all these questions and we have asked for their advice.

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state whether he is aware that demonstrators are alleged to have sold seeds in the market at prices higher than the controlled price and pocketed the balance?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: I am not aware that it is the general case; but there have been abuses and prosecutions; one man, as a matter of fact, has been convicted and sent to jail.

Mr. HAMIDUL HUQ CHOWDHURY: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state whether he is considering the desirability of re-examining the question of distribution of seeds through a more suitable agency?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Yes, we are considering the point.

Mr. BIRENDRA KISHORE ROY CHOWDHURY: Will the Government be pleased to state if they are considering the desirability of distributing seeds through the landlords?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Government are too willing to have the co-operation of the landlords, if they come forward to help the Government.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Is the Hon'ble Minister aware that in several areas the distribution is not at all satisfactory?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Yes. But I am not quite sure that it is as bad as the honourable member says.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: What steps are being taken to have a fair and equitable distribution?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: The question is being examined.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Is it under the contemplation of Government to distribute seeds through the Presidents of Union Boards and other public associations and also through landlords?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: We cannot entrust the whole work to the landlords, because we know that only a few landlords may be willing to do this work but not all.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state whether Government is marking the time now when the time for actual sowing is fast passing, and waiting for the report of the Seed Committee?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: This committee is to consider about the distribution of seeds for the future, about the policy to be adopted for the future distribution of seeds and not regarding the steps to be taken for the distribution of seeds this year.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: With reference to the minor irrigation schemes, will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state how many minor irrigation schemes have been executed this year?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: This year very few have been executed; but recently Rs. 1 lakh of rupees have been placed under the control of the District Magistrate of each district for getting through minor schemes as quickly as possible.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Then Government is not sure whether any scheme has actually been taken in hand or will be executed soon?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Das, put your question in a question form. Do not enter into arguments.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, the Hon'ble Minister has stated in the reply that "some minor irrigation schemes have been executed and several other schemes—both major and minor—are now under consideration". So I want to know from him, through you, Sir, how many minor schemes have been executed and at what cost?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: I cannot say that now but last year Rs. 10,000 was sanctioned for these schemes and this sum was placed at the disposal of the District Magistrates. Some District Magistrates have spent the sum, others have not.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Is the Hon'ble Minister aware that the steps already taken by Government for carrying on propaganda regarding the "Grow More Food" campaign are not at all satisfactory and adequate?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: I do not think that the propaganda is not satisfactory. There is a lot of paper propaganda but I want more work and propaganda.

"Grow More Food" campaign.

109. Mr. BIRENDRA KISHORE ROY CHOWDHURY: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Agriculture Department be pleased to state—

- (a) whether the Government of Bengal contemplate to substitute a section of the production of jute by the production of foodgrains, mainly rice, in view of the acute shortage of foodstuffs noticed during the last year and in pursuance of "Grow More Food" campaign; and
- (b) what steps have been taken by the Government to exploit the possibility of extensive production of wheat in the Province to make her less dependent on other provinces for wheat?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Saiyed MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: (a) The maximum area for cultivation of jute in 1944 has been fixed at the same as in 1943, i.e., at half of the acreage registered in 1940. From the experience of last year it may be safely inferred that this will not interfere with the "Grow More Food" campaign. In 1943, the cultivators planted only 79 per cent. of the maximum acreage permitted while there was a large increase in the acreage under aus and aman paddy. In view of the high prices of food crops and the fact that seeds of improved varieties will be distributed according to the subsidy system it is likely that cultivators will take more to food crops as in 1943.

(b) Wheat seeds were distributed in the last season at half price to bring new lands under wheat. For increasing the outturn of wheat crop, a scheme for irrigation by means of Persian Wheels has also been sanctioned. It is proposed to distribute 40,000 maunds of wheat seeds during 1944-45.

Failure of crop in Contai.

110. Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Revenue Department be pleased to state if his attention has been drawn to the fact that in the Contai subdivision of the Midnapore district, the people are in distressed condition in the coastal belt area due to failure of crop?

(b) If so, does he propose to start test relief works and continue relief operations?

MINISTER in charge of the REVENUE DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Mr. Tarak Nath Mukerjee): (a) Yes.

(b) After the cyclone of 1942 test relief works were taken up on a large scale in the coastal belt area and were continued up to the last rains when they had to be curtailed in order that labourers might be available for cultivation work. The question of re-starting test relief works in the area is now under consideration. There has been no stoppage of other relief operations.

Khan Bahadur M. A. MOMIN: Is it a fact that payments for test works which were executed last year have not yet been made?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: The question is too general. Does the honourable member want to know the position of Contai or of other places?

Khan Bahadur M. A. MOMIN: I intentionally made it general, as I did not want to embarrass the Government by putting it specifically.

Mr. PRESIDENT: If it is general, you cannot put the question.

Khan Bahadur M. A. MOMIN: Is it a fact that unless fresh test works are undertaken soon, test works done last year will all be spoilt? For instance, with regard to the test works in Burdwan, if fresh test works are not undertaken, there they will all be spoilt.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Does that question arise?

Khan Bahadur M. A. MOMIN: Because the Government has not yet decided whether the test works would be taken up soon.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: With reference to the question of re-starting test relief works, will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state when the consideration or the conception stage will be passed?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: As soon as they are fully considered.

Grievances of Hat Owners' Association.

111. Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Revenue Department be pleased to state if he is aware of the fact that the Hat Owners' Association, Calcutta, waited on a deputation on the then Revenue Minister on the 20th November, 1942, for redress of their grievances?

(b) Is he aware that among other demands they pressed specially for (i) suspension of all ejectment suits instituted since the beginning of the war during its pendency by executive action or a special ordinance; and (ii) postponement till the end of the war of all decrees for arrears of rent and provision for repayment of outstandings by 36 instalments thereafter?

(c) Is he aware that further representations to the same effect were submitted to His Excellency the Governor of Bengal on the 5th April, 1943?

(d) Is he also aware that a further representation was made to the Governor on the 14th September, 1943?

(e) Is he aware that on the 17th September, 1943, the Assistant Secretary to the Governor intimated that the said memorial had been forwarded to the Revenue Department for necessary action?

(f) Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state what action, if any, has been taken in the matter?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: (a) to (e) Yes.

(f) In view of the fact that the demand for houses in Calcutta even in the bustee areas has tremendously increased, the Hat Owners are not expected to experience any difficulties in realising rents from their Thika Projas and in paying their own rents to their landlords. No action is, therefore, called for at present.

Suspension or remission of rents in Contai.

112. Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Revenue Department be pleased to state if his attention has been drawn to the fact that the condition of the peasantry of the Contai subdivision has seriously affected their paying capacity due to failure of crops in various parts of the subdivision caused by Kalighai and Subarnarekha floods in August, 1943, in succession to the cyclone devastation of the previous year?

(b) If so, does he propose to consider the desirability of (i) exempting from payment of rent and taxes for the 1349 and 1350 B.S., and (ii) postponing realisation of loan money till the crop of 1351 B.S. is harvested?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: (a) Yes. The paying capacity of the cultivators in some areas of the subdivision has been affected by the failure of crops.

(b) (i) Suspension or remission of rents is governed by the provisions of Chapter XIV of the Tauzi Manual. Realisation of rents due from tenants in estates directly managed by Government were suspended for 1349 B.S. But no general suspension is considered necessary for 1350 B.S.

(ii) Only one quarter of the loans advanced after the cyclone of 1942 is recoverable this year and it is considered that the bigger cultivators should be able to repay this without much inconvenience?

Staff in the Calcutta Quinine Sale Department.

113. Khan Sahib ABDUL AZIZ: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Forest and Excise Department be pleased to state the total number of clerks, Sale Managers and other staff in the Calcutta Quinine Sale Department at Calcutta? Of them how many are Muslims, how many are Scheduled Castes and how many are non-Muslims?

(b) What are the qualifications, salary, pay and other emoluments, and the date of appointment of each of these staff?

(c) Was any advertisement published for filling up the posts in this Department in 1942, 1943 and 1944? If not, why not?

MINISTER in charge of the FOREST and EXCISE DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Mr. Prem Hari Barma): (a) and (b) A statement is laid on the Table.

(c) Most of the staff were drafted on to the Quinine Sale Depot from the Presidency Jail where the distribution of quinine used to be carried on before the Sale Depot was opened in February, 1942. Since the opening of the depot only two clerical appointments have been made by direct recruitment of two Muslims from outside. These two vacancies were not advertised. Superintendent, Cinchona, has been asked to advertise all future vacancies.

College of Pharmacy in Bengal.

114. Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Public Health and Local Self-Government Department be pleased to state—

- what action has been taken by the Government of Bengal to establish the College of Pharmacy in Bengal for which a donation of Rs.2,00,000 has been offered by Dr. D. E. Anklesaria of Ahmedabad;
- what steps have been taken to improve the system of training of the Compounders (Pharmacists) on the basis of the proposal formulated by the All-Bengal Compounders' Association (now Bengal Pharmaceutical Association) in the year 1934 and submitted to the Government by the State Medical Faculty of Bengal;
- what action has been taken by the Government to improve the status, prospects and pay of the Compounders (Pharmacists) after the raising of the minimum preliminary qualification for training to Matriculation of the University and the extension of the period of training to two years from 1928; and

(d) what amount is spent annually for training of the Compounders (Pharmacists)?

Mr. BIREN ROY, PARLIAMENTARY SECRETARY (on behalf of the Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi Jalaluddin Ahmad): (a) The proposal has been kept in abeyance as being impracticable during the continuance of the war.

(b) No action has been taken as the proposal to establish a College of Pharmacy includes this matter also.

(c) None, as the tendency after 1930 was a general revision of pays in a downward direction.

(d) No separate account is kept: the compounder-students are trained in Government Medical Schools.

Dr. KUMUD SANKAR RAY: What happened to the offer of 2 lakhs of rupees which was made to the Government? Was the money actually paid to the Government?

Mr. BIREN ROY: No; the money was not paid to the Government. But the matter proceeded up to the point of an estimate for the college building and an estimate for the capital and recurring expenditure of running it. But that was in 1941 and then it has been abandoned for the duration of the war.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: When was the offer made?

Mr. BIREN ROY: In 1939.

Dr. KUMUD SANKAR RAY: Is the offer still open or it is withdrawn?

Mr. BIREN ROY: The offer is still open.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: What is the estimated cost for the establishment of such a college?

Mr. BIREN ROY: At first the estimate was Rs. 5 lakhs; but subsequently it has been revised. Now it will be approximately Rs. 7 lakhs.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: What is the recurring cost?

Mr. BIREN ROY: Rs. 73,000 per annum.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Will the Hon'ble Minister please state whether he proposes to request Dr. Anklesaria to raise the amount of the donation to Rs. 3 lakhs in order that the grant may be within the estimated amount of expenditure?

Mr. BIREN ROY: As Government is not proceeding with the scheme at the present moment, it does not think it advisable to write to the donor requesting him to increase the grant.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: How is it that Government think it impracticable during the continuance of the war to establish a College of Pharmacy? Why should it be impossible to build a College of Pharmacy?

Mr. BIREN ROY: Because no brick is available and therefore no building can be erected.

Dr. KUMUD SANKAR RAY: Will the Hon'ble Minister please say how long the donor has agreed to keep the offer open?

Mr. BIREN ROY: That is not known to Government.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Was any attempt made by Government to procure bricks through contractors?

Mr. BIREN ROY: It is against the Control Order.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: What does the Hon'ble Minister mean by "Control Order"?

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: In order to obviate the difficulty of procuring bricks, will Government consider the desirability of housing the college in a rented building?

Mr. BIREN ROY: At the present moment that also is not easy, because in Calcutta there is house shortage and such a house will not be easily available.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Cannot such a building be secured in the vicinity of Calcutta?

Mr. BIREN ROY: As Government had already dropped the question before such a question was asked, they are not in a position to consider the matter.

Dr. KUMUD SANKAR RAY: If the proposal has been dropped, then what does the Hon'ble Minister mean by saying that the offer is still open?

Mr. BIREN ROY: As the donor has not yet withdrawn the offer, the offer may be said to be still open.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Will the Hon'ble Minister please ascertain from Dr. Anklesaria if he is willing to raise his donation to 3 lakhs?

Mr. BIREN ROY: I have already answered that question.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Will the Government kindly reconsider the matter and start the college in a rented house and try to rent such a house in the vicinity of Calcutta or outside?

Mr. BIREN ROY: The question is not only a question of house, but also of a very big plot of land to be attached to such a house and that is not available at the present moment. Government will take up the matter after the war and establish such a College of Pharmacy then.

Representations of Pharmacists on the Governing Body of the State Medical Faculty of Bengal.

115. Mr. HUMAYUN KABIR: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Public Health and Local Self-Government Department be pleased to state—

- (a) whether there was any demand from the Pharmacists (Compounders) to have their two representatives in the Governing Body of the State Medical Faculty of Bengal, which body is the registering and controlling authority of the said profession of Pharmacists or Compounders;
- (b) if so, what steps have been taken in the matter;
- (c) whether any action has been taken on the resolution passed by the Bengal Pharmaceutical Association and submitted to the Government to change the present designation "Compounders" to "Pharmacists";
- (d) what steps have been taken to increase the scale of pay of Compounders; and
- (e) why the Government have appointed unqualified and untrained compounders as compounders-cum-clerks in the famine hospitals without availing the services of the qualified and experienced compounders attached to the hospital and dispensaries like that of the medical officers?

Mr. BIREN ROY, PARLIAMENTARY SECRETARY (on behalf of the Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi Jalaluddin Ahmad): (a) Yes.

(b) and (c) The proposals are under consideration of Government.

(d) The question of increasing the pay of compounders was not considered at the time in view of the general downward revision of pay of all employees under Government.

(e) Some unqualified men have been appointed as compounder-cum-clerks in some 20-bed emergency hospitals as qualified compounders were not available in sufficient number. The services of qualified compounders attached to the existing mufasil hospitals and dispensaries will, however, be utilised in the 20-bedded emergency hospitals located therein.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Here is a question on the agenda paper for answer—who is going to answer it on behalf of the Hon'ble Minister in charge? I have no information from the Hon'ble Minister. Either somebody should take responsibility for answering his question or there should be a request to hold back the question. It is not for me to suggest the holding back of the question. This is very unsatisfactory.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: I am sorry, Sir. This may be taken up tomorrow.

Mr. PRESIDENT: All right.

Adjournment motion.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I have received notice of a motion for adjournment of the House by Mr. Lalit Chandra Das which runs as follows:—

"That this Council do adjourn its business to discuss a definite matter of urgent public importance and of recent occurrence, namely, the very serious situation which has arisen out of the communal disturbance which occurred at the Chaitra Sankranti Mela on the 13th April last at Ghagar under the police-station of Kotalipara within the district of Faridpur which resulted in some person being killed and eight women missing, the Government having failed not merely in preventing the clash but also in tracing the women and recovering and restoring them as yet to their proper guardians."

Mr. Das, what have you got to say in support of this motion?

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, it is a very serious matter. There is no doubt that riots take place in different parts of the country; but the position becomes serious when one community falls upon another, particularly in connection with a religious function. This particular incident took place on the 13th April last on the Chaitra Sankranti day when for the observance of some religious function people gathered together at Ghagar within the Kotalipara police-station in the Faridpur district. Members of one community fell upon another with the result that one person was killed, which in itself is very serious,—and over and above this eight women were abducted and they have not been traced and restored to their proper guardians even now. This is very serious in all conscience. The place of occurrence is near the police-station of Kotalipara. So the police, if they could not prevent the occurrence, could have at least traced these unfortunate women and restored them to their proper guardians. I bring this fact to the notice of the Council. But if Government make a statement in the matter and if it is regarded as satisfactory I shall not move the adjournment motion at all. I want the Government to make a statement as to what steps Government are taking or propose to take in the matter.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: The Hon'ble Minister in charge of Home Department who is to deal with the matter is not in Calcutta. He is expected to return tomorrow. So, I would request the honourable member to put it off till tomorrow.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Das has suggested that if Government makes a statement he will not press the motion. In that view of the matter, I am prepared to waive the question of urgency and will allow him to bring it up tomorrow.

Mr. MESBAHUDDIN AHMED: Tomorrow or on the next sitting day.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Are we not going to meet tomorrow?

Mr. MESBAHUDDIN AHMED: May or may not.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Very well, if we do not meet tomorrow, we will take it up on the next meeting day. I hope Government will be ready with a statement. After hearing the statement, I shall decide whether the motion should be admitted or not.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Sir, there is another adjournment motion standing in my name.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I have not seen that yet.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: But, Sir, it has been distributed to us all.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I understand it had not been received by the office in time, so the adjournment motion cannot be taken up today.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: But, Sir, it had been received by the office at 10-30 a.m.—that is, three hours before the sitting of the Council.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Do you mind moving your adjournment motion tomorrow?

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: All right, Sir.

Mr. K. C. ROY CHOWDHURY: Sir, I have also sent in a notice for an adjournment motion.

Mr. PRESIDENT: That is not before me. Next item.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, I have got a short-notice question regarding the bhog ration—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order, order. I have already called the next item.

Governor's assent to Bill.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I have to inform the House that the Bengal Finance (Sales Tax) Amendment Bill, 1944, which was passed by both Chambers of the Bengal Legislature, has been assented to by His Excellency the Governor under the provisions of section 75 of the Government of India Act, 1935.

SECRETARY (Dr. S. K. D. Gupta): Sir, the following communication has been received from the Government intimating the action taken by them on the motion regarding the Trading and Occupation of Land

(Transvaal and Natal) Act, 1943, moved and adopted by the Council on the 16th July, 1943, under rule 112 of the Bengal Legislative Council Procedure Rules:—

“A copy of the address on the subject, together with copies of the debates thereon in the Bengal Legislative Council, has been forwarded to the Government of India for necessary action.”

Mr. PRESIDENT: Before we proceed with the next item of business, I may inform the House that 6 nominations have been received for election to the committee for considering the draft amendments to rules 56, 57, 58 of the Bengal Legislative Council Procedure Rules. I appoint, Tuesday, the 25th April, 1944, 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. as the date and time for holding the election to the committee. The election will be held in the ante-chamber of the President on the ground floor of the Legislative Building.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: With reference to my adjournment motion regarding bhog ration for the Hindu deities, I want an answer to my short-notice question to be given by the Supply Minister.

Mr. PRESIDENT: He is not here. You may mention it tomorrow.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, I mention this matter today so that the Hon'ble Minister for Civil Supplies, who is so scarce in this House, may come prepared with the statement tomorrow.

Mr. PRESIDENT: He will be here tomorrow and you may mention your adjournment motion tomorrow.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, a statement has been circulated to us which shows that the total number of questions still lying unanswered is 145. It appears that several questions are pending from the first session of 1943. There is one question of 1942 on which we do not lay so much stress; but there are some questions pending from the first session of 1943. We want to know what will happen to these questions. Do the Hon'ble Ministers seriously intend to answer these questions? It is a valued right of the members of this House to have replies and answers to their questions and that is why we devote one hour out of our daily sitting for two hours to questions. It seems the Hon'ble Ministers do not care to answer questions.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: I have drawn the attention of the Hon'ble Ministers concerned to the pending list of questions and requested them to answer the questions as quickly as possible during this session.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Are Government ready with their replies now? There was a recess of over a fortnight, and Government should have prepared their replies during this time?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Sir, most of the answers are included in today's list. Having regard to this, I think many of these questions have been answered since then.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Khan Bahadur Sahib, I understand that these questions are outstanding excluding the questions that have been answered today.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Sir, in the footnote I find only those outstanding questions which became due for answers on or before 2nd April, 1944, have been included.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Yes.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN:

Since then, as far as I remember, in respect of my department there were only 9 questions outstanding, and I answered 4 of them today—

Mr. PRESIDENT: The practice is that only questions which are not answered within 15 days are shown as pending. The questions which were replied to today were not included in the pending list. Now, Khan Bahadur Sahib, what do you propose to do with these questions?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN:

Sir, all that I can do is to tell my colleagues to expedite the answers.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I regret to observe that this is an attitude of non-co-operation on the part of Government with this House. As the custodian of the rights and privileges of this House, I must impress upon Government that this is not the proper way of dealing with the Legislature.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, the Hon'ble Ministers are being paid by the rate-payers—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order, order. That point does not arise. I have been very clear that Government should answer the questions when they propose to do so. But whether Government will answer these questions or not is entirely their discretion; but they cannot keep questions pending indefinitely.

Now, what do you propose to do?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN:

I may again tell the Hon'ble Ministers that the Hon'ble President wants that these questions must be answered.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I hope that you will be able to impress upon your colleagues that the House is feeling impatient on account of the delay in answering the questions. It is not fair.

The Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja SHAHABUDDIN: Sir, with reference to your observation I may assure you that Government do not want to disregard this House or unnecessarily delay in answering the questions. I may draw your attention to the fact that there are only two departments which are heavily engaged otherwise. You will find that the largest number of questions that remain unanswered are the questions pertaining to the Civil Supply Department and the Home Department. Other departments are making every effort to answer their respective questions. Over and above that, I can assure you that every effort is being made to answer the questions as quickly as possible. The session is continuing and we expect that it may continue for more days, and to answer these remaining 145 questions, it will not take much time.

Mr. PRESIDENT: You will realise, Mr. Shahabuddin that if the session is continuing, the honourable members' right to put in fresh questions is also continuing, and the number of questions will go on increasing. The Chair fully appreciates the point you are trying to make out that these two departments are the most heavily worked. I understand that in other countries also there are Government departments which are equally heavily worked but still the special responsibility of answering questions devolves upon the Ministers of the Crown. So, your explanation, I am afraid, does not satisfy me, and I am sure, the members of the House, as well. I may assure Mr. Sahabuddin that I do not like to make these observations but it is my duty to draw the attention of Government to these laches.

The Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja SHAHABUDDIN: I am also sorry that these observations should have to be made by the Chair but I can assure you, Sir, that it is only our work in the service of the public that prevents us from answering these questions in time.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: But the Hon'ble Mr. Sahabuddin ought to remember that these questions also are asked in the public interest. If you are a public servant that you describe yourself to be, you too should fulfil your duty.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I hope Mr. Shahabuddin has got considerable influence with his Cabinet colleagues and he will impress upon them that answers to these questions should be expedited as far as possible.

Dr. KUMUD SANKAR RAY: Sir, if after your request we do not get our questions answered, what is the position that we stand in?

Mr. PRESIDENT: No remedy lies with the Chair.

The Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja SHAHABUDDIN: You can move a motion of adjournment of the House.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: That is not the reply which befits a popular Minister. It seems that underneath your "popularity", there is Hitlerism.

The Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja SHAHABUDDIN: It is nothing new, Sir, to have some questions outstanding.

Mr. PRESIDENT: As I take it that Government are going to apply their serious consideration to this matter, we need not further pursue this matter.

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: Sir, from the way Mr. Sahabuddin is speaking, it appears that he will make no effort whatsoever.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Well, those observations of Mr. Shahabuddin were aside—and not meant for the Chair. (Laughter.)

Report of the Select Committee on the Bengal Diseases of Animals Bill, 1944.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The next item is the presentation of the Report of the Select Committee on the Bengal Diseases of Animals Bill, 1944.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: On a point of privilege, Sir. The Select Committee's Report has been submitted by the Hon'ble Minister but should not time be allowed to give notices of amendments or for motions for circulation?

Mr. PRESIDENT: What I was going to suggest is this: let us take up today the motion that the Bill, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration. Let us discuss that matter today and then a date may be fixed for putting in amendments on the clauses of the Bill. I fix 11 a.m. on the 20th April as the last date for putting in amendments, so that consideration of the Bill, clause by clause, may be taken up on Tuesday, the 25th.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: I beg to move that the Bengal Diseases of Animals Bill, 1944, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Motion moved: That the Bengal Diseases of Animals Bill, 1944, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN:

In this connection, I may state that the Select Committee has not made any very drastic change in the original Bill. Only small changes of a minor nature have been made here and there. So I think that as the Bill is already long before the members of the House, there is no point in putting off the consideration of the Bill to any further date. A date may be fixed for its consideration, clause by clause.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Sir, I may point out to the Hon'ble Minister—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Do you propose to speak on the motion?

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: No, Sir, but I may point out that the note of dissent has not been appended to the Select Committee Report.

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTI: Yes, it has been.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Oh, I am sorry.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I take it that no member is willing to speak on the motion before the House. The question before the House is: that the Bengal Diseases of Animals Bill, 1944, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration.

(The motion was agreed to.)

May I just remind the House that the last date for putting in amendments on the clauses of the Bill is Thursday, the 20th April, 1944, at 11 a.m.?

The House now stands adjourned till 1-30 p.m. tomorrow.

Adjournment.

The Council then adjourned till 1-30 p.m. on Tuesday, the 18th April, 1944.

Members absent.

The following members were absent from the meeting held on the 17th April, 1944:—

BENGAL LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL DEBATES

First Session, 1944—No. 31.

THE COUNCIL met in the Legislative Chamber of the Legislative Building, Calcutta, on Tuesday, the 18th April, 1944, at 1-30 p.m., being the thirty-first day of the First Session of 1944, pursuant to section 62(2)(a) of the Government of India Act, 1935.

Mr. President (the Hon'ble Sir BIJOY PRASAD SINGH ROY, K.C.I.E.) was in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Shops in Calcutta under Rationing Scheme.

103. Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Civil Supplies Department be pleased to state—

- (a) how many Government shops and how many private shops have so far been opened in Calcutta and its suburbs under the Rationing Scheme;
- (b) how many Ration Card holders have been allotted to each Government shop and to each private shop;
- (c) whether the private shops have been selected by the Civil Supplies Department all by themselves;
- (d) whether the Civil Supplies Department consulted the local Chambers of Commerce, such as the Indian, the Bengal National and the Marwari Chambers of Commerce and the Marwari Association in this matter of selecting private shops; if not, why not?
- (e) whether the Government are aware that a large body of public is of opinion that the selections by the Civil Supplies Department is likely to be arbitrary and may lead to corruption;
- (f) how many of these private shops were selected from the existing trade channel; and
- (g) whether the Government are aware that the public are of opinion that Government's selection of shops to meet the demands of rationing in Calcutta and its suburbs has gone mainly contrary to the Government of India's directive to use the existing trade channels to the maximum possible extent?

MINISTER in charge of the CIVIL SUPPLIES DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Mr. H. S. Suhrawardy): (a)

(f) All.

Allegations against the Subdivisional Supply Officer of Narail.

104. Mr. K. C. ROY CHOWDHURY: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Civil Supplies Department be pleased to state whether he is aware that the villagers of Chandibarpur union, police-station Narail, district Jessore, sent a memorial to His Excellency the Governor of Bengal through the Subdivisional Officer, Narail, and the District Magistrate, Jessore, on the 12th September, 1943, containing allegations against the Subdivisional Supply Officer of Narail. If so, will the Hon'ble Minister please enlighten the House as to what were the contents of the said memorial?

(b) Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state how many such allegations have been received by him against this Subdivisional Supply Officer during the year ending on the 31st December, 1943?

(c) If the answer to part (a) be in the affirmative, will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state what action has been taken or is intended to be taken in the matter? If not, why not?

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: (a) Yes.

The memorial contained allegations of favouritism in the selection of traders and official indifference to the then prevailing economic distress.

(b) No other allegations against the Subdivisional Supply Officer were received.

(c) No action was taken or is intended to be taken as the allegations in the memorial were investigated and found to be untrue.

Mr. K. C. ROY CHOWDHURY: Arising out of (c), will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state who were the officers who investigated into these allegations?

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: The District Magistrate of Jessore.

Mr. K. C. ROY CHOWDHURY: Will the Hon'ble Minister kindly state the gist of their report?

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. SUHRAWARDY: The gist of the report is that the allegations were found to be untrue.

Cases before Debt Settlement Boards.

(After reading answer.)

The Hon'ble Mr. JOGENDRA NATH MANDAL: Sir, before I sit down I give an explanation to the House that no printed copy of the question and answer was received in my office. Therefore, my office could not bring it to my notice and consequently I did not attend the Council yesterday.

Mr. PRESIDENT: But I am informed, Mr. Mandal, by the Secretary that it was sent to your office in time.

The Hon'ble Mr. JOGENDRA NATH MANDAL: Might be, Sir, your office sent it to my office in time, but my office said that they had not received any printed copy of the question and answer, and therefore they could not place it before me.

Study allowance to State Prisoners.

117. Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS (on behalf of Mr. Humayun Kabir):

(a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Home Department be pleased to state if he is aware that in the past State prisoners and detenues have been granted by the Government the facilities in the way of study allowance and examination fees?

(b) Is it a fact that such facilities are being at present refused?

(c) Does he propose to reconsider this decision and afford these facilities for study and examination allowances to all persons detained without trial?

MINISTER in charge of the HOME DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Khwaja Sir Nazimuddin): (a) The detenues used to get study allowance, including examination fees, but not the State prisoners.

(b) Yes.

(c) The matter is under the consideration of Government.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Arising out of (c), will the Hon'ble Minister kindly say since when the matter is under the consideration of Government?

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: Since two or three months.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: When it is likely to come to an end?

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: I hope it will come to an end within a month.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Arising out of (b), will the Hon'ble Minister kindly say when the facilities were refused?

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: Since the time when they were detained.

Calcutta Tramways Company.

118. Mr. RANAJIT PAL CHOWDHURY: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Commerce, Labour and Industries Department be pleased to state—

(a) whether the Calcutta Tramways Company is a declared essential service company;

(b) if so, what concessions, on that ground, are granted by the Government to the Company;

(c) the shape or manner in which those concessions or subsidy, etc., are given; and

(d) the amount that has been expended on that score in 1942-43 on that company?

Mr. BIREN ROY, PARLIAMENTARY SECRETARY, (on behalf of the Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja Shahabuddin): (a) Yes, the Essential Services (Maintenance) Ordinance, 1941, has been applied to employment under the company.

- (b) Government do not grant any concession to employers in such cases.
 (c) and (d) Do not arise.

Statement promised in reply to Council question No. 5 of the 17th September, 1942.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Now, Mr. Pain will read his statement in reply to question No. 5.

The Hon'ble Mr. BARADA PROSANNA PAIN: It is a lengthy statement, Sir, and I hope it may be taken as read.

Mr. SHRISH CHANDRA CHAKRAVERTY: What is the question, Sir? We have not got any copy.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I believe it was circulated yesterday. But, do the honourable members propose to put supplementary questions on it?

Many honourable members: Yes, Sir.

Mr. PRESIDENT: In that case, let it stand over.

Adjournment motions.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: May I now move my adjournment motion, so that the Hon'ble the Home Minister who is here now may, if he likes, give us details of the incident? May I tell him through you, Sir,—

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: Sir, I think the permission of the House must first be obtained before Mr. Das can move his adjournment motion.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, the Home Minister does not seem willing to make a statement on the motion, as we understood yesterday that he would—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order, order. I would like to hear the Government view on the subject. Sir Nazimuddin.

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: We have no information on the subject, Sir. All I can say, therefore, is that if the honourable member will put down a short-notice question on the subject, I shall be prepared to give a reply.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: This is very unfortunate, Sir. We understood yesterday that a statement would be made today; but now that the Hon'ble Home Minister finds us at a disadvantage in view of the presence of smaller number of Opposition members today, he does not propose to make any statement but leaves the matter entirely to the vote of the House.

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: I do not think that further time of the House should be wasted in this way, Sir.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Das, you have got to choose between the two courses—either to press your adjournment motion or to put in a short-notice question, as suggested by the Hon'ble Home Minister.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Yesterday, we thought that Government were going to make a statement on the matter but today finding us in a difficult situation the Home Minister asks that the permission of the House should be obtained before I can move my motion.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Take your seat, Mr. Das. You have misunderstood the position. The suggestion came from you yourself that if the Government gave an assurance that they would make a statement on the matter you would not move your motion. That is as far as I remember. The Hon'ble Home Minister was not present in the House yesterday and there was no assurance given on his behalf. So what do you propose to do now?

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: I would, in the first instance, like to read out my adjournment motion to the House, which is as follows:—

“That this Council do adjourn its business to discuss a definite matter of urgent public importance and of recent occurrence, namely, the very serious situation which has arisen out of the communal disturbance which occurred at the Chaitra Sankranti Mela on the 13th April last at Ghagar under the police station of Kotalipara within the district of Faridpur which resulted in some person being killed and eight women missing, the Government having failed not merely in preventing the clash but also in tracing the women and recovering and restoring them as yet to their proper guardians.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I give my consent to the moving of this motion.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: I accordingly beg to move——

Mr. PRESIDENT: Before you formally move your motion, I must first ascertain whether you have got the permission of the House to do so——

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: The message appears——

Mr. PRESIDENT: As I have told you, Mr. Das, the permission of the House must first be obtained: that is to say, it must first of all be found out if you have the support of 13 members in favour of your motion. Therefore, those who are in favour of the motion will stand up.

(Less than 13 members stood up.)

As less than 13 members have stood up, I take it that leave to move the motion is refused.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Sir, the next adjournment motion stands in my name. You ruled yesterday that I might raise this question today and I am doing so.

Mr. PRESIDENT: What have you to say in support of your motion? Why do you place the responsibility on the Government for what has happened in this case?

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: The judgment of the Honourable the Chief Justice has already been published in the newspapers and therein it has been revealed that Government has interfered with the course of justice——

Mr. PRESIDENT: What is the urgency?

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: The urgency lies in this that justice has been interfered with and there is apprehension that in similar cases such interference may take place again. Indeed, we do not know whether such instances are not already taking place; so, in order to prevent the recurrence of such happenings and incidents I want to bring forward this motion for discussion on the floor of the House. There are various other matters also connected with this which require ventilation.

Mr. PRESIDENT: May I hear from Government about this matter?

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: I think, Sir, there is no urgency in the matter and it is purely an expression of opinion. If I get a suitable opportunity, I will make a statement. But, Sir, I think there is no urgency in the matter.

Mr. PRESIDENT: But in view of the judgment of the High Court and the observations made by the Hon'ble the Chief Justice, I give my consent to this motion.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: May I read the motion?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Yes.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: I beg to move that this Council do adjourn its business to discuss a definite matter of urgent public importance, namely, the unwarranted interference by Government with the administration of justice as revealed in the observations contained in a recent judgment delivered by the Hon'ble the Chief Justice sitting with Mr. Justice Lodge in the case in which one Klean Sahib Hatem Ali Jamadar, a member of the Bengal Legislative Assembly, was being tried before a Munsif-Magistrate of Barisal for criminal breach of trust as well as in the case in which certain persons were prosecuted and placed on trial before another Munsif-Magistrate at Burdwan and which the Government by a confidential circular desired to be dropped.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Those who are in support of the motion, will please rise in their seats.

As the number is less than 13, permission for moving the motion is refused.

Mr. K. C. ROY CHOWDHURY: Sir, the next motion is mine.

Mr. PRESIDENT: As regards your motion, I do not think it is a definite matter——

Mr. K. C. ROY CHOWDHURY: It is definite in that the strike was for four days and it is of the utmost public interest and of recent occurrence——

Mr. PRESIDENT: Your motion runs as follows:—“That this Council do adjourn its business to discuss a matter of urgent public importance, namely, the policy of the Government in withholding reasonable facilities • * *.” “Reasonable facilities” is a very indefinite term. What facilities have been actually withheld has not been mentioned. So I think it is out of order and I refuse my consent to your moving the motion.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: The next motion is mine. It runs as follows:—“That this Council do adjourn its business to discuss a definite matter of urgent public importance, namely, the situation that has arisen in Bengal particularly in Calcutta on account of the severe scarcity of soft coke for household purposes.”

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Mazumdar, you brought an exactly similar motion on the 24th of last month, I believe, which you yourself withdrew.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, it is a continuing grievance as no soft coal is available now.

Mr. PRESIDENT: You withdrew that motion yourself and no new situation has arisen since then. So, I feel that there is neither any urgency in the matter nor it is very definite and in view of the fact that you yourself withdrew it, I refuse consent.

The Bengal Embankment (Amendment) Bill, 1944.

The Hon'ble Mr. BARADA PROSANNA PAIN: Sir, I give notice that I shall move in this session that the Bengal Embankment (Amendment) Bill, 1944, be considered and passed. I request you, Sir, to fix a date for the purpose.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I fix 11 a.m. on Friday, the 21st April, 1944, for sending in amendments both to the substantive motion that the Bill be taken into consideration as well as for the clauses of the Bill. The Bill will be taken up for consideration on Tuesday, the 25th April, 1944.

The House stands adjourned till 2-15 p.m. on Friday, the 21st April, 1944.

Adjournment.

The Council then adjourned till 2-15 p.m. on Friday, the 21st April, 1944.

BENGAL LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL DEBATES

First Session, 1944—No. 32.

THE COUNCIL met in the Legislative Chamber of the Legislative Building, Calcutta, on Friday, the 21st April, 1944, at 3-30 p.m., being the thirty-second day of the First Session of 1944, pursuant to section 62(2) (a) of the Government of India Act, 1935.

Mr. President (the Hon'ble Sir BIJOY PRASAD SINGH ROY, K.C.I.E.) was in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Comment of Mr. Hutchings on food situation in Bengal.

119. Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHÂNDRA BANERJEE: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Home Department be pleased to state whether—

- (a) he is aware that Mr. R. H. Hutchings, C.I.E., I.C.S., Secretary to the Government of India in the Department of Food, made a statement a few days ago at New Delhi commenting on the present food situation in Bengal after his recent visit to this Province;
- (b) the statement was to the effect that he deprecated all attempts at “taking Bengal into a second famine” and that conditions this year were very different from those prevalent last year as Bengal had a bumper rice crop sufficient to feed her population;
- (c) a joint statement issued by Mr. A. K. Fazlul Huq, Leader of the Progressive Coalition Party, Dr. Shyamaprosad Mookerjee, Leader of the Nationalist Party, Mr. Kiron Sankar Roy, Leader of the Official Congress Party, Mr. Santosh Kumar Basu, Deputy Leader of the Bengal Congress Parliamentary Party, Mr. Samsuddin Ahmed, Leader of the Krishak Proja Party, and Mr. Hem Chandra Naskar, Leader of the Independent Scheduled Caste Party, in the Bengal Legislative Assembly in reply to certain remarks made by Mr. Hutchings enquiring of the source of his information was not allowed by this Government to be published in the newspapers; and
- (d) if the answer to part (c) is in the affirmative, whether the Hon'ble Minister will be pleased to lay on the Table copies of both the statements and to state why and under what law the publication of this joint statement was banned?

MINISTER in charge of the HOME DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Khwaja Sir Nazimuddin): (a) and (b) Yes.

(c) The Provincial Press Adviser advised the press not to publish the statement referred to.

(d) Copies are laid on the Table. Publication of the statement was not banned under any law. The Press was advised not to publish the statement in pursuance of the general policy of Government that the publication of any matter which is likely to undermine public confidence and retard the return of normal conditions should be discouraged.

Statement referred to in reply to question No. 119.

FOOD SITUATION IN BENGAL.

NO SECOND FAMINE.

Central Food Department Secretary's Optimism.

New Delhi, February, 22.—Commenting on the present food situation in Bengal, the Secretary of the Central Food Department, who has returned to Delhi after a short visit to Bengal, deprecates all attempts at “taking Bengal into a second famine”. Complacency or ill-considered optimism is one thing, but defeatism is another, and his view is that conditions this year are very different from those prevalent last year. This year Bengal has a bumper rice crop sufficient to feed its population. In addition the Central Government have undertaken to supply to the Government of Bengal a quantity of foodgrains estimated as approximately equivalent to the amount required to feed greater Calcutta, on a rationed basis for 13 months, and finally Calcutta is now rationed. The Provincial Government are proceeding cautiously with their purchases in accordance with the pre-arranged plan but their purchases have already been considerable from the aman crop and it is reported that they have in addition over 100,000 tons of foodgrains in reserve at Calcutta. The important thing now is to secure movement of stocks to key points in deficit areas, in accordance with the Civil Supplies Department's co-ordinated plan. A visible demonstration of success in this should be sufficient to convince producers that it is neither necessary for them to hoard nor wise to hold on in the hope of another rise of prices.

On the question of Calcutta rationing, the Food Secretary feels that the administrative scheme has been well conceived and a good beginning has been made, though undoubtedly there are some complaints from the public. The main points of criticism are the quality of rice supplied, the size of the ration to heavy workers and the number of retail shops. As regards the first, it is admitted that the quality is uneven and the Provincial Government are endeavouring to secure improvement. In view of Bengal's position, vis-a-vis the rest of India, the claim for increase in the basic ration can hardly be sustained: good alternative grains are available to supplement the ration and in addition industrialists are encouraged to open canteens. The number of retail shops is already engaging the close attention of the rationing authorities.—(A.P.).

Submitted for Press Advice.

Local and Bombay,
Calcutta No.....

Calcutta, February, 27.

The following joint statement has been issued by the leaders of various parties in opposition in the Bengal Legislative Assembly in reply to certain remarks made by the Food Secretary, Government of India, in a recent debate in the Central Assembly relating to the food situation in Bengal:—

"Our attention has been drawn to a statement recently issued by Mr. Hutchings, the India Government Food Secretary, from Delhi, regarding the food situation in Bengal. It appears that Mr. Hutchings was in Bengal a few days ago but we are not aware of any attempt made by him to contact public opinion in the Province. We were not even aware that he was in our midst. It is, therefore, reasonable to presume that he looked into the food problem in Bengal through the eyes of the ministry and the officials, and the over-optimism which he has shown is, therefore, easily explained. It is not our intention to raise any scare nor, so far as we are aware, any attempts are being made by the public for "taking Bengal into a second famine", as has been insinuated by the Food Secretary, but we feel that we shall be failing in our duty to the public if we do not point out that the complacency in official circles is fraught with great danger. Mr. Hutchings had deprecated all attempts at "taking Bengal into a second famine". We wonder whether he realises that a similar complacency on the part of the Government last year since the advent of the new ministry was to a great extent responsible for what he evidently calls the "first famine" towards the end of last year. Let not that tragic blunder be repeated in 1944. We are told that there has been a bumper crop in Bengal this year but a mere bumper crop without a sound scheme of procurement and distribution cannot save Bengal from another famine. Already reports of rising prices and scarcity of rice and paddy are daily pouring in from different parts of Bengal, specially from Comilla, Chittagong and Dacca. Whether it is due to Government purchase of aman crop, size of which has been admitted to be "considerable" is for the Government to say. Government have also so far done little to make a visible demonstration of success by moving foodgrains to deficit areas. Symptoms are, therefore, disquieting. What people suffer from is not "defeatism" but want of confidence in the present ministry's capacity and integrity to tackle the situation in a manner consistent with the welfare of classes of people. Complacency in high quarters and pious wishes would not achieve anything. Nor will confidence be restored by prevention of legitimate criticism of official policy and action relating to food."

The signatories to the statement are: Mr. A. K. Fazlul Huq, Leader of the Progressive Assembly Party and of the Opposition, in the Bengal Legislative Assembly; Dr. Shyamaprosad Mookerjee, Leader of the Hindu Nationalist Party in the Assembly; Mr. Kiron Sankar Roy, Leader of the Official Congress Party; Mr. Santosh Kumar Basu, Leader of the Bose Group of Congressmen in the Assembly; Mr. Samsuddin Ahmed, Leader of the Krishak Proja Party; and Mr. Hem Chandra Naskar, Leader of the Independent Scheduled Caste Party. (A.P.I.)

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Is the Hon'ble Minister aware that the reply given by Mr. Amery to a question put by Mr. Sorensen in the House of Commons a few days ago was to the effect that another famine is not beyond the bounds of possibility?

MR. PRESIDENT: Does that question arise, Rai Bahadur?

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Sir, it does arise in this way: Mr. Hutchings said that he deprecated all attempts at "taking Bengal into a second famine", but Mr. Amery's reply to the question in the House of Commons conveys the impression that there may be a second famine.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Amery only stated certain facts. He did not express his own views, so I do not think that the question arises.

Ban on the Bengal Committee of Indian Federation of Labour.

120. Mr. KRISHNA CHANDRA ROY CHOWDHURY: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Home Department be pleased to state why ban has been imposed by the Subdivisional Officers of Asansol and Burdwan on the Bengal Committee of the Indian Federation of Labour, which is the only anti-Fascist and pro-war organisation and which constantly supported the war efforts of the country, to hold meetings since June, 1943?

(b) Were repeated requests made by the Indian Federation of Labour (Bengal) for the lifting of the ban and, if so, why has not the ban yet been lifted?

(c) When is the ban proposed to be removed?

The Hon'ble Khwaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: There has been no ban in Burdwan subdivision. In Asansol, members of the Federation were not permitted to speak at meetings other than those of the National War Front, as it was feared that industrial unrest might result. The ban has since been withdrawn.

Improvement of Agriculture in Bengal.

121. Mr. NUR AHMED: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Agriculture Department be pleased to state what measures have been taken by the Government of Bengal to attract the educated young men of the Province to the agriculture and agricultural pursuits?

(b) How many schools and colleges have been established to impart exclusively agricultural education to the students of Bengal and where have they been opened and what is the annual expenditure for the same?

(c) What measures have been taken by the Government of Bengal with a view to agricultural reconstruction in Bengal after the war?

(d) Is he aware that the Government of the Punjab have already taken steps to draw up such schemes for the Punjabi soldiers?

MINISTER in charge of the AGRICULTURE DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Saiyed Muazzamuddin Hosain): (a) Educated young men are always advised through leaflets, bulletins, lantern lectures and exhibitions to take to agriculture and agricultural pursuits. Demonstration of improved methods of agriculture by use of improved seed, manures and implements is included in the normal programme of activities of this department.

(b) One college and two schools have been established by Government for the purpose. The college at Dacca imparts higher agricultural education while at the two schools, one at Dacca and the other at Chinsura, secondary agricultural education is imparted. The total annual expenditure amounts to Rs.1,50,000. Besides these, the following four institutions impart exclusively agricultural education:—

- (i) Daulatpur Agricultural Institute at Daulatpur (Khulna).
- (ii) B. K. Agricultural Institute at Rajshahi.
- (iii) Jadavpur Agricultural Institute at Jadavpur (24-Parganas).
- (iv) Barrackpore Agricultural Institute at Barrackpore (24-Parganas).
- (c) A Committee have been formed to formulate schemes for post-war reconstruction.
- (d) This Department is not aware of any such scheme.

Mr. NUR AHMED: With reference to (b), will the Hon'ble Minister please state if it is sufficient to have only two such schools in Bengal which have an agricultural population of 70 per cent.?

Mr. PRESIDENT: That is asking for an expression of opinion.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state how and where these educated young men of Bengal are being advised in this way? This is with reference to (a).

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: They are being advised through posters and publications that are being circulated from time to time by the Agriculture Department.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Are separate classes held for this purpose?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: No, this object is accomplished through the issue of leaflets and posters, etc. No separate classes are held.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Have any arrangements been made for instructing school boys in the improved system of agriculture through the medium of leaflets, bulletins, lantern lectures and exhibitions?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: In some unions demonstration farms have been started, known as union farms, and they are attached to Middle English Schools generally, and the necessary agricultural education and instruction is given in such schools. But as regards ordinary schools, no such arrangement exists.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: Will the Hon'ble Minister please state what action has been taken for the purpose of checking the quality of seeds that are supplied by Government to the agriculturists for cultivation?

Mr. PRESIDENT: With reference to which portion of the answer?

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: With reference to (a).

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: The seeds are supposed to be tested before they are supplied.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: Will the Hon'ble Minister please state whether the wheat seeds supplied this year to the cultivators have proved ineffective and did not germinate in most of the areas supplied by the Government?

Mr. PRESIDENT: I do not think that the question arises: from a general question you are going to a particular one.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: No, Sir. The Hon'ble Minister says that the seeds are tested before supply. I now want to know whether——

Mr. PRESIDENT: Your question is: whether wheat seeds, that were supplied this year by the Government department, germinated. That is a specific question, a particular question, whereas the answer is in very general terms only.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: Unless this is elucidated, possibly——

Mr. PRESIDENT: I do not think your question arises out of an answer of a general nature.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: I wanted to know why if they were tested before being supplied, they have not germinated or proved ineffective: However, I bow down to your ruling.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Is the Hon'ble Minister aware that the number of demonstrators attached to the Agriculture Department is too inadequate to cope with the work?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Yes, I admit it is inadequate.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Arising out of (c), will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state when the committee appointed to formulate the scheme of post-war reconstruction are likely to complete their labour?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: They have already started their work and I think it will take a year to complete their labour.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Questions over.

Mr. HARIDAS NAZUMDAR: Sir, I have tabled a short-notice question with regard to the bhog ration to deities and I trust it has been admitted by you. May I enquire when that question is going to be replied? The Supply Minister is not present today.

The Hon'ble Khawaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: What short-notice question, Sir?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Short-notice question about bhog ration for deities. I believe it has been admitted, so far as I remember.

The Hon'ble Khawaja Sir NAZIMUDDIN: In that case, Sir, it will be replied to on the next sitting day.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, I have also tabled a short-notice question regarding the price of rice in Dacca and I trust you have admitted it.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I think it came to me only yesterday and as far as I remember I admitted it.

NON-OFFICIAL BILLS.

The Bengal Orphanages and Widows' Homes Bill, 1944.

Mr. NUR AHMED: I beg to move: that the Bengal Orphanages and Widows' Homes Bill, 1944, as passed by the Assembly, be taken into consideration.

Sir, I really feel great pleasure in moving this motion. I feel great pride in associating myself with a Bill which has been sponsored in the other House by a lady member—if I remember aright by the first lady member who brought any Bill in the Bengal Legislature. It is desirable that the social life in Bengal should be made better and the purpose of this Bill is to regulate and control the institutions which go in the guise of charitable institutions, some as widow's homes, some as orphanages and such other institutions here and there. I know, Sir, that there are some institutions which are doing very useful service to the cause of humanity; but there are some institutions which are carried on by the organisers with an ulterior purpose—with the purpose of making profit by running these institutions. Many helpless women fall prey to designing persons who, taking advantage of the good name of these institutions, trade in helpless widows and girls and make profit thereby.

Sir, at the present moment a movement is on foot by some designing persons, some evil-doers to take advantage of the present post-famine condition to carry on a very prosperous traffic in women. They may set up—they have already set up such institutions with the evil design of trafficking in women through those institutions. This Bill is very simple. This Bill proposes that no institution of such a nature should exist without a licence and those that are in existence will have to take a licence within a period of 6 months. For new institutions of this nature, licence should first be procured. This Bill contains healthy and wholesome provisions to check this growing evil. It is desirable that such a home or a marriage bureau, whatever may be the name of the institution or orphanage, should be managed and conducted in accordance with section 16 of the Society Registration Act. This, I think, is a very necessary condition of licence because the surroundings of the institutions must be healthy. I think no honourable member should object to this Bill.

There is another provision in this Bill regarding the inspection of these institutions. In Calcutta, the Commissioner of Police, and in the mofussil areas the District Magistrate or any Deputy Commissioner of Police or any other officer authorised in writing in this behalf by the Commissioner of Police or any Magistrate authorised in writing in this behalf by the District Magistrate or any person not in the service of the Crown when authorised in writing in this behalf in Calcutta by the Commissioner of Police or elsewhere by the District Magistrate may enter and inspect any orphanage, widows' home or marriage bureau at any time by day or night and the society having control of such institution and the persons in charge thereof shall not refuse such entry or inspection. This is the main provision of the Bill. Sir, I think there would be no objection to the acceptance of this Bill by the House. I hope with the passing of this Bill these institutions will be conducted under a healthy atmosphere. There might be some opposition from persons who are interested in this business. I again congratulate the honourable lady member who originally sponsored this Bill. I think she has done a great service to Bengal by sponsoring this Bill.

With these few words, I move the motion that the Bill be taken into consideration.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Motion moved: that the Bengal Orphanages and Widows' Homes Bill, 1944, as passed by the Assembly, be taken into consideration.

(After some pause.)

As there is none to speak on this motion, I put it to vote.

The question before the House is: that the Bengal Orphanages and Widows' Homes Bill, 1944 (as passed by the Assembly), be taken into consideration.

(The motion was agreed to).

Mr. PRESIDENT: The next motion cannot be moved today, because no opportunity has been given to the honorable members to send in their amendments. So, I fix 11 a.m. on Wednesday, the 26th instant as the time for putting in amendments. It will be decided later on when the Bill would be taken up, clause by clause.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, cannot the time be fixed at 1 p.m. on Wednesday?

Mr. PRESIDENT: I have no objection if that suits the convenience of the honourable members.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: That will suit us very well, Sir.

Mr. PRESIDENT: All right. Then amendments to the clauses may be sent by 1 p.m. on Wednesday, the 26th instant.

The Bengal Amusement House Smoke Nuisance Prohibition Bill, 1943.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Haridas Mazumdar.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, with your permission I beg to substitute Rai Bahadur Radhica Bhusan Roy in the place of Rai Sahib Jogendra Nath Ray and Mr. Biren Roy in the place of Mr. Bankim Chandra Mukherjee. I accordingly move my motion as amended that the Bill be referred to a Select Committee consisting of—

- (1) The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Jalaluddin Ahmed, Minister in charge of the Public Health and Local Self-Government Department,
- (2) Mr. T. B. Nimmo,
- (3) Mr. Kamini Kumar Dutta,
- (4) Mr. Lalit Chandra Das,
- (5) Rai Bahadur Radhica Bhusan Roy,
- (6) Mr. Humayun Kabir,
- (7) Mr. Mesbahuddin Ahmed,
- (8) Mrs. Labanya Probha Dutt,

- (9) Mr. Moazzemali Chowdhury,
- (10) Mr. Biren Roy, and
- (11) the mover,

with instructions to submit their report by the 30th June, 1944, and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a quorum shall be four.

Sir, I do not like to speak on the Bill just at the present moment, and I hope that the Bill be referred to a Select Committee.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Motion moved: that the Bill be referred to a Select Committee consisting of—

- (1) The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Jalaluddin Ahmed, Minister in charge of the Public Health and Local Self-Government Department,
- (2) Mr. T. B. Nimmo,
- (3) Mr. Kamini Kumar Dutta,
- (4) Mr. Lalit Chandra Das,
- (5) Rai Bahadur Radhica Bhushan Roy,
- (6) Mr. Humayun Kabir,
- (7) Mr. Mesbahuddin Ahmed,
- (8) Mrs. Labanyaprobha Dutt,
- (9) Mr. Moazzemali Chowdhury,
- (10) Mr. Biren Roy, and
- (11) the mover,

with instructions to submit their report by the 30th June, 1944, and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a quorum shall be four.

Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Sir, I beg to move that the Bill be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinion thereon by the 31st August, 1944.

Sir, there is a clear provision in the Bill that nobody shall be permitted to smoke in a cinema house or in any place of musical performance. So I think that there will be difference of opinion regarding this provision, and Government ought to know what is the general opinion of the people before this can be allowed to go to a Select Committee. Therefore, I move that the Bill be circulated for the purpose of eliciting public opinion.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Amendment moved: that the Bill be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinion thereon by the 31st August, 1944.

(The amendment was agreed to.)

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Sir, as the other House is likely to sit at 4-15 p.m., I would request you to adjourn the Council at 4 p.m. Government are prepared to allot another day for non-official business.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The suggestion is that the House should adjourn at 4 o'clock today, and Government are prepared to allot another day for non-official business. I hope the honourable members will have no objection to this proposal.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, may we know whether it would be a Bill day?

Mr. PRESIDENT: That depends on the Chair and the Leader of the House. We can arrange it among ourselves. So I take it that there is no objection to the proposal, especially in view of the fact that Government are prepared to give another day for non-official business. This situation has arisen because of some inadvertence on the part of Government. So I adjourn the House till 1-30 p.m. on Tuesday, the 25th.

Adjournment.

The Council then adjourned till 1-30 p.m. on Tuesday, the 25th April, 1944.

Members absent.

The following members were absent from the meeting held on the 21st April, 1944:—

- (1) Khan Bahadur Naziruddin Ahmad.
- (2) Mr. Sultanuddin Ahmed.
- (3) Mr. Kader Baksh.
- (4) Mr. Humayun Reza Chowdhury.
- (5) Mr. N. C. Dutta.
- (6) Mr. K. K. Dutta.
- (7) Khan Bahadur Abdul Gofran.
- (8) Mr. Mohamed Hossain.
- (9) Mr. Humayun Z. A. Kabir.
- (10) Maulana Muhammad Akram Khan.
- (11) Mr. N. N. Moholanabish.
- (12) Mr. N. N. Mookherji.
- (13) Mr. T. B. Nimmo.
- (14) Mr. R. S. Purssell.
- (15) Khan Bahadur Muklesur Rahman.
- (16) Khan Bahadur Kazi Abdur Rashid.
- (17) Dr. K. S. Ray.
- (18) Mr. S. N. Sanyal.
- (19) Mr. J. W. R. Stevens.

BENGAL LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL DEBATES

First Session, 1944--No. 33.

THE COUNCIL met in the Legislative Chamber of the Legislative Building, Calcutta, on Tuesday, the 25th April, 1944, at 1-30 p.m., being the thirty-third day of the First Session of 1944, pursuant to section 62(2)(a) of the Government of India Act, 1935.

Mr. President (the Hon'ble Sir BIJOY PRASAD SINGHA ROY, K.C.I.E.) was in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Firing near Puran Thana Mosque.

122. Dr. KASIRUDDIN TALUKDAR: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Home Department be pleased to state whether he is aware that the Press Adviser to the Government of Bengal held up all reports about firing near the Puran Thana Mosque, Kishoreganj, for a considerable length of time and did not permit such reports to be published in the papers?

(b) Under what authority did the Press Adviser prevent publication of such reports?

(c) Under what authority was the Press advised by the said officer not to publish the Chief Minister's statement made on the floor of the Council regarding the Kishoreganj firing incident?

MINISTER in charge of the HOME DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Khwaja Sir Nazimuddin): This refers to a period when I was not in office and regarding which I am unable to give any information. I cannot give reasons why the previous Government acted in a particular manner.

Agricultural Institutions in Bengal.

123. Rai Bahadur BROJENDRA MOHAN MAITRA: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Agriculture Department be pleased to state if the Agricultural Institutions at (i) Rajshahi, (ii) Daulatpur, (iii) Jadavpur and (iv) Barrackpore have been designed to impart agricultural education of secondary standard?

(b) Have the curricula of these Agricultural Institutes been drawn up in consultation with the Agriculture Department and are these at par with that of the Secondary Agricultural Schools at Dacca and Chinsura under direct control of the Agriculture Department?

(c) If the above reply is in the affirmative, will the Hon'ble Minister kindly state the number of successful candidates who have come out of the Agricultural Institutes at Rajshahi, Daulatpur, Jadavpur and Barrackpore, and also the number of passed students who have been employed in the Agricultural and other allied Departments of this Government?

(d) Will the Hon'ble Minister please state the total amount of Government and private funds hitherto spent on these Institutes separately?

(e) Will the Hon'ble Minister please consider ways and means of absorbing passed students of these four Institutes in suitable employment under the Government?

MINISTER in charge of the AGRICULTURE DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Saiyed Muazzamuddin Hosain): (a) Yes, so far as the Agricultural Institutes at Daulatpur and Rajshahi are concerned.

The standard of agricultural education imparted at Jadavpur and Barrackpore Agricultural Institutes is different from that imparted in Government Secondary Agricultural Schools.

(b) The curriculum of only the Daulatpur Agricultural Institute is drawn up in consultation with the Agriculture Department and is at par with that of the Government Secondary Agricultural Schools at Dacca and Chinsura. The other Agricultural Institutes do not consult the Agriculture Department in framing their curricula.

(c) Eleven students passed from the Daulatpur Agricultural Institute in 1942, out of whom only six were available for employment in the Agriculture Department. In 1943 four students including three non-Bengalees passed; two were offered employment but only one joined.

Students of the Rajshahi Agricultural Institute, when available, have been employed in the Live Stock Section.

The authorities of the other Institutes do not send up the names of successful students nor do the latter offer themselves for employment.

(d)	Name of the Institute.		Government	Private contribution spent up to date.	funds.
			Rs.	Rs.
	Daulatpur Institute		38,300	18,000
	B. K. Agricultural Institute, Rajshahi		Nil	46,752
	Jadavpur Institute		Nil	50,510
	Barrackpore Institute		Nil	1,43,767

(e) The successful candidates of the two Institutes at Rajshahi and Daulatpur are offered service in this Department. As for the students of the other two Institutes there is no objection to their being employed in the Department if they are found suitable.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Do the Government propose to help the Daulatpur Agricultural Institution with further funds, it being a private institution?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: It is being helped and if the institution makes an application for further grant, it will be considered.

Death due to starvation in Calcutta.

124. Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Public Health and Local Self-Government Department be pleased to state the number of persons who died due to starvation in the different parts of the city of Calcutta since the assumption of office by the present Ministry?

Mr. BIREN ROY, PARLIAMENTARY SECRETARY (on behalf of Minister in charge of the Public Health and Local Self-Government Department the Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi Jalaluddin Ahmad): No such heading as "starvation" appears among the statutorily specified causes of death in the register of deaths; in fact, no separate record of deaths from starvation was kept. So the information wanted is not available to Government.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state if what appears in the daily paper as deaths from effects of starvation are deaths from starvation?

Mr. BIREN ROY: It means deaths from other causes not recorded, such as, malaria, cholera, etc. If the honourable member will be satisfied with figures of deaths in Calcutta Emergency Hospitals, I can supply it.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Yes.

Mr. BIREN ROY: The figure is 6,730 in the year 1943.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Since which month?

Mr. BIREN ROY: Since June.

Muhurram processions.

125. Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJI: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Home Department be pleased to state if he is aware that—

(i) in 1943 and in this year also, Muhurram processions were allowed to parade the public roads of Burdwan town with uncovered Petro-max lights and mashals; and

(ii) the Hindus were forced to finish immersion processions of images before 7 p.m., but the Muslims were allowed to use lights freely and to continue their processions up to 10 p.m.?

(b) If so, will he please state the reasons for this differential treatment?

Mr. BIREN ROY, PARLIAMENTARY SECRETARY (on behalf of the Hon'ble Khwaja Sir Nazimuddin): (a) (i) No. In both 1943 and 1944, lights were carried in violation of the lighting restrictions. In 1943, the licensees were warned and this year they have been prosecuted.

(ii) No force was used. The Hindu licensees adhered to the conditions laid down in their licenses.

(b) Does not arise.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJI: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state whether the Muslims were allowed to carry on procession up to 10 p.m.—nothing has been said in answer to clause (a)(ii) of the question.

Mr. BIREN ROY: They were not so allowed and it has already been stated that there have been certain prosecutions in 1943.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJI: Have any steps been taken against those who have violated the rules? Nothing has been said in regard to (a)(ii).

Mr. BIREN ROY: Sir, it is a printing mistake: clauses (a)(i) and (ii) should have been taken together.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJI: With regard to (a) (ii), I want to know whether the processionists continued up till 10 p.m. and, if so, what steps have been taken against them?

Mr. BIREN ROY: As I have already said, in answer (i), lights were carried in violation of the rules and they have been prosecuted.

Participation of Government servants in the election campaign.

126. Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJI: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Home Department be pleased to state—

- (a) if it is a fact that Mr. Ahmad Hosain, Police Magistrate, Sealdah, has proposed one Kazi Ashraf Ali as a candidate for election to the Calcutta Corporation in the present general elections; and
- (b) if a Government servant is entitled to propose, second or otherwise actively participate in the election?

Mr. BIREN ROY, PARLIAMENTARY SECRETARY (on behalf of the Hon'ble Khwaja Sir Nazimuddin): A report has been called for from the District Magistrate, 24-Parganas, regarding part (a) of the question. A reply will be given as soon as the report is received.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJI: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state if any answer is possible now with regard to question (b)? Nothing has been said about it in the answer.

Mr. BIREN ROY: This answer should not have been inserted here. I read it as it appears. The answer is that no Government servant is entitled to give any indication of the manner in which he proposes to vote and as such he cannot propose or second.

Production of foodstuff in Bengal.

127. Mr. NAGENDRA NATH MAHALANOBISH: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Agriculture Department be pleased to state whether the Government are aware that Bengal depends largely upon the imports from other Provinces and countries for some of its essential requirements of foodstuffs, such as pulses (dal), mustard and sugar?

(b) If so, do the Government propose to take steps to make Bengal self-supporting with regard to these essential foodstuffs?

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: (a) Yes.

(b) Yes, as far as possible.

Some 12,592 maunds of gram, 7,433 maunds of lentil, 4,406 maunds of mustard seeds and 39,055 maunds of improved sugarcane cuttings have been distributed among the cultivators during 1943-44 for sowing purposes with a view to obtain increased outturn at the next harvest.

Local holiday in Jessore.

128. Mr. RANAJIT PAL CHOWDHURY: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Revenue Department be pleased to state—

- (a) whether the Collector of Jessore has declared that there will be no local holiday in 1944 in the district of Jessore;

- (b) what reasons have led the Collector to issue such an order;
- (c) whether in many of those local holidays observance of religious rites and ceremonies are enjoined on and practised by both Hindus and Muslims;
- (d) whether the Practice and Procedure Manual empowers the Collector in any way to withhold or scrap the usual local holidays;
- (e) whether discretion allowed in the matter to district authorities is only regarding the selection of days or dates;
- (f) whether he is aware that the said order has caused considerable public feeling; and
- (g) whether representations from representative bodies have come to the higher authorities in protest against the order in question?

MINISTER in charge of the REVENUE DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Mr. Tarak Nath Mukerjee): (a) and (c) Yes.

(b) To deal with the increased work and to prevent accumulation of arrears of urgent and important work.

(d) and (e) In view of the present emergency the usual arrangements in regard to holidays have been suspended and the heads of departments and offices have been instructed to discontinue the routine observance of holidays.

(f) No.

(g) One such representation has been received and is under the consideration of Government.

Cases of starving women.

129. Mr. HARIDAS MAJUMDAR: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Revenue Department be pleased to state—

- (a) if he is aware that pangs of starvation had driven women in various districts of the Province in despair to take to a life of shame;
- (b) (i) if the Government propose to found a Destitute Women's House in Calcutta;
- (ii) if the reply to part (b) (i) be in the affirmative, whether the Government have appointed a Ladies' Committee under whose supervision and control the Institution is going to be run; if so, who are the members of the Committee;
- (c) (i) if the Government have started Destitute Women's Homes in the rural areas of the Province; if so, what are the names of the places where they have been founded with the names of the members of the Committees under whose control they are being run; and
- (ii) if not, why not?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: (a) Some reports to this effect have been received by Government.

(b) (i) Yes.

(ii) Steps have already been taken to appoint such a Committee with the Revenue Minister as the President, Mr. A. K. Chanda as Secretary and prominent ladies and gentlemen engaged on social welfare work as members. As soon as the consent of the members whom it is proposed to appoint to the Advisory Committee is received, the constitution of the Committee will be announced.

(c) (i) Yes. A statement giving the necessary particulars in respect of the "Homes" is laid on the Table.

(ii) Does not arise.

Statement referred to in reply to clause (c) (i) of question No. 129.

Mrs. LABANYAPROBHA DUTTA: Arising out of (b) (ii), will the Hon'ble Minister please state the names of the prominent ladies and gentlemen proposed for membership of that Committee and whether Council members are being included among them? What are the qualifications of members who are going to cater to the needs of women? Have they run any women's organization, if so, what are their number?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: As for the names, I want notice. For the information of the honourable member I may say that lady M.L.As. and M.L.Cs. are included on this Committee. As regards qualification, those ladies and gentlemen who are expected to take interest in this matter have been taken.

Mrs. LABANYAPROBHA DUTTA: Arising out of the statement, will the Hon'ble Minister please state whether he proposes to support or help private individuals or municipalities to start such homes in the 24-Parganas and in the suburbs of Calcutta which are so thickly populated and where last year so many destitute women were found roaming about?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: Yes.

Mrs. LABANYAPROBHA DUTTA: Are there any private homes in the 24-Parganas and in the suburbs of Calcutta?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: So far as I am aware, there are homes but I cannot give the exact number.

Mr. NUR AHMED: Does the Hon'ble Minister propose to start any more homes?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: If the situation so demands.

Mr. NUR AHMED: In view of the fact that Chittagong has been vitally affected due to famine conditions, will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state if any more homes will be opened in Chittagong?

The Hon'ble Mr. TARAK NATH MUKERJEA: The matter is under consideration.

Rural Development Board in Bengal.

130. Mr. NUR AHMED: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Commerce, Labour and Industries Department be pleased to state if any provincial rural development board on the lines of Bombay has been formed in Bengal with a view to preparing schemes for the development of rural Bengal after the war?

(b) If not, do the Government propose to form such a board in Bengal? If not, why not?

MINISTER in charge of the COMMERCE, LABOUR and INDUSTRIES DEPARTMENT (the Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja Shahabuddin): (a) No. I have no information regarding the Rural Development Board, Bombay.

(b) The subject of rural development will come under the purview of the Bengal Post-War Reconstruction Committee. No separate board is considered necessary at present.

Smoking in the tram cars.

131. Rai Sahib JOGENDRA NATH RAY: (a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Public Health and Local Self-Government Department be pleased to state if the Government are aware of a resolution passed by the Corporation of Calcutta, drawing the attention of the Calcutta Tramways Co., Ltd., to the annoying, unhealthy and dangerous practice of unrestricted smoking in tram cars?

(b) If so, are the Government aware of any measures taken by the Tramways to remedy this evil?

(c) Are the Government aware of smoking restrictions observed in public conveyance in other cities in India, viz., Bombay, Delhi, etc.?

(d) Are the Government aware of strong public demand for some sort of restrictions on the unrestricted smoking in public conveyances and in places of public amusements, e.g., cinemas, theatres, etc.?

(e) Are the Government aware of the fact that the demand for restriction of such unrestricted smoking have been very strongly supported by the Press?

(f) Is it a fact that a largely-signed petition praying for restrictions of smoking in those places was addressed to the Minister in charge of Public Health through the Director of Public Health in the month of September, 1943?

(g) If so, what action do the Government propose to take in this matter?

Mr. BIREN ROY, PARLIAMENTARY SECRETARY (on behalf of the Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi Jalaluddin Ahmad): (a) Yes.

(b) Yes: notice boards requesting the public to refrain from smoking are being affixed.

(c) Yes, in Bombay.

(d) and (e) No.

(f) No such petition was received by the Director of Public Health.

(g) Does not arise.

Rai Sahib JOGENDRA NATH RAY: Will the Government be pleased to take steps to remedy this evil?

Mr. BIREN ROY: The Tramways Company are already taking it upon themselves to remedy the evil. So it is unnecessary for Government to take any steps.

Mrs. LABANYAPROBHA DUTTA: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to state at least the average death-rate from all causes in previous years up to 1942 and during the period from June to December, 1943, so that we may know the difference between the average death-rate of the previous years and the abnormal death-rate from June to December, 1943?

Mr. BIREN ROY: All averages are not available. But as the question (b) refers to the Burdwan Division only, the Burdwan Division average is available and I may state that—Burdwan Division.

District.	Urban.		Rural.
	Average 1942.	June to December, 1943.	Average 1942.	June to December, 1943.
Burdwan ..	1,162	1,759	22,019	31,903
Birbhum ..	51	86	14,616	31,862
Bankura ..	553	1,010	15,521	29,866
Midnapore ..	810	1,863	31,897	65,073
Hooghly ..	1,887	3,389	12,151	16,341
Howrah ..	4,012	7,541	7,281	18,445

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJI: Will the Hon'ble Minister be pleased to take steps to have a heading of "Deaths due to starvation" for future guidance?

Mr. BIREN ROY: For a heading of deaths due to starvation and malnutrition, instructions have already been issued, and it will be available in future years.

Deaths due to starvation.

132. Rai Sahib JOGENDRA NATH ROY: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Public Health and Local Self-Government Department be pleased to state—

(a) the number of deaths from starvation in the streets and different hospitals of Calcutta since June till the end of the year 1943; and

(b) the number of deaths from the same cause in each of the districts of the Burdwan Division, giving the number in the urban and the rural areas separately?

Mr. BIREN ROY, PARLIAMENTARY SECRETARY (on behalf of the Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi Jalaluddin Ahmad): There is no such heading as "starvation" among the statutorily specified causes of death in the register of deaths and in fact no separate record of deaths from starvation was kept. So the information wanted is not available to Government.

Deaths due to starvation in Calcutta.

133. Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Public Health and Local Self-Government Department be pleased to state—

- (a) the total number of starvation mortality in the streets and different hospitals of Calcutta and its suburbs since July last till the end of December, 1943; and
- (b) the total number of deaths from the same cause and in the same period in the different parts of the Province?

Mr. BIREN ROY, PARLIAMENTARY SECRETARY (on behalf of the Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi Jalaluddin Ahmad): No separate record was kept of deaths from starvation and the information is not available to Government.

Small-pox in Chittagong.

134. Mr. NUR AHMED: Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Public Health and Local Self-Government Department be pleased to state—

- (a) if it is a fact that small-pox has broken out in some thanas of Chittagong in an epidemic form and there have been already many deaths from this disease;
- (b) if it is a fact that there is an urgent need of promulgation of orders making revaccination compulsory in Chittagong;
- (c) if it is a fact that both the District and Municipal Health Officers have made strong representations to the local authorities for making revaccination compulsory in Chittagong;
- (d) if it is a fact that supply of lymph for vaccination and revaccination in Chittagong has proved inadequate to check the epidemic; and
- (e) if so, what special measures, if any, have been taken by the Government of Bengal to check small-pox epidemic in Chittagong?

Mr. BIREN ROY, PARLIAMENTARY SECRETARY (on behalf of the Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Maulvi Jalaluddin Ahmad): (a) The disease did not break out in an epidemic form.

A statement showing small-pox attacks and deaths in the various thanas of the Chittagong district from 1st January to 26th February, 1944, is laid in the Library.

(b) Yes. Small-pox regulations under the Epidemic Diseases Act which make vaccination or revaccination compulsory in the case of all persons exposed to infection have been promulgated in the district since 8th February, 1944.

(c) No.

(d) No. Supplies totalling 5 lakhs doses were sent in 18 consignments at regular intervals between January 6th and March 14th.

(e) Does not arise.

Mr. NUR AHMED: With reference to (a), will the Hon'ble Minister please state what is the total number of attacks and deaths from cholera in Chittagong for the months of January, February and March, 1944?

Mr. BIREN ROY: Yes, I am giving the statement, week by week.

Mr. NUR AHMED: I do not want a weekly statement but only a monthly statement. I want a statement for the whole month.

Mr. BIREN ROY: I was going to give a weekly statement but I will give you a monthly statement instead, if you want that. Here are the figures: In the first four weeks of January, the attacks were 39, 22, 69 and 52 and deaths during that period were 8, 17, 12 and 12.

Mr. NUR AHMED: What about the months of February and March?

Mr. BIREN ROY: I have no figures available for March but I may quote figures for February which are as follows:—Attacks during the first four weeks were 60, 78, 20 and 86; deaths 13, 18, 20 and 38.

Mr. NUR AHMED: Does it not show that the death-rate is still on the increase?

Mr. BIREN ROY: It shows a slight increase, Sir.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Pain.

Mr. NUR AHMED: Will the Hon'ble Minister—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Nur Ahmed, I have already called upon the Hon'ble Mr. Pain to make his statement.

Mr. NUR AHMED: All right, Sir.

Statement by the Hon'ble Mr. B. P. Pain.

The Hon'ble Mr. BARADA PRASANNA PAIN: I beg to lay on the table the statement promised in reply to Council Question No. 5 of the 17th September, 1942.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: What is the statement about?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Well, it is a printed statement containing a reply to a question. It was going to be read on the last day but was kept pending only at the request of some honourable members to enable them to ask supplementary questions. I find that no supplementary questions are going to be asked, however.

Statement promised in reply to Council Question No.5 of the 17th September, 1942.

The Hon'ble Mr. BARADA PRASANNA PAIN: Sir, I lay the following statement which was promised in reply to question No. 5 on the 17th September, 1942:—

Question.

(a) Will the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Communications and Works Department be pleased to state how much have been spent from the contribution by the Central Government and from the Provincial Government Fund on—

- (i) improvement of roads and communication;
- (ii) improvement and construction of bridges;
- (iii) on excavation of khals and navigable channels; and
- (iv) on irrigation works in the district of Chittagong?

(b) What are the schemes and projects on which the amounts mentioned in part (a) have been spent?

(c) What further irrigation scheme, improvement of roads and construction of bridge projects in Chittagong are still pending for allotment of necessary funds?

(d) Are any irrigation and other schemes for Chittagong still pending and have not been sanctioned as yet? If so, what are they?

Reply.

(a) (i) A. The expenditure incurred from the contribution by the Central Government falls under two separate heads, viz.,—

- (1) From Rural Uplift Grant.—The details of expenditure from this grant are noted in Statement (No. 1) laid in the Library.
- (2) Road Development Fund.—The details are noted in the Statement (No. 2) laid in the Library.

B. Expenditure incurred from Provincial Revenues is noted in Statement (No. 3) laid on the Table.

(ii) A. The details of expenditure incurred from Rural Uplift Grant are noted in Statement (No. 4) and those from the Road Development Fund in Statement (No. 5) laid on the Table.

B. The details of expenditure incurred from Provincial Revenues are noted in Statement (No. 6) laid on the Table.

(iii) and (iv) No amount has so far been spent from the Provincial Revenues. An amount of Rs. 18,566 has so far been spent from the Government of India's grant for minor drainage and flushing schemes and for improvement of village communications including waterways. Some of the schemes serve the purpose of irrigation also and the amount spent on such schemes is Rs. 8,509.

(b) The list of schemes in respect of (i) roads and communications and (ii) bridges has been noted in the Statements laid on the Table in connection with the answer to part (a) as far as available.

The names of irrigation works as per (iii) and (iv) have been noted in Statement (No. 7) laid on the Table.

(c) With reference to my previous answer to (c), I am to add that steps are being taken to take up the two irrigation projects, mentioned therein, viz., (1) improvement of the Dhurang khal, and (2) re-excavation of the Hunger khal. These two schemes will be financed out of the Provincial Revenues.

(d) Already answered.

Adjournment motion.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, I have an adjournment motion standing in my name. It relates to the Department of Civil Supplies. But as the Hon'ble Minister is not present today, will you please permit me to mention the matter when he comes next?

The Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja SHAHABUDDIN: Sir, I would submit that at this stage it is not a question of the Hon'ble Civil Supplies Minister being present. First of all, the Chair must judge whether it is admissible or not—

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Das, I have considered the matter and I feel that it is hardly a definite matter of urgent public importance, because the question has been before the public of Bengal for the last one year. As far as I remember, this question was raised more than once on the floor of the House especially in connection with the budget discussion; so I am afraid it will be a mere re-iteration of the same matter.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Will you kindly allow me to put in my point of view in this matter, Sir?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Yes.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: I fully realise your point of view that the position regarding the price of rice in Bengal was commented upon during the budget discussion. That the situation had very much improved in the meantime—that also is true. But since the price-control order regarding rice was circulated throughout the districts of Bengal about a week ago, the situation has become worse. The order was not flouted till April 15th. But since April 15th when the latest price-control order was passed fixing the price at Rs. 15 per maund, since that date, if you will scrutinise all the press-cuttings, copies of which I forwarded to you with my letter, you will find that in many parts of Bengal the price of rice has risen enormously—so much so that it has created a panic. In Dinajpur, the price of rice has risen up to Rs. 27 a maund, in Munshiganj, the price varies from Rs. 20 to Rs. 24. In Jessore, in Mymensingh, in Dacca the price has been very high—

The Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja SHAHABUDDIN: On a point of order, Sir. I do not think at this stage the honourable member can discuss the merits of the subject-matter of this motion. He is quoting figures: so he is discussing the actual merits of the case.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I think he is making this statement in support of his motion.

The Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja SHAHABUDDIN: I submit, Sir, if he is allowed to discuss the merits of the case now, it will defeat the very purpose of the rules which disallow discussing the merits at this stage. The mode of discussion should conform to the rules.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Shahabuddin, I have asked Mr. Das to substantiate his case for admissibility of his motion; and in doing so he is, I believe, stating all these facts. He is not entering into the merits of the case.

The Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja SHAHABUDDIN: But, Sir, he is entering into the merits.

Mr. PRESIDENT: All right, let me hear what he says.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, I am not going into the merits of the case and what I say is in conformity with the rules regarding adjournment motion. The first condition is: whether it is a matter of urgent public importance. I shall show that it is so. Mr. Shahabuddin cannot deny that the statement I am making contains actual facts. It is a matter of public importance in this way, viz., that the situation has gone from bad to worse since 15th April last. Today is 25th April and no relief has been given.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Das is trying to support his proposal by saying that the situation has become very acute during the last week. As such, it is a definite matter of urgent public importance, I think that is his view.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Yes, Sir.

The Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja SHAHABUDDIN: On a point of order, Sir. I may mention that the rule requires that there should be a definite matter of urgent public importance. In the motion as drafted, there is no mention of any definite matter. It is so vague and indefinite. I would, therefore, request you to consider whether it conforms to the rules about the admissibility of adjournment motions.

Mr. PRESIDENT: As regards the point whether it is definite or not, I hold that it is definite. The real point for consideration is: whether in view of the fact that this House discussed this question more than once during the last few months, it can be raised again. Now, Mr. Das, what is the new point that you are making?

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, we discussed the rice situation in the past, there is no doubt about it. But since then a new situation has arisen and it has developed in such a manner that unless Government intervene, the people will be in the throes of another famine.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Das, more than once the Opposition tried to make out that Government had failed to enforce the price fixed by them and more than once you wanted to censure Government exactly on the same ground.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, it was never discussed in the form of an adjournment motion. Through this motion we want to point out that the Government has failed to make effective their price-control order about rice and that this has resulted in acute distress amongst the people of the province.

Mr. PRESIDENT: A similar motion was once discussed in the House.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: It was withdrawn, Sir; it was not discussed.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Das, do you mean to say that the price-control order referred to in your motion was passed recently?

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Yes, Sir, on the 15th April an order was published fixing the price of rice at Rs. 15 per maund. Since then the price of rice has gone up. In several places, such as, in Madaripur, Munshiganj, Mymensingh, Khulna, the rice has been selling at Rs. 25 a maund.

Mr. PRESIDENT: May I hear Government on the point?

The Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja SHAHABUDDIN: Sir, I am sorry the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Civil Supplies Department is not present in Calcutta and I have not had any previous intimation about this motion being taken up. So, it is very difficult for me to refute the wild charges and allegations made by Mr. Lalit Chandra Das—

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, I object to the words "wild charges". I have cited several facts and figures which have been published. The Hon'ble Minister must be careful about the expressions he uses.

The Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja SHAHABUDDIN: Sir, I would request the honourable member not to put so much faith in the newspaper reports.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Mr. Shahabuddin, you cannot reply at this stage.

The Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja SHAHABUDDIN: Sir, in trying to justify the admissibility of his motion, the honourable member has made certain statements which, if allowed to go unchallenged, will be very harmful. So, I have to protest against and contest these assertions of the honourable member. As far as the admissibility of the motion is concerned, I have already mentioned, Sir, that in my humble opinion, it does not fulfil all the conditions laid down for a motion like this. The drafting of the adjournment motion has not clearly made out that the matter is definite. The motion is vague and indefinite. It is not a new order at all. It is a continuation of the previous order. We have been trying to bring down the price of rice gradually. First, it was Rs. 17, then Rs. 16 and then it has been sought to reduce the price to Rs. 15. Actually, this order does not create any new issue. You, Sir, yourself have observed at an earlier stage that this matter was once discussed and so it cannot be discussed again during this session.

Mr. PRESIDENT: According to our rules, a motion must not revive discussion on a matter which has been discussed in the same session. This principle is laid down in rule 99. Now, Mr. Das wants to make out that a new order was promulgated only on the 15th April last and since then the price of rice has gone up and Government have failed to enforce their new order. I would have liked very much to hear Government specifically on that point. I quite realise, Mr. Shahabuddin, that you cannot reply to all these points, because you are not conversant with the details pertaining to the Civil Supplies Department.

The Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja SHAHABUDDIN: Sir, if I had got an earlier notice of the motion, I could have replied.

Mr. PRESIDENT: If I admit it today and a date for discussion is fixed later on, would you be in a position to reply?

The Hon'ble Mr. Khwaja SHAHABUDDIN: Sir, a statement has been made by him that the price of rice has gone up.

Mr. PRESIDENT: That will be for you to contradict in your reply. Meanwhile, I give my consent to the motion being moved.

Mr. MESBAHUDDIN AHMED: Sir, we object to the discussion of this motion.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The motion runs thus: that this Council do adjourn its business to discuss a definite matter of urgent public importance, namely, the failure of the Government to make effective their price-control order on rice resulting in acute distress amongst the people of the province.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: Sir, will you kindly permit me to move the motion in the presence of the Hon'ble Minister for Civil Supplies?

Mr. PRESIDENT: That question does not arise at this stage. Let the motion be first admitted.

Those who are in favour of the motion being moved, will please stand up. (Less than 13 members rose in their seats.)

As less than 13 members have risen, the permission to move the motion is refused.

The Bengal Embankment (Amendment) Bill, 1944.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The next item is "The Bengal Embankment (Amendment) Bill, 1944."

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, may I mention the bhog ration question now, or shall I mention it in the presence of the Hon'ble Minister for Civil Supplies who is absent today?

Mr. PRESIDENT: Yes, mention it in his presence.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: Sir, I sent in an amendment regarding clause 2 of this Bill which was perhaps a little late.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Yes, it was received late but I admitted it, and I hope Mr. Mukherjee will be able to supply copies of his amendment to the honourable members.

The Hon'ble Mr. BARADA PRASANNA PAI: Sir, I beg to move that the Bengal Embankment (Amendment) Bill, 1944, be taken into consideration.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Motion moved: that the Bengal Embankment (Amendment) Bill, 1944, be taken into consideration.

Clause 1.

- The question before the House is: that clause 1 stand part of the Bill.
(The question was agreed to.)

Clause 2.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question is that clause 2 stand part of the Bill.

Mr. NUR AHMED: I do not move the amendment standing in my name, Sir.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Do you not move any of your amendments?

Mr. NUR AHMED: No, Sir.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: I beg to move that in clause 2 of the Bill, in sub-clause (b), the following be added at the end of the proposed clause (1a):—

Sir, the reason of the amendment is that Government propose that they will not take charge of an embankment but if repairs are necessary, they would repair embankments and then realise the cost from the persons who are benefited by the embankment. By the amendment that I propose I want that notice should be served on those who are benefited by that embankment to the effect that if within the time specified under the rules of the Act the embankment is not repaired, then only Government will undertake the repair. It may be that the people may be able to repair the embankment within a very short space of time if they know that if they do not repair the embankment they will have to pay a much larger cost which the Government will incur for the repair of the embankment in terms of the Act. Therefore, I propose to introduce an additional clause to clause (1a), so that if after notice the people who are going to be benefited by the embankment do not repair it, then Government will repair the embankment and realise the cost from the people who are likely to be benefited by it. That is my proposal. It will go to the relief of the poor people in not having to pay a large sum and at the same time they will get the embankment repaired, if notice is served by Government. I hope Government will have no objection to this inoffensive amendment.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Amendment moved: that in clause 2 of the Bill, in sub-clause (b), the following be added at the end of the proposed clause (1a):—

“and such repair work is not effected within a time to be specified by the people benefited by the embankment”.

Mr. HARIDAS MAZUMDAR: Sir, I beg to support the amendment moved by my friend, Mr. Bankim Chandra Mukherjee. This is a very reasonable amendment. I think it had escaped the attention of the framers of the Bill to put in a provision like this. I hope that this amendment will be accepted by the Government with good grace.

The Hon'ble Mr. BARADA PRASANNA PAIN: Mr. President, Sir, I am unable to accept the amendment for several reasons. In the first place, our experience in the past has been that repeated requests for repair of embankments have been ignored by the zemindars. In the second place, the amendment seeks to establish that the period of time within which the repair has got to be effected should be specified in consultation with the people themselves. That, Sir, will lead to endless correspondence and delay, and will absolutely nullify the purpose which we have in view. I am, therefore, sorry to have to oppose the amendment.

Mr. BANKIM CHANDRA MUKHERJEE: May I not say a few words in answer to the reply of the Hon'ble Minister?

Mr. PRESIDENT: No, you have no right of reply.

(The amendment was negatived.)

The motion that clause 2 stand part of the Bill was agreed to.

The question that the long title and preamble stand part of the Bill was then put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Mr. BARADA PRASANNA PAIN: I beg to move that the Bengal Embankment (Amendment) Bill, 1944, as settled in the Council, be passed.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Motion moved: that the Bengal Embankment (Amendment) Bill, 1944, as settled in the Council, be passed.

(The motion was agreed to.)

The Bengal Diseases of Animals Bill, 1944.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: I beg to move that the Bengal Diseases of Animals Bill, 1944, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Order, order. The question before the House is that the Bengal Diseases of Animals Bill, 1944, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration.

(The motion was agreed to.)

Clause 1.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that clause stand part of the Bill.

(The motion was agreed to.)

Clause 2.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that clause stand part of the Bill.

(The motion was agreed to.)

Clause 3.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that clause 3 stand part of the Bill.

(The motion was agreed to.)

Clause 4.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that clause 4 stand part of the Bill.

(The motion was agreed to.)

Clause 5.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that clause 5 stand part of the Bill.

(The motion was agreed to.)

Clause 6.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Clause 6 stand part of the Bill.

Mr. LALIT CHANDRA DAS: I beg to move that in sub-clause (2) of clause 6 of the Bill, after the word "railway" in line 2, the words "or by steamer" be inserted and that for the word "any" occurring in the same line, the words "any other" be substituted.

Sir, what is proposed to be done by this amendment is this: Sub-clause (2) of clause 6 runs as follows:—"Nothing in sub-section (1) shall prevent the carriage by rail or by any mechanically-propelled vessel of a type approved by the Provincial Government of any animal or thing referred to in that sub-section through an infected area". So far as the word "steamer" is concerned, it was carried in the Select Committee but when the Report of the Committee was placed before me I found it scored through in red ink. Therefore, I gave a note of dissent. It was urged by the Hon'ble Minister in charge of the Bill that there was the expression "mechanically-propelled vessel of a type approved by the Provincial Government" which would make up for the defect. But I may point out that the word "steamer" would make the meaning quite clear. Sir, it is one thing to get a particular word passed in the House and quite another to leave it to the Provincial Government to make up for the defect by their rule-making power. I submit, Sir, that the word "steamer" should be there, because where there is no railway, the Legislature should make it clear by the addition of the word "steamer" and nothing should be left to the rule-making power of the Government. For example, what happens in the Barisal district where there is no rail; it is intersected by river and the cattle can be carried from one part to another during rainy season only by steamer. If any animal is to be carried from Sandwip to Noakhali through the Meghna, it must have to be carried on a steamer or by a boat or by a mechanically-propelled vessel. The word "steamer" was carried in the Select Committee. So this should be made explicit and put after the word "railway" and then the other thing may be left at the discretion of the Government to describe some other means of carrying the animals from one place to another. With these words, I move my amendment.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Amendment moved: that in sub-clause (2) of clause 6 of the Bill, after the word "railway" in line 2, the words "or by steamer" be inserted and that for the word "any" occurring in the same line, the words "any other" be substituted.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Sir, I beg to oppose the amendment for the simple reason that the expression "mechanically-propelled vessel" includes steamers; the only difference between a railway and a steamer is that there are different kinds of steamers but there is no difference between one railway and another. There are various steamers over which Government have little or no control. So, Government should know the type of steamer which would be used for carrying cattle before they give permission. The present clause is, therefore, all right.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that in sub-clause (2) of clause 6 of the Bill, after the word "railway" in line 2, the words "or by steamer" be inserted and that for the word "any" occurring in the same line, the words "any other" be substituted.
(The amendment was negatived.)

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that clause 6 stand part of the Bill.
(The motion was agreed to.)

Clause 7.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that clause 7 stand part of the Bill.
(The motion was agreed to.)

Clause 8.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that clause 8 stand part of the Bill.
(The motion was agreed to.)

Clause 9.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that clause 9 stand part of the Bill.
(The motion was agreed to.)

Clause 10.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that clause 10 stand part of the Bill.
(The motion was agreed to.)

Clause 11.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that clause 11 stand part of the Bill.
(The motion was agreed to.)

Clause 12.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that clause 12 stand part of the Bill.
(The motion was agreed to.)

Clause 13.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that clause 13 stand part of the Bill.
(The motion was agreed to.)

Clause 14.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Clause 14 stand part of the Bill.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Sir, I beg to move that in clause 14 of the Bill, for the words "fifty rupees" in line 5, the words "twenty-five rupees" be substituted.

Sir, the main object of my moving this amendment is to reduce the amount from Rs. 50 to Rs. 25, because after all, the persons affected are likely to be mostly poor, and therefore Rs. 50 will be too much for them.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Amendment moved: that in clause 14 of the Bill, for the words "fifty rupees" in line 5, the words "twenty-five rupees" be substituted.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Sir, I beg to oppose the amendment. The punishment ought to be deterrent if it is to have any effect. So, it is not proper to reduce the amount from Rs. 50 to Rs. 25. As a matter of fact, Rs. 50 is the maximum, as it is stated that it may extend to Rs. 50. If the trying court thinks it proper, it may impose a fine of five rupees even. Therefore, the amendment is unnecessary.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that the amendment stand part of the Bill.

(The amendment was negatived.)

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Sir, I beg to move that in clause 14 of the Bill, for the words "one hundred rupees" in line 6, the words "fifty rupees" be substituted.

Sir, I think my honourable friend, the Minister in charge of the Bill, will repeat the same argument as he did in connection with item No. 12.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Why not both of you repeat your own arguments? (Laughter.)

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: Sir, I think Rs. 50 is deterrent enough for the purpose for which the Bill has been brought forward, and that is why I want to limit the punishment to Rs. 50 instead of Rs. 100.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Amendment moved: that in clause 14 of the Bill, for the words "one hundred rupees" in line 6, the words "fifty rupees" be substituted.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur SAIYED MUAZZAMUDDIN HOSAIN: Sir, this case is even worse than the former one. Rs. 100 is the punishment for a subsequent offence, and even for the subsequent offence my honourable friend does not like that any deterrent punishment should be given. I think that punishment ought to be deterrent, and the amount fixed is not at all very high. Therefore, I oppose the amendment.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that the amendment stand part of the Bill.

(The amendment was negatived.)

Mr. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is: that clause 14 stand part of the Bill.

(The motion was agreed to.)

Clause 15.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Clause 15 stand part of the Bill.

Rai Bahadur KESHAB CHANDRA BANERJEE: I beg to move that in clause 15 of the Bill, for the words "five hundred" in lines 5 and 6, the words "two hundred" be substituted.

In this clause provision has been made for a fine of Rs. 100 for the first offence and Rs. 500 for subsequent offences. Rupees 500 is an inordinately high amount. So, I would like to limit it to Rs. 200. My honourable friend, the Agriculture Minister, knows or is at least supposed to know the conditions prevailing in the villages, particularly, the condition of the cultivators, whose well-wisher he professes to be. I do not think that even by the sale of the entire holding of an agriculturist, it will be possible to realise Rs. 500. That is why I would like to reduce the amount of fine to Rs. 200 which may be easier to recover.

Mr. PRESIDENT: Amendment moved: that in clause 15 of the Bill, for the words "five hundred" in lines 5 and 6, the words "two hundred" be substituted.
